FOR THE GLORY OF GOD, AND edification of his Church.

TO the right worſhipfull Sir Nicolas Bacon Knight, my ſingular good Patron, with the vertuous Lady Anne Bacon his wife. And to the right worſhipfull Sir Nathanael Bacon, and Sir Francis Bacon, and to Sir Edmund Bacon, Knights: and to the Right worſhipfull Maiſter Edward Bacon, one of his Maieſties worthie Iuſtices of the peace, in Suffolke (all louers of Pietie and Iuſtice, and friendes to the Church of God, through his rich grace, bleſſed be his name for ſo great a mercy) as a debt acknowledged moſt due vnto them, and to the whole poſteritie of their right honourable Father, a moſt worthy and wiſe Patron of true Religion, vpright Iuſtice, and all good learning, in his high place, all his time: a moſt worthy Paterne to bee imitated and followed of all that deſcend of him: yea, of all that ſucceed him in like Office of high dignitie. For a token of gratulatorie-thankfulnes to God, for ſo ineſtimable a bleſſing: and with a holy deſire to help forward their holy knowledge, and the precious faith of their eternall ſaluation. This ſecond part of the Treaſurie of Chriſtian inſtruction (containing a chiefe portion of the Doctrine of the Goſpell) is both from heart and hand willingly dedicated.

By their VVorſhips, among other of the Miniſters of the Goſpel, one moſt bounden in the Lord, Robert Allen.

TO THE REVEREND AND LEARNED MINISTERS OF THE holy word of God: and to all true hearted Christians: Grace and Peace in the Lord Iesus.

RIght well beloued, worthy great loue, and reuerence, (yea double honour in the Lord, euen for the Lordes sake, and for your diligent and painefull labour in his worke) seeing I hold it my dutie, to giue a reason to you, of that which I haue done, in the publishing of these writings, which are nowe brought to your viewe, and remaine subiect to your godly censures, as you shall finde iust cause: this I desire, that you doe first of all, fauourably consider on my behalfe, that were it not (besides my owne perswasion of Gods gracious assistance, in his guiding and leading of me through this busines (that I had beene incouraged by some of your selues: that is to say, by Ministers of the word, of very good learning and iudgement, singularly zealous of Gods glorie, and aboundant in loue toward his Church: I would neuer haue presumed to haue offered these my labours, to be examined of such as haue authoritie to licence the printing of Bookes; much lesse would I haue presumed to haue published them, as now they are.

And yet for all that, (that is, though I was in such wise as is specified, incouraged thus farre (in hope of your good liking, and of some good fruite to grow vnto the Church thereby) how moderately and modestly I thinke of that which is done, God he knoweth. And therewithall how desirous I am that none vpon the sodaine shoulde bee offended at these superfluous labours, as they may peraduenture seeme to some to be (specially they being vndertaken by such an one as I am; after the writings of so many excellent seruants of God in the ministerie of his Gospell) I would gladly it might appeare to all, by this my care to render you the reasons, which preuailed with me herevnto.

First therefore, this (in all humblenes of minde) I doe you to vnderstand: that insomuch, as (by the mercies of God) I haue beene a hearer of many of your owne selues, who are yet liuing, and also of some of those who haue died most blessedly in the Lord (most worthy and excellent Preachers of the word) and so haue beene a partaker of your manifold good gifts and graces, to my singular instruction and comfort, if I haue not beene failing to my selfe, in so long a tract of time. I thought with my selfe therefore, that if (through the rich mercy and goodnes of God) I might be as the good Bee, to draw honie out of so many sweete flowers as were before mee, and bring the same together, as it were into one hiue; it might come to passe, that (through the blessing of God) I might in processe of time, performe some acceptable seruice to his Church. So that this then, is the first reason, which I haue to alledge, to shewe whence I haue beene imboldened to performe this seruice.

Secondly, seeing it is so, that in respect of my owne practise in the holy Ministerie, I haue had more then ordinarie occasion (in course of Catechising by the ſpace of theſe 20. yeares paſt, to goe oftentimes through the principles of Religion; and that not onely in ſo briefe a manner as they might well be contracted, for the better capacitie of the more ſimple in vnderſtanding: but alſo more largely for the benefite of ſuch as were of better diſcretion and iudgement, euen till this kind of exercife, was thus farre forth augmented as you ſee) therefore I thought I might not with any equitie, conceale it either from ſuch as hauing beene leſſe exerciſed this way, deſire it for a helpfull ſupply vnto them: or from thoſe, who hauing no neede of this helpe for any defect; may neuertheles finde an occaſion offered them of their owne more excellent thoughtes: like as the knife is made ſharpe by the rude and blunt whetſtone, when it is but a little whetted vpon it.

Thirdly, I thought this dutie, might the better beſeeme me in the Church of God, yea that God himſelfe would the rather require it at my handes, becauſe it ſeemed good to his diuine Maieſtie, to imploy me from time to time, in the courſe of my Miniſterie, toward the people of ſmall villages: by reaſon whereof, I had the fewer auocations from my ſtudies, and ſo more leiſure to write, then many other Miniſters of the word, whom God had placed ouer greater townes, and in popular cities.

Fourthly, I haue beene the rather confirmed, to thinke that it was the good will and pleaſure of God, that I ſhould performe this ſeruice; becauſe, by the exerciſe of ſundry bodily afflictions, I was in the middeſt of my thoughts this way, conſtrained to keepe houſe and chamber, for a long time together, more then ordinarily: and chiefly, becauſe thereby I found my heart (through the bleſſing of GOD vppon my afflictions) more humbled and ſanctified thervnto, being as one liuing in Diem, death euery day threatening diſſolution, and haſting the decay of the outward man. And that in ſuch ſort, that before I am olde, the infirmities of age, are with a ſwift foote (as it were before the time) come vpon me. In which reſpect (as I thought with my ſelfe) neceſſitie lay vpon me alſo, to make as much haſt as I could, to doe the beſt ſeruice to God and to his Church, that I might poſſibly attaine vnto, before I goe hence and bee not.

Fiftly, in my very inward parts, me thought I ſaw and doe ſee very clearely, that nothing is more neceſſarie in theſe daies (wherein all things are growing to moſt lamentable vncertainties, for want of reuerend and ſtudious attending to the word, as if all things might be carried after probabilities of diſputation:) Seeing therefore nothing (I ſay) more neceſſarie, then ſuch a writing, as might, by the reading of it, retentiuely ſtay the mindes of Gods people, in a grounded meditation of the moſt ſure and certaine principles of religion, by explications and proofes from the word of God, which is the onely ſure & certaine ground and ſtay of mans vncertaine and weak wandering minds: & hauing good truſt that it hath pleaſed God, that this writing ſhould bee in ſome meaſure fitted herevnto; I haue beene hereby, incouraged to proceed ſo farre as I haue done. And the rather alſo, that from the viewe of this labour, it may appeare to the Churches of God, yea euen in the ſight of all in the world that will looke vpon it: what thoſe things are which the faithfull Miniſters of Ieſus Chriſt doe beate their wittes about, and wherein they ſpend themſelues among their ſeuerall flockes and charges. And that it might from hence alſo appeare in how many truthes: that is, in particulars aboue number, we do agree, teaching the ſame things from one and the ſame word, by one and the ſame Spirit, with a ſweet conſent, in compariſon of thoſe fewe things, wherein the iudgements of ſome doe differ: till God ſhal in them all ſo cleare our iudgements, and frame our hearts to a more full agreement in all things, against the distractions of these heauie daies.

Finally, leting the former part of my collectiō of the doctrine of the Law being wel accepted of many, I conceiued so much the better hope that this of the Gospell should finde good entertainment among the good seruants of God.

But now, how well all this busines hath beene performed: it belongeth to you, the well learned and godly Ministers of the Gospel of our Lord Iesus Christ, to discerne and iudge: and accordingly, so farre as you shall find cause, either to reproue, or to giue the glory to God.

And if you finde that which your soule liketh, then say you & spare not, that whatsoeuer is well, God hath heerein glorified himselfe, by as weake and vnworthie an instrument of his, as could haue beene found out, among numbers of those, whom it might haue pleased him, to vse to such a seruice as this is. And concerning my owne selfe, this I willingly professe, and say, as it is in the peaceable and prouerbiall speech of Gideon, What is my vintage in comparison of the gleaning of the least of you, my reuerend Fathers and brethren, if your labours in the holy Ministerie of the word, had beene gathered together, as these are? And who am I, but as the diligent Apothecarie (to admit the greatest commendation that may seeme to agree) in comparison of the most learned and skilfull Phisition? or onely as the painefull Bee to fill the hiue, with the hony drawne out of your sweete flowers, as was acknowledged in the beginning?

Now therefore, vpon these considerations, gathering some hope of your fauourable interpretation of all things, seeing all is well meant and intended towards you: yet me thinke, that I heare some say, that this kinde of writing is ouer-long and tedious, and able to discourage the minde of the Reader, before he set his minde vnto it. To this, vnder your correction, I answere; First, that if such as so may thinke, will orderly reade the Questions and Answeres onely: then shall it be freed from that conceite of theirs, by many degrees, of breuitie.

Secondly, I doubt not, but euen the same being once acquainted with the Questions and Answeres, and giuing their mindes to meditate vpon them: wil growe desirous to read and stay their thoughts vpon the Proofes also: and that so doing, they shall (through the blessing of God) finde no small profite, ioy, and comfort to their soules; in that they shall find them to bee the marrowe and life of those Answeres, which bee not the very wordes of the holy Scriptures, and some lightsome clearing also, to the same holy Scriptures themselues.

Thirdly, I would desire such as so thinke to answere themselues, from a familiar similitude, which they may take from their owne counting-housen (I meane such as bee rich in the world, who for the most part, can afford the least time, to the diligent reading and studying of holy things) that as they doe not account it a vaine or vnnecessarie thing, to haue many more bagges of money standing together, then they can presently vse, because they can one time or other finde vse to improue them all to gaine, so they would in this case, bee of like iudgement, to think: that it is to the best purpose in all the world, to haue the largest spirituall Treasurie that may bee, containing the greatest varietie of the instructions, comforts and duties of the Gospell of Gods heauenly kingdome: though they doe but at conuenient times, busie themselues to reade that which is brought to their hands, concerning such or such a profitable discourse, either for instruction, or for comfort, or to stirre vp to dutie, euen as the necessities of their soules shall from time to time require.

Whom alſo I would in the name of God earneſtly pray, that they would conſider further with themſelues, how neceſſarie a thing it is, ſpecially for them that be rich in this world, that they ſhould haue by them (beſides that moſt notable meanes of publike Preaching which God hath ſent them): the helpe of ſuch holy writings, as might moſt ſtrongly ſtay their mindes, in the long and ſerious thoughts of the neceſſarie points of their ſaluation: becauſe otherwiſe, the vehement and vnceſſant cares of this life, wil aſſuredly like a canere fret out, or as a viper gnawe out the very heart-ſtringes of Religion, euen in them that be not the worſt ſort of worldly minded men. Laſt of all as touching length of writing, that is not to be accounted too long which is no longer then the largnes of the matter it ſelfe doth neceſſarily require.

Thus much, in way of rendering ſome account of the preſent enterpriſe, with this admonition neceſſarily (as I ſuppoſe) inſerted: in reſpect of ſome, who without ſuch caution, were moſt like to miſlike, to their owne greateſt harme.

But to returne my ſpeech to you (the reuerend and learned Preachers of Gods word) this doe I now humbly beſeech of you in the Lord Ieſus, that inſomuch, as yee are the ſalt of the earth, the light of the world, and Stewards in the Lords houſe, appointed by God himſelfe, to giue to euery one his portion in due ſeaſon: that you would as ye doe, and yet ſtill more and more, conſider, the peerleſſe dignitie & efficacie of your office of Preaching, farre excelling all writing or printing with ineke and paper; both for the daily calling and edifying of the Church of God, as well in knowledge and comfort of faith, as vnto obedience of life, euen to the comming of our Lord Ieſus, at the ende of the world. You are by your holy Preaching, the moſt actiue pen-men of the holy Ghoſt: to write, yea to ingraue all holy doctrine and godlines in the heartes of all the Elect of God, with a farre more deepe and firme impreſſion, then can be made in any thinne and ſhallowe papers. You are thoſe holy inſtruments of God, which are moſt effectual, both to giue the cleareſt light of knowledg, and to work the beſt impreſſions in memorie, and to bring the conſcience to greateſt remorſe, and to affect the heart with the ſweeteſt and moſt durable comfort, and alſo moſt powerfully to ſtirre vp to the practiſe of the duties of a godly life, then any other can be. Whence it is, and no doubt hath alwaies bin found, that among the godly, ſuch ſpeeches as followe, haue more often proceeded from their hearing of the word preached, then from priuate reading, or any other meanes. I neuer vnderſtood this point (ſaith one) ſo well as I did by ſuch a Sermon. I remember ſuch a point well (ſaith another) euer ſince I heard ſuch a text handeled. I was neuer pricked in cõſcience, as I was at ſuch a Sermon, ſaith a third. Me thought the Preacher ſpake particularly to me, &c. I was greatly cõforted (ſaith a fourth) by the doctrine of ſuch a Preacher at ſuch & ſuch a time. Wee ſee well nowe (ſay all that haue any grace in them with one conſent) that we ought to be more carefull, to heare the word preached, and to pray more earneſtly to God for his bleſſing vpon it, then euer we thought before. Theſe kinde of ſpeeches I ſay, being often in the mouthes of ſuch Chriſtians, as be reuerend hearers of Sermons; doe euidently declare, that Preaching hath a ſpeciall power giuen it of God: to worke moſt mightie effects in the hearts of the people of God, aboue al that any readings, or other priuate or publicke exerciſes of religion can worke. So that, though reading of good bookes is very profitable, to ſuch as doe in godly manner acquaint themſelues therewithall: yet in commending of the reading of godly writings, we muſt alwaies admoniſh the people, that they preferre the hearing of holy Sermons, and the reading of the holy Scriptures, before their reading of any other writinges beſides.

Yea ſo iuſt cauſe is there, to admoniſh all other hereof: that the moſt godly and learned Preachers themselues, will from their owne experience, easily acknowledge, that they could not haue vnderstoode the mysteries of Gods truth so clearely, nor haue found them so comfortable, by their owne reading, prayer, and meditation, as by the grace of God, they now do in a more liberall taste of Gods power and glory: had they not their owne selues, not onely preached the same to others, but also heard the same mysteries preached by other Ministers vnto them. And so doe I willingly confesse concerning my selfe, and the present Treasurie, so called in these bookes.

O therefore, be ye intreated for the Lords cause, to labour to the fulfilling of the most worthie and noble dutie of your office: that is, the durie of preaching, which of all other, is the most worthy in the sight of God, & most profitable to his Church. Without the which, no doubt, all writing, yea euen the holy Scriptures themselues, would lie contemned and despised, and without any fruit, vnlesse the people were put in minde of their duty: yea if they were not earnestly stirred vp by you, to haue the due regard of them. Spartam igitur vos nacti estis (reuerēdi in Christo Patres ac Fratres) vos inquam, pra cæteris: Prouinciam sanè selectissimam. Hanc igitur macti virtute vestra (cælitus sc: inspirata) maximè i. qua poteritis fide & diligentia, exornate. Ita Deum remuneratorem experiemini benignissimum, locupletissimumq;. Ego similiter (eadem gratia diuina fretus) vestra virtutis imitator, maximé in votis habeo, vt in idem vobiscum opus, totis viribus (huic scribendi negotio temperans) multo deinceps accuratius, Domino pro sua immensa bonitate concedente, incumbam. Optimé valete.

And now hence-forth, extending my speech yet more generally: this I desire, that all might vnderstand, that albeit this booke is in some most dutifull regard, dedicated to the right worshipfull aboue named: insomuch, as it pleased God, by their good meanes, to vouchsafe mee the principall time, of such quiet peace, and rest; with libertie, leisure, comfort, and maintenance in the Church of God, wherein I might write any thing at all, worthy the reading of any. Neuertheless, that which I doe in speciall manner dedicate to them, as most properly, and of best right belonging to them: the same doe I frō a more common affection of christian loue, and duty, (and with their very Christian good liking I am sure) communicate also to you. Wishing and praying with all my heart, that it may be aboundantly blessed of God, to the singular both profit and comfort, not onely of them and theirs, but also of you, and of all that do belong vnto you.

To the which end and purpose, two things do I hence-forth, most instantly request of you.

First, that you would esteeme of these writings, only as of a fruit of that holy prophecie, or interpretation, which is an ordinary gift of God in his church; to help toward the more cleare vnderstanding, of that manifold wisedome of God, which is fully and perfectly contained in his owne most holy Scriptures alone: and therewithall, to lay open more plainely that manifold comfort, which is inclosed in them: and likewise to make it more manifest, how plentifull fruites of thankfulnes, and obedience, is due from vs to God, according to the same. For as touching the thinges themselues, they are (as was saide euen now) to be found most perfectly treasured vp in the holy Scriptures of GOD himselfe: and in no other writings beside. Neither in very deede, doe these holy Scriptures of God, stand in need of any other method and disposing, nor of any other interpretation, then their owne most pure and bright clearenes: were it not, that our owne darknes and ignorance, with the confusion that is in our disordered minds, did stand in need of the same. For so writeth the holy Apostle S. Paul, 2. Tim. 3. 16. 17. The whole Scripture (saith he) is giuen by diuine inspiration, inſpiration, and is profitable to teach, to improue, to correct, and to inſtruct in righteouſnes, That the man of God may be abſolute, and made perfect to all good workes. And againe, Rom. 15. 4. Whatſoeuer things are written afore time (to wit in the holy Scriptures, as we may perceiue by that which followeth) they are written (ſaith the Apoſtle) for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might haue hope.

All mens writings, whatſoeuer they be, ſpecially ſuch as doe concerne religion: they ought to be nothing elſe, but meere ſeruants to the holy writings of God, to the ends here mentioned.

This therefore, is the firſt thing, which I doe earneſtly deſire, of all ſuch as ſhall thinke good to acquaint themſelues, with the reading of theſe or any of the beſt worth: that they will in no wiſe haue any other eſtimation of them, but as of dutifull ſeruants to the holy Scriptures of God.

Now, the ſecond thing, which I doe, to the ſame ends, and with like earneſtnes, deſire as a meete conſequent of the former requeſt, is this: that none would by the reading of theſe, or any other bookes; be any whit withdrawne, or hindered, from the reading, or hearing of the word of God it ſelfe. The which, being firſt written by moſt holy inſpiration (as was euen now alledged) is thereby manifeſtly cõmended vnto vs, as that which (euen by the ordinance of God himſelfe) is to be euery way, and at all times, in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon, night and day (both in reading, preaching, hearing, and meditating) moſt reuerendly to be regarded. Pſal. 1. ver. 2. and 2. Tim. 4. 1. 2. And the ſame alſo, not without iuſt cauſe: ſeeing they are queſtionleſſe, the onely true ground, and perfect Canon, of all holy inſtruction. And becauſe the right vnderſtanding of them, is as the aiming point, whereunto all inſtruction and teaching ought to tend: inſomuch as they onely are able, to make vs perfectly wiſe vnto ſaluation.

This therefore, is my ſecond ſute; that none would by any other writings, ſuffer themſelues to be drawne away, to ſlack the reading or the hearing of the preaching of the holy Scriptures of God: but rather, that they would double, yea multiply their diligence that way.

Thus, if any ſhall at conuenient leiſures, reade theſe writings prepared for them; I doubt not, but through the bleſſing of God, they ſhall finde them, among other of the ſame argument, no vaine helpe and furtherance: both for light of knowledge, and alſo to further the comfort, & obedience of their faith.

And now, theſe cautions being obſerued, I beſeech ye giue mee leaue, to vtter that which I haue (among theſe prefatorie thoughts) conceiued further in my minde: that is, that I haue good truſt, that there is no iuſt and important cauſe, why it ſhould offend any; though after many former excellent bookes, there be ſtil now and then, more ſet forth: prouided alwaies, that they be ſound and orthodoxe, and in ſome reſpects of ſpeciall good vſe, moreouer and beſide the former. For herein, the common prouerb (currant in all other things of good vſe) may haue a chiefe place, that Store is no ſore.

The rather alſo, may this ſtone of offence be remoued, if we conſider that none are inforced to buy this or that book: but it is left to their own free choice to take or to leaue; as they pleaſe themſelues: or ſhall be aduiſed by the counſell of their godly friends. Wherevpon, may we not diſcerne, that if we ſhould not thankfully accept the manifold good and induſtrious labours of our louing brethren, the faithfull ſeruants of God: we may eaſily (or we be aware of it) not onely complaine of that, which might be for our owne eaſe, from other mens labours; but alſo grudge at that, which GOD hath prepared for a neceſſarie helpe, and benefit, to many other; though we ſhould for our parts, thinke our ſelues to ſtand in no neede of them?

Wherefore, that I may pleade this cauſe of the new publiſhing of good and profitable writings, ſuch as we ſpeake of. Be it, that the Church of God is alreadie inriched, with a goodlie varietie of all ſortes of good bookes (bleſſed be the name of our good God for it) both of leſſer and greater volume, larger and more briefe, as well by Queſtion and Anſwere, as in continued ſpeech, ſome more fit for learned Students, in a more exquiſite method and ſtile, and ſome for Schollers of leſſe vnderſtanding, &c. Yet this wee cannot but eaſilie conceiue, that not all good bookes of all ſorts (no not of the ſmalleſt and moſt eaſie price) doe come to anie one mans hands; no nor anie one kinde of booke to all: but rather to a very few, in compariſon of thoſe that doe very ſeldome, or not at all, heare of them.

God (no doubt,) who ſetteth his ſeruants to worke, will diſpoſe alſo of their labours, as it ſeemeth beſt, to the eye of his moſt gratious, and all-ſeeing Prouidence. To ſome, one helpe, to ſome, another: to ſome, at this time, to other afterward. Yea doubtles, ſo wiſely and prouidently will God diſpoſe of the labours of his faithfull ſeruants, that the leaſt of them ſhall not bee altogether in vaine.

And yet, moreouer and beſide that which hath beene ſaide in this caſe, this may be added further: that ſeeing God hath manifeſted his wiſedome, in the varietie of his goodnes and mercie, euery other way; in his works of creation, to be ſeene, felt, taſted, &c. for the manifold comfort of the outward man: why ſhould we think it vnſutable to the ſame his goodnes, and to the bountie of his mercies, that hee ſhould fit and furniſh his ſeruants, with ſuch varietie of ſpirituall graces, as might be euerie way delightfull, and beneficiall to the inward Man? Verilie, there is no reaſon why wee ſhould thinke ſo. Let no man therefore, goe about to ſtraighten that bountie of God, which he hath ſo gratiouſlie inlarged toward vs: nor grudge againſt that, for the which we cannot be chearefull enough, in our praiſing of him.

But that we may haſten to an end of this plea, Shall falſe-teachers, by an infinite & often renued variety of hereticall bookes, vtter their counterfet wares and marchandiſe, their Pſeudo-chatholike & counterfet Treaſuries? and ſhall not the faithfull miniſters of the truth of GOD, vſe all holie diligence, to promote the ſame by all kinde of good and ſound writings; and by laying forth therein, the true pretious catholike Treaſures of the onely true Church of God? Farre be, ſo vnfaithfull and ſecure negligence, chaſed away from amongſt vs. And the rather alſo, becauſe thouſandes of poore ſoules, haue ſo much the more neede of ſuch renued helpes by good writinges, leſt they ſhould be peruerted by the bad: ſpecially in ſuch places, where the faithfull and diligent preaching of Gods word, (the chiefe preſeruatiue againſt this leauen of falſe doctrine) is moſt wanting. So that for ſome ſupplie of ſo great a defect, what may wee thinke to be accounted of the bookes of one impreſſion, though of more then a thouſand: yea though the ſame booke, ſhould be imprinted, thouſand after thouſand, manie a time.

But to this it may be ſaide, that not manie thouſands among many millions of people, are ſo well minded, as to be ſtudious in reading of good and godlie bookes. And in verie deede, it cannot bee denyed, but that it is too true. Neuertheleſſe, this wee may as truely anſwere, that God hath his thouſands, and ſeuen thouſands in his Iſrael, better minded, then anie one, or manie of vs are priuie vnto.

Now

Now therefore, good Christian brethren, what remaineth, but onely this: that we be wise and carefull to vse all such good helpes, as God vouchsafeth to bestowe vpon vs, in their due time and place; so farre as wee shall finde them to be profitable vnto vs: but the chiefe helpes, alwayes with greatest care and diligence?

This great grace of Christian wisedome and discretion, with all other necessarie for vs, our good God and most gratious and mercifull Father graunt vnto vs all; both Preachers, Hearers, Writers, and Readers: working them in vs by his most holie Spirit, through his rich mercie in the Lord Iesus. To whom, with the Father, and the holie Ghost, three most glorious, diuine, and distinct Persons, one true and euerliuing God, almightie, and in all things all-sufficient, be all praise, honour, and glorie, nowe and for euer. Amen. London.

THE DOCTRINE OF THE GOSPEL.

HAuing through the goodnes of God, finiſhed the firſt part of our Treaſury of Chriſtian Catechiſme or inſtruction, concerning the morall Lawe of God: let vs (truſting in the ſame his diuine goodneſſe and mercy) vſe as good diligence as we can, in like manner of familiar inſtruction, to enquire into the Doctrine of the Goſpell. Yea let vs ſearch after it, as after the moſt rich and precious part of our ſpirituall treaſure: according to the holy teſtimony and profeſſion of the Apoſtle Paul. Philip. 3,8,9, Doubtleſſe, I thinke all things but loſſe for the excellent knowledge ſake of Chriſt Ieſus my Lord, for whom I haue counted all things loſſe, and do iudge them to be dongue, that I might winne Chriſt. And that I might be found in him, that is, not hauing my owne righteouſneſſe, which is of the lawe, but that which is through the faith of Chriſt, euen the righteouſneſſe which is of God through faith, &c.

First therefore, I would haue you ſhewe me, (as you haue bene taught) what Queſtion. the Goſpell is?

Anſwere. The holy Goſpell is a moſt ioyfull doctrine, or diuine meſſage of moſt glad tydings, ſent and publiſhed to the world from God himſelfe; and by the Miniſtery of his faithfull ſeruants; the which teacheth and aſſureth euery one that heareth and receiueth it, both what that righteouſneſſe and ſaluation is, (together with the cauſes and particular fruites, or benefits, and comforts of the ſame) which is to be apprehended and layed hold vpon onely by faith in Chriſt: and alſo, what manner of obedience that is, which God requireth and accepteth, (onely as a fruit of thankefulneſſe, but for no part of iuſtification, or for any peece of the merit of ſaluatiõ before him) of euery one, to whõ the ſame righteouſneſſe and ſaluation, with all the fruits, benefits and comforts thereof, doe through his moſt free grace and mercy in Chriſt Ieſus, appertaine and belong.

Explicatiõ and proofe The morall Lawe of God (as hath beene declared in the former part of our Catechiſme) is a diuine rule or doctrine, teaching and commanding the perfect righteouſnes of workes: the which if a man could perfectly fulfill, hee ſhould ſurely liue therein: Leuit. 18.5. And to that effect doth our Sauiour Chriſt anſwere him who asked what he might doe that he might inherit eternal life: Thou knoweſt the commandements (ſaith our Sauiour) &c. as though he ſhould haue ſaid: Thou canſt not poſſibly haue a more perfect rule, of the righteouſnes of the outward workes and actions of thy life, and of the right holy diſpoſition and inward affection of thy heart, according to the firſt creation of mankinde, then the Lawe of God is. Matth. 19,16, &c. Mark. 10,17, &c. Luk. 18,18. &c.

But becauſe (as we haue beene further inſtructed) we are now of a very ſinfull disposition, and euen through the corruption of nature, trangressors of the law: the law is so far from all grace of iustifying & sauing of vs, that it doth most iustly conuince vs of sin; and consequētly, of iust deserued wrath from the iudgment seat of God. Wherefore necessarily are we all to seeke to be iustified an other way, that is, by the free grace & fatherly mercy of God, through the righteousnes & holines of the works & merit of the perfect obediēce of the son of God our Lord Iesus Christ: and not by our owne workes, either already wrought, or which we may at any time hereafter, possibly worke.

For this cause, behold (I beseech you,) the wonderfull grace & most rich and precious mercy of our God, in that (as was now answered) hee hath not onely published this doctrine of free grace through the righteousnes of our L: Iesus Christ, to iustification & saluatiō, (the which the law strictly taken doth not directly, so much as once tel vs of) but also, for that he is most graciously minded, to giue vs the knowledge & faith, yea euen the very possession, & whole fruit of it.

This part of holy doctrine, is of vs called the Gospell, the which in the greek language, wherein it was first written by the holy Euangelists in the new Testament, euidently signifieth good tydings, or a ioyfull, and gladsome message.

The Greeke word is, (Euaggelion) compounded of (Eu) which noteth the goodnes and commoditie, or the praise and commendation of a thing, and of (Aggello) which is, To bring tidings, or to report & declare a message. Of these Greek words, ioyned in one, not onely those four, who wrote the history of our Sa: Christ: but also such as were special attendants vpon the Apostles, to preach where they had once planted the Gospell, are called Euangelists. Yea, frō these Greeke words compounded in one, all Preathing is called, Euangelizing. And from (Aggello) Preachers are called sometimes Angels: that is, such as are sent in the name of God, vpon this his most honourable and ioyfull message.

Luk. 4. 18. Ephes. 2. 17. 1. Cor. 1. 17. 1. Pet. 1. 25. Rom. 10. 15. Gal. 1. 8. 9. Reuel. 1. 20. & ch. 2. 1. &c.

The Gospel (as we call it in our English) doth not onely in the latine tongue, but also in diuers other languages, take the name from the same Greek words, and is made the vulgar & common speech in many Christian churches: like as diuers other both greek & hebrew words (are) pertaining to the Gospell, such as are Iesus, Messiah, Christ, &c. Yea among those of the heathen also, who haue vsed the latine speech; good and welcome newes or messages (such as among them haue beene thought worthy any reward to the bringers, or sacrifice and thankes to God) they haue beene, by ancient vse, called from the same Greeke words, Euangelia, according to the example of the Grecians themselues going before them therein.

Cicero ad Attic: lib. 2. App. de nece Cicer: Homer: odyss: ξ v: 152. Isocrat: in Areop: Xenop: Ell: 1.

The same vse is of the hebrew word: (Besorah) answering to this: as we read, 2. Sam. 4. 10. One that brought Dauid tidings of Saules death, thought that Dauid would haue giuen him a reward for his tidings. The word ther, is Besorah. And in the same place it is said, that he which reported this to Dauid, thought himselfe to be Chimbassar, as one bringing such tydings as should be welcome. For such is the viuall signification of the verbe (Bissar,) & of his substantiue Besorah: as we may perceiue by that which we read. 1. Sam. 31, 9. The Philistines are said to publish the death of Saul and his sons, for ioyful newes or tydings, and to the praise of their idolls. But 2. Sam. 1, 20. Publish it not (saith Dauid) Al Tebassru: lest the daughters of the Philistines reioyce, lest the daughters of the vncircumcised triumph, read also, ch. 18. v. 19, & v. 27, & v. 31. And 2. king. 7, 9, Ps. 68, 11.

This therefore being a word vsed to signifie all good & welcome tydings, it is in the holy Scriptures, (for excellencies sake) transferred to note out the best newes aboue all other; euen the publishing of the ioyfull tydings of the Gospel. For the which, read Isay: 40, 9. O thou that bringest good tydings to Zion: Mebassereth: that is, (as it is well translated) Euangelizas, preachest the Gospell, &c. And likewise ch. 41, 27. I wil giue to Ierusalem (saith the Lord) one that shall bring good tydings: Mebassar. This messenger is Christ. ch. 61, 1. The Lord hath sent me to Preach good tydings to the poore. And of all Preachers of the Gospell it is saide more generally, ch. 52, verſ. 7. according also as the Apostle Paul alleadgeth it Rom. 10. 15. O how beautifull vpon the mountaines are the feet of him that declareth and publisheth peace?

That

that declareth good tydings and publisheth salvation, saying vnto Zion, Thy God raigneth. And Nahum Chap. 1. 15. Read also Psalm. 40. 9. and Psal. 96 2. Finally, from this Hebrew word, the holy Euangelists, who wrot the History of the Gospell, are called Mebasrim.

As for our owne English word Gospell, we will not now stand to enquire after the deriuation of it. It may suffice vs, that it is commonly receiued and appropriated to signifie the very same most ioifull glad tydings of our iustification and saluation by our Sauiour Christ which the Hebrew & Greeke words doe signifie, according to the saying of the holy Angell: Behold I bring you tydings of great ioy, that shall be to all people: That is, that vnto you is borne this day in the Citie of Dauid, a Sauiour which is Christ the Lord. Luke. Chap. 2. 10. 11.

This Gospell or tydings of the greatest ioy that can be, it is called the Gospell of God, as comming from him. Rom. chap. 1. vers. 1, and chap. 15. vers. 16. 2. cor. 11. 7. 1. Thes. 2. 2. 8. 9. and 1. Pet. 4. 17. And the glorious Gospell of the blessed God 1. Tim. 1. 11.

It is called the Gospell of Christ, insomuch as he is the argument & subiect matter of it, Mark. chap. 1. 1. and 2. cor. 4. 4. the glorious Gospell of Christ.

And againe, the Gospell of Christ, because he is the chiefe messenger & publisher of it, as it were trō the bosome of the father. Iohn. 1, 17, 18, Ephes. 2, 17. heb. 1, 1, Mat. chap. 3, 1. It is called also the gospell of God concerning his son. Rom. 1, v, 1, 2, 9.

It is called the gospell of the kingdome, because Christ setteth vp, & establisheth his spiritual kingdome, in the harts of his people, by the preaching of it. Matth. 9, 35, and chap. 24, 14. and Mark. 1, 14.

It is called the gospell of peace, because by it the conscience is set at peace with God: God himselfe publishing and offering, yea intreating reconciliation with vs, by the Ministery of it. Ephes. 6, 15, and 2, Cor. 5, 18, 19, 20.

It is called, to like purposes, the gospel of the grace of God, Act. 20, ver. 24, The gospell of saluation: Eph. 1, 13, The word of saluation. Act. 13, 26, The power of God to saluatiō, Ro. 1, 16, The words of life, act. 5, 20, And the words of eternal life, Ioh. 6, 68.

And because the righteousnes of faith is necessary to saluation, therefore God doth by this his gospell, both teach, & reueale, & also giue this righteousnes in the ministery & preaching of it, to al that wil receiue it, rō. 1, 17, & ch. 10, 4. 5, &c.

Further also, that the gospel laieth forth the causes, benefits, and comforts of iustification & saluatiō: read the 1. chap. of the Ep: to the Eph. of the which more hereafter.

Doctrina Euangelij complectitur & regulam pij syncerique cultus quem a nobis exigit Christus, & rationem qua nos restituit in vitam Calu. in Ioh. 5. 24.

Last of al, that the gospel teacheth what manner of obedience, God requireth and accepteth, of all true beleeuers, onely as a declaration of their thankfulnesse, without al worthines of merit &c. Read, Tit: chap. 1, 1, where in this respect, the gospel is called the truth which is according to godlines: the which godlines, Paul describeth in the same Epistle, and in all other his Epistles, as also doe all the other Apostles. And that all merit is excluded, it is plaine from that lesson which our Sauiour Christ hath taught vs: Luk. 17, 10, For when we haue done all that we can, we are but vnprofitable seruants. Read also, Gal. chap. 2, 15, 16, and Ephes. 2, 9. 10. Ro. chap. 7. Iames, chap. 3, 2. Neuertheless, that God wil accept of the sinceare, though vnperfect obedience of his faithfull seruants, for Christs sake, we shall haue the occasion renewed, to shewe some proofe of it, in the answer of a certaine scruple arysing frō the last branch of the prescēt answere.

The Doctrine of the gospell cōtaineth both the rule of that godly and sinceare worship which Christ requireth of vs, and also the way which he taketh to restore vnto life.

For seeing the lawe (as wee haue seene before) sheweth the righteousnesse of works, & therein, which are the true fruits of obedience & thankfulnes to God:

Question. Why should these duties be said to be taught againe in the gospell? And what may be the reason hereof?

Answere. The Lord in his most gracious wisdome, saw it to be so meet, in diuers respects.

First, for that the law (as it is opposed to the gospel) onely commandeth, and exactly vrgeth the performance of all duties, vnder paine of the most fearefull curse of God: but it giueth no grace, or power, to performe that which it requireth, as the gospell doth.

How the Gospell differeth from the Lawe

Secondly, because the lawe vrgeth euery dutie, according to that perfect light & holines of nature, wherein God created mankinde at the beginning: but the Gospell calleth for duties, onely according to the present measure of grace, as fruites of spirituall regeneration, with labour after the increases thereof.

Thirdly, because the lawe alloweth no dutie, which is not done in full and perfect righteousnesse: but the Gospel accepteth euery dutie, which is performed in any measure of sincerite, and truth, though from a weake and vnperfect faith.

Finally, because the Law, in all things dealeth like a most seuere and rigorous Iudge, who will shew no fauour to any the least transgressor, and so it discourageth altogether: but the Gospell, like a most tender and kinde nurse, cherisheth euery weake and feeble soule, whosoeuer longeth after the mercy and saluation of God, and desireth vnfeinedly to walke in his waies.

Explication and proofe.

Hence therefore it appeareth indeed, that it is of the singular grace and wisedome of God, that notwithstanding he gaue the lawe, and doctrine thereof, hee should neuertheles send his Gospell also, to teach the doctrine of godlinesse ouer againe. For otherwise, the Lawe could haue brought no benefit vnto vs, but should haue left vs altogether without excuse, condemned in our sinnes. Yet so, as the Gospell doth not for all that, destroy or disanull the Lawe, because if we should not by the doctrine thereof, be brought to the sight of our sinfull and miserable estate, the Gospell it selfe would easily be ouerhautily despised of all, and loose the owne gracious power and effect, euen as it doth with the most in the world, whom God leaueth, to that proud opinion, which they haue vainely conceiued of themselues. A liuely example whereof, we haue in the proud Pharisies, whom our Sauiour iustly taunteth with that cõmon Prouerb. The whole haue no need of the Physition, but they that are sick, Mat. 9. 12. whom also Luk. ch. 16. 14. 15. he doth for the same cause sharply reproue, saying: ye are they which iustifie your selues before men: but God knoweth your hearts: for that which is highly esteemed among men, it is abomination in the sight of God.

But that we may come to the particular branches of your answere.

Touching the first point, we haue seene sufficiently, in the first part of our treasury of the doctrine of the law, how imperious & full of exaction the law is, & therwithall, voide of all assistant grace, yea altogether armed with the curse: but that the Gospel giueth grace, & that euen from the most free clemency & grace of God; it is plainly testified Iohn. ch. 1. 17. in that it is writen: The lawe was giuen by Moses, but grace and truth came by Iesus Christ. Read also, Rom. chap. 7. 1. 2, 3. 4. 5. 6. and chap. 8. 3. 4.

Secondly, that the duties which the Law vrgeth, are such as ought to be performed, according to the innocency and holines of the first creation, it is euident from that which the Apostle Paul disputeth: Rom. 2. 12. As many as haue sinned without the Lawe, shall be iudged by the Lawe. For the hearers of the Law are not righteous before God: but the doers of the Law shall be iustified. For when the gentiles, which haue not the law, doe by nature the things contained in the Law, they hauing not the law, are a law vnto themselues, who shewe the effect of the law written in their hearts, &c. But that the Gospell is satisfied, with such duties, as proceed from the spirit of regeneration, it is manifest. Rom. 8. 13. If ye mortifie the deedes of the body by the spirit, ye shall liue. Yea though we cannot doe it so fully as we ought: nay (which is lesse) though we cannot doe it as we gladly would. Rom. 7. 15. &c. and Gal. 5. 17. For the flesh lusteth against the spirit, & the spirit against the flesh: & these are contrary the one to the other, so that (We) cannot doe the same things that (We) would. And as our Sauiour Christ told his Disciples in the Garden; The spirit is ready, but the flesh is weake. Read also Mat. 25. 23. Where the seruant is commended that hath beene faithfull in a little, yea, hee is betrusted with more, and admitted into his maisters ioy. And for increase in obedience, which wee ought to labour after, we haue the cõmendation of the Church of Thyatira set before vs for an example. Reuel. ch. 2. 19 Thy works are more at the last then at the first. And Mat. 13. 12. Our Sauiour Christ for our encouragement herein, promiseth that it shall be giuen to him that hath, & that he shal haue abundance: to wit, of spirituall grace.

Thirdly, that the law reiecteth all which is not done in full perfection: read rom. 9 31. 32 Israel which followed the law of righteousnes, could not attaine to the law of righteousnes.

Where-

How the Gospel differeth from the law

Wherefore? Because they sought it not by faith, but as it were by the workes of the law, &c. But that the Gospell accepteth of sincerirtie, though there be weaknes and imperfection, not onely in workes, but also in knowledge and faith, which are as one may say, the right eye, and the right hand thereof: wee may perceiue by the testimony of the holy Prophet, who writing of our Sauiour Christ: saith that he will not breake a bruised reed, nor quench smoking flaxe: Isay. Chap. 42. 3. Yea we may most cleerely see it in the practise of our Sauiour Christ himselfe, in the whole course of his dealing with his poore and fraile Disciples: and namely, by that which we read, Ioh. 1. 47. in that he so greatly approueth of Nathanael, as of a true Israelite, euen because hee was without guile: though as yet hee had but small knowledge, and was scarce entred into the lowest forme of the Doctrine and faith of the Gospell. See it also, Mat. Chap. 11. 28. 29. 30. Come vnto me all ye that are weary, &c. They are the words of our Sauiour himselfe. And Act. 13. Verses 38. 39. Be it knowne vnto you men and brethren (saith the Apostle Paul) that through this man (that is Iesus Christ) is preached vnto you the forgiuenes of sins. And from all things from the which yee could not be iustified by the Law of Moses, by him euery one that beleeueth is iustified.

So then, we may truly say according to the last part of the answere, that the lawe may iustly be compared to a seuere and righteous Iudge, and the Gospell to a most tender and gentle Nurse, &c.

This, as I finde it well expressed by a holy Martyr and Minister of the Gospell of our Sauiour Christ, in a liuely opposition betwixt the lawe and the Gospell: I thought it to good purpose, in this place to set downe, according as Maister Foxe hath worthily recorded the same.

M. Patrick Hammelton. Act. Mon. Pag. 890. ed. last.

The Lawe (saith the Martyr) sheweth vs our sinne.	The Gospell sheweth vs the remedie for it.
The Lawe sheweth vs our condemnation.	The Gospell sheweth vs our redemption.
The Lawe is the worde of yre.	The Gospell is the word of grace.
The Lawe is the word of despaire.	The Gespell is the word of comfort.
The Lawe is the word of vnrest.	The Gospell is the word of peace.

Thus the holy Martyr setteth out the contrary nature and office of the lawe and of the Gospell, by this more milde opposition of the one to the other.

And he doth the same againe, by a more hot and sharpe disputation, in way of a contradictorie reply of each to other: the which also, we will likewise here set downe, to make this point of doctrine so much the more euident and plaine, from the testimony of so notable a Martyr. Thus therefore it followeth.

The Lawe saith, Pay thy debt.	The Gospell saith, Christ hath paid it.
The Law saith. Thou art a sinner, despaire, for thou shalt be damned.	The Gospel saith, Thy sinnes are forgiuē thee, be of good comfort, thou shalt be saued.
The Lawe saith, Make amends for thy sinnes.	The Gospell saith, Christ hath made it for thee.
The Lawe saith, The Father of heauen is angry with thee.	The Gospell saith, Christ hath pacified him with his blood.
The Lawe saith, where is thy goodnes, righteousnes and satisfaction.	The Gospell saith, Christ is thy goodnes, righteousnes, and satisfaction.
The Lawe saith, Thou art bound & obliged to me, to the Diuel & to Hell.	The Gospell saith, Christ hath deliuered thee from them all.

Vnto these differences of the Law and the Gospell, thus set down by the holy Martyr: Maister Foxe, a little after the page aboue mentioned, addeth diuers notes & obseruations for the more full declaratiō of the same differences of the Law & the Gospell, and of the seuerall vses of them both: pag. 893. 894. 895. to the which for breuities sake I doe refer the Reader.

How the Gospel differeth from the law

But (as was mentioned in the beginning of the answere) all that is hitherto said, must be vnderstood, as being spoken of the law in such sense as it is opposed to the Gospell: to wit, in the point of iustification. For this is that which doth principallly make the iarre, yea that causeth an irreconcilable war betwixt them: insomuch as herein the law meddeleth not with the Gospel, neither wil the Gospell haue any thing to doe with the Law. Nay herein, the Gospell vtterly excludeth, not onely the workes of the Law, but also the faith of the Law, legally and strictly taken. And the Law againe, will in no wise allowe of any faith of righteousnesse and saluation by it, without the parties owne personal, inherent and perfect obedience to the same.

So that then, to be vnder the law (or as the Apostle Paul speaketh) of the law: or in the same sense, of the works of the Law; that is, for a man to be of this mind to seeke and challenge righteousnes & euerlasting life thereby: and to be vnder grace, that is, to be such a one as waiteth for iustification & saluation from the free grace & fauour of God through the faith of the Gospell: it is to be in a cleane contrary state and condition. For the which, read Rom. 3, 28, & 4. 14, & 6, 14, & 7, 6, & chap. 11, vers. 11. Col. 2, 15, &c. and chap. 3, 10, 11, 12, 18, 23, 25, & chap. 4, 21, &c. and chap. 5, veres. 4, 5, according also to that which the same Apostle writeth. 2. Cor. ch. 3. where he calleth the old Testament, the letter, that is, of no validitie to saluation: and the newe Testament the Spirit, that is, the mightie instrument, or as it were the wagon of the Spirit, for the plentiful conuoy of al grace & saluation. Where likewise, he teacheth that the Law is the ministration of death & damnation, and ascribeth righteousnes, life and glory, onely to the Ministery of the Gospell.

Neuertheles, we may not be ignorant of this, that the law in a generall acceptation of the word, comprehendeth the whole gratious doctrine of the couenant of life & saluation; that is to say, it comprehendeth both the doctrine of workes as the fruits of faith, and also the doctrine of the true iustifying faith it selfe: Ps. 1, ver. 2, & Ps. 105, 8, 9, 10, & Ps. 119. Like wise Isay, 51. 4, 5, 7, & Mal. ch. 2, 6 7, 8, 9, & ch. 4. vers. 4. Remember the law of Moses my seruant which I (saith the Lord) commanded vnto him in Horeb, &c. as though the Lord would giue to vnderstand, that it was a sufficient & full direction vnto them, vntil the Sun-shine of righteousnes should afterward more brightly shine forth, by the Ministery of Iohn Baptist, and by the manifestation of Christ himselfe. Like as the Apostle Peter also writeth to the Iewes of his time, 2. Ep. 1, 19. We haue also a most sure word of the prophets, to the which ye do wel that ye take heed as vnto a light that shineth in a dark place vntil the day dawn & the day star arise in your harts.

And besides, the morall Lawe and the Gospell, are so accorded in Christ, (who is the perfect righteousnes of the Lawe to euery true beleeuer,) who also concerning such, hath taken away al the sting and strength which the Law had to death & destruction) that, as by the appointment of God, the Lawe is to all his elect children, as a School-maister to leade vnto Christ; so christ himselfe againe, euen from the holy Law of God, schooleth all those whom God by his holy Spirit hath once guided vnto him. For he calleth all his schollers to all diligent and industrious care of vnfeined obedience vnto it, as vnto the onely true rule of all good workes. So do his holy Apostles also. And so doe all godly learned Ministers of the holy word of God, euen to this day, as is plentifully to be seene in their Catechismes, & all other their godly writings. Yet so, as neither the one, nor any of the other doe thus teach, as though iustification and saluation could possibly be obtained by the workes of the Law: but because (as was touched euen now) the doctrine thereof humbling sinners before God, & driuing vnto Christ: doth also teach them, as by a most briefe & excellēt rule, all duties of true thankfulnes to God in a godly course of life, in such manner as was described in the second & third branches of the answere. For verily, the duties of the Law, & the duties of the Gospell, they are one & the same in matter & substance, both toward God & toward man.

All the difference, lieth in the manner or measure, of the performance of them. And therefore we say, that the Gospell boroweth all morall instructions which it giueth, euen from the morall law of God; onely fitting them to the grace and tenure of the couenant of the Gospell: " Adding (as one saith very well) a kinde of holie Indulgence or milde moderation vnto it.

it

How the law accordeth with the Gospell.

Neither may it, without impietie bee thought, that the lawe is absolutelie contrary to the promise of the Gospell: according to that Galath: 3. 21. Is the Lawe then against the promise of God? God forbid, &c. Nay as the same Apostle teacheth, Rom: 3. 21. Christ hath witnesse of the Lawe and the Prophetes. And hee saith of himselfe, that hee being as one without the lawe, was notwithstanding in the law through Christ. 1. Cor. 9. 21. Likewise our Sauiour Christ, and the Apostle Iohn as he learned of him, they make no scruple to call the Gospell not onely a newe commandement, but also the same which was of olde. Iohn ch. 13. 34. and 1. ep. 2. 7. 8. And so Danid likewise, professed of olde, that hee beleeued Gods commandements, as containing matter of faith, and an vndoubted path-way to life, after that it hath humbled the children of God to the faith of Christ. Ps. 119. 65. And how friendlie, both the law and the Gospell were accorded in his beleeuing heart, wee may vnderstand by that which he professeth further in the same Psalme, vers. 166. Lord (saith hee) I haue trusted in thy saluation, and haue done thy commandement. And verse, 174. I haue longed for thy saluation ô Lord, & thy law is my delight. Read also Isay, ch. 42. 4. & Matt. 12. 21. The Ilands shall wayte for the law of Christ. And Gal: 6. 2. Beare ye one anothers burthen, & so fulfill the law of Christ. & 2. Pet. 1. 21.

Whervpon also, wee may yet furthermore, truely hold & affirme, that both the old Testament & the new, or the law (as it is generally taken,) & the Gospel: the doctrine of Moses, and the doctrine of Christ: they doe containe but one & the same coueānt of Gods free fauour & mercy (euer since the fall of mankind,) toward all his elect, whither Iew or Gentile. One (I meane) in substance, as might be proued by many testimonies & reasons out of the holy Scriptures, according as M. Caluin that excellēt minister of the Gospel of God, hath notably gathered and set them downe to our hand, in the 9. & 10. chapters of the second book of his Institutions: the which M. Piscator also, whom God hath made a skilfull fisher of men in his Church, hath in the 9. chapt. of his little booke of Aphorismes, or common places, abridged them in 19. seuerall Aphorismes. Either of which bookes are in our English tongue, and therefore I do the rather forbeare to set downe either the reasons or aphorismes here. Neuertheles one notable saying or two of M. Cal. out of some other part of his writings I will not omit. First, vpon the 38. verse of the 5. ch. of Iohn in his Commentarie vpon the same: God (saith he) hath not spoken in vaine by Moses & the Prophets. Neither did Moses intende any other thing then to call all directlie vnto Christ. Whence (saith he further) it is euident, that whosoeuer refuse Christ, they are none of Moses disciples. Beside, how shall he haue the word of life abiding in him, who thrusteth away him that is the life it selfe? How shall hee vnderstand the doctrine of the law, who as much as lieth in him, destroieth the life of the law. For the law without Christ is of no force (to wit, as touching life & saluation) neither is ther without him any sound comfort to be found in it. Wherfore by how much any hath learned to knowe Christ more familiarly, by so much hath he profited more in the word of God. And againe vpon the 39. verse of the same chapter: Whosoeuer aimeth not at this marke, let him tyre himselfe as much as hee will, all the daies of his life: yet shall he neuer attaine to the knowledge of the truth. Hitherto M. Caluin. Worthy also to the same purpose is that saying of Iustinus Martyr. " The law is the Gospel spokē of before: & the Gospel is the law fulfilled after.

And M. Caluin againe vpon the 20 verse of the 24. Psal. It is the Deuils crafte to dazell our eyes, &c. as though the certainty of the grace of God were to be learned any other where then in the law and the Gospell.

Diabolicum artificium est mentes nostras concutere, acsi aliunde quàm ex Lege & Euangelio petenda sit gratiæ Dei certitudo.

In respect of this friendly harmony & concent, the law of God is in the holy scriptures, many times honored with the name of the gratious couenāt of God: as Exo. 19. 5. Deu. 4. 13. & v. 23. & ch. 5. 2. & ch. 9. v. 9. & again. v. 15. Hos 8. 1. Likewise, the arke wherin the law, (euē the tables of the morall law) were kept, it is vsually called the arke of the testimonie, or witnes of the couenant of God, which he made with his people Israel: yea in respect of Christ, no doubt. Neuertheles we denie not but the same couenant, one in substance, both in the time of the lawe and also of the Gospell; is to be distinguished, in respect of some graue and weightie circumstances, not onely of time, (in that it is called eyther olde or newe) but otherwise also.

" Lex est euāgelium prænuntiatum: Euangelium autem lex impleta.

How the law accordeth with the Gospell.

For first, the olde Testament was more darke, through the vaile of many figures and ceremonies as it was restrained to the Israelites, yea and euen the morall lawe it selfe also, by reason of the dulnesse of mens vnderstanding: Yea, though both it and all things else, were visiblie sprinckled with the bloude of the couenant: as Exod. Chap. 24. 7. 8. Where thus wee reade: Moses tooke the booke of the couenant, and read it in the audience of the people: who said, All that the Lord hath said we will do, and be obedient. Then he tooke the blood and sprinkled it on the people, and said, Behold the blood of the couenant which the Lord hath made with you concerning all these things. And Heb. 9. we reade expresly, that the booke of the law was sprinckled with blood. The which blood of the sacrificed beasts, was (as we all know) an euident type of the blood-shed of our Sauiour Christ, for the redemption and iustification of all the elect people of God: verses 18, 19, &c. of the same 9 chap.

But the new Testament, as it is enlarged to the Gentiles, according as it was formerly entred with Abraham, yea or rather with Noah, and the same also according to the promise of God made to Adam at the beginning of the World, immediatly after his fall: it is euer since the manifestation of Christ in the flesh, and by the death of his Crosse, made most cleare. For the vaile of all figuratiue ceremonies beeing thereby remooued and abolished, the couenant is now most authentically sprinckled, yea sealed and confirmed for euer, by the very true blood of the Messiah himselfe, who is the lambe of God that taketh away the sinnes of the worlde, and the Lord our righteousnes, who hath fulfilled the lawe for vs, &c: as it is further declared in the same 9. chap. to the Hebr. verses 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. and chap. 13. 20. and 1. Pet. 1. 1. 2. and verses 18. 19. & Ro. 3. 25. Ephes. 1. 17. Colos. 1. 14. and 1. Ioh. 1. 7. and chap. 5. 6. all according to the prophesie of Zech. cha. 9. 11. Thou shalt be saued by the blood of thy couenant: and Ier. 23. 6. This is the name whereby they shall call him, The Lord our righteousnes. In regarde of which clearenes of the newe Testament, (by reason of the more bright light of the Sunne of Righteousnes, shining now in the Reuelation of the Gospell, aboue the olde Testament, in the time of the lawe) the Apostle Paul saith thus, 2. Cor. 3. 13. Wee are not as Moses, who put a vaile vpon his face, that the children of Israel could not looke to the ende of that which should be abolished. &c. Read also Ier. 31. verses. 32. 32. 33. 34. They shall knowe mee, &c. And Isay. chap. 11. 9. The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lorde, as the waters that couer the Sea. And cha. 54 13. All thy children shall be taught of the Lorde. And the same againe, alledged to the same purpose by our Sauior Christ: Iohn. cha. 6. 45. Read also. 1. Cor. 2. 9. 10. and 1. Iohn. 2. 27. These therefore are the former differences in the circumstance of one and the same couenant of the old and new Testament. First that the olde was more restrictiue toward the Iewes, the newe inlarged to all Nations both of Iewe and Gentile. Secondly, that the olde was more obscure and darke, the new more bright and cleare.

Thirdlie, the olde Testament and the ministration thereof, was mixed with a certaine terrour, and seruitude, through the burthen of ceremonies, and by the often killing and slaying of beastes: but the newe Testament is full of libertie and freedome, and is graced euery way, with more spirituall glory and comfort: the proofe whereof wee may reade, Rom. 8. 15. 16. 17. and Gal. 4. 1. 2. 3. 6. 7. 9. and verse 24. &c. and cha. 5. 1. Reade also Matth. 11. 29. 2. 30. and Act. 15. 10. and 1. Iohn. 5. 3.

So then, for the issue of this pointe, let vs well obserue, that the contrarietie of the lawe or olde Testament, yea euen of the morall lawe of God, as it beareth the figuratiue sprinkling of the blood of Christ, & so pointeth vs to him, after that it hath humbled vs in our selues: the contrarietie (I say) of it, and of the Gospell or newe Testament, it is not in themselues, and in the purpose of God, as touching his elect: (for God is one, Gal: 3. 20) but partlie in the ignorance, and partlie in the pride, and hardnes of the heartes of those that misvnderstand and peruert the right ende and vse of the lawe, as if God had giuen

ſt with a mind to iuſtifie men therwithall, (which he neuer did) but rather on the contrary, to ſhew all men how far they are from that righteouſnes which he may iuſtly require at all of our hands. Of the which, both ignorance, & pride, ioyned with hardnes of heart, wee may take the Iewes firſt, for our admonitorie exãple. And therin firſt of all concerning their ignorance, reade Rom. 10. 2, 3. I beare them record (ſaith the Apoſtle) that they haue the zeale of God, but not according to knowledge. For they being ignorant of the righteouſnes of God, & going about to ſtabliſh their owne righteouſnes, haue not ſubmitted themſelues to the righteouſnes of God. For Chriſt is the end of the law for righteouſnes vnto euery one that beleeueth. And cõcerning their pride & hardnes of heart, we read further in the ſame epiſt. ch. 11. 25. partlie obſtinacie is come to Iſraell. & 2. cor. 3. 14. 15. 16. Becauſe they looke not to the end of that which ſhould be aboliſhed: Therfore (ſaith the Apo.) their mindes are hardened: for vnto this day remaineth the ſame couering vntaken away in the reading of the old Teſtament, which vaile in Chriſt is put away. But euen vnto this day when Moſes is read, the vaile is laide ouer their hearts. Neuertheles when they ſhalbe turned to the Lord, the vaile ſhalbe takẽ away. Thus the Iewes may be a warning vnto vs, & ſo doth the ſame Apo. admoniſh all Chriſtiãs, ſaying: Be not ye high minded, but feare. The which admonitiõ, becauſe the ignorãt & proud Papiſts of theſe latter times, haue not regarded, they are fallẽ into the like, yea rather into ſo much the more dãnable blindnes & obſtinacy, by how much they do more craftily ſeek to couer their pride, with the counterfet ſhew of greater humility. Would to God their hearts, together with the hearts of the Iewes, might yet at the laſt, bee turned to the Lord, that the vaile might be taken away from eyther of their eyes.

Hitherto for the explication & proofe of the former anſwere: and that in the more large diſcourſe, to the better clearing of ſome difficultie ariſing from the ſame: wee will labour after breuitie, ſo much as wee can.

NOw therfore, that we may goe forward. Seeing the law, & the Goſpell, do ſo friendly agree; the one pointing & guiding to Chriſt, in that it ſheweth vs our neceſſitie of his righteouſnes & ſaluation; the other putting vs ſo directed, and prepared, into the poſſeſſion therof: is it not manifeſt from hence, that the law according to the moſt wiſe and holie purpoſe of God, in giuing the ſame, and in the right conſtruction thereof, is ſtill to bee preached to all Chriſtian people, together with the Goſpel, & that it is not vtterly aboliſhed therbye Queſtion. How haue you bene taught and inſtructed concerning this pointe?

Anſwere. The Law of God (no doubte) ſpeciallie that parte of it which is called Morall, is neceſſarie to be continually taught in the Church of God: becauſe ſuch as are truely humbled by the Doctrine therof, in the ſight of their owne ſinnefull, miſerable, and damnable eſtate, are the onely fitte and profitable hearers of the doctrine of the Goſpell.

Explication & proof It is true that you anſwere. For the Goſpell (as touching this vſe and miniſterie) doth not aboliſh, but eſtabliſh the Law. Rom. 3. 31. And howſoeuer (as was ſaide in the former part of our Treaſurie,) the Lord doth not at the firſt, humble & caſt downe euerie one of his children, in the ſame manner and meaſure, that hee doth ſome of them, for the example and benefite of the reſt: neuertheleſſe, it is the vſuall & orderlie courſe, both of Gods doctrine, and alſo of his working by his holy Spirit, more or leſſe as it pleaſeth him; firſt, to make ſinne, and that miſerie which is due therevnto, knowne by the lawe, to thoſe whome hee prepareth and inſtructeth vnto his kingdome: ſecondlie, to make Chriſt knowne to them, and the comfort of his ſaluation: thirdly, to ſtirre vp in their hearts, a holie care to leade a new life, both according to his lawe, and alſo agreeable to the inſtructions of his Goſpell.

And that the Lorde ſhould proceede in this courſe, hee ſawe in his Diuine wiſedome, that it was and is continually very neceſſary; becauſe, like as men in reſpect of their outward eſtate, if they feele no want at home, will not begge abroade: ſo if wee feele not the ſpirituall want and beggerie of our ſoules, and if wee be not bitten with the ſenſe and feeling of our owne miſerie, we will neuer ſeeke for reliefe in the mercie of God.

Who are fitte hearers of the Gospell.

Wee may see it to be so, in the parable of the prodigall child: Luke. ch. 15.11. &c. Likewise, as the holie Prouerbe truelie saith: Her that is full, despiseth the honie combe; but to the hungrie soule, euery bitter thing is sweet. Pro. ch. 27.7.

For this verie cause it was, that Iohn the Baptist cried out so mightilie, to the people to whom he preached, that they should speedily repent, because the kingdome of God was at hand. And likewise, that our Sauiour Christ did so after him: & the Apostles after them. Not that repentance goeth before faith, but because the doctrine of repẽtance, which discouereth the corruption of mans nature, & is a preparation to the faith of the Gospell: which faith aboue all other graces, giueth the entrance into the kingdome of God; and bringeth with it both the assurance of the forgiuenesse of sinnes, and also the gift of repentance and amendment of life, as the fruit and effect of faith to euery true beleeuer, and that by the inward operation of the holy Ghost, and according to the course of the same his effectuall working, as wee shall haue further occasion to declare more fullie hereafter.

It is true indeede, that God hath imprinted in euery mans minde, a certaine sight of sin, from that light which he hath reserued in nature; in that euery mans conscience, either accuseth or excuseth him, as the Apostle Paul teacheth: Ro. 2.15. And that also, so much the rather, by how much the more heauie & suddeine punishments of God doe at any time fall vpon men, as may appeare. Ex. 9.27. and cha. 10.16.17. Ionah. ch. 1.7. Yet because this sight, (though thus holpen) is but a dimme sight; and accordingly, the accusations of conscience proceeding from the same, are too flitting, and insufficient to bring the heart to a right discerning, and to a true remorse for sinne: therefore hath the Lorde added his lawe, for a more full inlightening, and for a more through awakening of the conscience, and so consequently, to shewe more clearely the greatnes of sinne, and the right vse of all present punishments or chastisements of God; the which in themselues, are but (after a sort) mute and dumbe messengers; and as a sealed booke, till God by his holie doctrine doe open his meaning by them: as Ehhu teacheth vs, ch. 33. verse 14. &c. in the booke of Iob.

Thus then, the doctrine of the lawe of God, is necessarie to prepare the way for the Gospell; after the comfort and grace whereof, powred (as it were a sweet and precious oyle) into the soule and spirit, orderlie followeth repentance and amendment of life. All which, may be exemplified, from that one Sermon of the Apostle Peter in the 2. chap. of the actes of the Apostles. And that, in so much the more cleare a viewe, by how much the works of Gods extraordinary grace, was more glorious and speedie at that time. The Apostle Peter laieth before the people the hainousnes of their crime, in their most vniust and malious crucifying of a most righteous and innocent man; yea euen of Iesus Christ, the onely Sonne of the liuing God, (a sinne not onely against the sixt commandement in the highest degree, but also against the whole law & the very person of God himselfe): Herevpon the people were pricked in their hearts, & wounded with sorow and griefe for their sinnes, as if some dagger had ben thrust into their sides. And forthwith they earnestlie desire to bee informed, what they should doe. Then Peter exhorteth them to amend their liues, and to be baptized into the faith of the Gospell, in comfortable assurance that God would receiue them to his mercie. And thus by so speedy and quicke an expedition, in so great a worke of Gods kingdome: the Lord would not onely declare, the mightie power and aboundant grace of his Gospell, but also manifest to his Church, the orderly course of the vsuall working of the same his spirituall grace, though other-while more leisurelie, and in sundrie measures and degrees among his Elect and chosen people, as seemeth best to his Diuine wisedome.

Question. But when wee teach thus, that the onely ordinarie waye to the comfort of the Gospell and kingdome of God, is by the terrour and deiections of the lawe: is not this the way, to discourage manie from comming to the Gospell, in so much as this terrour and humiliation which wee speake of, is naturally rallie vnwelcome, yea purpoſelie bauked and ſhunned of all men?

The Goſpell exalteth thoſe onely, whome the Lawe humbleth.

Anſwere. Doubtleſſe there is no ſuch danger or feare, concerning any of thoſe which doe belong vnto God, ſeeing God himſelfe will cauſe them to vnderſtand, euen in themſelues, that it is neceſſarie that euery one ſhould be caſt downe and humbled, before hee can bee exalted and ſaued.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is very true. For the holie Scriptures of God ſaith not in vaine. God reſiſteth the proude, and giueth grace to the humble: 1. Pet. 5. 5. And Prou. 15. 33. Before honour goeth humilitie. And againe, chapt. 18. 12. Before glorie goeth lowelineſſe. And yet againe, chapt. 29. 23. The humble in Spirit ſhall enioye glorie. Likewiſe our Sauiour Chriſt, Matth: 5. 3. Bleſſed are the poore in Spirit, for theirs is the kingdome of God. And verſe. 4. Bleſſed are they that mourne for they ſhall be comforted. And Luke, chapt. 18. 14. Euerie man that exalteth himſelfe ſhall be brought lowe, and hee that humbleth himſelfe ſhall be exalted. Thus then we ſee that wee haue ſtrong encouragement, againſt all ſuch feare and danger. And the rather, ſeeeing (as was anſwered,) God himſelfe vndertaketh to encourage and draw all that be his, vnto himſelfe. For this we may be ſure of, that inſomuch as he mindeth the ſaluation of his children, he will make the wounde no deeper by the one, then hee will ſupple and heale by the other. There neede be no queſtion, but hee will deale moſt tenderlie, as a Father, hauing a mercifull regarde of the great infirmitie and weakenes of the leaſt of his children. Pſal. 103. 18. 9. 10. &c. Wee may ſee it alſo in the practiſe of our Sauiour Chriſt, whereby hee hath declared himſelfe, (according to the will of the Father) a moſt gratious and diſcreete teacher and guide, to all that come vnto him. Hee ſo ſugareth and ſweeteneth all things, (yea euen that which is of it ſelfe moſt ſharp and bitter) that none can iuſtly alledge any thing, why they ſhould not moſt willingly come vnto him. A proofe wherof we may, to our owne comfort, call to minde from our laſt Sermon vpon Luke. Can yee (ſaith our Sauior) make the children of the wedding chamber faſt, ſo long as the bridegroome is with them? &c. And againe. No man putteth a piece of a newe garment, vnto an olde veſture. By the which ſimilitudes, hee giueth familiarly to vnderſtand, that hee knoweth well what hee doth, and that hee hath a moſt ſingular care, to order and traine vp his Diſciples, with the beſt diſcretion that may bee. And againe from the 10. verſe of the ſame chapter, wee may to the ſame purpoſe, call to minde, that when Peter was vtterlie aſtoniſhed, and felt downe at IESVS knees; ſaying, Lord goe from mee, for I am a ſinnefull man: Our Sauiour (chriſt doth eſte-ſoone comforte him, and tell him that hee ſhould thence-forth catche men; to witte, euen as hee was taken himſelfe. Whereupon well ſaith a learned Interpreter: Humilation in the ſight of ſinne, is as it were the Nette of Chriſt, whereby hee catcheth thoſe that be his. And he addeth further, that by the ſame Nette, hee maketh all other his Miniſters, to be fiſhers of men.

Thus then we ſee, that ſome meaſure of humiliation by the Lawe, is a neceſſarie preparation to the hearing of the Goſpell of our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt to our ſaluation.

Queſtion. NOwe therefore, that wee may proceede, and come more neare to our purpoſe, is not the faith of the Goſpell much more neceſſarie?

Anſwere. It muſt needes be ſo. For without the faith of the Goſpell, wee can neither be ſaued, nor pleaſe God in any thing that wee doe, no not in humiliation it ſelfe.

Queſtion. What proofe of holie Scripture can you alledge for that you ſay?

Anſwere. Hee that will not beleeue ſhall be damned: ſaith our Sauiour Chriſt, Mark. chapt. 10. and 16. verſe. And likewiſe Iohn. 3. 18. Hee that beleeueth not, is condemned alreadie. Moreouer, the Apoſtle Paul affirmeth. Roman. 14. 23. Whatſoeuer is not of Faith is ſinne. And Hebrew. 11. 16. Without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe God.

Faith most necessary to salvation. Explication.

These proofes of holie Scripture (as euerie diligent reader may see) are very euident and plaine. And the latter may very well be a confirmation of the former. For if without faith, we cannot pleased God; nay, if all that wee doe be sinne, the which is abominable in the sight of God: how can we think that any such should be saued by him? Nay how can we thinke, but that hee will condemne them? Let vs therefore stand to consider a little of these latter places of holie Scripture. The first of them speaketh of doing such things as be doubtfull to a man, and of the which he hath no well grounded and setled perswasion, that hee may lawfully, and with a good conscience doo them. The other place is of such things as be in themselues without all question good, and plainlie warranted by the word of God. But neither the one, nor the other (as the Spirit testifieth in either of those places) are of any reckoning and allowance with God, if they be not done in faith. No not the very best actions and duties, either of mercie to men destitute, or of religious worship to GOD all-sufficient: Whether it bee preaching, or hearing of the word of God, or prayer, or vse of the Sacraments, or any other religious dutie beside. Hereupon, because the matter is of great importance, let vs staye yet a while longer, to make it plaine by some particular proofes. And first, that the preaching of the word, by such as are without true faith, is of no account with God, as touching them that doe so preach it: read Math. 7. 21. 22. 23. For our Sauiour Christ professeth plainely, that hee cannot approoue of them. Likewise, that hearing is to no profit, and therfore also nothing pleasing to God; if it be not mixed with faith, wee reade it plainely affirmed: Hebr. 4. 2. It is faith, that maketh the Gospell to be vnto all beleeuers, as the cup of saluation: but vnto all vnbeleeuers, it is, through their owne infidelitie and contempt, as it were a viall of the wrath of God. For such is the similitude, whervnto the holy Apostle alludeth in that place, as the Greeke word Sugcecramenos, (in English mixed,) plainly sheweth. And further, that Prayer is nothing auailable without faith; the Apostle Iames is our warrant: cha. 1. 6. 7. Let him (saith the Apostle) that asketh, aske in faith, and not waner, for hee that wauereth is like a waue of the Sea, tost of the winde and carried away. Neyther let that man thinke that hee shall receyue any thing of the Lorde. And againe, chap. 5. 15. 16. It is the prayer of faith onely which is auailable. The prayer of faith (saith the Apostle) shall saue the sicke, &c. Hence it is, that our Sauiour Christ doth so earnestly admonish his Disciples, that they should beleeue to obtaine whatsoeuer they prayed for: prouided that first of all they had good assurance, that they asked such things onely, as were agreeable to the will of God. Mark. 11. 24.

And touching the holie Sacraments. First, Baptisme to all such as despise knowledge, and finally continue in vnbeleefe: it is but as a seale set as it were to a blanke, though not on Gods behalfe, but for their owne vnbeliefe and wickednes sake. Vnlesse wee shall adde further (as the truth is) that through this wickednes and vnbeliefe, the charter of Gods couenant, turneth at the last to be as a writ sealed vp to their greater condemnation, through the iust displeasure of God. For it is in no wise, the outward washing of the water which saueth, as the Apostle Peter teacheth. 1. Ep. cha. 3. but the reuerend expostulation, or holy chalenge (as it were) which faith maketh: in that it reasoneth from the effect of a good conscience, to argue the truth and validitie of the signe and seale therof, from the efficacie of Christes death: the which also, is yet further warranted by his Resurrection, &c. as it followeth in the same place. To the further vnderstanding whereof, let vs well obserue, that the true iustifying Faith, (where it is throughly rooted and grounded) it hath a holie boldnes or confidence: and that it invincible striueth for the maintenance of that right and interest, which it hath in the mercie of God through Christ, against all temptations which rise vp to the contrarie. As though the Christian soule should pleade before God against them all, thus: Is it not thy good will O gratiou GOD, to confirme the couenant of thy grace and mercie for euer with mees touching the forgiueneſſe of my ſinnes, through the death of thy ſonne, wherof, thou haſt made holy baptiſme as a faithful and irreuocable ſeale and aſſurance vnto me? Yes Lord I verily beleeue, that thou wilt for euer ratifie and confirme it. I will not, neither can I doubt of it, ſeeing I knowe, that my Sauiour Chriſt is to this very end, riſen a conquerer of ſin, and of death, and of the Diuel; and that he hath through his moſt precious blood perfected our reconciliation and redemption with thee, and by his reſurrection declareth that he hath iuſtified vs before thee for euer. How ſhould I then (truſting in this thy perfect grace) giue place to any feares or doubtings, which at any time, either my owne fraile nature, or the Diuel, or any of his inſtruments ſhal ſuggeſt.

To this effect doth the wordes of the bleſſed Apoſtle Peter tend: 1. Epiſtle 3, 21, 22. Baptiſme (ſaith he) ſaueth vs, (that is, it is a ſure teſtimony that God will ſurely ſaue vs for euer) but not in that the filth of the fleſh (that is, the outward ſoile of the body) is put away, (to wit, by the outward waſhing of the water) but in that a good conſciẽce maketh requeſt to God, (that is) pleadeth with him concerning the inward and ſpirituall fruite and effect of Baptiſme, through the death and reſurrection of our Sauiour Chriſt: as was ſaide before. To the ſame purpoſe, ſaith Ananias to Paul, as wee reade: Act. 22, 16. Bee thou Baptized, and waſhe away thy ſinnes by calling on the name of the Lord. Hee aſcribeth (we ſee) the inward apprehenſion of that, to the vertue (that is) to the faith of prayer, which is onely ſacramentally ſignified and offered by the outwarde waſhing of the water.

And concerning the Supper of the Lord. Though the comfortable nouriſhment of this holy Sacrament, is moſt pleaſant and battleſome to the ſoule of euery beleeuing Chriſtian; as a feaſt or banquet, moſt worthy to be preferred, aboue all other, the moſt delicate and full feaſtes, that may bee: yet to vnbeleeuers (though verily, altogether through their owne default, and not by any the leaſt failing on Gods part) it is in effect, no more then a faire ſigne to the traueller, when he paſſeth by it, but regardeth not to taſt of that prouiſion which is plentifully prouided in the Inne.

And no maruell, though the beſt actions of vnbeleeuers bee of no account with God; ſeeing for want of faith, their very perſons are accounted, and bee in very deede, wholly corrupt and defiled in his ſight. Behold therefore the excellencie of faith, which maketh both our ſelues, and all that wee doe, pleaſing to God: inſomuch as by faith, wee are made the children of God: Iohn, Chap. 1, 11, 12, and Gallat. 3, 26. Hebrews 11, 4. And alſo, becauſe all the holy ordinances of God, are by it made profitable to the furtherance of our ſaluation: both word, prayer, Sacraments, and all things elſe as we haue now ſeene.

Queſtion. But what I pray, may bee the reaſon, why faith is ſo pleaſing to God: that it maketh our ſelues, and all things that we doe according to his word, well pleaſing and acceptable before him.

Anſwere. 1. It is by reaſon of that infinite loue of God, wherewith hee hath made vs accepted to himſelfe, in his owne beloued Sonne our Lord Ieſus Chriſt; whoſe righteouſneſſe, and whole obedience and worthineſſe, faith apprehendeth; yea and maketh vs one with Chriſt himſelfe by ſpirituall coniunction; and that, according to the moſt gracious and fatherly good will and pleaſure of GOD toward vs, in the ſame his Sonne.

2. It is alſo, becauſe God eſteemeth it the greateſt honour which we can poſſibly doe vnto him, yea and the very ground and originall of yeelding him any true honour at all; when we doe beleeue in him, as being moſt true and faithfull of his word, aboue all that the naturall ſenſe and reaſon of man, can poſſibly conceiue and vnderſtand.

3. Furthermore, becauſe faith onely teacheth vs the true denial of our ſelues, and of all truſt in any thing but in God alone.

4. Finally, becauſe faith is inſtrumentally, as it were the ſeede, yea the very life of all true obedience vnto him.

Faith most pleasing to God: and why.

There might more reasons bee alleadged; from whence the excellencie of faith may be discerned, as will further appeare by that which followeth: but we will content our selues with these for the present.

Explicatiõ and proofe.

Now for the proofe of them: first let it be well considered, that euen as God is in speciall manner pleased to shewe mercy (for mercy pleaseth him: Micah:7. 18.) so likewise doth faith singularly please him, in so much as it maketh most precious account of his mercy, and doth most dutifully attend vpon the same: as we read, Ps.147.11. The Lord delighteth in them that feare him, and attend vpon his mercy. Now, if we shall inquire yet further, why it is, that the Lord delighteth so greatly, to shewe mercie to miserable and sinfull men; it is doubtles for no other cause, but for that infinite loues sake, which hee beareth first to his owne naturall and onely begotten son our Lord Iesus Christ; and then to them for his sake, in whom he hath adopted them, according to that which we read Ephes.chap.1.5,6.&c.

Secondly, we may see by that which is saide of Abraham, how greatly God doth account himselfe glorified, of those that do truly and constantly beleeue in him. For so we read of Abraham, that he gaue great glory to God, in that he did not doubt of the promise of God through vnbeleefe; but was strengthened in faith, & aboue hope beleeued vnder hope, &c. He being fully assured, that he who had promised was able also to doe it. Ro.4,18,19,20,21. And for this grace of faith, all the seruants of God themselues are specially honoured, & graced (as we may say) according to that wee reade, touching many particulars, mentioned in the 11.ch. of the ep. to the Heb. from the beginning of the ch.&c. and as it is generally affirmed of them, v.39. All through faith obtained good report. Whereas on the contrary, they that beleeue not in God, are charged to make God a lyar. Then the which, what greater dishonour can any doe to him, who alone is the God of all truth. 1. Iohn,5,10? And how also can they that be such, more dishonour and reproch themselues?

For the third branch, read Philip.3,3,4,&c. And here it may be wel worth the noting, that as mans calling of the truth of Gods word into questiõ, was the beginning of mans fall from God; so it pleaseth God, that faith in the truth of his word & promise, should be the recouery & reuniting of man vnto God againe.

Finally, call here againe to minde, the words of the former answere. Read also, 2.Cor.13,14. Gal.chap.5, verse 6.

VVhat Faith is.

BVt of the nature of faith, wee are now in the next place to enquire further, as after a iewell of speciall price; and as after that which is the very staffe and stay of our soules, as we haue partly beene giuẽ to vnderstand already. Now therefore, seeing faith is so excellent a grace, shewe you yet more fully, what the nature of it is.

Question. How haue you learned to answere this so speciall a point?

Answere. The faith whereby euery true beleeuer is iustified and saued, is that most holy and excellent gift or grace of our spirituall regeneration and new birth, wherein resteth the principall comfort of our soules here in this life. The which arising from the knowledge of the glorious grace of God in the face of Iesus Christ, and sweetly and comfortably reposing and resting it selfe, onely and wholly vpon the vndoubted certaintie of the diuine truth and faithfulnes of Gods most gracious and free promise, concerning the same our iustification and saluation by Christ; yea, laying sure hold vpon Christ himselfe, in whom onely, and al-sufficiently, life, righteousnes, and saluation is to be found: It hath furthermore many right worthy and admirable effects in the heart of euery true beleeuer.

Question. Which are those so notable effects?

Answere. 1. It reioyceth the heart of the true beleeuer, with ioy vnspeakable and glorious.

2. It imboldeneth him, to make open profession and confession of his faith, in the name of Iesus Christ, euen in the middest of the most cruell & despitefull aduersaries thereof.

3. It

What Faith is.

3. It causeth his soule, to haue good trust and affiance vnder the holy wings of the fatherly prouidēce & protection of God, in the most bitter tēptations & trials of this life.

4 It inciteth also and incourageth the beleeuer, to earnest and constant prayer.

5. It continually soliciteth to repentance, and care of a godly life here in this world.

6. Finally, it is accompanied with hope, and that also in a patient waiting for eternal happines and glory, after this life in the kingdome of heauen.

Explicatiō and proofe

That the true iustifying faith, is of such an excellent nature, as you haue described; and that it worketh these so notable effects, as you haue rehearsed: it is euery where euident in the holy Scriptures, as hath beene declared in the last Sermon vpon this point. Let vs now briefly here call them againe to mind. But first of all, in so much as the word faith, is vsed in the holy Scriptures, in diuers and sundry significations; it shall not be amisse for vs, to set downe a note thereof. And let vs beginne with this, that faith is vsed sometimes to signifie, the doctrine of faith, as Act. chap. 6, 7. A great company, and of the Priests some were obedient to the faith. And againe, chap. 13, 8. Rom. 1, 5, and chap. 3. 31, and chap. 16, 26. Gal. 1 22, and chap. 3 verses 2, 5, 23, and 1. Tim. verse 2, chap. 1. Paul writeth to Timotheus, calling him his naturall sonne in the faith, meaning to giue him this testimonie, that hee was a true beleeuer, according to the true doctrine of faith. Read also, verses 3, 4, and chap. 3, 9, and chap. 4, 1, 6, 10, 21, and 2, ep. 3, 8. Tit. 1, 13. Iude, verse, 3.

Secondly, faith is vsed to note that measure of true Christian knowledge, wherewith any Minister of the Gospell, or any other Christian is indued with: Ro. 12, Let euery man vnderstand according to sobrietie, as God hath dealt to euery one the measure of faith. And ver. 6. Let vs prophesie according to the proportion of faith.

Thirdly, the word faith is vsed to note the very beginning of faith, or euen that teachablenes, whereby a man is in the way to receiue and imbrace the doctrine of faith. Iohn. chap. 2. verses 23, 24, and chap. 4, 39, 40, 41, and verses 51, 52, and chap. 8. 31, 32, and chap. 12, 42.

Fourthly, in the Greek text, it is vsed for a sure testimony or demonstration of a thing to come, Act. 17, 31.

Fiftly, it signifieth an ordinary knowledge, or slight perswasion of the historicall truth of the holy Scriptures: to wit, that there is but one onely God, &c. like as the Diuels are said to beleeue, but so as for all that, they tremble and haue no peace in beleeuing: Iames. 2. 19.

Sixtly, it signifieth an extraordinary perswasion of the almightie power of God, and therewithall in some, a ministeriall power of working miracles, by an extraordinary gift of God: as 1, Cor. 13, 2, Matt. ch. 21, v. 21, and chap. 7, 22, 23.

It signifieth also sometimes, faithfull dealing betwixt man and man: Matth. chap. 23. verse, 23, 1. Tim. 5, 12. and Tit. 2, 10, and. 1. Pet. 5, 12.

To conclude, it noteth sometimes a temporany faith, either in a plausible appearance, or with vaine boasting of that which is nothing so in truth: as Luk. ch. 8, 13, 1. Tim. 1, 19, and 2, Tim. 2, 18, Iames, 2, 14, 17, 18, 20, 24, 29. Act. 8, 13. Thus manifold is the signification and vse of this word faith.

But our speciall inquirie, is onely after the nature of the true iustifying faith, the which is of the Apostle Paul for excellencie sake, called faith vnfeined: 1. Tim. 1. 5, and, 2, ep. 1, 5 and in his Ep. to Titus. ch. 1, v. 1, the faith of Gods elect. Likewise of the Apostle Peter it is called the precious faith. Of the which, all true Christians haue the denomination of faithfull or beleeuing men and women: as Act: ch. 6, 5, & ch. 11, 24, & ch. 16, 15, & 1. Tim. 5, 16. & 2, ep. 4, 7.

Now therefore, to come to shewe the proofes of our description of the nature of it. That this faith, is first and foremost a gift of God, we read Ephes. ch. 2, 8, Where the Apostle, speaking both of it, and also of that saluation which it layeth hold of, he saith that they are either of them the gift of God. By grace (saith he) ye are saued through faith, and that not of your selues: it is the gift of God. Likewise Philip. 1, 19. Vnto you it is giuen for Christ, that not onely ye should beleeue in him, but also suffer for his sake. And 1. Pet. 1, 5. S. Peter teacheth that it is an effect of the power of God, whereby he maintaineth and vpholdeth his children to their eternall saluation. And 2,ep.1,1,2,3 he teacheth vs againe, that it is a precious gift obtained by the righteousnes of God. According as his godly power hath giuen vs al things, &c. And likewise the Apostle Paul calling it the faith of Gods elect. Tit: 1,1, (as we sawe euen now) he giueth therewith plainely to vnderstand, that it is a gift of God as a fruit of his election. Yea God is not onely the giuer of it at the first, but also the continuer and the perfitter of it: as 2. Thes. 1,11. where the same Apostle praieth for the beleeuing Thessalonians, that God would make them worthy of his calling, and fulfill all the good pleasure of his goodnes, and the worke of faith with power. Read also Heb. 12, verse 2. Our Sauiour Christ is both the author, and also the finisher of our faith. Hence it is, that the most part of men are without faith, euen because God for their contempt of his Gospel doth not vouchsafe to bestow it vpon them: as 2. Thes. 3,2. All men haue not faith. And Luk. 18,8. When the sonne of man commeth, shall he finde faith on the earth?

This gift of faith, as it is rare and precious, and a very excellent gift; so it is in the same respect, called a most holy grace: as in the Ep. of the Apostle Iude, verse 20. Beloued (saith he) edifie your selues in your most holy faith, praying in the holy Ghost. And it is called most holy, not onely because it hath a speciall prerogatiue aboue all other graces, in the apprehension of iustification and saluation; but also, because it doth in speciall manner purifie our hearts, and sanctifie our whole persons vnto God. So wee reade. Act. 15, 5. God purifieth our hearts by faith. And chap. 26, 18. Our Sauiour Christ himselfe testifieth, that his people are sanctified vnto him by their faith. Reade also, 1. Pet, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, &c. To this effect, well saith a godly learned Interpreter, that faith doth not onely reconcile man to God, but also it sanctifieth whatsoeuer is hitherto vnperfect in him; to the end hee may be righteous through the most gracious and free good will of God, who by no merit or iust desert of his owne could possibly obtaine so great a benefite.

Non solum hominē Deo reconciliat fides, sed quicquid in eo est adhuc imperfectum sanctificat vt gratuita Dei indulgentia iustus sit, qui nullo merito tantum bonū acquirere sibi posset. Calu.

That the same faith, so giuen of God (as hath bene declared) is a principall grace of our spirituall regeneration and newe birth: it may be euident from the doctrine of our Sauiour Christ, Iohn. chap. 3, verses, 3, 5. compared with that we reade, Rom. 5, 1, 2, and Ephes. 2, 18, and 1, Pet. 1, 3, 4, 5. For by faith we haue that accesse to God, and entrance into grace, which leadeth into the kingdome of God, &c.

Furthermore, wee limite the excellencie and comfort of this gift of faith, to euery particular Christian heere in this life, as touching himselfe more immediately; because otherwise, the gift of loue is preferred, as most profitable for the mutuall comfort and benefite of one Christian, with and by an other: and also, because, (as it seemeth) loue is more durable, and hath a more speciall vse for euer in the kingdome of heauen: 1. Corinth. 13.

Not that faith shall vtterly vanish away, after this life ended: but onely that expectation and waiting of faith which is heere in this life, by reason that the thing it selfe beleeued and looked for, shall then be actually performed and enioyed.

Neuertheless, faith shall still retaine this assurance for euer in heauen, that our happinesse once purchased and performed, shall for euer bee established according to the former promises of God. And this assurance of faith, for the perpetuall and endles continuance of our happines, shall be a principal ground of our euerlasting reioycing in and with the Lord: yea & a chiefe argument of our eternall praising of him, in so much as we shal be out of all doubt of loosing the same againe. And beside, vntill the resurrection, the soules of the faithfull doe (no doubt) retaine the faith and expectation of the resurrection of their bodies to euerlasting life, and of the finall confusion of all the enemies of the militant church of God: according to that Reuel. 6, 9. 10, 11.

But leauing this: That faith ariseth from the knowledge of God the father,

What Faith is.

and of his glorious grace ſhining in the face of Chriſt: read, 2. Cor. 4, verſes 3, 4, 5. And it may euidently bee proued from that which the ſame Apoſtle writeth. Rom. 10, 14. How ſhall they beleeue in him of whom they haue not heard? For indeed it is vnpoſſible that any ſhould beleeue that, whereof he hath no knowledge or vnderſtanding. Out of all queſtion, faith is a moſt wiſe gift and grace of Gods holy ſpirit, making thoſe that are indued with it, wiſe euen vnto ſaluation: 2, Tim. 3, 15. And verily there can be no greater wiſdom, then that which is vnto ſaluation; euen as on the contrary, there is no greater folly, then that which carrieth a man on forward to his eternall deſtruction. Now that there is ſingular wiſdome in faith, we ſhall the rather diſcerne, if we conſider how great that ſubtiltie of the Serpent the Diuel is, as alſo, how great the deceitfulnes of ſin is, which are both of them defeated thereby. In this reſpect it is, that faith is ſometimes called by the name of knowledge and vnderſtanding it ſelfe: as Iohn 17, 3. This is life eternall (ſaith our Sauiour Chriſt) to knowe theee to be the onely true God, and whom thou haſt ſent Ieſus Chriſt. And Ioh. 1, Ep, 2, verſes 3, 4. Hereby we are ſure that we knowe him if we keepe his commandements. He that ſaith, I knowe him, and keepeth not his commandements is a lyar, and the truth is not in him. What truth? verily, the truth of faith, or of ſauing knowledge, which is in effect all one with faith. Hence alſo it is, that it is ſo nearely linked with knowledge, as wee finde it to be oftentimes: as Tit: 1, 1, according to the faith of Gods elect and the knowledge of the truth which is according to godlineſſe. And 2, Pet. 1, 1, 3. You haue obtained like pretious faith with vs, through the knowledge of him that hath called vs vnto glory and vertue.

And againe, verſe, 5. Moreouer, ioyne vertue with your faith, and with vertue knowledge, &c. And chap, 3, verſe, 17. Read alſo, Epheſ. 1, 16, 17, 18. And Coloſ. 1, 9. And chap. 2, ver. 2. The Apoſtle proteſteth his great deſire, that the Coloſſians & Laodiceans hearts, and that the hearts of all other Chriſtians, might be comforted and knit together in one, and in all riches of the full aſſurance, of vnderſtanding, to knowe the miſterie of God euen the Father, and of Chriſt: In whom are hid all the treaſures of wiſedome and knowledge. Thus then, faith aryſing from knowledge, groweth to be euen the ſetled aſſurance of all holy vnderſtanding, and the very life of all true wiſedome. But on the contrary, where this faith is wanting, there is no true wiſedome at all. For as wee read, 1. Cor. 1, 19, 20. It is written (ſaith the Apoſtle) I will (that is, the Lord God will) deſtroy the wiſedome of the wiſe, and caſt away the vnderſtanding of the prudent. Where is the wiſe? where is the Scribe? where is the diſputer of this world? hath not God made the wiſedome of this world fooliſhnes?

Let vs now proceed. That faith is of this nature, that it doth ſweetly repoſe it ſelfe onely and wholly vpon the faithfulnes of Gods moſt gracious & free promiſe, concerning iuſtification and ſaluation, in and by onr Lord Ieſus Chriſt: it may wel be obſerued; firſt more generally from that which is ſaid of faith, Heb. chap. 11, 1, in that the Apoſtle writeth, that it is a ground of things hoped for, and an euidence of things which are not ſeene. The which words doe plainely ſignifie, yea rather they doe very ſignificantly declare, that faith hath a cleere and vndoubted confidence or perſwaſion concerning that which it apprehendeth. And then the ſame may be more particularly obſerued, from that teſtimonie which is giuen of Sarahs faith: ver, 11, in theſe wordes. Through faith (ſaith the Apoſtle) Sarah receiued ſtrength to conceiue ſeede, and was deliuered of a child when ſhe was paſt age, becauſe ſhe iudged him faithfull that had promiſed. Now, that which Sarah did in reſpect of this promiſe concerning him, (Iſaake I meane) from whom he ſhould ſpring (though long after) that ſhould be the iuſtification of all the faithfull; the ſame muſt euery faithfull Chriſtian doe, concerning iuſtification it ſelfe: that is, wee muſt conſtantly beleeue, that the promiſe of GOD in this behalfe, is moſt faithfull and true; to wit, that hee will aſſuredly iuſtifie and ſaue euery one, that ſhall truly beleeue in the name of Chriſt his Sonne. Or elſe there can be no true faith in vs. To this purpoſe therefore, let vs well weigh in our hearts and mindes, the Doctrine of the holy Scriptures, touching this ſo materiall a point. What though ſome did not beleeue (ſaith the Apoſtle Paul, Rom. 3, verſes, 3, 4.) ſhall their vnbeliefe make the faith of God without effect? God forbid. Let God be true, and euery man a lyar, as it is written, That thou maieſt be iuſtified in thy wordes, and ouercome when thou art iudged.

Moreouer, the ſame Apoſtle (as wee reade chap. 4, 13, &c. and chap. 9, 7, 8, &c. And Gallat. 3, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, &c. and chap. 4, 23, 28) by the example of Abrahams faith, and as a moſt excellent and faithfull interpreter of the holy Scriptures, he teacheth very plainely and plentifully, that the principall foundation and ſtay of faith, is the vndoubted word of Gods promiſe: The children of promiſe (ſaith he) are counted for the ſeede. For this is a word of promiſe. In this ſame time will I come, and Sarah ſhall haue a ſonne. And againe, Wee receiue the promiſe of the ſpirit through faith. To Abraham and his ſeed were the promiſes made. The inheritance is by promiſe. The Scripture hath concluded all vnder ſinne, that the promiſe by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt, ſhould be giuen to them that beleeue. Such are the frequent and often ſpeeches of the Apoſtle Paul, in thoſe his Epiſtles. Read alſo Heb. 6, 13. When God made the promiſe to Abraham, becauſe he had no greater to ſweare by, he ſware by himſelfe. And a little after verſes 17, 18, 19. So God willing more aboundantly to ſhewe vnto the heires of promiſe, the ſtablenes of his Counſell, hee bound himſelfe by an othe, That by two immutable things, wherein it is vnpoſſible that God ſhould lye, wee might haue ſtrong conſolation, who haue our refuge to hold faſt the hope that is ſet before vs, &c. And chap. 11, verſes 6, 13, 17, &c.

This moſt ſtedfaſt faithfulnes of God, is euery where worthily teſtified vnto vs, in the holy Scriptures. And namely, 1. Cor. 1, 9. God is faithfull by whom yee are called vnto the fellowſhip of his ſonne Ieſus Chriſt our Lord. And chap. 10, 13. God is faithfull &c. And 2. Epiſtle 1, 18. the Apoſtle appealeth to God, as to the moſt faithfull and true witneſſe. So againe chap. 11, 31, and chap. 12, 2, 3. God (ſaith he) knoweth that I lye not. And 1. Theſ. 5, 24. Faithfull is he which calleth you, who will alſo doe it. And Chap. 3, Epiſtle 3, 3. The Lord is faithfull, who will eſtabliſh you &c. And Tit. 1, 2. God that cannot lye, hath promiſed. And Hebrewes 10, 23. Let vs keepe the profeſſion of our hope without wauering: for hee is faithfull that hath promiſed. Reade alſo Iames 1, 17. There is no variableneſſe in God, neither ſhadowing by turning. And Paul againe, Rom. 11, 29. The gifts and calling of God are without repentance. Likewiſe the Prophet Hoſ, chap. 13, verſe 14. Repentance is hid from my eyes: ſaith the Lord. Read alſo, Pſalme 36, 5. Thy mercy ô Lord reacheth to the heauens, and thy faithfulneſſe to the cloudes. And Pſalme 105, 8. He hath alwaies remembred his couenant and promiſe which hee made to a thouſand generations. And Pſalme 111. 5. He will euer be mindefull of his couenant. And ver. 9 He hath commanded his couenant for euer. And 146, 6. He keepeth his fidelitie for euer. And in the Lament. of Ierimiah, 3, 23 Great is his faithfulneſſe.

To this end alſo, it is well worthy the obſeruing, that the word of God hath often teſtimonie giuen to the faithfulnes of it: Tit. 1, 9. The Miniſter is to hold faſt the faithfull word. And chap. 3, 8. This is a faithfull ſaying. Likewiſe, 1. Tim. 1. 15, and chap. 3, 1, and chap. 4, 9. and Reuel. chap. 22, 6. Theſe words are faithfull and true. So alſo, Pſa. 19. 7 The teſtimonie of the Lord is ſure. And Pſal, 93, 5. Thy teſtimonies are very ſure. And Iſay. 55, 3. I will make an euerlaſting couenant with you (ſaith the Lord) euen the ſure mercies of Dauid. And againe, Act. 13, 14. I will giue you the holy things of Dauid which are faithfull.

And yet further, that faith doth in ſpeciall manner lay hold of the promiſe of God touching iuſtification, it is euident by the often confirmation of this, that we are iuſtified by faith: and namely, Gal. 3, 8. The Scripture foreſeeing that God would iuſtifie the Gentiles through faith, preached before, the Goſpell vnto Abraham, ſaying, In thee ſhall all the gentiles be bleſſed. So then, they that be of faith, are bleſſed with faithfull Abraham.

This

What Faith is.

This testimonie is often repeated in the epistles of the blessed Apostle. And Act: 13. 39. By Christ euery one that beleeueth is iustified.

That the same faith doth herewithall lay holde of saluation by our Sauiour Christ, we read Act. 15. 11. We beleeue (saith the Apostle Peter) through the grace of our Lord Iesus, to be saued, euen as they (that is the beleeuing Gentiles) doe. For as it is else where affirmed, Christ onely is saluation both to Iew & also to Gentile, Neither is there any other name wherby any may be saued. Act. 4. 12. Read also Eph: 2. 8: By grace are yee saued through Faith And Pet. 1. 5. Yee are kept by the power of God through faith vnto saluation. And verse 9. Receiuing the ende of your faith, euen the saluation of your soules. Of the which saluation, the Prophets haue enquired, &c. Beleeue (saith the Apostle Paul to the Iaylor) in the Lord Iesus Christ, and thou shalt be saued & thine household. And herevnto tendeth that comfortable speech of our Sau: Christ: himselfe, so often repeated in the Gospell. Thy faith hath saued thee. Matt. 9. 22. In which words, he would incourage the poore woman, to beleeue spirituall saluation, by the comfort of that bodily health, which shee had receiued from him. For this verily was the ende of all the bodilie cures which our Sauiour Christ wrought: as may bee perceiued by the testimonie of Saint Matthew: chapt: 8. 16. 17. Reade also the same comfortable speech: Luke, 8, 50. Feare not; beleeue onely, &c. And chap. 17. 19. And againe, chapt: 18. 42. Thy faith hath saued thee. And Mark: 9, 23. All things are possible to him that beleeueth.

Finallie, that Faith layeth holde vpon Christ himselfe: it is manifest, in that by faith Christ liueth in the faithfull; and they againe doe liue in him. Gal: 2. 20. And chap: 3. 27. By faith wee put on Christ. And Eph. 3. 17. Christ dwelleth in the heart by faith. For the which cause it is, that the true iustifiyng and sauing faith, beareth the name of faith in Christ, faith in the name of Christ, the faith of of Christ, faith toward Christ, the faith which is by Christ, and through his bloode, &c. Yea, faith doth so lay holde vppon Christ, that it doth most nearely vnite vs vnto him for euer, in one mysticall bodie, as the members of the naturall bodie are knitte to the head, according to that of the Apostle Paul. 1. Cor. 12. verses. 12, 13. and Ephes. 2. 18, 19. 20. 21, 22. And as wee read chapt: 5. 30. Wee are members of his bodie, of his flesh, and of his bones. Hetherto of the former part of our description of the nature of faith.

It remaineth that wee shewe some proofes out of holie Scripture, concerning those notable effectes, which are ascribed to the same faith.

And first of all; that it reioyceth the heart of the true beleeuer with ioye vnspeakeable and glorious: Reade, 1. Pet. 1. 8. Reade also Rom. 5. 1. 2, 3. and Iames 1. 2. And Luke. chap: 1. 46. 47. and ch: 2. 10.

That faith giueth boldnesse touching the profession of the name of Christ: wee reade Romans chapter: 10, verse 10. With the heart man beleeueth vnto righteousnesse, and with the mouth hee confesseth to saluation. Read also. 1. Pet. 3. 14. 15. Matth. 10. 28. &c.

That it causeth the soule of the beleeuer, to haue comfortable trust and affiance vnder the Fatherly prouidence of God; wee may easilie perceiue, by the comfortable Doctrine and exhortation of our Sauiour Christ, Matth: 6. 25. &c. And chapter 10. verse 19, and verse 30. Wee may perceiue it also from the example of the Apostle Paul: Act: 27. &c. 25. Syrs, be of good courage: for I beleeue God, that it shall be so, as hath bene tolde mee. And againe. 2. Tim. 1. 12. I knowe whom I haue beleeued, and I am perswaded, that hee is able to keepe that which I haue commited to him, against that day. Reade also 2. Corinth: 4. 8. 9. &c. Likewise, Psal. 23. & 46. & 62. And Ps: 119. 50. It is my comfort in my trouble, for thy promise hath quickened mee. And Sam: 30. 6. When the people would euen forthwith haue stoned Dauid, hee comforted himselfe in the Lord his GOD. Read also Hebr: 10. 32. &c. and chap: 11, 24. &c.

That Faith incourageth to Prayer, wee may reason from that which the Apostle Paul writeth, Romans: 10. 14. For it is a fruit of faith: yea so a fruit; as without Faith there can be no true prayer, or calling vppon the name of God, Read also, chapt. 8. 15. The Spirit of adoption incourageth to prayer. But where this Spirit is not (euen that Spirit which is onely receiued by Faith) there is no readinesse to true and faithfull prayer. What profit should wee haue (say Infidells) if wee should pray vnto God? Iob: 21. 15. And Psal. 14. 4. They call not vpon the Lorde. See also a fearfull example. Mal: 3. 14. Yee haue said, It is in vaine to serue God, &c.

That faith doth solicite to repentance and care of a godly life: wee may perceiue, Gal: chap: 5. verse 6. Faith worketh by loue. Reade also and rightly vnderstand the 2. chap: of the epistle of the Apostle Iames, who (as by the grace of God wee shall declare more at large afterward) consenteth with the Apostle Paul, in shewing what manner of faith, the true iustifiyng faith is; namely such a faith as feedeth the hungrie, clotheth the naked, and is not a verball faith onely, &c. Likewise teacheth S. Iohn, 1. ep. ch. 3. verses 2. 3. Euery man (saith hee) that hath this hope in him (that is in God) hee purgeth himselfe. And verse 17. This wee shall yet further perceiue, if wee consider, that faith hath very manie and mightie reasons at hand, to withdraw from sinne; and to mooue vnto godlines of life. From sinne, because sinne is in it selfe a most vile and filthy thing; because it is highly displeasing and abhominable in the sight of God; because it grieueth his holy Spirit, whereby wee are sealed vnto the day of redemption; because also in respect of our Sauiour Christ, it is a most vnseemelie thing, that any being a member of his most holy Body, should not bee sutable to the Head in some measure of holines, &c. But no reason is more mighty, then when faith deeply weigheth with it selfe, that the least sin could no way else be satisfied for, vnto the Iustice of God offended therwith, but by the most grieuous sufferings & death of our Sauiour Christ. And vnto godlines of life, it moueth the beleeuer, by laying before him all the mercies of God; specially this of our redemption, through the same his most bitter sufferings, euen to the sheadding of his most precious heart blood for vs most wretched and vnworthy sinners. Reade Rom. 12. 1. 2. and 2. Cor. 6. 18. I will bee a Father vnto you, and yee shall be my sonnes and daughters, saith the Lord almightie. And chapt. 7. 1. Seeing then wee haue these promises, dearelie beloued (saith the holie Apostle) let vs cleanse our selues from all the filthinesse of the flesh and the spirit, and growe vp to full holinesse in the feare of God.

2. Pet 2. 22. Psl. 14. 1. Ephes. 4. 30. 1. Cor. 6. 15.

To conclude. That faith is accompanied with hope, in a patient wayting vpon God, for euerlasting happinesse and saluation: Wee reade Tit. 1. 1. 2. The faith of Gods elect is said to be vnder the hope of eternall life. Let vs to the same ende consider the confession of the Apostle Paul. Act: 24. 14. 15. This I confesse vnto thee, &c. that I beleeue, &c. And haue hope toward God, that the resurrection of the dead shall be both of the iust & vniust. Let vs consider it also by calling to minde the example of Abrahams faith, who aboue hope, beleeued vnder hope, &c. Rom. 4. 18. And there followeth an other expresse and notable proofe. chapt: 5. 1. 2. &c. For being iustified by faith, &c. Wee reioyce vnder the hope of the glorie of God. Moreouer in the same epistle, chap. 8. verses 23. 24. Wee are saued by hope, &c. And wee doe with patience abide for that which wee see not. Read also. 2. Cor. 4. 16. &c. and Hebr: 6. 18. &c. And chap: 10. 35. &c. And chap: 12. 1. 2. &c: there is a notable exhortation, mouing vs to patience. Likewise Iames chap: verses 2. 3. 4. and verse 12. Blessed is the man that endureth tentation, &c. And 1. Pet. 4. 12. &c. Read also Isai: 28. 16. Hee that beleeueth shall not make haste. And chapt. 64. 3. 4. God worketh things aboue expectation, to those that waite for him. In the 5. Psal: verse 3. wee haue the notable example of a patient waiter. And againe, Psal. 85. 8. And Psa. 147. 11. God delighteth in those that practise this excellent vertue.

God

God iustifieth sinners.

THus farre of the nature of the true iustifying Faith. Let vs nowe haſten forward as faſt as wee can. For albeit manie things more might be added: yet hoping that this which hath bin already laid forth, may well ſuffice for our preſent purpoſe; I deſire that you ſhould without all further delay, ſhewe to whom that promiſe of iuſtification and ſaluation, wherevpon the iuſtifying faith dependeth, is made?

Queſtion. What is your anſwere to this?

Anſwere. God of his infinite goodneſſe and mercie, hath promiſed, that he will for his onely Sonne our Lord Ieſus Chriſtes ſake, iuſtifie and ſaue euery poore ſoule, neuer ſo ſinfull and damnable in themſelues, and by reaſon of the former wickedneſſe of their liues; Whoſoeuer, after they haue truly knowne the grace of God, ſhall thenceforth conſtantly beleeue in the name of his Sonne, and as a liuely fruit therof, earneſtly repent them of their ſinnes, and leade a newe life.

Explicatiõ & proofe. This is plainely confirmed in the 3. chapt: of the Euangeliſt Iohn, verſe. 16. God ſo loued the world, &c. Reade alſo Iſai: 56. 3. &c. Let not the ſonne of the ſtranger that is ioyned to the Lord, ſpeake and ſay, The Lord hath ſurelie ſeparated me from his people: neither let the Eunuch ſay, Beholde I am a drie tree. For thus ſaith the Lord vnto the Eunuches that keepe my Sabbaths, and chooſe the thing that pleaſeth me, and take hold of my couenant, Euen vnto them will I giue in my houſe, and within my walls, a place and a name, better then of the Sonnes and of the daughters, &c. Yea, as it is in the firſt chapter of this propheſie: Though (ſaith the Lord) your ſinnes were as crimſin, they ſhalbe made white as ſnowe: though they were red like skarlet, they ſhall be as wooll. And that it is the gratious good pleaſure of God, to iuſtifie, and ſaue ſinners, yea moſt grieuous ſinners; it is not onely teſtified in word, as wee read, Rom. 4. verſ. 5. To him that worketh not, but beleeueth in him that iuſtifieth the vngodlie, his faith is counted for righteouſnes. Euen as Dauid declareth the bleſſednes of that man, vnto whom God imputeth righteouſnes without works, ſaying: Bleſſed are they whoſe iniquities are forgiuen, &c. But the ſame thing is alſo confirmed (ipſo facto as a man may ſay) and by canonicall experience; I meane by experience, according to the canon and rule of the holie Scriptures. For whom did our Sauiour Chriſt call, but ſinners to repentance? Yea and among thē, whom rather did he call, then ſuch ſinners as were of moſt infamous condition and offence of life, in compariſon of many others? Matt. 9. verſ. 10. 11. 12. 13. And doth not our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe profeſſe, that he came not to call the righteous: that is, not onely ſuch as in their owne proud opinion were ſuch, but euen ſuch as were indeed free from the cōmon crimes, that ſome other were ſtained withall, whoſoeuer of thē would not humble themſelues, in reſpect of their more inward and hidden corruptions? Doth he not plainly affirme, that Publicans and harlots truely repenting; ſhould goe before hipocrites and iuſticiaries into the kingdome of heauen? Matt. 21, 31. And hereof the woman of Samaria, Iohn. 4. and that other ſinfull woman, Luke. 7. 37. &c. And the Apoſtle Paul alſo, 1. Tim. 1. 13. 14. 15. 16. Likewiſe that ſinnefull thiefe vpon the croſſe, may be liuely examples. And all according to thoſe comfortable promiſes of God, Ier. 31. 33. 34. Heb. 8. 12. Iſai: cha: 53. Ezek: 18. At what time ſoeuer a ſinner doth repent him of his ſinnes, I will blot all his wickednes out of my remembrance, ſaith the Lorde.

But heere, I beſeech you, let none take that with the left hand, and by a ſiniſter and wrong interpretation, which is deliuered with the right hand. That is, let none abuſe that to encourage himſelfe to anie licence to ſinne, which is onely ſpoken to magnifie the great mercie of GOD, and to prouoke and incourage ſinners in the comfortable hope thereof, ſpeedily to leaue and forſake their ſinnes. It is, (as wee know, or ought to know, euery one of vs) the duety euen of children, from their yongeſt yeeres (according to that which our Chriſtian baptiſme challengeth at all our hands) to ſettle their heartes, to ſerue God their Creator and Father. Much more then ought euerie one of vs, as we are of more yeeres (and haue hetherto neglected our duety) to be without delay, moſt heartily ſory for it; and therefore henceforward, to be the more carefull, &c. For albeit it is an vndoubted truth, that God will receiue euery ſinner, that ſhall come vnto him, and truelie beleeue in the name of Ieſus Chriſt, vnfeinedly repenting them of their ſinnes: yet how knoweſt thou, that hee will hereafter giue thee the gift of faith and repentance, if thou doe deſpiſe the preſent offer which is tendered for to daye: according as wee reade, To daye if yee will heare his voyce, harden not your hearts, &c. True repentance is in deed neuer too late; (as one truelie ſaith) but late repentance is ſeldome true. Heerein, delayes are moſt dangerous, as wee ſhall further perceiue, when wee come to inquire out, the doctrine of repentance. In the meane while, wee will conclude this point with the words of the holie Apoſtle Paul: Rom: 6. 1. Shall wee continue ſtill in ſinne, that grace may abounde? God forbid.

What Iuſtification is.

THeſe things thus hetherto obſerued: now to the end we may vnderſtand the matter in hand, to our more full vſe and comfort; three things are yet a little further to be inquired into of vs.

First, what the meaning of this word to Iuſtifie, is.

Secondly, what is meant by Saluation, or to ſaue.

Thirdlie, what Repentance is. For to the end we may vnderſtand the minde of God, it is meete that wee ſhould be carefull to vnderſtand the words which God vſeth to expreſſe the ſame vnto vs by; ſpeciallie ſuch, as be in the ſcience of Religion, (the moſt high and excellent ſcience of all other) as it were wordes of Arte, the which haue a peculiar ſenſe proper vnto them.

Queſtion. First therefore, what doth this word to Iuſtifie, ſignifie in this our Chriſtian doctrine of Iuſtification by faith?

Anſwere. This word Iuſtification, or to iuſtifie, it ſignifieth a full and perfect clearing and diſcharging of the offendor, from the euerlaſting wrath and condemnation of God, by the free pardon of his ſinnes, for Ieſus Chriſts ſake. It ſignifieth alſo therewithall, the imputing of the perfect righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, to euery ſinner truelie beleeuing in him, and that of the ſame moſt free grace and mercie of God.

Explication & proof That this is ſo wee may euidently perceiue, by that which is written, Rom. 4. verſes. 5. 6. 7. 8: the place alledged a little before. Likewiſe, by that which wee reade further verſe, 22. euen to the ende of the ſame 4. chapter. Moreouer by that which wee reade 2. Cor. 5. 21. God hath made him to be ſinne for vs, who knew no ſinne, that we might be made the righteouſneſſe of God in him. Whence alſo it is, that the Pophet Ieremiah popheſied long before, that he ſhould be caled and acknowledged, the Lord our righteouſnes. chap. 23. 6. and againe, ch: 33. 16. Read alſo Galat: 4. verſes, 4. 5. The Sonne of God (ſaith the Apoſtle) was made vnder the law, that hee might redeeme them which were vnder the law, that wee might receiue the adoption of ſonnes. And this alſo, according to the propheſie of Iſaiah, cha. 53. 11. By his knowledge (ſaith the Lord by his holy Prophet) ſhall my righteous ſeruant iuſtifie many: for he ſhall beare their iniquities. But among all other teſtimonies, we may not paſſe ouer in ſilence, that of the Apoſtle Paul, Rom. 3. 24. &c. Wee are iuſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Chriſt Ieſus. Whom God hath ſet forth to bee a reconciliation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteouſnes, by the forgiuenes of the ſinnes that are paſſed through the patience of God. To ſhewe at this time his righteouſnes, that hee may be iuſt, and a iuſtifier of him that is of the faith of Ieſus. And cha. 5. 19. As by one mans diſo- dience of one shall many also be made righteous. And chapt: 8. 33. Who shall lay any thing to the charge of Gods chosen? It is God that iustifieth, &c. No maruell therfore, though the faithfull seruāts of God (according to the doctrine of the holy Scriptures) do so highly aduance this doctrine of our free iustification, onely by faith in Christ the Sonne of God; that they acccount it, the touc-stone of all truth of doctrine, and the ground of all true comfort, to the soule and conscience of man. It is a saying worthy to be noted from M. Fox, that herein lyeth the touh-stone of all truth and doctrine: and that this doctrine beateth downe all errors. Act: & Monū: pa: 770. immediatly before the history of the life and doctrine of D. Martin Luther, a most memorable & zealous preacher and iustifier of this most holy and heauenly doctrine. Whervnto accordeth M. Caluin, who likewise truely affirmeth, that the right vnderstanding of the doctrine of iustification, is præcipuus sustinendæ religionis cardo: the principall support of the true Christian religion. And another learned man: that it is as the soule or life of the Churche. Thus then wee may perceiue, what the word to iustifie, or iustification it selfe in the sight of God meaneth, when we speake of our iustification by faith. For it is nothing in effect, but the apprehension and application of Christs righteousnes & redemption to a mans selfe, according to the free promise and gift of God: whose good will and pleasure it is, to impute it to euery true beleeuer, as verily and fully, as if hee had performed it himselfe.

Question. But what doth the same worde signifie, when the Apostle denyeth that to workes, which hee ascribeth to faith; hee affirming plainely and peremptorilie, that no man can possiblie be iustified by his owne workes?

Answere. The meaning is, that no man either hath, or can possiblie performe, the morall worke commanded in the most holy and righteous law of God, so perfectlie, that he should thereby deserue to be accounted righteous before the iudgement seate of God; and for the same, to be worthy of that high reward of the Crowne of righteousnesse and glorie, the which God of his free grace and mercie, hath for his Sonne our Lorde Iesus Christes sake, layde vp for those onely, which beleeue in his name, and loue and longe after his most glorious and blessed appearing.

All workes as they proceed from vs are imperfect therfore cannot iustifie vs in the sight of God

Explicatiō and proofe. It is true. So saith the Apostle Paul, 2. Timoth: 4. 7. 8. And againe Rom: 3. 20. Wee knowe that whatsoeuer the lawe saith, it saith it to them which are vnder the lawe, that euery mouth may be stopped, and all the world be culpable before God. Therefore by the workes of the lawe, shall no flesh be iustified in his sight: for by the lawe commeth the knowledge of sinne. And in the same chapter, verse 28. Therefore wee conclude, that a man is iustified by faith, without the workes of the lawe. Likewise, chapt: 11, 6. and in many other places of his most holie Epistles.

But it may be obiected, that the Apostle Iames seemeth to teach otherwise: For hee affirmeth expressely, that not onely Abraham (that renowmed father of the faithfull; but also, that Rahab a heathen woman, one that was before of an infamous condition of life; was after that she beleeued, iustified by her workes.

Question. Howe therefore, are these wordes of the Apostle Iames to be vnderstood?

Answere. We are first of all, vndoubtedly to perswade our selues, that it neuer came into the Apostle Iames his minde, to teach any thing in his holie Epistle contrarie, no nor in any the least thing, dissenting from the doctrine of the Apostle Paul.

Explicatiō and proofe. This ought to bee out of all question indeede. For both the one and the other, did both write and preach alwaies, by one, and the same most faithfull and constant Spirit of truth: by whom no doubt, they were perfectly guided, & led into all truth, according to the promise of our Sauior Christ, Iohn 16 13. And the rather are we thus to perswade our selues, in the present pointe of doctrine; becausse it is a doctrine, both of the most singular honour and glorie to the most free grace and mercie of God, and also of the greatest comfort to our owne poore soules, that may be, as was mentioned before. Yea, and further also; of all other doctrines, most effectuall to prouoke vs, and all true beleeuers, to all holy thankfulnes and good dutie toward the Lord God, our moſt gratious and mercifull Father, for the ſame. And the rather alſo will we thus perſwade our ſelues, if we duly conſider, (as the truth is,) that the doctrine of Iuſtification by workes, and the imagined opinion of the merit and worthines thereof before the iudgement ſeate of God: is, as a learned and godly Father hath well obſerued, many waies exceedingly preiudiciall, both to Gods glory, and to our owne comfort, and to the truth it ſelfe.

M. Foxe in his obſeruations concerning the doctrine of the lawe of God. Act. and Mon. pag. 894.

For firſt, as he truly ſaith, they that teach Iuſtification by the workes of the lawe, (the which is contrary to the ende and ſcope of the lawe) they do peruert all method and order of doctrine.

2 They ſeeke that in the lawe, which the lawe cannot giue.

3 They are not able either to comfort themſelues, or other.

4 They keepe mens ſoules in an vncertaine doubting of their ſaluation.

5 They obſcure the light of Gods grace.

6 They are vnkinde to Gods benefits.

7 They are iniurious to Chriſtes paſſion. Yea enemies to his croſſe.

8 They ſtop Chriſtian libertie.

9 They bereaue the Church the ſpouſe of Chriſt, of her due comfort, as taking away the Sunne out of the world.

10 In all their doings they ſhoote at a wrong marke. For where Chriſt onely is ſet vp, to be apprehended by our faith; and ſo, freely to iuſtifie vs: they, leauing this Iuſtification by faith, ſet vp other markes, partly of the lawe, and partly of their owne deuiſing, for men to ſhoote at. This therefore (as that learned Father hath obſerued) is the B. of Romes doctrine, and not the doctrine of the Apoſtle Iames.

Queſtion. How then is the Apoſtle Iames to be vnderſtood, in that he ſaith, Abraham and Rahab were iuſtified by workes?

Anſwere. The Apoſtle Iames hauing iuſt cauſe to reproue certaine vaine and carnall profeſſours of the Goſpell; euen ſuch as verbally and in words onely boaſted of their faith, but were altogether vnfruitfull in good workes: he is accordingly, veri. earneſt in declaring, not what are the cauſes of our Iuſtification, (as the Apoſtle Paul doth) but onely what maner of faith, the iuſtifying faith is, whereby true beleeuers are iuſtified in the ſight of God.

It is very true, and ſo can it not but be acknowledged of euery vpright and diligent Reader. Proceed you therfore to declare what manner of faith the true iuſtifying faith is, according to the doctrine of S. Iames.

Queſtion. How can you deſcribe it according to the true intent of the Apoſtle Iames?

Anſwere. He giueth plainly to vnderſtand, that the true iuſtifying faith is not an idle and vnfruitfull faith, ſuch as theirs was whom he iuſtly reproueth, and therefore termeth it a dead faith: but that it is ſuch a faith, as through the quickening grace of the holy Ghoſt, worketh by loue, and is fruitfull in the actions and duties thereof. And that for the ſame cauſe, it may iuſtly be ſaid, that ſuch as do ſo beleeue, are by their workes: that is to ſay, by the fruites of their faith, iuſtified to haue a true iuſtifying faith in deed, to the comfort of their owne hearts, and before the Church of God, ſo farre as it may iudge and diſcerne.

Gal. 5. 6. Heb. 11. 33.

Explication and proofe. That this is the true ſcope of the doctrine of the Apoſtle Iames; it will in deed appeare to euery one, that will diligently, and in the feare of God bend his minde, to conſider of it wiſely, comparing one thing with an other. Let vs therfore yet againe vpon the occaſion renewed, vſe ſome further diligence, for the clearing of this point of Iuſtification, againſt the litigious importunitie of the gainſayers and corrupters thereof.

To this purpoſe, we are to vnderſtand, that there are diuers ſignifications and vſes of this word, to Iuſtifie, as we haue ſeene before, concerning the word Faith: and that, either as it is referred to God, or as it is applied to men.

Firſt therfore, as it is referred to God, either it noteth a manifeſt or full declaration and proofe of his moſt perfect righteouſnes, by a ſpeciall prerogatiue and power or preheminence, which he hath aboue all creatures: as when we ſay that God will ſurely iuſtifie, that is, perfectly approue himſelfe moſt holy and righteous in all his waies, & namely, in this matter of iuſtifying his people through faith in his ſonne, againſt all whoſoeuer doe contradict or cauill againſt the ſame: Rom. 3, verſe 4, and verſe 26. That thou mighteſt be iuſtified in thy words, &c. And as our Sauiour Chriſt is ſaide, to haue beene iuſtified in the ſpirit. 1. Tim. 3, 16. Or elſe, this word of iuſtifying, being referred to God, it ſignifieth mans dutifull acknowledging of the perfect iuſtice and truth of God: as Luk. chap. 7. 29. The Publicans are ſaide to iuſtifie God, in that they ſubmitted themſelues to bee Baptized of Iohn. And verſe, 35, Our Sauiour Chriſt affirmeth that wiſedome is iuſtified of all her children. Theſe are the ſignifications of the word to Iuſtifie: as it is referred to God, in reſpect of himſelf, & his own moſt holy & iuſt proceedings.

Now as it is applied to men, it ſignifieth either morally (as we may ſay) to auouch a mans owne innocencie, in any matter vniuſtly laide to his charge: for then is a man ſaide to iuſtifie himſelfe, when he cleareth himſelfe as vnguiltie of the crime obiected againſt him. And likewiſe to iuſtifie an other man, when he by a true teſtimonie cleareth him againſt a falſe accuſation: or at the leaſt to excuſe one in compariſon of an other, as Iudah ſaide of Tamar that ſhee was more righteous then himſelfe: Gen. 38, 26. And as Saul ſaide to Dauid: Thou art more righteous then I. 1. Sam. 24, 18. And as the rebellious Iſrael is ſaide to haue iuſtified her ſelfe more then the rebellious Iudah: That is, to haue ſinned leſſe then Iudah: to wit, all circumſtances duly conſidered: Ier. 3, 11. And on the contrary; Ieruſalem is ſaid to haue iuſtified Samaria and Sodom: that is, to haue ſinned more grieuouſly then thoſe wicked Cities: Ezek: Chap. 16.

Thus, as was ſaide, the word to iuſtifie, is taken either ſomething more morally. Or elſe the ſame againe is vſed iudicially, for to accept and pronounce a man, according to witneſſes, & ſecundum allegata & probata as they ſay, to be guiltles, touching the crime or crimes particularly obiected againſt him. According as it is the dutie of the Iudge to iuſtifie the innocent partie as we reade: Deut. 25, 1. When there ſhall be ſtrife betweene men, and they ſhall come vnto iudgement, and ſentence ſhall be giuen vpon them, and the righteous ſhall be iuſtified, and the wicked condemned; Then if ſo be &c? And Prou. 17, 15. He that iuſtifieth the wicked, and he that condemneth the iuſt, euen they both are abomination to the Lord. Likewiſe, Iſay, 5. 22, 23. Woe vnto them that are mightie to drinke wine, and to them that are ſtrong to poure in ſtrong drinke: Which iuſtifie the wicked for a reward, and take away the righteouſnes of the righteous from him.

Moreouer, to iuſtifie, ſignifieth ſometimes, euen of clemencie and meere mercy, to forgiue a treſpaſſe done againſt one, as freely as if it had not beene committed: like as if a creditor ſhould forgiue his debter, as perfectly as if the debt had beene paide to the vttermoſt farthing. Of the which vſe, wee will conſider by and by: for it is ſpecially ſeruing to cleare the great point of holy doctrine which we haue in hand. Finally, the word to iuſtifie, according to the latine diriuation of it, ſignifieth to make righteous: but this muſt be ouerruled by the vſe of the holy languages of the originall text in Hebrewe and Greeke, ſeeing it is but a tranſlation of them, and not the originall it ſelfe. And beſides, euen in the vſe of the latine ſpeech, the latter part of the word doth not alwaies exactly followe the naturall diriuation, to ſignifie the making of a thing ſo, or ſo. As for example, this word (to ſignifie) euen now mentioned, doth not note the making of a ſigne, but to giue ſome knowledge of a thing. So, to amplifie, is not alwaies to make a thing more large, but to treat of the ſame thing more at large, thē ſome other or the ſame party had done before. Likewiſe, to magnifie, is not vſed to note the making of a thing great, but to acknowledge & celebrate it, according to the greatnes & excellencie of it. As when we are ſaid to magnifie the Lord our God. And when God ſaith he will magnifie himſelfe, his meaning is that he wil make his greatnes known. So to glorifie God, is not to make God glorious, as one without glory in himſelfe, but to acknowledge & ſet forth his glory, &c.

What iustification is.

Likewise, when in our owne language, by an imitation of the same latine composition, we say we will exemplifie a thing, our meaning is not, that we wil make an example: but set forth and illustrate a thing by an example. And whē we say that a thing is verified, wee doe not meane that it is made true, but that it is declared and confirmed to be true. And when the earth is said to fructifie, the meaning is not, that the earth maketh fruit (which is the more immediate work of God) but that it bringeth forth fruit. There might more of like sort bee alledged, but these may suffice to shewe that it is not necessary, by force of the latine diriuatiō, that to iustifie, should signifie to make iust, as though a man that is iustified, must needs be made perfitly iust by a real & inherēt iustice of his own: but that without iniurie to that kind of composition of the word, we may according to the vse of the holy Scriptures, iustly vnderstand it to signifie the accounting and esteeming, or the declaring & pronouncing of a man either generally iust, or else innocent concerning a particular crime obiected against him.

Hetherto of the diuers significations of the word, to iustifie.
Now it followeth, that we doe enquire in what sense we are to vnderstand the same word, when we referre it to faith; and also when we referre it to works: and that according to the vse of the holy Scriptures, the which, in either case, must altogether ouerrule, as was saide.

First therefore, when we are said to be iustified by faith, wee will not altogether refuse to vnderstand it thus, that we are made perfectly righteous by faith, but on this condition, that we rightly conceiue of the manner how: that is to say not by faith as by a morall dutie, and meere action of him that beleeueth, legally taken for a perswasion of the truth of Gods promise, in respect of perfect obedience yeelded vnto him: but by the faith of the Gospell, that is by faith apprehēding & applying to a mans self the perfect righteousnes of Iesus Christ, for his perfect iustification in the sight of God. For the faith of the Gospell hath alwaies a necessary relation to Christ, and so is it necessarily to be vnderstood in this high principle of Christian religion, concerning our iustification by faith, according to that we read, 2. Cor. 5, 21. God hath made him to be sin for vs: that is, he hath imputed and laied our sinnes to his charge, and proceeded against him as if he had bene a most grieuous sinner, though he knew no sin: that is, was nothing at all guiltie of it: that we should be made the righteousnes of God in him: that is, that we being most grieuous sinners, might haue his righteousnes imputed, and freely giuen vnto vs through the rich grace and mercy of God; as verily as if we our selues had wrought & performed the same. Whereby also it is euident, that the true Christian faith, in that it iustifieth, doth it not as it is an action simply considered, but as in the action of it, it receiueth & imbraceth Christ with his righteousnes, euen passiuely as a man may truly say. And in this sense (as was saide) we wil not refuse to vnderstand, by this word iustified, that we are made righteous; seeing through faith in Christ, a man is of a sinner in himselfe, made no sinner but righteous in Christ, by the imputation of his righteousnes vnto him: according to that of the same Apostle. Ro. 3, 26. God is iust, & a iustifier of him which is of the faith of Iesu. And ch. 4, 5 He iustifieth the vngodly, accounting his faith for righteousnes. Neuertheles, we must therewith all needes acknowledge, as the truth is, that the vsual acceptation of this word to iustifie, is in the holy Scriptures, to esteeme & account, or to declare & pronounce iust, by acquiting of sin, & imputing of righteousnes, & that euen of the meere grace & fauour of God for Iesus Christ his sake: as we will now henceforth further declare.

And first, to begin with that which is writtē. Act. 13, 38, 39. Be it known vnto you men and brethren (saith the Apostle Paul) that through this man, (that is, by Iesus Christ) is preached vnto you forgiuenesse of sinnes. And from all thinges, from the which yee could not bee iustified by the lawe of Moses, by him euery one that beleeueth is iustified: That is to say, he is perfectly acquitted set free & deliuered trō the guiltines & punishmēt of it. Like as the same Ap. Ro. ch. 6. v, 7. speaking of deliuerance from the power of sin, by the vertue of the death of Christ he expresseth it by this word of iustifying from it, as we read in the Greeke text.

Where

where he borroweth the word of iuſtification, to expreſſe the nature of ſanctification, which is a ſingular effect, or fruit of the true iuſtifying faith, and an open teſtimonie and prooofe of the ſame. But let vs proceede to ſee what the nature of iuſtification it ſelfe (properly taken) is according to ſome other teſtimonies of the holy Scriptures. To this purpoſe read againe, Rom. 3,24. & v 25. & chap. 4,5. & Tit. 3,7. We being iuſtified by his grace, are made heyres according to the hope of the eternall life. But that which is written Rom. 8,33,34. ſhall bee principally conſidered of vs at this time: Who (ſaith the Apoſtle) ſhall lay any thing to the charge of Gods choſen? It is God that iuſtifieth, Who ſhall condemne?

In the which place, the Apoſtle hath a reſpect to the like wordes of the Prophet Iſaiah. ch. 50,8. &c. Where the holy Prophet ſpeaking thus of the perfect faith and aſſurance of Chriſt the head, that he ſhould perfectly be iuſtified by his owne inherent righteouſneſſe and actuall obedience to his father, againſt all that could be obiected againſt him: He is neare that iuſtifieth me, who will contend with me? (ſaith the Prophet, as it were in the perſon of our Sauiour Chriſt:) Yea further: Let vs ſtand together (ſaith hee) who is my aduerſarie? Let him come neare to me. Behold, the Lord God will helpe me: Who is he that can condemne me? &c. The ſame doth the Apoſtle apply to the encouragement of all true beleeuers in Chriſt, the members of his body, that they alſo by him, and for his ſake, ſhall haue their free diſcharge from the iudgement ſeate of God: that they may ſay likewiſe, with great comfort and confidence: Seeing God hath not ſpared his owne Son, but gaue him for vs all, how ſhall he not with him giue vs all things alſo? Who ſhal lay any thing to the charge of Gods choſen? And ſo forth, as was alledged euen now. But yet in this differing manner (as is moſt neceſſarie to be obſerued) that the iuſtification of our Sauiour Chriſt: is (in reſpect of himſelfe) by a reall and perfect iuſtice, examined and tried in a moſt exact courſe of iudgement, before the iudgement ſeate of God, and not by faith, ſuch as ours is. For he neuer offended in his owne perſon, but perfectly obeyed the lawe of God: and therefore might not in iuſtice haue bene condemned, had he not ſet himſelfe a mediator before God, in the behalfe, yea euen in the perſon and condition of vs miſerable ſinners. But our iuſtification (inſomuch as we are in our ſelues all of vs damnable ſinners) it is from God, of meere grace and fauour, in that by faith onely, the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt is imputed to vs, and made ours, as if (as was ſaide) wee had perfectly performed it our owne ſelues. Yet ſo, as we muſt neuertheleſſe, acknowledge our ſelues in our ſelues, to be alwaies miſerable ſinners, and therfore, according to the inſtruction of our Sauiour himſelfe, to pray continually, for the forgiuenes of them, &c. Like as iuſt Iob, though he had the comfortable aſſurance of his ſaluation, through faith in his Redeemer, as hee profeſſeth in the 19. chap. of his booke. And chap. 13,15,19. Loe (ſaith he) though God ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him: He will be my ſaluation alſo. And verſes. 18,19. I knowe that I ſhall be iuſtified, who is he that will pleade with me, &c. Neuertheleſſe, he doth therewithall profeſſe likewiſe, that hee will reproue his owne waies, as being faultie in the ſight of God, as we read in the latter part of the 15. v. And in the holy Goſpell of our Sauiour Chriſt: wee read likewiſe that the Publican confeſſing and bewailing his ſinnes, was iuſtified, and not the Phariſie, who iuſtified himſelfe. Luk. 18,10. And ch. 16,15. Our Sauiour Chriſt doth more generally condemne the Phariſies for the ſame their pride, ſaying. Ye are they which iuſtifie your ſelues before men: but God knoweth your hearts: for that which is highly eſteemed among men, is abomination in the ſight of God.

But when we affirme, that we are iuſtified onely by faith (in ſuch ſenſe as hath bene expreſſed) our meaning is not, to exclude the care & practiſe of any good work, in thoſe that are ſo iuſtified: but rather, by the magnifying of the grace of God, to prouoke out ſelues & others, ſo much the more earneſtly, to the ſtudie & performance of al obedience, for declaratiõ of our true thankfulnes to God. And for many other weightie cauſes; to wit, for the aſſuring vnto our ſelues the truth of our owne faith, & the certaintie of our election, for the quiet & peace of our cōsciēces; & also for the good exāple of others, that they seeing our good works may be moued to glorifie the name of God our heauenly father; & lest otherwise, we should imbolden any to speake euil of the Gospel, or at the least, grieue the rest of the brethren, if we should be vnfruitful in good works &c.

We teach also (as we haue learned out of the word of God) that the faithfull seruants of God truly iustified, are likewise truly sanctified: yea so, as through the renewment & regeneratiō of the H. Ghost, they haue a certaine measure of true inherent & practike righteousnes, in dying to sin & the actions thereof, & in liuing to righteousnes & all the good outward works & fruites of the same. And therefore are they vsually in the holy Scriptures, described by this, as by a speciall propertie, that they loue righteousnes, and that they are such as followe righteousnes, &c. So that in comparison of the vnfaithfull & wicked, whether more open & loose transgressors, or more close & counterfet hipocrites; they may truly be iustified, that is, preferred & approued for righteous aboue them: according as Saul was conuict, euen in his own cōscience, that Dauid was more righteous then himself. Yea so are they renewed & sanctified by the holy ghost, that they are truly & indeed accounted righteous, inchoately & in part, euen before God, who hath giuen them truth in their inward parts: according as the holy Scriptures doe not in vaine call Noah, Lot, Iob, and many other, Iust men fearing God, eschuing euill, &c. Gen. 7, 1. 2. Pet. 2, 7, 8. Iob. ch. 1, ver. 1, 8. Ezek. 14. 20. Luke. 1, 6, & ch. 2. 25. In which respect, we may truly vse the words of the Apo. Iames, and say that they were all iustified by their workes; that is, declared to be righteous indeed & in some measure of truth, & not in shew & appearance only. According also, as it is said by our Sa: Chr: in the Gospell: By thy words thou shalt be iustified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned: that is, it shall hereby be iustly discerned of men, what manner of one thou art, & how thou art among them to be accounted & esteemed. Mat. 12 37. And as we read, 1. Iohn. 3, 7. He that doth righteousnes is righteous, to wit, he is righteous indeed, & in truth, though not perfectly righteous: as he had taught before, in that he wrot thus: If wee say we haue no sin, We deceiue our selues & the truth is not in vs. Thus we doe not deny, but plainely affirme, that all true beleeuers iustified by faith, haue, as an effect thereof, a generall care and practise of righteousnes begun in them, though neuer perfected here in this life.

Neither yet do we deny, but that through the same grace of God, & the sanctification of his holy spirit, which he giueth vnto them; the faithfull seruants of God, may so vprightly behaue themselues toward men, specially in some particular action, yea & in the generall intention & purpose of their heart: that they may truly professe, that they are (for any thing that men may charge them with) as cleare, as the child borne but yesterday. Like as Dauid protesteth, concerning his loiall heart toward king Saul, altogether free from intending any traiterous conspiracy against him: as Ps. 7, 3, 4, 5, & Ps. 131, 2. Where he compareth himself to a yong child, in respect of his innocency in that matter. According also to that of our Sa. Christ. Mat. 18, 1, that we must all of vs, as yong children be voide of pride & ambition, or else we cannot enter into the kingdome of heauen. Like also as the Prophet Samuel cleareth himselfe, as touching his vprightnes in gouernment, and is iustified of the people. 1, Sam. ch. 12. And Paul. Act. 20, 33, &c. And as Moses appealeth to God: Num. chap. 16, 15. Yea, so may the seruants of God, through his grace, behaue thēselues in duties more directly respecting his own diuine maiestie, that they may truly protest in his sight, that they haue serued him in truth of heart: as K. Hezekiah for his part, protesteth in a good conscience: Isay, 38, 3. And that they doe vnfeinedly loue the Lord: as Peter protested, Ioh. 21. 17. Thou knowest Lord that I loue thee. And Dauid, Ps. 18, 1, and 116, 1.

And specially in some one action, may they, by the speciall grace of GOD, so behaue themselues, that they may in speciall manner bee iustified; that is, not onely bee allowed and approued, but more then ordinarily commended therein: as we haue the zealous act of Phinees set forth vnto vs,

for a notable example, in that he, executing the Lords iudgement vpon the adulterous Israelite, and the Midianitish harlot, it was accounted to him for righteousnes, from generation to generation: so pleasing was it vnto the Lord: Numb. 25,10,11,12,13,13,14,15, and Psal. 106,30,31. According also to that which our Sauiour Christ saith of the woman in the Gospell, who of singular loue toward him, powred a boxe of very costly ointment vpon him: Verily (saith he) wheresoeuer this Gospell shal be preached throughout all the world, there shall also this that she hath done, be spoken of for a memoriall of her, Mat. 26, 13.

Thus we deny not, but willingly grant, that the faithful seruants of God, haue their righteousnes in truth & veritie, through the sanctification of the spirit of God, both infused or rather inspired, and euen inherent in them, and also actually flowing from them in the actions and duties of true righteousnes: so that God himselfe being iudge, and approuing the worke of his owne spirit, they are found of him truly worthy to be preferred before the wicked, yea to be receiued into his heauenly kingdome, when they shall iustly be shut out and condemned to Hell for euer: as we read Matt. 25,31, &c.

But with all, we doe no lesse truly & constantly affirme, that all this their righteousnes, is onely by fauour and mercy accepted of God, with allowance from the throne of his grace, as a fruit of their perfect iustification by faith in Christ, through the forgiuenes of their sinnes: the which iustification alone, and no other, can endure strict examination before the iudgement seate of God: agreeable to the confession of the holy Prophet, Psal. 130,3,4. If thou ô Lord straightly markest iniquities, ô Lord who shall stand? But mercy is with thee that thou maiest bee feared. So that, euen of necessitie, we must all (as well as he) come into the house of the Lord, in the multitude of his mercie, and worship him in feare, Psal. 5,7. Praying to him as we read, Ps. 143, 2. Enter not into iudgement with thy seruant: for in thy sight shall none that liueth be iustified: Hereunto also doth the example of the holy Ap. Paul lead vs, in that he maketh his protestation. 1. Cor. 4, v. 3, 4, in these words. As touching me (saith Paul) I passe very little to be iudged of you, or of mãs iudgement: no I iudge not mine owne selfe. For I knowe nothing by my selfe, yet am I not thereby iustified: but he that iudgeth me is the Lord &c. And the example of righteous Iob, in his confession: chap. 9, v. 1, 2, 3. I know verily (saith he) that it is so: for how should man compared vnto God be iustified? If he should dispute with him, he could not answere him one thing of a thousand. And v. 19, 20, 21. If we speake of strength (saith Iob) behold he (that is God) is strong: if wee speake of iudgement, who shall bring me in to pleade? If I would iustifie my selfe, mine owne mouth should condemne me: If I would be perfit, he shal iudge me wicked. Though I were perfit, yet I know not my soule therefore doe I abhorre my life.

And ch. 25, 4. in the same booke: Bildad (likewise speaking by the holy Ghost) saith confidently: How can a man be iustified with God? or how can he be cleane that is borne of woman? Wherefore, as Iudah saith to Ioseph, Gen. 44. 16. How shall we iustifie our selues? He professing thereby, that they could not cleare thẽselues. Much rather may we, yea ought we to say, and confesse before the Lord, that we cannot possibly iustifie our selues before his iudgement seate but must needes appeale to his throne of free mercy and grace. For assuredly, none shall be iustified by their owne righteousnes, but such as shall perfectly fulfill the whole lawe of God according to that, Ro. 2, 13. The hearers of the law are not righteous before God, but the doers of the lawe shall be iustified.

Isay. 64. 6. We are all as an vncleane thing, or person: to wit, as a leaper. And all our righteousnes is as a clout to be cast out of sight or nought worth, &c. Read also Exod. 28, 38, & Philip. 3, 8, 9.

But this can no man possibly performe. For as touching the righteousnes of the best, it is vnperfect, and we must euery one of vs, labour to better and increase it from day to day: as Reuel. 22, 11. He that is iust, let him be iustified still, and he that is holy, let him be sanctified still. That is, let euery such one, not onely continue, but also in continuance, let him more and more encrease in righteousnes and holines, and so declare the truth of that righteousnes & holines which is in him. For as our Sa: Christ saith, To him that hath shall be giuen, & he shal haue in aboundance, &c. But the righteousnes of God, by the gift where of he iustifieth his adopted children; namely, in that he imputeth the righteousnes of his owne naturall sonne our Lord Iesus Christ vnto them; it is fully perfect at the very first instant, and so continueth alwaies, euen as the righteousnes of Christ himselfe is perfect once and for euer: howsoeuer in the faithfull, the dutie, yea and the comfort of their iustification may appeare, and be more fully manifested in processe and tract of time, as Abraham beleeuing, and by his faith being iustified in the sight of God long before, shewed the truth and power of his faith, in offering vp of his onely sonne Isaak, at the commandement which God gaue him for the triall of his faith, many a yeare after.

And thus, by the grace of God may we perceiue, what iustification by faith is: according to the doctrine of the Apostle Paul: to wit, that we are accoũted righteous before the iudgement seate of God, onely for the merit and worthines of the righteousnes and obedience of our Sauiour Christ imputed to vs of God and apprehended of vs by faith, and not otherwise.

Now when the same word (to iustifie) is referred to workes, as the Apostle Iames vseth it; the Apostle is in no wise to bee vnderstood, as though a man might by his workes bee made perfectly righteous in the iust and strict iudgement of God. For that cannot be, insomuch (as it was said euen now) al our own works, yea euen the best of them, they are vnperfect. And besides that, as the Apostle Iames himselfe teacheth vs, In many things we sin all: And therefore it must needs be in his iudgement, a grieuous sinne for any to goe about to iustifie thẽselues by any worthines of their own workes in the sight of God: according as it is expressly noted to be a sin in the Pharisies by our Sa: Christ. Luk. ch. 16. v. 15. Ye are they which iustifie your selues before men &c. And againe, ch. 18, 19, &c. For if it be a sin to stand in a vaine ostentation of our righteousnes before men, much more sinful is it, in opiniõ therof, to lift vp a mãs mind in the sight of god: as Hab. ch. 2, 4. Behold he that lifteth vp himselfe, his mind is not vpright in him: but the iust shal liue by his faith. They onely haue the fruit and reward of their works, who doing them in conscience of most bounden duty, & in obedience to God, doe most vnfeinedly renounce al opinion of merit, & according to the instruction of our Sa: Christ, acknowledge themselues, when they haue done al that they can, to be vnprofitable seruants. Luk. 17. 10. And ch. 18. 9. &c. it may in a good part be euident by the comparison, which our Sa: Christ maketh, betwixt the Pharisie iustifying himselfe, & the poore Publican, humbly confessing & bewailing his sins: of whom our Sa: saith that he went to his house iustified rather then the other. And it may be more fully confirmed by these reasons following.

1 First, we are iustified in the sight of God, in such manner onely, as may most perfectly take away al reioycing from our selues. As Ro. 3, 27. All reioycing in works is excluded by faith. And ch. 4, 1, 2. Abrahã being iustified without works, hath nothing concerning himselfe to reioyce in before God. Likewise Eph. 2, 9. Not of works, lest any man should boast himselfe. Thus, because it was not duly regarded of the vnbeleeuing Iewes, who sought after their own righteousnes, it turned to their destruction, Ro. 9, 30, 31, 32, 33. & ch. 10. 1, 2, 3. Wherefore as it is written, 1. Cor. 1, 31. He that reioyceth, let him reioyce in the Lord. Who hath made Christ to be perfect wisedome, righteousnes, sanctification and redemption vnto vs.

2 And herein is includ:d a second reason, which is, that we are so iustified, as our iustification may yeelde most perfect glorie and praise to the free grace and mercy of God: as Ephes. 1, 6.

3 Thirdly, we are iustified in such sort, as the death and sacrifice of our Lord Iesus Christ, may without any the least impeachment, be acknowledged (as it is in truth) of most high value & merit before God. Tit. 3, 5, 6, 7, & 1. Pet. 1, 18, 19.

4 Finally, we are iustified so, as most perfect comfort may be warranted vnto vs, in our greatest temptations, against the guiltines of sinne, and the feare of death & Hell: according to that of the Apostle Paul, Rom. 7, 24, 25, 1. Cor, 15, 57, and 2. Ep. 1, 9. Philip. 1, 20, 21. But all these excellent & comfortable effects follow iustification by faith in Christ, & cannot stand with any imagined iustification by the worthines of our own works in any parcell or part thereof,

which would euen falsifie the truth of faith it selfe. It followeth therfore, that we are perfectly iustified in the sight of God by faith in Christ, & not by our owne works. How thē is this word of iustificatiō, to be takē whē it is applied to works, as the Apostle Iames doth, beeing drawen therevnto vpon a speciall occasion? Verilie no otherwise as was answered, but as workes may outwardlie argue and declare to others, and inwardlie confirme to our selues, the truth of our faith in Christ, which onely is the instrument of our perfect iustification by him. And so doth the Apostle Iames expresse his owne meaning, chap: 2. 18. in that hee giueth plainly to vnderstand, that it is the duty of euery Christian, to shew forth his faith by his works. And this is that which he disputeth in this latter part of the chap: as it is further euident, in that he had to deale against such as boasted that they had faith, when in the meane while, they were voyde of all good workes.

In maior: annot. in verl. 14. ca. 2

The which place of the Apostle Iames, to the end it may be the better vnderstood, I will here set down the learned and diligent interpretation of M. Beza, for the acording of either Apostle with other. In so much (saith he) as Sophisters (wee will in our language call them Cauillers, doe vrge no other place (to wit of holie Scripture) more stoutlie, to the ende they might ouerthrow the doctrine of the grace of God: and that truely, in such sorte, that this Epistle hath ben for the same cause refused of some, as if it were contrarie to sound doctrine: therfore, I for my part, will the rather indeuor, briefly to giue some light, to the vnderstanding of the same place, to the end it may plainly appeare, that it neither maketh any thing on the behalf of the Cauillers, neither yet containeth any thing differing from the sound and true doctrine of iustification by free fauour & grace. To the which end (as saith this excellent Interpreter) the Apostles drift is principally to be considered. Hee had before dealt against those, that would seeme to liue holily, though in the meane while they were accepters of persons, and hee hath pulled away from them their false visard of holines. But now hee setteth vpon another sorte of men; that is, vppon such, as putting vppon the bare knowledge of the doctrine of the Gospell, the title of faith, doe so rest in that their deuise, as if they were of all other most righteous men: though in the mean season, their whole life aboundeth in much wickednes: so farre off are they from the practise of charity. And this to be the Apostles drift, it is so cleare that I suppose (saith Beza) the Cauillers thēselues wil not denie it to be so. Now let vs consider, after wat maner, such men are to be reasoned against. Paul, specially in his epistles to the Romans, and to the Galatians, is altogether in this, to teach that wee are freely iustified by faith without workes, (or which is all one) by faith in Christ. Wherfore is he so? Surelie, because he bickered with them, who either did set their own merites in stead of grace, or else did couple & ioyne them with grace. It was behouefull for him therfore, first of all, to discusse the right way of iustification, in so much as they instituted false wayes & meanes in stead of the true. But as touching these, (to wit, with whō the Apostle Iames hath to deale) like as the controuersie with thē is altogether contrarie; so the matter it selfe sheweth, that hee was to take a cleane contrarie course, in his disputation against them. For they, (that is to say, some among the Romans and Galatians to whom Paul wrote) they sought to establish iustification by works: these, (that is, some among them, to whom the Apo: Iames did wright) they did not onely remoue iustification from workes, but also they tooke away euen works themselues. Wherfore, like as against these, free iustification by faith, is so defended, that not good works thēselues are taken away; but only the power of iustifying, is withdrawn from them: so here, who seeth not, that euen in a contrary course, works are in such wise to be established; that although the power of iustificatiō be not yeelded to thē, yet that true iustification may be discerned by them, as by the effects therof? I will vtter the matter, yet more plainly (saith the Interpreter.) There, (to wit, in Pauls epistles) the question is concerning the cause: but here, (that is, in the epistle of Iames) it is about the effects. There Paul cometh down from the cause to the effect: here (Iames) from the effects goeth vp to the cause.

What Iuſtification is.

There the queſtion is how wee may be iuſtified: here, howe it may be perceiued, that wee are iuſtified. There, works are excluded from beeing the cauſe of iuſtification: here, it is firmely determined, that they are the effects of iuſtification. There, it is denied that the works of theſe who are to be iuſtified, do goe before: here, it is affirmed that they do follow, after that men are alreadie iuſtified. For to what purpoſe were it, for a man to prooue againſt theſe, that wee are not iuſtified by workes, ſeeing they are ſo farre from aſcribing more vnto workes then is meete, that they do not require them as true teſtimonies of righteouſnes? The which things beeing ſo: who ſeeth not how miſerablie, the Sophiſticall cauillers are deceiued, for want of true light of iudgement, in that they goe about to accord Iames with Paul, as if either of them handeled one, and the ſame queſtion, concerning the cauſes of iuſtification? Hence cõmeth that their crooked diſtinction of workes morall and ceremoniall, as though theſe onely, (to wit, the ceremoniall) were excluded by Paul. &c. Hitherto out of Beza his annotations. Thus therfore, hauing ſufficiently (as wee truſt) for the courſe of this our exerciſe, declared the truth of this great and high pointe of our iuſtification by faith: wee might come now to the ſecond pointe, pertaining to the explication of the former anſwer, touching the promiſe of iuſtification and ſaluation: that is, what the word ſaluation or to ſaue meaneth: ſaue that to make the matter yet more plaine, if it may bee, I am to aſke you here a queſtion or two more.

Queſtion. And firſt, may it not be thought, that the Apoſtle Paul, in that hee oppoſeth faith to works, maketh the oppoſition onely betwixt the ceremoniall workes of the lawe, and the faith of the Goſpell, as was ſaid euen now: and not betwixt it, and the workes of the morall lawe?

Anſwere. No, it may not be thought ſo. For it is manifeſt, that the Apoſtle excludeth the one as well as the other, yea moſt expreſſely, the workes of the morall lawe: to the which ende hee doth alledge that text of the lawe, which doth moſt properlie belong thervnto.

Explication and proofe. It is true. So we read, Gal: 3. 10. For (as the Apoſtle ſaith) ſo many as are of the workes of the lawe, they are vnder the curſe: for it is written: Curſed is euery man that continueth not in all things which are written in the booke of the lawe to doe them. The which Scripture in Moſes, Deut: 27. followeth after an enumeration of the morall, and not ceremoniall duties of the lawe. And touching the ceremoniall, ther was leſſe neede that they ſhould be ſo expreſſely mentioned, becauſe they of themſelues, doe more euidently diſclaime iuſtification by the exerciſe of them: in ſo much as they doe more apparantly point vnto Chriſt, and are otherwiſe a flat handwriting againſt the vſers of them, whoſoeuer ſhould ſeeke iuſtification by them: as the Apoſtle teacheth, Coloſ: 2. 14. For what did circumciſion ſignifie, but the corruption of mans nature to be put off, and caſt aſide, &c? What the legall and ceremoniall waſhings, but that man is ſtained with the ſoile and filth of ſinne? what did the ſlaine ſacrifices teſtifie, but that euery man hath iuſtly deſerued euerlaſting death and damnation, if God ſhould enter into iudgement againſt them, &c? And therfore, ſeing they all conteined a manifeſt confeſſion of ſinnes in the practiſe of them, there was no ſuch need, that they ſhould be ſo expreſſely mentioned, iu this queſtion, concerning iuſtification, as the other ſhould: though they as well as theſe, be altogether excluded in this caſe. Now therfore, ſeeing all the works of the holie lawe of God, as well morall as ceremoniall, are diſ-abled from iuſtification, by reaſon of the weakenes of them, or rather of man himſelfe, for his not performance of them: Rom: 8. 3. Infinitelie much rather then, all popiſh ceremonies, and all their workes of blinde & ſuperſtitious deuotion, yea all their beſt workes of almes, muſt needes be blotted out of this reckoning: in ſo much as they are for the moſt part, contrary to the expreſſe commandement of God, and they that are commanded, are done of them in a corrupt manner through the proude opinion they haue of merit, and to wrong endes, euen for the credit and maintenance of a falſe and Antichriſtian worſhip: &c.

Well

What Iustification is.

Question. Well, be it so, that we exclude all works ceremoniall and morall commanded in the law of God, and much rather all heathenish works, done according to the light of nature, and all popish works wrought of blinde deuotion, or of proude presumption; yet to the end wee may ioyne Paul and Iames togither: may wee not thinke that true Christians after they be endued with fath, are iustified, partlie by faith in Christ, and partly by their owne works, which they doe in faith?

Answere. No, in no wise. For seeing our best workes are vnperfect: that faith, which should rest in any part, vpon such workes, it should stay it selfe vpon a false and deceiuable ground, and so should euen betray and ouerthrowe it selfe.

Explicatiō & proofe. It must needs be so. And in very deed no man can do any good work, in the true faith of Christ, but he must, ipso facto, renoūce all opinion of iustificatiō thereby, or else it is not done in faith. For so much shall a mā denie vnto Christ, as he doth attribute vnto his owne work. Neither will Christ himselfe be partaker with vs, in this work of iustification. He will be a whole Sauior, or no Sauior at all vnto vs.

Question But yet let me ask you another thing. Though our works don in faith are vnperfect, yet for Christs sake, God doth accept them, yea he doth crown & reward thē: therfore it semeth, that this cānot hinder, why they should not iustifie vs in some part. For if God do so gratiously accept them, who shall except against them?

Answere. God doth very gratiously accept thē in deed, as tokens of true thākefulnes, & as hety fruits of obedience, sanctified through faith in Christ, but not to any part of our iustification.

Question. It is true, God wil in this matter accept of no obediēce that is vnperfect. His iustice will not indure it. But yet another question. May not the faith of the Gospell, or faith in Christ, comprehend the whole religion & worship, as some contend: and so take in all Christian works, as into one inclosure with faith?

Answere. In this question of iustification, it cannot be so taken; It should be an vniust inclosure, not of the commons from the poore, but of a royall dignitie from Christ: as the opposition and thick hedge or wall which God himselfe hath made betwixt faith and works, in the Epistles of his faithfull Apostle Paul, doth manifestly declare.

Question. It is very true. Nowe onely one thing, and then no more. Is not faith it selfe whereby we are iustified, a worke? And why then should we so shunne works, as hauing no place in our iustification?

Answere. Faith, in that it is a work or action, it doth not simply and of it selfe iustifie, but onely in that it apprehendeth Christ, and imbraceth him alone for perfect iustification.

Explicatiō and proofe. So it is indeed. And in no other sense, doth our Sa: Chr: himselfe say: Ioh: 6. 29. This is the work of God (that is a work singularly wel pleasing vnto him) that ye do beleue in him whō he hath sent. For seeing God hath sent Christ, euē to this end he should be beleued in, it must needs be very acceptable vnto him, that we should beleeue in him. Neuertheles, this we may easily perceiue, that it was not the purpose of our Sa: Christ, in those wordes to determine faith to be properly a worke: but answering the Iewes in their owne worde, enquiring of workes, hee draweth them frō their owne sense, and telleth them, that this is the worke of God.

What saluation is.

Question. NOw let vs proceed. And hauing shewed what iustification is: what haue you learned that this other word Saluation, or to Saue, doth meane?

Answere. To saue is not onely by the merit of Christs death and obedience, to deliuer & discharge from all guiltines & punishment due to sin, in the iust displeasure & wrath of God: but also, by the power & efficacie of the same satisfactory death & obedience, to deliuer from the power & strength, subtilties & craft, both of sinne & Sathan; & also of all whatsoeuer else, would hinder the same our most happy saluation. Yea more then this; to Saue, is to reconcile & bring most miserable sinners, into the perfect fauour of the most iust God; to giue them vnspeakable peace of conscience; as also wisdome and power to liue a Godly and Christian life, in some measure of holines here; and finally to possesse them, with the most blessed inheritāce & fruition, of the most glorious & euerlasting kingdom of heauē.

Explicatiō and proofe. It is true, as we may se it warranted vnto vs: First, concerning deliuerāce frō the guiltines of sin, & also frō the punishmēt therof: Isai: 53. 4. 5. Matt: 1. 21. Ioh: 1. 29. And from the wrath of God. 1. Thes. 1. 10. Rom. 8. 1. Col. 1. 13. 14.

What Faith is.

Secondlie, from the power and ſtrength of ſinne: Rom: 6. 3. 4. 5. 6. &c. and chap. 8. 2. &c. Reade alſo Galat: 1. 4. and 1. Ioh. 5. 5. 19 and chapt: 3. 5. 6. Thirdly, for reconciliation; reade Luke, ch: 2. 14. Coloſſ. 1. 19. 20. and 1. Iohn. 2. 2. And for holines of life in the ſame chap, verſes. 3. 4. &c. and Coloſ. 1. 21. 22. and Luk. 1. 74. 75. And therwithall, for peace of conſcience: Rom. 5. 1. and chap: 14. 17. Philip: 4. 6. 7. Heb: 2. 14. 15.

Finallie, for the inheritance of the kingdome of heauen: read Epheſ: 2. 1. 2. 3. &c. And Philip: 3. 20. 21. Behold therfore, the many and exceeding great benefites contained vnder this one of ſaluation: the which is therefore worthily called the great ſaluation, and the ſaluation of God, infinitely exceeding all humane deliuering or ſauing. Heb. 2. 3 Pſal. 50. 23. and 119. 41. Iſai. 45. 15. 16. 17. 21. 22. and cha: 46. 13. and 49. 6. and 51. 5. 8. and 59. 16. 17. and Gen. 49. 18. And note here, that theſe diuerſe words of deliuerance, redemption, reconciliation, and the reſt: they doe all ſerue to expreſſe, but one and the ſame ſaluation, manifoldly diſtinguiſhed in diuerſe reſpectes. For as it is truely obſerued: Chriſt doth not onely ſaue vs by the merite of his death, but alſo by the efficacie and power of his Spirit communicated vnto vs: yea, and euen by the communicating of his perſon, in that it pleaſeth him to dwell in vs, & moſt neerely to vnite vs to himſelfe. And in theſe 3. things (ſaith learned Vrſinus) Totum ſalutationis beneficium conſiſtit: the whole benefit of ſaluation doth conſiſt. The which, while we duely conſider in the ſeuerall branches of it: ô howe ought it to affecte vs in a longing deſire after it! in pretious eſtimation of it! in thankfulneſſe to God our Sauiour for it! But on the contrarie, the want of the knowledge of it, maketh manie to eſteeme no more of this ſaluation, then profane Eſau did of his byrthright. Wee are therfore to be ſo much the more careſull, leſt any of vs ſhould fall into the ſame contempt of it. It is lamentable, to ſee the rifenes of this profane contempt, and the notorious ignorance that is among thoſe, that goe vnder the name of Chriſtians. Forſake them howe they looke to be iuſtified and ſaued: they know no other way, but by their good workes, and by good praiers, &c This ſheweth plainlie, that ſuch haue not as yet, any thing at all truely learned Ieſus Chriſt. They vnderſtand nothing in truth, of the ſpirituall couenant of grace; but altogether they dote after a couenant of workes, which indeed is more naturall, though now altogether aboue all power of naturall reach, &c. But whatſoeuer others doe, let vs in the name of God, according as wee are taught out of the word of God, make moſt precious account of the couenant of grace and ſaluation, by our Sauiour Chriſt alone, in whom onely are opened vnto vs, and in whom alone are to be found, all the rich treaſures of the kingdome of heauen.

Iuſtification and ſaluation onely by Chriſt.

Queſtion. HEere therefore, before wee proceede any further, I would gladly heare of you, what our Sauiour Chriſt hath done for vs, thus to iuſtifie and ſaue vs.

Anſwere. What haue you learned out of the holie Scriptures to anſwere to this?

Our Sauiour Chriſt, hath for the procuring and purchaſing of our perfect iuſtification and ſaluation, perfectly fulfilled the righteouſnes of the whole lawe of God for vs, in the whole courſe of his life; and by his death, hee hath paide the full redemption, and as it were the Fine and Ranſome, or penaltie of all our ſinnes: to the ende, that both the guiltineſſe and puniſhment being layde vpon him, him, they might be remoued and taken away from vs; and also that his perfect righteousnesse, and the whole merit and worthinesse of his death, might, through the grace of God, be freely imputed and bestowed vpon vs.

Explicatiõ and proofe. The proofes which may serue for the confirmation of this Answer, haue bene already set downe by vs not long since; so that now wee need the lesse to stand to repeat them againe. Onely let vs yet once more, by this occasion, so consider of the true nature of iustification, and of the righteousnes which is by faith; that, it beeing well vnderstood of vs, yea throughlie settled and rooted in our heartes, wee may by no subtiltie of aduersaries, be remoued from this most heauenly and comfortable truth; euen a chiefe principle of the Gospell of our Sau: Chr: For what else I pray you (to think vprightly of the matter) may the righteousnes and iustification of faith in Christ, possiblie bee; then the apprehension of that wherby Christ hath iustified vs? And what can this bee, beside the holinesse of his nature; the righteousnesse of his life, and the Sacrifice and Redemption of his death? Wherefore as was said before, so wee say againe, that as wee doe iustly remoue iustification from our own works, so also doe wee euen from faith it selfe, so farre as it may be esteemed an action or worke from vs, or rather from the spirit of God, which is giuen vnto vs of God: and we whollie ascribe it to our Sauiour himselfe, in respect of that onely, which he hath wrought and suffered for vs; it being passiuelie as we may say, receiued & apprehended of vs. For faith is but as the hand, or tunnell of our empty soules, to receiue the water of life and saluation, which God of his meere grace and mercie poureth into vs. For as M. Caluin saith notablie well: Fides nihil ad Deum affert: quin potius hominem vacuum & inopem sistit coram Deo, vt Christo eiusq; gratia impleatur. Quare passiuũ est opus (vt ita loquar) cui nulla potest rependi merces. Nec aliam confert homini iustitiam, nisi quam a Christo accepit. That is: Faith bringeth nothing to God: but rather presenteth a man altogether empty, and forlorne in his sight, that he may be replenished with Christ & his grace. Wherfore it is a passiue work, (if I may so speake) whervnto no reward is due. Neither doth it yeelde any righteousnes to a man, which it hath not receiued of Christ before. Calu. vpon Iohn. 6. 29.

And now further, that our Sauiour Christ was necessarily, both to fulfill the righteousnes of the law, and also to die for vs, to the ende we might be perfectly iustified by him: it may easily appeare, if wee doe rightly consider, that all of vs, who stand in need of iustification by him, doe not onely want righteousnes, in that we can neither for the present, nor shall euer be able in this life, to fulfill the righteousnes of Gods law, our own selues, who faile alwaies euen in the best duties that we doe: but also that we are infinitely guiltie of transgressions & rebellions, concerning the time past, through the pacience of God, as the Apostle Paul hath taught vs. Yea, and besides all this, wee doe originallie stand whollie corrupte, and guiltie of eternall condemnation, before the iudgement seate of God; as the same Apostle hath conuicted all the world, both yong and olde: Roma: 3. 19. 20. and chapt: 5. 12. &c. For the least of which our transgressions, wee our selues could neuer in our owne persons, haue made any iust and sufficient recompence or satisfaction, to the most holy iustice of God. It is necessarie therfore, that wee doe in euery respect, relie whollie vpon our Sauiour Christ alone, and vppon the most free grace and mercie of the Lord God our heauenly Father, for our Iustification and Saluation: seeing it is expressely affirmed as we haue often heard and reade, and cannot too often heare, reade, and consider out of the holy Scriptures, that they are not to be found in any other, but in him alone, as Act. 4. 11. 12. This is the stone, cast aside of the builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is ther saluation in any other: for among men there is giuen no other name vnder heauen, wherby we must be saued. Our Sa: Christ onely, of all men, is perfectly holy and righteous in life. Our Sa: Christ alone, is of all men pure & vndefiled by nature. He therfore alone, and no other, could be that meete and worthy sacrifice, euen the lambe of God without spot, which God himselfe hath appointed, to take awaye the sinnes

And what can this bee, beside the holinesse of his nature; the righteousnesse of his life, and the Sacrifice and Redemption of his death? Wherefore as was said before, so wee say againe, that as wee doe iustly remoue iustification from our own works, so also doe wee euen from faith it selfe, so farre as it may be esteemed an action or worke from vs, or rather from the spirit of God, which is giuen vnto vs of God: and we whollie ascribe it to our Sauiour himselfe, in respect of that onely, which he hath wrought and suffered for vs; it being passiuelie as we may say, receiued & apprehended of vs. For faith is but as the hand, or tunnell of our empty soules, to receiue the water of life and saluation, which God of his meere grace and mercie poureth into vs. For as M. Caluin saith notablie well: Fides nihil ad Deum affert: quin potius hominem vacuum & inopem sistit coram Deo, vt Christo eiusq; gratia impleatur. Quare passiuũ est opus (vt ita loquar) cui nulla potest rependi merces. Nec aliam confert homini iustitiam, nisi quam a Christo accepit. That is: Faith bringeth nothing to God: but rather presenteth a man altogether empty, and forlorne in his sight, that he may be replenished with Christ & his grace. Wherfore it is a passiue work, (if I may so speake) whervnto no reward is due. Neither doth it yeelde any righteousnes to a man, which it hath not receiued of Christ before. Calu. vpon Iohn. 6. 29.

And now further, that our Sauiour Christ was necessarily, both to fulfill the righteousnes of the law, and also to die for vs, to the ende we might be perfectly iustified by him: it may easily appeare, if wee doe rightly consider, that all of vs, who stand in need of iustification by him, doe not onely want righteousnes, in that we can neither for the present, nor shall euer be able in this life, to fulfill the righteousnes of Gods law, our own selues, who faile alwaies euen in the best duties that we doe: but also that we are infinitely guiltie of transgressions & rebellions, concerning the time past, through the pacience of God, as the Apostle Paul hath taught vs. Yea, and besides all this, wee doe originallie stand whollie corrupte, and guiltie of eternall condemnation, before the iudgement seate of God; as the same Apostle hath conuicted all the world, both yong and olde: Roma: 3. 19. 20. and chapt: 5. 12. &c. For the least of which our transgressions, wee our selues could neuer in our owne persons, haue made any iust and sufficient recompence or satisfaction, to the most holy iustice of God. It is necessarie therfore, that wee doe in euery respect, relie whollie vpon our Sauiour Christ alone, and vppon the most free grace and mercie of the Lord God our heauenly Father, for our Iustification and Saluation: seeing it is expressely affirmed as we haue often heard and reade, and cannot too often heare, reade, and consider out of the holy Scriptures, that they are not to be found in any other, but in him alone, as Act. 4. 11. 12. This is the stone, cast aside of the builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is ther saluation in any other: for among men there is giuen no other name vnder heauen, wherby we must be saued. Our Sa: Christ onely, of all men, is perfectly holy and righteous in life. Our Sa: Christ alone, is of all men pure & vndefiled by nature. He therfore alone, and no other, could be that meete and worthy sacrifice, euen the lambe of God without spot, which God himselfe hath appointed, to take awaye the sinnes of the world, and to bring in euerlaſting righteouſneſſe, as the Prophet Daniel long before the performance of it, did propheſie of him in the 9. chapter of his propheſie.

And in deede, in ſomuch as wee, in and of our ſelues, are altogether corrupt and ſinfull by nature, yea and doe ſtill ſo remaine in a great part, euen after the grace of regeneration is begunne in vs: howe may it be thought, in any probabilitie of good reaſon, that any mans owne workes ſhould iuſtifie himſelfe, and deſerue any thing at Gods hand, for the merit and worthines therof, as our popiſh falſe teachers doe blaſphemouſlie contend? For whether wee lifte vp our eyes to God, or caſt them downe vpon our ſelues; wee ſhall be eaſily, yea and that with great force alſo caſt off, from all confidence this way, if ſo be wee will vprightly weigh and conſider all things. For firſt concerning God, hee is (as wee knowe) ſuch a one, and ſo infinitlie rich and all-ſufficient in himſelfe, that whatſoeuer is giuen him, hee hath nothing the more. And as the holy propher ſaith: Who hath giuen him, and it ſhall be recompenced him? As though he ſhould ſay, that God is beholding to no creature: but hee giueth aboundantly to all, and yet hee hath neuer the leſſe.

And ſecondlie as touching our ſelues, wee want all thoſe conditions, which are neceſſarie to bee found in thoſe perſons; that ſhould merit or deſerue anie thing at the hands of God. For firſt, wee are not out of his debt: nay wee are moſt deeply indebted vnto him, by thouſands of talents, as we read in the Goſpell. Secondlie, we can gratifie God with no good thing, which we haue not firſt receiued of him. And beſides, that which wee are able to bring, is nothing equall to that reward of euerlaſting life and ſaluation, which proud men ſhame not for their worthines to challenge at the hands of God. Nay rather, euen that little which wee bring vnto God, and the ſame alſo his owne gift beſtowed on vs before; it turneth to our owne further benefit, through the exceeding bountifulneſſe of God. And therfore, howe much the more God vouchſafeth to accept at the handes of any, their ſeruice and duety: by ſo much the more, they are yet more deeplie bound and indebted to him. For it is of meere grace and fauour, that hee accepteth any duety at all, at any mans hands. To the which end, worthily ſaith Elihu in the booke of Iob. chap: 35. 7. ſpeaking on the Lordes behalfe in this wiſe: If thou be righteous (ſaith hee) what giueſt thou vnto him? or what receiueth hee at thy hand? Thy wickednes may hurt a man as thou art: and thy righteouſnes may profit the ſonne of man. &c. Howe then may it be thought, that it is in any mans power to benefit the Lord, and to deſerue anie thing at his handes, whereby hee ſhould be beholding or indebted vnto him?

Bleſſed be the Lord our God therfore, who hath of his moſt gratious goodneſſe, inlightened his ſeruants to ſee and vnderſtand, the truth of this moſt holie and comfortable doctrine of our free iuſtification by faith: and to diſcerne the vanitie and wickedneſſe of the falſe doctrine of mans merite by his owne works. To the which end it ſhall be to our comfort (as I truſt) to call to minde ſome holie teſtimonies, which the ſeruants of God haue giuen vnto it, from time to time. Among whom, that faithfull Martyr and miniſter of the Goſpell of Chriſt M. Patrick Hamelton, hath with great ſharpnes and dexteritie of holie vnderſtanding expreſſed it, wher hee affirmeth and confirmeth from the holie Scriptures, that (to ſpeake exactely) no manner of workes doe make vs eyther righteous or vnrighteous, good or euill: and that they neither ſaue nor condemne the children of God. Hee expreſſeth his meaning thus, and it is very true: that vntill a man be iuſtified by faith, and ſo be by faith allowed of God, to be a good man; he can not poſſiblie doe any good thing acceptable to God: neither can any good deedes make him a good man. For in deed, without faith he can doe no good worke well. Likewiſe alſo (as he ſaith further) euill works are not the cauſe that any man is euill, but hee himſelfe beeing euill firſt, afterward worketh that which is euill. Finallie (as hee truely ſaith) workes doe not ſaue, but faith, whence ſpring all good works. Neither do euill works ſimplie and in themselues considered) condemne: but rather infidelitie which is the root of all euill. For to him that beleeueth, Christ hath by his passion, obtained forgiuenesse of all sinnes &c. Read also the answere of Iohn Lambert another faithfull Martyr to the 31. Article obiected against him: Good workes (saith he) make not a man iust, but a man once iustified, doth then good workes. And so hath Augustine said of more ancient time, that good works doe not goe before, in him that is to be iustified, but follow after his iustification. He disputeth also that onely infidelitie is Peccatum damnans: the sinne that doth vtterly cast men away. Whereas faith is a generall medicine that healeth all sinne which the child of God may fall into.

Iustification and saluation onely by Christ.

These Christian paradoxes, or strange sentences (as they may seeme to be) they are no other, then our Sauiour Christ himselfe hath taught: and namely by the similitude of a tree, Mat. ch. 12, 33, 34, 35. Either make the tree good and the fruit good: or else make the tree euill and the fruit thereof euill: for the tree is known by his fruit. O generation of vipers (saith our Sa: Christ to the proud Pharisies that iustified themselues, & made a great outward shewe of holines) how can ye speake good things when ye are euill? For of the aboundance of the heart, the mouth speaketh. A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth good things: and an euill man out of an euill treasure bringeth forth euill things. Now it is faith onely which maketh a man like the good tree, and infidelitie which maketh a man like the euill tree, &c. Wherfore well saith an other learned man, Who would euer haue thought that men could haue bene so vntoward, as to say, that good fruit doth make the tree good: to the end they might bring in the iustification of mans own works: and not rather to confesse that the tree must first bee good before it can bring forth good fruit? For this verily (as he truly saith) is no lesse absurd & foolish, then if a man should be of this minde to think that the cause should come of the effect. And thus, insomuch as we must be iustified by faith in Christ, before we can doe any good worke: it followeth that neither any workes before, nor any good works after, can iustifie vs in the sight of God. For we are herein, altogether preuented by our Sauiour Christ: who alone is our perfect righteousnes before God, as hath bin sufficiently declared. Wherein it may iustly be delightfull to euery true beleeuer, to see mans workes defeated and abased, that the works of our Sauiour Christ onely, may be perfectly aduanced and established.

Beza in his Annotations vpon the 2. Chap. of Iames.

WHerefore, that we may now at the last, conclude this point of iustification by faith in Christ, and also of saluation the blessed consequent therof: let vs firmely assure our selues against al aduersaries of the grace of God, that they contending for a meritorious righteousnes really infused and inherent in themselues, and concurring with their faith; (the which also with them, is no better then a morall vertue assenting generally to the truth of the Gospel, without any particular assurance that the righteousnes and saluation of Christ is certainly theirs) let vs I say, assure our selues, frō the former testimonies & reasons out of the holy Scriptures; that they are herein altogether most grosly deceiued, in that they haue not learned (or rather, if wee speake of those that professe learning among them) that they haue hardened their hearts against the euident instructions of the word of God, which (as wee haue seene) both plainely and plentifully distinguisheth betwixt the righteousnes of works, and that which is by faith. yea in this doctrine of iustification, doe oppose workes to faith as perfect contraries: the one being of the iust God, the other of sinfull man: that according to nature, this of grace infinitly aboue all naturall reason or power and reach: that of mans proud challenge, this of Gods most free gift, onely proper to those whom God maketh newe creatures to himselfe, by regeneration in Christ; euen such, to whom onely, he giueth this speciall grace, that in the deniall of themselues, they humble themselues in themselues, and reioyce onely in that righteousnes which God hath brought to light & exhibited in our S: C. Let vs therfore be specially wel aduised, & take heed that we neuer abolish true humilitie out of our hearts, by mis-vnderstanding the reioicing of the Gospell, Iustification and salvation, onely by Christ.

as they do, whosoeuer stand conceited in the merit & worthines of their own workes. For doubtles, the magnifying of mans owne works, ariseth from that proud and arrogant opinion, which men haue first conceiued, concerning the worthines of themselues and their owne persons, how vnworthie soeuer in truth they be. And whereas they would seeme, to borrow the merit of their owne workes, from the merit of Christ: this being altogether without warrant from Christ, it is to be accounted no better then a cunning shift, euen a meere deuise and vizard, to couer and shadow their pride withall. For if they meant in good sooth, to magnifie Christes merit and worthines, they would (according to the doctrine of Christ) rest wholly and solely in the same, as being most perfect and entier in it selfe. Out of all question, whatsoeuer is more then this, it is of wicked and diuelliſh pride, how goodly a glosse soeuer any shall put vpon it. It is but poison in a glittering cup. Let it for euer suffice, that our Sauiour Christ hath by his owne hand, pulled off the counterfet vizard thereof: as was alledged before. Luk. 18. vers. 9. &c. where the proude Pharisie (as we haue seene) is reiected of God, for trusting in his owne righteousnes, though he pretended to be thankfull to God, for those his imagined vertues, whereof he boasted himselfe: but the poore sorrowfull & sinfull Publican is iustified before God. Let popish Iusticiaries therefore, following their elder brethren the Pharisies, boast and glory in their own works as they lust: we for our parts, wil by the grace of God, humble our selues with all the faithfull seruants of God, in the sight of our sinnes & vnworthines; and reioyce only in the Lord, and in the multitude of his free grace & mercy, only in and by our Lord Iesus Christ, according to the tenure of his owne most holie word & promise, Isai: 45. 25. The whole seed of Israel shall be iustified, and glorie in the Lord. According also to that, 1. Cor. 1. 30. 31. and Ephe. 2. 9. as was alledged heretofore.

What Repentance is.

NOw let vs goe forward.

You haue already answered to two of the things last propounded; to wit, what is meant by the word to Iustifie, and also what this other word, to Saue, doth signifie.

The third thing yet remaineth; that is, what Repentance is. The which, though it was touched in our entrance into the doctrine of the Law; yet because the Law (to take it in the more strict signification) doth not teach Repentance, in so much as it offereth no grace or mercy to the transgressor: therfore we wil resume it, & handle it more purposedly, here in the doctrine of the Gospell. For the Gospel onely, and not the Lawe, as it is a member diuident from it; giueth hope and comfort of forgiuenes to the poore sinner, through the righteousnes & obedience of Christ: how vnworthy soeuer he be in himself, of any mercy, yea though he be most worthy of all plague and punishment, from the iust deserued wrath of God. The doctrine therefore of Repentance, and of remission of sinnes, is properly belonging to the Gospel: yea and all allowance of repentance to the sinner (as it were a board to relieue his poore Sea-beaten soule, against the most dangerous ship-wreck that may be) it is a speciall gratuitie belonging to the Gospell.

It is true in deed, that Moses, and the rest of the Prophets, do euery where moue to repentance, and also giue comfortable hope of mercy to the repentant, and to that end alledge the promises of God. But all this they do, hauing a respect to the couenant of God in Christ, according to his Gospel: and not by vertue of any naked promise of the Lawe, as we now speake of it.

Wherefore seeing (as was said) we haue only touched the doctrine of Repentance, in our entrance to the former doctrine of the lawe, so farre onely, as it might giue some light of interpretation thervnto; let vs now in the doctrine of the the Goſpel, as in the more proper & due place, enquire more fully into it: acknowledging neuertheles, that although the law ſtrictly taken, doth not teach repẽtãce, or encourage the ſinner to repẽt, but onely leaueth him cõuicted in his former ſin, and preſent corruptiõ: yet according to the directiõ of the Goſpel, it is a perfect rule to teach vs what our ſinnes bee, whereof wee are to repent, and alſo, which be the duties of holineſſe and righteouſnes, wherein we are to walke and pleaſe God. For both the Goſpel, & alſo the law forbid the ſame falſe worſhip, the ſame profanenes, the ſame blaſphemy &c. Likewiſe, the ſame diſobedience to parents, the ſame crueltie, the ſame filthines of fornication &c. And on the contrary, they teach one, and the ſame true ſpirituall worſhip of God, and the ſame duties of loue, belonging from man to man: as it is euident Mar. ch. 5. and ch. 15, 4, &c. & ch. 22, 37, 38, 39, 40. Rom. 13, 8, 9, 10. Epheſ. 6, 1, &c. 1. Tim. 1, 5. Yea, & the law, in the moſt ſtrict acceptation of it, howſoeuer, it doth not teach or incourage the ſinner to repentance, (as the immediate and proper cauſe thereof) yet it is no weake or ſmall occaſion or meanes, as well for the furthering of it, as for preparing the heart of the ſinner vnto it.

Queſtion. Now therefore, I aske here in this place, what repentance is, according to the doctrine of the Goſpell?

Anſwere. Repentance, a fruit all waies attending vpon true iuſtifying faith (to ſpeake of it in the moſt generall ſignification) it comprehendeth all particular graces of our ſpirituall regeneration and new birth (faith onely excepted) whereby the erroneous minde and vnderſtanding, as alſo the vaine and wicked memorie, together with the corrupt and ſinfull will and affections of the children of God, are inwardly more and more altered and changed, from that which they are by naturall birth; and made more and more conformable to the ſpirituall image and likeneſſe of GOD: Whereby alſo, the wordes, and outward actions of their life and conuerſation, are likewiſe more and more altered & changed, from the facion & courſe of this wicked world, vnto the fruits of true righteouſnes, and holines, in obedience to the moſt holy will and word of God.

Explicatiõ and proofe. That this is the nature of repentance, and that in the generall ſignification of it, it carrieth ſo large a compaſſe, as hath beene deſcribed: wee may vnderſtand, firſt by the diuers and ſundrie wordes, whereby it is noted in the holy Scriptures, both of the olde and alſo of the newe Teſtament: and then, by the doctrine it ſelfe, which doth more iointly open and declare, the full ſenſe and meaning of all the ſame words.

The Hebrew words, whereby repentance is ſignified in the olde Teſtament, are theſe: firſt Chacam, which ſignifieth to be wiſe; as Deut. 32, 28, 29. They are a nation (ſaith Moſes) voide of counſell, neither is there any vnderſtanding in them. Oh that they were wiſe &c. Likewiſe Pro. 23, 19. O thou my ſonne (ſaith wiſe king Salomon) heare and be wiſe, and guid thine heart in the way. And in the ſame ſenſe, though the holy Prophet doe vſe an other word Sacal, not that Sacal whoſe firſt letter is Samech, which ſignifieth to be fooliſh: but that which beginneth with the letter Shin, and ſignifieth prouident and prudent warines or circumſpectiõ in a mans affaires and dealing. Be wiſe now ye kings (Haſchkilu ſaith the Prophet Dauid) be ye learned (that is, receiue ye inſtruction, to wit from the holy word of God and the faithfull miniſterie and preaching thereof) ô ye iudges of the earth &c. In this reſpect alſo, repentance is noted by this other phraſe of ſpeech, to returne to a mans heart; that is, to growe more wiſe and better aduiſed, then hee was before: as Deut. Chap. 30. 1. and 1. Kings 8. 47. If they turne againe to their heart &c. Likewiſe, when the LORD would note the turning of the hearts of the Gentiles vnto him by true repentance, hee expreſſeth it by that aboundance of knowledge, which he intended to power downe vpon them: Iſay. 11. 9. Ieremy 31, 34. According to that alſo. Prou. 9, 12. If thou be wiſe, thou ſhalt bee wiſe for thy ſelfe: and if thou be a ſcorner, thou alone ſhalt ſuffer. And Pſal. 90, 12, Teach vs (ſaith Moſes) ſo to number our daies, that we may apply our hearts vnto wiſedome.

Thus, repentance (to beginne withall) is ſignified ſynecdochically, (the part put for the whole, by attaining to true wisedome and vnderstanding, from the aduise and direction, of the holy word of GOD. And that, in very good consideration, seeing, if there bee true wisedome in the minde, the will and affection will bee the better ordered and guided, and consequently also, both the tongue, the hand, and the foote: and likewise, the memory will store it selfe with good and holy things for meditation, &c.

And that it is the meaning of God in the holy Scriptures of the olde Testament, to note repentance by wisedome and vnderstanding: it may bee discerned, from that which is contrariwise set downe concerning follie. For vsually in the same Scriptures, men yet lying in their sinnes, without all care or regard to repent, they are called fooles, euen such as want all holy iudgement and good discretion, who call light darkenesse, and darkenesse light, good euill, and euill good: as we read Isay Ch.1,3.&Ch.5.20,21,& ch.42.16,17.& soforth to the ende of the Chapter. And Ier.4.22. My people (saith the Lord) is foolish, they haue not knowne mee: they are foolish children, and haue no vnderstanding: they are wise to doe euill, but to doe well they haue no knowledge. And Prou. 27.22. King Salomon speaking of the obstinate and impenitent sinner: Though (saith hee) thou shouldest bray a foole in a mortar &c. yet will not his foolishnes depart from him.

The ground of this wicked folly, is selfe-conceitednes in a mans owne carnall and corrupt wisedome: and therefore is the wicked man, noted to be such a one as walketh after his owne imaginations. As Gen.6.5. and Prou.6.14. The wicked man imagineth euill at all times. And therefore verse 18. God is saide to abhorre such. And Chap.12.2. Hee will condemne the man of wicked imaginations. Read also. Ier.18.verses 12.13.&c. And verily there is very great reason, why the Lord should deale thus seuerely against the man of wicked imaginations; because, according as the imagination is conceited, both will, and word, and deede it selfe, are carried all headlong, as it were vpon swift running wheeles, to worke all mischiefe. Wherefore, we may truly say, that God in his holy iustice punisheth no sinne more grieuously, nor more often and manifoldly, then hee doth that proud conceite, which euery man hath of himselfe, and his owne waies. For by reason hereof, or rather for want of sound reason, they doe not onely magnifie their owne imagined, and counterfeit vertues, obtruding them to God as it were for good and currant coine: but also in a presumption thereof, they doe easily dispense with themselues, touching those sinnes, whereof their owne conscience conuicteth them: as if they were fewe and small in comparison of their vertues, and therefore that God should easily beare with them, &c. The which wicked and diuelliish presumption, it cannot bee, but GOD must most iustly abhorre, and seuerely plague and punish them for. Wherefore, as the Prophet Isaiah exhorteth, so let all such as minde the way to true wisedome, forsake their owne waies and imaginations, and returne vnto the Lord, and he will haue mercy vpon them; and to our God, for he is very ready to forgiue, Chap.55.7.

Moreouer, in a like contrary respect (as touching this word Wisedome) Sinne is called by the name of Errour; to wit, such errour as commeth of ignorance, or want of true vnderstanding and wisedome: as Psal.19.12. Who can vnderstand his errours, or faultes? to wit, such as hee committeth ignorantly, or vnaduisedly, &c. Whereupon, well saith a learned Interpreter: Humanum est errare & ignorare errorem suum. It is a thing very vsuall with men to erre, and yet to bee ignorant of their errour. And therefore, great neede haue wee all, to pray to GOD with the holy Prophet, as wee reade, Psal.119.10. With my whole heart haue I sought thee, let mee not erre (or wander) from thy Commandements. And as the Prophet Moses teacheth vs to pray. Psal. 90.8. as was alledged before. Hetherto of the first word Chacam, which (as was saide) signifieth to bee wise, from whence true Repentance is noted.

Secondly,

What Repentance is.

Secondly, the same repentance, is noted by the word (Nacham); which is a word belonging to affection, and signifieth properly, the alteration and change thereof, by sorrowe for some thing rashly committed, after that a man hath better bethought, and aduised himselfe: as may appeare by that reprehension of the Prophet Iere. Chap. 8. 6. No man (saith he) repented him of his wickednesse, saying, What haue I done? Where, the word which the Prophet vseth, is (Nicham). But as it followeth: Euery one (saith hee) turned to their race, as the horse rusheth to the battell. The want of this change of affection, vpon better aduise from the word of God, maketh way to hardnes of heart, and vtter impenitency, if it be not maturely preuented: as the same Prophet giueth to vnderstand, both here, and elsewhere: as chap. 3, 17. and Zech. 7. 11. 12. and Ezek. 36. 26. The which if it once take place, it is vehemently accursed and condemned by the Lord. Deut. 29. verses 18. 19. 20. 21.

The third Hebrew word, wherby Repentance is noted, is (Shobb) which is as much to say, as to returne. And it may well note these three things vnto vs. First, a ceasing of the former euill course of life. Secondlie, a turning or alienating of a mans heart from sinne. Thirdly a returning to God with care of leading a godly life. For it is a metaphore or borrowed speach, taken from a mans bodily going, and namely, from that his going, wherby he carrieth himselfe, more & more out of the right way, vntill he returneth quite back againe. So it is with the wicked soules of men. For all of vs, hauing naturally peruerse and crooked minds, we are of our selues bent to practise peruerse and crooked things, walking as it were, in crooked & wrong waies. So that vntill we mend our liues, it may truly be said of vs, that we walk altogether from God, as if we turned our backs, and not our faces toward him: according to the complaint of the Lord by the Prophet Ier. ch. 2. 27. And herein, there is no ceasing, but a continuall proceeding, & increasing in manifold rebellion against God, so long as we are left vnto our selues: as we read in the same propheſie of Ier. ch. 3. 5. Thou doest euil, euen more and more. And ch 8. 4. 5. whereupon it is, that the exhortation to repentance is often renewed to the people of God, vnder this word of returning: as in the same Prophet. Chap. 3. verses. 1. 7. 12. 14. 22. & ch. 36. 7. Likewise Ezek. ch. 18. & ch. 33. by an often repetition. And Hos. 14. v. 2. 5. In this respect also, and to the same end, the people of God, are often exhorted, to seeke the Lord: as Isay. 55. 6. 7. Likewise Amos. ch. 5. v. 4. 5. 6. Thus saith the Lord to the house of Israel, seeke ye me, and ye shall liue. But seeke not Bethel. &c. And againe, v. 14. Seeke good & not euill, that ye may liue: and the Lord God of Hosts shal be with you &c. Yea, for more plainnesse and euidence of speach, we are exhorted to seeke his face. Ps. 27. 8. Hence also, is that ofte metaphore in the holy Scriptures, that the lawes & commandements of God, are called the waies of God: and that the licentious courses, which wicked men doe rush into, and wereby they wander, & goe astray from the Lord, are called their own waies. Isay. 35. 6. & ch. 63. 17. Thus therefore, by this word (Shobb) which signifieth to returne, or to change a mans outward course or trade of life; the change of the minde, and inward returning of the heart to God, is also vnderstood.

Neither is it to be forgotten here, that a wicked and vnrepentant course of life, is noted also, by a forgetfulnes of God: as Deut: 32. 18. Psal: 9. 17. and Psal: 50. 22. and Ier: chapt: 2. 32. and chap: 3. 21. Read also Amos. ch: 6. 10. Sed consule Trem: & Iun: interpret: As on the contrarie, a holie remembrance of God, noteth care of Repentance, according to that: Lament: Ier: 3. 20. My soule hath them (that is, my afflictions) in remembrance, and is humblea in me. Read also, Isai: 46. 8. 9. 10. Remember this (saith the Lord, by his holy Prophet) and be ye ashamed: bring it againe to minde, ô ye transgressors. Remember the former things of olde, &c.

Hetherto of the wordes of the olde Testament, from the which, Repentance is signified.

What Repentance is.

NOw to these Hebrew words of the old Testament: there be Greek words, answering in the new: the which we shall not without some good vse, (as we hope) make like rehearsall of.

And first, that which answereth to (Chacam) is Metanoeo, which signifieth vpon good consideration to change a mans minde, as the latine word respisco, whereby it is well translated, giueth to vnderstand: the which, according to the nature of verbes inchoatiue or inceptiue, (as Gramarians call them) signifieth (as the learned knowe) to begin to waxe wise: to wit, after some folly committed before. For according to the true verdite of the holy Scriptures, the minde of man, is of it selfe vaine, erroneous, and full of folly, for want of the true knowledge and feare of GOD. There is no foreknowledge in vs to vnderstand what is good and godly, vntill God himselfe doe reueale the same: and therefore wee haue neede of a better after-wit, then our fore-wit was, as the common prouerbe goeth. The wisedome of the flesh (saith the Apostle Paul) is blind. Ye were once darkenes &c. Yea it is enmitie to God: Eph. 5,8. Rom. 8,7. And set on euill workes. Colos. 1,21.

In which respect, wicked and vnbeleeuing men, are in the newe Testament as well as in the olde, called by the name of fooles: as Rom. 1,21,22. Because when they knewe God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankfull, but became vaine in their imaginations, and their fooliſh heart was full of darkenesse. When they professed themselues to bee wise, they became fooles. And 1. Cor. 1.20. God hath made (that is, hee hath euicted) the wisedome of the worlde to bee foolishnesse. And Chap. 3,18. Let no man deceiue himselfe. If any man among you seeme to bee wise in this worlde, let him bee a foole, that hee may bee wise. For the wisedome of this worlde, is foolishnesse with God, &c. And Chap. 15,36. O foole, that which thou sowest is not quickened before it dye. And Gala. 3,1. O yee foolish Galatians (ô Anoetoi) who hath bewitched you that yee should not obey the truth? And Chap. 6,3,4. If any man seeme to himselfe that hee is somewhat, hee being indeede nothing, he deceiueth himselfe in his imagination. But let euery man proue his owne worke, &c.

Hence it is, that the exhortation to Repentance, runneth so often vpon this word, Metanoeite: as Matth. Chap. 3,2. and Chap. 4,17. Act. 2,38, and Chap. 8,12. Where the Apostle Peter, mightily reprouing Simon the Magitian: Repent (saith he) of this thy wickednesse, and pray thou God that the thought of thy heart may bee forgiuen thee. The wicked thought of Simon, is called Epinoia: the godly change of minde, which Peter exhorteth him vnto, is called Metanoia.

The same word is likewise vsed Reuel. 3,19. Bee zealous and amend. And all very aptly, according to that which was obserued, concerning the Hebrewe word, wherevnto this answereth, For the change of the affection, and euen of the actions of the whole life, dependeth vpon the change and reformation of the minde of man, according to the minde and will of God, made knowne in his holy word: as 2. Tim. 2,25. Where the Apostle Paul giueth vs to vnderstand, that repētance, which is the gift of God, must be according to the knowledge of the truth. And Ephes. 4,23. Be ye renewed in the spirit of your minde. And chap. 5,15. Not as fooles, but as wise men &c. According also to that, Luk. 1,17. Where repentance is described to be a conuersion of the heart vnto God, according to the wisedome of iust men: that is to say, of such as God himselfe hath made wise by his holy spirit. Likewise, according to that in the same Euangelist. Chap. 15, verse 17. Where our Sauiour Christ saith of the Prodigall and vnthriftie sonne repenting, that hee came to himselfe: that is to say, that hee now bethought himselfe of a more wise course, then he had taken before. Thus to bee wise vnto saluation, is to bee in the state of true faith and repentance. 2. Tim. 3.15. Hetherto of the first Greeke word Metanoeo, answering to the first of the Hebrewe wordes, Chacam.

Secondly,

What Repentance is.

Secondly, wee haue the Greeke word Metamelomai, which answereth to the Hebrew Nacham, and signifieth the change of a mans care : to the bettering of his affection ; as the other word Metanoeo, signified the correcting or bettering of the iudgement, and discretion of the minde and vnderstanding.

That this is so, it may be perceiued by that which we read, Matth: chap: 21. 29. Hee (saith our Sauiour Christ) that said at the first to his Father, I will not work in the vineyard, yet afterward repented himselfe and went. But on the contrarie, as it followeth in the same chapter, verse. 32 : The Pharisies (as saith our Sauiour Christ) were not mooued to repentance ; that is, they remained still careles of their duetie, yea they hardened their hearts with an obstinate rebellion. For hardnes of heart groweth fast vpon securite, or a continued neglect of good dutie ; and is altogether contrarie to this Metamelomai, which wee nowe speake of. Yea, it peruerteth the vnderstanding also, and therfore they are both ioyned togither. Rom: chapt: 2. 5. Reade also chapt: 11. 25. and 2. Cor: 3. 14. and 1. Tim. 4. 2. In the which places, hardnes of heart, is noted as an euill fruit, following vpon secure and careles neglect of duety. Moreouer, 2. Cor: 7. 10. Wher the Apostle teacheth, that repentance to saluation, the which godlie sorow causeth, is not to be repented off: hee vseth the word Ametameleton, and so giueth to vnderstand, that no after-sorrowe blongeth to this, that a man hath repented to saluation. Onely want of repentance, is, as we may say, metameleton ; that is, a matter iustlie to bee sorrowed for, and to bee repented off, &c. And thus wee may perceiue, how the word Metamelomai, respecteth the change of the affection, as the former word Metanoeo, doth more properlie belong to the change of the minde.

Thirdly, to the Hebrewe word Shobh, the which (as hath beene declared) noteth a reformation of the disordered actions of life and conuersation ; the Greeke word Epistrepho answereth, both in signification and vse, as may be obserued in the newe Testament, and namely, Mark : 4. 12. Luk : 1. 16. Iohn. 12. 14. and Act : 28. 27. Read also, Act : 9. 35. All that dwelt at Lidda and Saron (saith the Euangelist Luke) turned to the Lorde. And chapt : 11. 21. A great number beleeued and turned to the Lord. Likewise, chap: 14. verse 15. The Apostles Barnabas and Paul, preached vnto the people of Lystra, that they should turne from vaine Idolls to the liuing God, &c.

The same Apostles doe make report of the conversion: that is, of the repentance of the Gentiles. And verse. 19. My sentence is (saith the Apostle Iames) that wee trouble not them of the Gentiles, that are turned to the Lord. And the Epist : of Iames, chapt : 5. 19. 20. Vnto this conuersion or turning to the Lorde, erring or going astray, is opposed. And 1. Pet : 2. 25. Yee were as sheepe going astray : but nowe yee are returned vnto the Shepheard and Bysbop of your soules : that is, to our Lord Iesus Christ, and to the obedience of his Gospell, &c. Reade also, 1. Thessalon : 1. 9. and 2. Corinth : 3. 16.

Finallie, how repentance, or at the least, a singular meanes or introduction to the renewing of it, is noted by the worde of remembrance, or bethinking our selues of our former euill wayes. Reade Reuelat : 2. 5. Remember from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and doe the first workes. &c. And chapt : 3. 3. Remember howe thou hast receiued, and heard, and see thou holde fast, and repent. Neither is it without great cause, that this remembring of ourselues, should be required to repentance : because wee are naturallie forgetfull of our duties, and of all good things. Yea, wee are naturallie so possessed with the thoughts, and remembrance of vaine and wicked things, that there is no roome for any good thought or meditation. And so it commeth to passe, that the heart is set altogether vppon euill, which onely is present and ready, both to eye, and to eare, to hand and foote and all : vntill it shall please God to giue vs grace, better to remember, and bethinke our selues.

And thus wee may perceiue, howe the nature of Repentance, is opened

vnto vs, euen from a distinction of those sondrie names or words, whereby it hath pleased the holie Ghost, to expresse the same vnto vs in the holie Scriptures, both of the olde and also of the new Testament.

Concerning the which distinction of the words, this yet we must neuertheles vnderstand, as touching the matter it selfe, that it must be entirely and wholie conceiued of vs, though one of the wordes onely, be any where mentioned instead of the rest. And so doth our English translation, oftentimes by good interpretation, exhort generally to amendment of life, euen from the first of the Greeke words aboue rehearsed, though it doe properlie signifie the change of the minde onely. Yea, and for the same cause also, the same words, are for the more full declaration of the nature of repentance, not seldome combined and lincked together, in the holie Scriptures themselues; chieflie the first, and the third of them, & the same also, sometime with an addition of some other words, for more euidence sake: as Deut: 30. 1. 2. If thou shalt turne into thine heart, &c. and returne vnto the Lord thy God, and obey his voyce in all that I command thee this day: thou and thy children, with all thine heart, and with all thy soule. Then the Lord thy God will cause thy Captiues to returne, and haue compassion vppon thee, &c. And 1. King: 8. 47. 48. If they turne againe vnto their heart, &c: and turne againe to the Lorde, with all their heart, and with all their soule, confessing their sinnes, &c. The like is in many other places of the olde Testament: And in the new Testament likewise: as for example, Matth: 3. 8. and Luk: 3. 8. and Act: 26. 18. wher the Apost: Paul saith, that our Sauiour Christ sent him to preach to the Gentiles, that their eyes might be opened, and so might turne from darknesse to light, and from the power of Sathan to God. And verse 20. hee professeth accordinglie, that he preached both to Iewes and Gentiles, that they should repent, and turne to GOD, and doe workes worthie amendment of life: that is to say, such as might outwardly argue and declare, the inward truth of the change of the heart and minde. Read also Act: 3. 19. Amend your liues, and turne, that your sinnes may be put away. &c.

But enough concerning the words, wherby the holie Scriptures of God, doe note out and signifie repentance: euen such, as our owne Englisn wordes doe answer vnto, when wee say of any, that hee is repentant, penitent, conuerted, amended, &c.

NOw let vs furthermore, euen as briefflie as wee can, lay forth the nature of repentance, from that description, which hath bene set downe of it, according to the doctrine of the holie Scriptures. Wherin, wee may well be so much the more briefe, because it hath bene in a great part cleared already, euen by the opening of the words, werby it is vsually pointed out vnto vs.

First therfore, concerning that which was answered in the beginning: namelie, that repentance in the generall signification of it, comprehendeth all graces of spirituall regeneration and new birth, faith onely excepted: it may hence appeare, that the whole worke of Gods grace, which he worketh in his children, is comprehended vnder these two heads, Repent and beleeue the Gospell. For this is a briefe summe of the whole doctrine of the Gospell. Mark: ch: 1. 15. And so doth the Apostle Paul abridge his whole doctrine, saying, that he witnessed both to Iewes and Grecians, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Iesus Christ: Act: 20. 21. and 2 Tim. 1. 13. Keep the true paterne of wholsome words, which thou hast heard of me in faith and loue which is in Christ Iesus. Wher, loue is Synecdochicallie, put for whole Repentance, because it is a principall grace, and as wee may say, a radicall or fundamentall part therof. And Heb: 6. 1. Not laying againe, the foundation of repentance from deade workes, and of Faith toward God. Neuertheles, we graunt herewithall, that repentance and conuersion to God, may be construed in so large a sense, that it shall comprehend faith also, as a part of it. But wee speake here, of the more proper, and exact limites and bownds of them: like as faith also, and knowledge are to be distinguished; though though ſometimes the one is put for the other, according to that of our Sauiour Chriſt: Iohn: 17. This is eternall life, to knowe thee. &c. And Eſay. 53. By his knowledge, my righteous ſeruant ſhall iuſtifie manie, &c.

Secondlie, from the former proofe, it is euident, that Repentance doth alwaies accompanie true iuſtifiyng faith. But that repentance, ſhould be a fruite of faith; and that faith, in a certaine order, is to haue his place aſſigned before it (howſoeuer in time they goe together, as touching the inward change of the heart and minde) it is not from the former teſtimonies, to be ſo eaſily diſcerned, in ſo much as Repentance, in courſe and order of Doctrine, is placed before it: the reaſon wherof hath bene obſerued heretofore. Wee are therefore, for this pointe, to looke to ſome other places of holie Scripture, whence it may be cleared. And namely, to the 9. verſe of the 15. chap: of the Actes, where we read it plainely expreſſed, that God doth by faith purifie the heart. And chap: 26. 18. Wee are ſanctified by faith in Chriſt. And Galat: 5. 6. Faith worketh by loue. And 1. Iohn 3. 3. He that hath hope in God, purgeth himſelfe. This hope is the next and immediate ſupporter of faith. And verily, if there were not hope of mercie, through faith in God the Father, that it is his good pleaſure to forgiue ſinnes, and to receiue ſinners to fauour, for his Sonne Ieſus Chriſtes ſake: who would, yea rather, who could haue power & comfort, to repent thē of their ſinne and to turne to God with their whole heartes and mindes? &c. And yet againe, ſo do we affirme faith to go in order before repentāce (ſpeaking generally) that, though the knowledge of the Goſpell, is one particular grace of repentance, yet it is neuertheles the fore-runner of faith: like as faith taking his originall from the knowledge of God in Chriſt, paſſeth into the heart, and taking vp ſeate & reſidence there, doth more & more purifie both minde and heart, yea tongue & hand, and foote, and life and all. For (as the Apoſtle Paul teacheth vs) With the heart man beleeueth vnto righteouſnes. Rom: ch. 10. verſe 10. And all true wiſedome is euerie where in the holy Scriptures called, the wiſdome of the heart, euen of that heart, which is ſanctified by faith, the which faith (as was ſaid euen now) hath his ſeate, and as it were his fining & refining ſhoppe or furnace there. Read Pro: 2. 10. & 8. 5. & ch: 14. 33. & 16. 21. & ch: 22. 17. 18. 19. & ch: 23. 12. 15. 19. 26. and Dan: 10. 12. Finally, Prou: 17. v. 16. Wherefore (ſaith the moſt wiſe king) is there a price in the hand of a foole to get wiſedome, and he hath no heart? As though he ſhuld ſay, All meanes are in vaine to him that wanteth a hearty affection, towards that which is to be ſought after, &c. Surely, no grace is any grace of ſanctification, vntill it deſcend to the heart, and there be allowed, and ſealed, as it were for lawfull and currant, by the ſtamp of faith.

Now thirdlie, that repentance noteth the changing & altering of the minde, memory, will, & affection, frō that which they are by naturall birth (euen erroneous, vaine, corrupt, & euery way altogether ſinfull) to the renewed image and likenes of God, in inward puritie, ſoundnes & integrity, with daylie increaſe of holy wiſdome & vnderſtanding, &c: it may be proued from that which we read, Epheſ: 4. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. & Col: 3. 10. & 2. cor. 3. 18. And wheras two things are requiſite to this ſpirituall change: firſt a dying to ſin, & ſecondlie, a quickening or riſing vp to newneſſe of life: wee haue both of them from our Sauiour Chriſt, by the hand of faith: the firſt, from the grace and power of his death, the other frō the vertue of his reſurrection: as the Apo: Paul doth moſt notably declare in the 6. chap: of the epiſt: to the Rom. From the beginning wherof, he entreth to treate of our ſanctification by the Spirit of Chriſt, as a fruit of that our iuſtification by faith in Chriſt, which hee handled before.

Finallie, that repentance comprehendeth the altering and changing of the outward ſpeaches and actions of life, anſwerable to the inward changing of the minde, and affections of the heart, from the common courſe of the children of this wicked world: Read Rom: chapt: 12. 1. 2. And 1. Corin: 6. 20. Iames 4. 4. and 1. Iohn. 2. 15. 16. 17. & 1. Theſſalon: 5. 3. where the holy Apoſtle prayeth for the ſanctification of the bodie, together with the ſoule, & the Spirit of the children of God. Read also Act: 8.22. 2.Cor: 12.21. Reuel: 2. 21.22. Luk: 3.9.10. and Matth: 21.32. In the which places, the doctrine of repentance is extended, to the reformation of the outward works of the flesh, and to the contrarie practise of good outward duties. And so, Repentance, (which is principallie inward) breaketh forth in the outward fruites thereof, that it becommeth a visible thing, to the viewe of all men, according to the speach of our Sauiour Christ, touching Repentance in sack-cloth and ashes. Matth: 11.21.

The Practise of Repentance.

THis therfore, to speak generallie, is the nature of true Christian Repentance, according to the former description of it. The which, because it may be made the more cleare and familiar vnto vs, from the practise of the people of God, in whom God hath wrought this excellent worke of his holy Spirit: let vs now proceede, to take a viewe therof, that so wee may the better informe our selues, how wee are to beginne, and proceed in a right course, after the examples of those, who by the grace of God, haue gone before vs therin.

The practise, is answerable to the doctrine. Yet so, as it is not alwaies after one vsuall course, but sometimes more speciall vpon more speciall occasions: namely in respect of some more grieuous and predominant sinne, at the first conuersion, whether of one, or of many: and by reason of some particular relapse of such as haue formerly repented them. For in such cases, the inferiour & helping causes, or as one would say, (the common affections of repentance,) whether going before as preparatiues, or following after, and accompanying the seuerall partes therof, eyther touching mortification of sinne, or quickening to newenesse of life: they ought to be so much the more vehement and intentiue.

The profession also of repentance, is either more publike, or more priuate. Ordinarie by meanes of Gods word and Gospell preached, and the execution of the prescribed censures and discipline of the Church of God: or extraordinarie, as it pleaseth God to worke, either by the same meanes, or any other way, in a more then ordinarie course.

Examples hereof wee haue in the holy Scriptures, both of the olde, and of the newe Testament.

Of the more publike and extraordinarie practise and profession of repentance by many, we read Exod. 32, verse, 19, &c. to the ende of the Chap. And Chap. 33, 5, 6. Where we read that Moses and the Leuites, did by the sword take vengeance of the chiefe of them, that were most forward in the sinne of making and worshipping the Idoll-calfe. And that Moses praied to God for the people. And that all the people humbled and abased themselues in the sight of God. A declaration whereof, was their sorrowing and laying aside of their costly raiment: they thereby acknowledging themselues vnworthy of the common mercies of God, and much more vnworthy to be accepted for a peculiar and holy people vnto him. And Iudges. Chap. 2, 4, 5. At the fearefull threatening of God, that (because of the great sinne of his people in sparing the heathē Idolaters) he would not cast them out before thē; but that they should remaine among them, as thorns in their sides, &c. They mourned and wept so aboundantly, that the place where they did so, doth beare the name of weeping. And 1. Sam: 7, 6. The people of Israel, in their fast, did as it were powre out riuers of teares in great aboundance before the Lord, confessing the hainousnes of their sinne, in seruing Idole-seruice with the worship of God. Vnto the which lamentation, it seemeth that the Prophet Ieremiah alluded chap: 9. 1. wishing that his head were full of water, and his eyes a fountaine of teares, &c. According also as Ps. 119. verse, 136.

the Prophet saith there: Mine eyes gush out with riuers of water, because they keep not thy lawe: so exceeding was the lamentation of that people, in that place of Samuel. And in the book of Ezra, chap. 9. Ezra, that holie Scribe of God, by reason that the holy seede of Gods peculiar people, was mixed with the people of the prophane and Idolatrous nations: he rent his clothes, and plucked off the haire of his head and beard, as one astonied to thinke of the greeuousnes of the sinne. And afterward recouering himselfe from his exceeding great heauines, he fell downe vpon his knees, and praied God most instantly, to pardon the sinne of his people. Then, as it followeth, ch. 10. 1. while Ezra thus praied, and confessed himselfe, weeping and falling downe before the house of God; there assembled to him, of Israel, a very great congregation of men and women, and children: for as the text saith, the people wept with a great lamentation, &c. We reade likewise in the booke of Ester, chap. 4. 1. 2. 3. 13. 14. 15. 16. that Mordecai cried with a great crie and bitter. And further, that there was great sorrow among the Iewes, with fasting, and weeping, and mourning, and that they laie in sack-cloth and ashes. Yea, that they fasted three daies and three nights: and that Queene Ester, and her honourable maides about her, did so likewise. In the which long continued fast, there is no doubt, but that they earnestly bewailed their sinnes, and craued forgiuenes of them, that so the exceeding great danger they were in, might be remoued. And Ionah, ch. 3. The Ninenites (though a heathenish people) yet at the suddaine and extraordinary warning of God, by the preaching of the Prophet; they repented with very earnest repentance, they, and their King, euen in sack-cloth and ashes. And as the text reporteth; they cried mightily to God, to wit, for forgiuenes, and turned from their euill waies, &c. Such are the examples of the old Testament.

Wee haue likewise, examples of extraordinarie and publike profession, and practise of Repentance, in the new Testament. And namely, Matth. Chapt. 3. Verse. 6. Many were baptized of Iohn the Baptist, confessing their sinnes. And Act. 2. 37. 38. at one Sermon, three thousand soules were conuerted, acknowledging their sinnes, and desiring to be instructed in the truth of God. And cha. 19. verses 18. 19. 20. Many that beleeued, came and confessed, and shewed their workes. Many also of them that vsed curious arts, brought their bookes, and burned them before all men, and they counted the price of them, and found it fiftie thousand peeces of siluer. So the word of God grewe mightily, and preuailed.

Now of the more particular, and extraordinary practise and profession of publike repentance: we haue in the old Test: Iudah. Gen. 38. 26. Aaron and Miriam. Numb. ch. 12. 10 &c. to the ende of the chapter. Achan, Iosh. ch. 7. ver. 20. King Dauid Psal. 51. Create in me a cleane heart ô God, and renew a right spirit within me, saith the deepe repenting soule of the King. Not that hee had lost all grace, but because faith was for the time greatly eclipsed and darkened; yea as touching the sweet comfort of it, ouerwhelmed with contrary sense and feeling of bitter sorrow for his sinne, &c. We haue also King Salomon, for an example of this kinde of more particular and extraordinary practise and profession of publike repentance, testified by his booke entituled Ecclesiastes: the which (as by good reason appeareth from the booke it selfe) was published in his last yeeres, after he was well beaten with experience of the vanitie of all things, beside the true feare of God, and obedience to his holy commandements, which he most highly aduanceth. King Manasses commeth likewise within the compasse of this sort of extraordinary conuerts, such as we reade of in the old Testament. For he was called to very earnest and notable repentance, by speciall tribulation and affliction which God cast vpon him. For, as the holy Storie reporteth, albeit he was a most wicked and vngodly man, yet in his tribulation, (that is, while he was the King of Assurs prisoner, and laie bound in fetters and chains) he praied to the Lord his God, and humbled himselfe greatly. And God was intreated of him. 2. Chro: 33. 11. 12. 13. 15. 16. 18. 19. And in the newe Testam: we haue (for examples in the same kinde) of the more extraordinary repentance of particular persones, the Thiefe repenting on the crosse. Luk: chap: 23. verses. 40. 41. 42. We haue also the Apostle Paul, Act: 26. 9. 10. 11, and 1. Cor: 15. 9. and 1. Tim. 1. 13. 14. 15. And that sinfull woman, Luk: 7. 37. 38. &c. Likewise Zacheus chapt: 19. 8. and the cruell Iaylor, Act: 16. 29. &c. with many other: all of them set downe in a like publike record, though the profession of the repentance of some of them, was in their owne practise, somewhat more priuate then of the rest. And thus farre of the examples of the extraordinarie practise and profession of publike repentance: both by many together, and also by particular persones apart by them selues, as well out of the olde Testament, as out of the newe.

OF the more ordinarie profession of publike repentance by many, wee haue often examples in the booke of Iudges, though few did repent in truth, as is euident by the often relapse of the most. The like is also testified, Ps: 68. 34. 45. &c. and Isai: ch: 58. 1. 2. &c. And Zech: 7. 5. 6. 7. We know also that ther was in Israel an ordinarie institution of God, touching the yeerelie fast of his people, Levit: 16. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. and ch: 23. verses 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. and ch: 29. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. And vnto this ordinarie profession and practise of publike repentance, tendeth the admonition of the holy Ghost in the new Test: to the Christian churches, Reu: ch: 2. v. 5. 16. 21. 22. & ch: 33. ve. 19.

Of publike Repentance by particular persones, in an ordinarie course, by the blessing of God vpon the preaching of his word, and execution of the holie censures of the discipline of the Church: wee haue in the new Test: the example of the penitent Corinthian, who was excommunicated for his incest: 1. epist: ch: 5. And vpon his repentance receiued againe into the communion of Saints, 2. Epi: ch: 2. 6. 7. 8. &c. For this we take to be an ordinarie censure of the Churche discipline, though at that time, by the direction of the Apostle, an extraordinary minister of the word: whose duty it was generally to watch ouer the right execution of discipline, aswell as ouer the preaching of true doctrine: 1. Tim: 1. 3. &c. through the whole Epistle. Herevnto tendeth the rebuke of the same Apostle, concerning such as hauing giuen publike offence, by their vncleannes, fornication and wantonnes, were not yet humbled to shewe forth the fruits of their repentance. 2. Cor: 12. 21. Herevnto allso doth the exhortation and rebuke tend, which the Apostle Peter, maketh to Simon the sorcerer, that he should repent, & shew forth meete tokens of repentance, touching his speciall sin of going about to buy the gifts of the holie Ghost with money: but with a better minde then hee had seemed, generallie to haue repented of all his sinnes before. Act. 8. 13. 23. And hereof we haue a liuely representation giuen vs by our Sauiour Christ, Luke: 18. 13. in the parable of the penitent Publican, who standing in the Temple farre off, would not so much as lifte vp his eyes to heauen, but smote his breast saying: O God be mercifull vnto me a sinner.

And in the old Testa: we haue like notable examples of priuate repentance. Of Dauid, in his chamber, in the night, and vpon his bedde; Yea many nights, night after night. as Psalm. 6. I cause my bed (saith hee) euery night to swimme, & water my couche with my teares. Read also Psal: 38. 1. 2. 3. 4. &c.

Likewise, we haue the notable example of king Hezekiah: who wept sore, & prayed to the Lord, confessing his sins: & yet withall, comforted his distressed soule, frō the testimonie of a good conscience, because he knew that he had walked in truth, & with a perfect heart in some good measure, before the Lord: Isa: 38. 2. 3. 4. And the Lord cast all his sins behind his back. ver. 17. Moreouer, concerning Iosiah, this we read, that his heart melted at the hearing of the law red, and hee humbled himselfe & wept, and rent his clothes. Wherefore God was mercifull to him, 2. Kings. chap: 22. 10. &c. The publike profession and fruit of which his humiliation humiliation and repentance, is recorded in the next Chapter of the same booke.

By the which examples of these so good and holy seruants of the Lord, who excelled in all grace and vertue; Wee are iustly to learne, that not onely men altogether wicked, and at their first conuersion onely, are earnestly to repent them of their sinnes: but also that it is the dutie euen of godly men alreadie conuerted, and turned to god, to renewe their repentance vpon speciall occasions of their often falls; which sometime fall out vppon humane infirmitie, yea sometimes of grosse negligence &c. In which respect, worthily doth Calvin, that blessed light in the interpretation of the word and Gospell of Christ, distinguish concerning the repētance both of the one sort, & also of the other: Harm: Euang: in cap. 15. verſ. 10. Lucæ. And Likewise, in his Institutions Lib. 3. Cap. 3. Sect. 18. The name of repentance (saith hee) is sometimes restrained, to the conuersion of those, that being altogether estranged from God, are raised as it were from death to life, that is from dead workes and their death in sinne, to serue the liuing God in the duties of true righteousnesse and holinesse before him: and vnto such, euen of his owne people, as haue after a sort fallen away from the Lord, and shaken off his yoake by giuing themselues to Idolatry for a time. Whereas otherwise, the meditation and practise of repentance must (as hee truly saith) be continuall, through the whole course of our life. Neither doth that speciall repentance of some, take away that which must bee ordinarie for all, seeing the daily sinnes of all, doe giue vnto euery one, iust occasion to profit daily therein. Nevertheles, as hee further addeth in that place of Luke: it is one thing, after that a man hath once entred a right course, to labour still to hold out in the same, though erre while hee trip or fall and goe astray: and an other thing, for a man that is altogether out of the way, to recouer himselfe, and to beginne a straight course, as it were from the barriers, or lists, and beginning of the race. For such a repentance, is not necessarie for them that haue already begunne to frame their liues according to the rule of Gods lawe, in leading a holy and godly life: howsoeuer it bee necessarie for them, to sigh vnder the infirmities of their fleshly nature, and to vse all good diligence for the correcting of them.

And this difference, (as hee well obserueth in his Institutions, the place also aboue alledged) is diligently to be marked of vs, lest securitie creepe vpon vs, as if repentance did onely belong to a fewe, who are outragious in sinne: and that the care of mortifying the flesh, did no longer appertaine vnto vs, in regard of those pleasing lusts, and other sins, which doe euer and anone spring out of vs.

So then, we may conclude, that after we haue repented of our grosser sinnes, which in the beginning of our calling haue beene discouered vnto vs: wee must according to the further light of knowledge (making our more secret sins and corruption manifest vnto vs) increase our repentance, that sinne may more and more decrease in vs. Neither must we repent vs, onely for minding and doeing such thinges as bee simply vnlawfull, but also for our abuse of lawful things; yea, for that we cannot vse them so wisely, purely, temperatly, & soberly, as we ought. I meane apparell, meate and drinke, sleepe, the mariage-bedde, &c. Yea, it is our dutie to repent vs continually, concerning our abusing of the best gifts and graces which God hath giuen vs, and concerning the best things which we doe: for that we cannot in the doing of them, so holily and religiously vse the name of God, either in his word, Praier, Sacraments, or Sabbaths, as wee ought to vse them, to his honour and glory; and for that wee cannot so dearely loue, nor so aboundantly imploy our selues, to profit our brethren, as wee ought in and for the Lords sake, both to loue, and also in loue to labour to profit them. Repentance therefore, is not a sigh and away, nor the worke of a day or two onely: but it is to bee extended to the whole number of all the daies of our liues; that sinne daily decaying, godlinesse may continually prosper, &c.

The Practise of Repētance.

These things thus hetherto obserued, wee cannot but perceiue, that whereas repentance (as touching the substance of it as one may say) standeth in the mortifying of sinne, and in rising vp to newnes of life: the which also, is otherwise called the breaking vp of our fallow grounds, that we sowe not among the thornes, but that we be circumcised to the Lord, &c. Ier. 4. 4. And the renting of our hearts and not of our garments. &c. Ioel. 2. 13. and the putting off of the old man, which is corrupt through deceiueable lusts, and the putting on of the new, &c. Eph. 4. 22 23. 24. We may hereby perceiue (I say) that repentance hath diuers appurtenances, or helping graces, to the through & happy effecting of it. I would haue you therefore, after this long breathing giuen you, to shew both more immediatly, and also more remouedly, what graces are necessarie both for the mortifying of sinne, and also for quickning to newnes of life. Yea and for the better declaration of this excellent doctrine, I desire that you shew, which they are, as each succeede other in either of the same respects.

Question.

FIrst therefore, which are the former sort of those graces, that belong to mortification, so farre (as for some orders sake) we may for the present, discerne of them?

Answere. They are these which follow.

First, a true knowledge, and earnest meditation of sinne: yea of that originall fountaine of sinne, which is in our wicked nature. How infinite also in number, and how haynous in offence our sinnes are, and alwaies haue beene in the sight of God. How grieuous to the children of God, who haue alreadie begun to repent, so farre as they haue broken forth to Gods dishonour. Ad how dangerous and deadly they are, euen against our owne soules.

Secondly, shame and confusion of face and conscience, both before God and the holy Angels: and also (if neede so require) before all good and godly men.

Thirdly, remorse and pricking of conscience, in the sence of the guiltines of our sinnes and in the feare of Gods iust wrath and vengeance due to them.

Fourthly, godly sorrow and mourning euen with salt teares of repentance, from the bitternes of a mans soule, in contrition as it were, and brokennes of heart before the Lord.

Fiftly, a willing suffering and induring of all rebukes and chastisements, which God sendeth at any time, to the taming and subduing of our vnruly and rebellious nature.

But aboue all, and in all, a most neare application of the death of our Sauiour Christ to our wounded soules and consciences; the which onely, is a most soueraine plaister, to mortifie and kill as it were the proud flesh of sinne, and also to heale and quiet euerie soule that is troubled and distressed, for the same.

These indeede doe most immediatly goe before, in the worke of Gods grace, to the mortification of sinne.

Concerning the first whereof, that is, the knowledge of sinne, &c. it commeth (as we haue alreadie learned) from the doctrine of the law, which God hath for the benefit of his children, made as it were a seruant to the Gospell: though to the obstinate, it is armed as a Iudge to their condemnation. And further, for the meditation of the greatnes of sinne, and the infinite number of them, euen from our youth, yea from our originall corruption of nature: consider the example of Dauid. Psal. 25. 7. and 38. 4. and 40. 12. and 51. 4. 5. and Psal. 19. 12. And of Iob. Cha. 9. 2. 3. and Chap. 13. 26. And of Ezra. Chap. 9. 6. And for the griefe, which we put the godlie vnto, by our sinne: consider it from the example of Lot. 2. Pet. 2. 8. of Dauid. Psal. 119. verses. 136. 158. of Ier: Chap. 9. 1. and Paul. 2. Cor. 12. 21. and Phil. 3. 18.

Secondly, for shame and confusion, read in the same Ch: of Ezra, and in the beginning of the same verse: where note, that when the seruants of God, are aſhamed and confounded, for the ſinnes wherein other haue chiefely treſpaſſed: how much more then, ought euery one to bee aſhamed of his owne? For the which reade further Ieremy 3.25. Wee lye downe inour confuſion, and our ſhame couereth vs, for wee haue ſinned againſt the Lord our God, wee and our Fathers, from our youth euen vnto this day, and haue not obeyed the voice of the Lord our God. Reade alſo, Ezek. Chap. 16. 68. Thou ſhalt remember thy waies, and bee aſhamed &c. And I will eſtabliſh my couenant with thee and thou ſhalt knowe that I am the Lord. That thou maieſt remember, and bee aſhamed, and neuer open thy mouth any more, becauſe of thy ſhame, when I am pacified toward thee, for all that thou haſt done, ſaith the Lord God. And Rom. 6.21. What fruite had yee then, in thoſe thinges whereof yee are now aſhamed? For the ende of thoſe things is death.

Marke heere the iuſt cauſe, why we ſhould be aſhamed of ſinne, namely, that we ſhould euer be ſo fooliſh, as to addict our mindes to follow ſo greedily, and to delight ſo exceſſiuely, as we haue done, in that, which without repentance, would be our vtter deſtruction. For want of this ſhame for ſinne: read a vehement rebuke, Ier. 3,3. Thou haddeſt a whores forehead, and wouldeſt not be aſhamed. And chap. 6. 15. Were they aſhamed, when they had committed abomination? Nay they were not aſhamed, no neither could they haue any ſhame: therefore ſhall they fall among the ſlaine, &c. The Prophet ſpeaketh of a godly ſhame: for otherwiſe, by the conuiction of their conſciences, that they doe ill in the committing of ſinne; the very wicked haue a certaine ſhame though it profiteth them not: as chap. 2.26. As the thiefe is aſhamed, when he is found, ſo is the houſe of Iſrael aſhamed, they, their Kings and their Princes, and their Prophets, Saying to a tree, thou art my father, and to a ſtone thou haſt begotten me, &c. There is none in the world, who if they haue not by cuſtome of ſinne, and hardneſſe of heart, as it were ſeared their conſciences with a hoat yron, as the Apoſtle writeth, but they haue a kinde of ſhame and bluſhing in their face, when their ſinne is found out: according to the prouerbiall ſaying, The good blood lyeth not. But the ſhame of thoſe that are in the way of repentance, is an other manner of ſhamefaſtneſſe: for they doe willingly ſhame themſelues, and that, euen as in the ſight of God, and from their very hearts, in a diſlike of their ſinne, &c.

Thirdly, for remorſe and pricking of conſcience; read Gen. 42.21.22. We haue verily ſinned againſt our brother, (ſay the brethren of Ioſeph) &c. Read alſo, 2. Sam. chap. 24.10, Dauids heart ſmote him, after hee had numbred the people and Dauid ſaid to the Lord, I haue ſinned exceedingly, in that I haue done: I beſeech thee now Lord I beſeech thee, take away the treſpaſſe of thy ſeruant: for I haue done very fooliſhly. And Acts. 2.37. Now when they heard it to wit, how grieuous a ſinne they had cõmitted in crucifying the ſonne of God: they were pricked in their hearts &c.

Fourthly, concerning godly ſorrowe and mourning, the holy Apoſtle Paul writeth, that godly ſorrow cauſeth repentance to ſaluation, neuer to be repented of, 2. Cor. 7. 10. The Apoſtle meaneth, that this is one helping cauſe, among the reſt, through the worke of Gods grace, though not the onely cauſe. It cauſeth repentance, becauſe it doth by the grace of God, prouoke it not onely to beginne, but alſo more and more to worke forth the owne worke. For when a man is truly ſorie for ſinne, hee indeuoureth to leaue it and to take a better courſe. In which reſpect, King Salomon, Eccleſ. 7.4. affirmeth that it is better to goe to the houſe of mourning, then to goe to the houſe of feaſting: becauſe this is the end of all men, and the liuing will lay it to his heart. Likewiſe, he ſaith that anger is better then laughter, (he ſpeaketh of that anger, which a man iuſtly conceiueth againſt himſelfe for ſinne) becauſe by a ſad looke the heart is made better. And againe in the ſame reſpect, verſe, 7. It is better, (ſaith he) to heare the rebuke of a wiſe man, then that a man ſhould heare the ſonge of fooles.

This sorrowe is very fitly to bee put before the death of sinne, and as a meanes tending to the mortification of it. For there is no sorrowe at all to bee taken for the death and dying of sinne: but ioy and comfort, yea, a triumph of spirit. We are onely to sorrowe that sinne hath liued, and borne the sway, so long in vs: and that we haue takē so great pleasure in it already, &c. This kind of godly sorrow, breedeth the death of sinne: for sinne cannot prosper where it is not delighted in. Sinne must be made a wanton, or else it will haue no ioy to stay. It will take no liking of colde and grimme entertainment. This godly sorrowe, whereby the soule mourneth for nothing so much, as because God our most kind Father is thereby displeased with vs; it is a gracious gift of the holy Ghost, according to that we reade, Zech. 12, 10, &c. In that day (that is, in the time of the Gospell, saith the Lord) I will power vpon the house of Dauid, and vppon the inhabitants of Ieruſalem, (that is, vpon all true Christians, both Iewes and Gentiles) *the spirit of grace and supplication, and they shall looke vppon mee whom they haue pierced, and they shall lament * for this as one mourneth for an onely sonne, and bee sorie * for it, as one shoulde mourne for his first borne.*

Teares are oftentimes ioyned with this mourning: as Iudges, 2. 4. 5. as we haue seene before. Ezra, chap, 10. 1. Luke. 7, 38. Psal. 56, 8. Ioel. 2. 17. Mat. 26, 75. and in many other places of holy Scripture, Not that godly sorrowe, cannot be in some measure, without teares: or not in great measure, but there must of necessitie bee aboundance of teares. For some are lesse apt to weepe then other, euen by constitution of nature: but not the lesse apt to sorrowe by that, but subiect rather to more deepe and pensiue sorrow, euen because they cannot so easily feele their hearts to melt. For the easiest melting of the heart, and the breaking forth of teares, is a dissoluing and loosening of sorrow: the which, without teares, is both to body and soule, of a constringent and binding nature.

The heart being contrite and broken with this godly sorrowe (insomuch as hereby, as it were with a hammer, all vaine confidence is battered downe, and the soule made fit to bee suppliant to God for his tender mercy and grace) it is more accounted of, before God, then all outward and legall sacrifices were euer vnto him. For as we reade, Psal. 51, 17. The sacrifices of God, are a contrite spirit: a contrite and broken heart, ô God, thou wilt not despise. And as we read, Ps. 34, 18. The Lord is neare vnto them that are of a contrite hart, and he will saue such as be afflicted in spirit. Reade also, Isay. Chap. 57. 15. Thus saith hee that is high and excellent, hee that inhabiteth the eternitie, whose name is the holy one. I dwell in the high and holy place: with him also, that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to reuiue the spirit of the humble, and to giue light to them that are of a contrite heart. For I will not contend for euer, neither will I bee alwaies wroth: for the spirit should faile before mee, and the soules which I haue made. And againe, Chap. 66. 2. To him will I looke, euen to him that is poore, and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my wordes. Come vnto me, all yee that are wearie and laden, and I will ease you saith our Sauiour Christ. Mat. 11. 28. The same in sence though in other wordes. Where note with singular thankfulnes to God our Sauiour, this his sweet promise, whereby he releeueth the poore oppressed soule, assuring all such, that hee will ease them. And Isay, 61. 1. and Luke, 4. 18. he will binde vp and heale the broken hearted. And the rather consider of it with exceeding thankfulnesse to God, because all that will not mourne and breake their hearts in a blessed practise of repentance now, shall one day howle when it will be too late, and wishe that the high mountaines might fall vppon them, to crush them to peeces, that they might not appeare before the iudgemēt seate of the Son of God, whom now they despise. Neither is the holy prouerbe vnfit to be considered of vs, to the same purpose, chap. 29. 1. in that it is said: He that hardeneth his necke, hauing beene often rebuked, shall suddenly be destroied, so that he cannot be cured.

And

The practise of Repentance.

And for the same cause also, let vs willingly practise that which was answered, in the fift place, concerning the induring of all Gods fatherly chastisemẽts to the breaking of our stout and sturdy hearts, and to the weakening of that sin which is so strongly setled in our nature. That is, let vs harken to the admonitorie precept of the Apostle Iames, chap. 4. 9. 10. Cleanse your hands ye sinners, and purge your hearts ye wauering minded. Suffer ye affliction, and sorrowe, and weepe. Let your laughter be turned into mourning, and your ioy into heauinesse. Cast downe your selues before the Lord, and he will lift yee vp. For this is one blessed vse and benefit of afflictions, that they doe humble and meeken the heart, as we may remember from the example of Manasses. And as we read, Iob, 33, 17, 18, &c. That God may cause man to turne away from his enterprise, and that hee might hide the pride of man, &c. For to this end, (as it followeth) hee is stricken with sorrowe vpon his bed, and the griefe of his bones is sore &c. And Leuit. 26, 41. Their vncircumcised hearts shall be humbled, and then they shall willingly beare the punishment of their iniquitie. Let vs therefore, in all times of our afflictions, lay our hand vpon our mouth, and beare them patiently, according to that of the 39. Psal. verse 9. I should haue beene dumbe, and not haue opened my mouth, because thou didest it. Let vs say as wee read. Psal. 119 15. I knowe Lord that thy iudgements are right, and that thou hast afflicted me iustly. Read also. 1. Sam. 3, 18, and 2. Sam. 15, 26, &c. chap. 16, 10, 11, 12. And Eccles. 7. 16. Yea, we ought to intreat the Lord to correct vs, that wee might not continue in our sinnes: as the holy Prophet praieth: Correct vs ô Lord, but yet in mercy. Yea, and to desire that the righteous may smite vs with their wholesome rebukes: the propertie whereof, is to supple and heale like precious oyle, and not violently to crush and breake. Psal. 141. 5.

But aboue all (as it is answered in the last branch) the application of the death of our Sauiour Christ to our soule, is the most soueraigne plaster that can be, to mortifie and kill the proud flesh of sinne. For as well saith a godly learned man. Like as a strong corasiue laide to a sore, eates out all the rotten and deade flesh: euen so the death of Christ being applied to the heart of a penitent sinner by faith, weakens and consumes the sinne that cleaueth so fast vnto our nature, and dwells within vs. Maister Perkins exposition of the Creed, in the Article of the death of Christ. And who, duly considering, that his sinnes were the cause that Christ was crucified, and that his most precious blood was shed: but he must needs if he haue any sparckle of grace, wrought in him by the spirit of Christ which giueth this blessed effect to his death, mourne for his sinnes, and growe out of loue with them. &c? According to that alledged before, out of the 12. chap. of the Prophet Zachariah. This also is the proper, and as one would say, the very specificall vertue of the death of Christ, as to stay the anger of God which is bent against sinne, so to stay the course and rage of sinne, that it doe no longer prouoke and anger God. Reade, Rom, 6. 2. 3. &c. and Gal. 6. 14 and 1. Pet. 4. 1.

Hetherto therefore of the former sort of the helping causes of the first part of repentance, belonging to the mortification of sinne. Onely, let vs here adde this one caution by the way, that albeit these helpes are placed in the beginning of repentance: yet we are not to vnderstand it so, as if there should be no vse of them afterward: but rather, that they are continuall helpers, to further repentance from the beginning to the end of the same.

Question. NOw, which are the latter sort of the helping graces to the same former part of repentance?

Answere. First, the confession of sinne, ioyned with the care of leauing and forsaking the same.

Secondly, indignation and hatred against sinne; yea euen against our selues because of our sinnes: and as a further fruite thereof, a holy fight and reuenge by fasting and prayer against them, and for the forgiuenesse of them, with all meete signes and fruites of detestation: such as are crying out against them, and against our selues miserable sinners and beastes that wee are, with striking of the handes vppon the thigh, or breast, or some other like conuenient and seemely way; as the holy spirit of GOD will bee ready to teach euery one, that truly lamenteth and bewaileth his sinne.

Thirdly, admonition to others, that they take warning by our experience and example.

Fourthly, watchfulnes, lest sinne should at any time recouer that strength, which it hath already lost.

Finally, a diligent auoiding of all wicked meanes, or vaine perswasions and fancies, whereby either this part of repentance touching mortification and weakening of sinne or the other of rising vnto newnes of life, should be hindred.

Explicatiō and proofe. Touching the first branch of this answere, which is, of confessing and forsaking of sinne: we must vnderstand concerning confession, that although it is to be made not onely to God, but also before men, and of one man mutually to another: yet it is not to be done in like manner, nor of the same necessitie to men, as it is to be made vnto God. For vnto God it is simply necessarie, and alwaies necessarie, euen of all men: insomuch as all men, doe cōtinually sinne against God, and in his sight and knowledge, though not alwaies in like measure and greatnes of transgression. And it doth properly belong vnto God onely, to say, I haue pardoned, I will not destroy: Iob. 34. 31. And Psal. 103. 3. It is the Lord that forgiueth all iniquitie, and who healeth all infirmities: that is, who both putteth away the guiltines, and also taketh away the strength, and remoueth the punishment of sin. We are therfore to confesse our sins vnto God continually, with as great sorrow and humiliation as may be, and yet with assured hope of pardon: seeing mercy is with him, that he may be feared, Psal. 130. 4. And Micah, ch. 7. Who is a God like vnto thee (saith the holy Prophet) that taketh away iniquitie, and passeth by the transgression of the remnant of his heritage. He retaineth not his wrath for euer, because mercy pleaseth him. He will turne againe, and haue compassion vpon vs: he will subdue our iniquities, and cast all our sinnes into the bottome of the sea. Thou wilt performe thy truth to Iacob, and mercy to Abraham, as thou hast sworne vnto our fathers in olde time. Thus therefore, confession of sinne to God, especially when it is ioined with forsaking and renouncing of sinne (after the example of the seruants of God, and according to the instructions of the word of God) it hath great comfort in it.

Examples of this confession of sinnes vnto God, withall godly sorrowe and humiliation, both publike and priuate, haue bene rehearsed before: such as were Ezra, Daniel, Nehemiah, Dauid, Hezekiah, Paul, &c. Read also, Luk 15. 18. 19, 20, 21. The prodigall sonne is described, in his repentance, both to purpose and also to performe the confession of his sinne. I will goe to my father (saith hee) and say to him: Father, I haue sinned against heauen, and before thee. I am vtterly vnworthy to be called thy sonne, &c. And chap. 23. The thiefe on the Crosse, in his repentance, acknowledgeth himselfe to haue done things worthy of death: according to the generall instruction of the Prophet Hosh. chap. 14, 1, 2. in case of humiliation, saying: O Israel, returne vnto the Lord thy God: for thou hast fallen by thy iniquitie. Take vnto you wordes, and turne vnto the Lord, and say vnto him: Take away all iniquitie, and receiue vs graciously: so will wee render the calues of our lippes. That is, thankesgiuing and praise, as the Apostle to the Heb: doth interpret the same, chap. 13, 15.

The blessing and fruit of this holy and humble confession of sinne, ioyned with care of forsaking it, is testified in many places; and namely in the chap. of Hosh: euen now alledged, as it followeth in the 4. verse: I will heale their rebellion (saith the Lord) I will loue them freely, for mine anger is turned away from him. I will bee as the dewe to Israel: hee shall growe as the lilly &c. It is euident from the example and practise of Dauid. Psalme. 32. 5. 6.

For

The Practise of Repentãce.

For wheras he could find no rest, so long as he bitte in his sin: Then (saith he) I acknowledged my sinne, neither did I hide my iniquitie: I thought, I will confesse against my selfe my wickednesse vnto the Lord, and thou forgauest the punishment of my sinne. Selah. Therfore shall euery one that is godly, make his prayer to thee, in a time when thou maiest be found. Surely in the floode of great waters, they shall not come neare him. Read also, Ionah: chapt: 3. 10. The holie Prouerb also, is singular to this purpose, chap: 28. 13. Hee that hideth his sinnes shall not prosper: but he that confesseth & forsaketh them shall haue mercie. And let vs well obserue, that forsaking of sin, doth alwaies go with true confession, that we may find mercie with God. For otherwise, confession shall but make way to further condemnation, seing it is in truth, no better then a reioicing, or iustifiyng of men themselues in their sinnes, when they acknowledge themselues sinners, and yet doe neuertheless continue and abide still in them. Reade also the curse of hiding and cleauing to sinne: Isai: chapt: 30. 1.

But as touching true confession and forsaking of sinne, let vs here obserue further, that as it is beneficiall to our selues, so it is singularlie to the glorie of God: according to that we read. Ioshua: 7. 10. Wher Ioshua exhorting Achan to confesse his sinne, hee biddeth him. Giue glorie to God. And the prophet Ierem: chapt: 13. 16. Exhorting all Estates to Repentance, hee vseth the same wordes: Giue glorie to the Lord your God, before he bring darknes &c. And so it hath been vsuallie acknowledged in the Church: yea euen of the wicked themselues, though ill practised and applied of them: as we read Ioh: chapt: 9. 24. Giue glory vnto God (say the Pharisies to the blind man, whom our Sauiour had made to see) wee knowe that this man is a sinner. As if they should haue said, confesse thy selfe to be a counterfet, or else to be healed by some other way then by Christ.

Hitherto of confesion to God.

There is also, (as was said) a confession or acknowledgement of sinne from man to man. But this confession or acknowledgement, is not properlie, for the remouing of the guiltinesse of the sinne (which God onely forgiueth) but either for reliefe of conscience by mutuall counsell and comfort against despaire, when the soule is oppressed and confounded with feare and sorrow, &c. according to that saying of the Apostle Iames: Acknowledge your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that yee may be healed: for the prayer of a righteous man auaileth much if it be feruent. Or labourſome. We may read it thus, The earnest prayer of a righteous man auaileth much. chap: 5. 16.

Or els, this confession of man to man, is for some charitable satisfaction and reconciliation of the one to the other, concerning such offenses and vnkindnesses, as doe manie times grow, vpon sondrie occasions, betwixt them. And this is with greater or lesse sorrow and humbling of the partie offending, according to the commandement of our Sauiour Christ: Matth: 5. 23. 24. If thou bring thy gift to the Altar, and there remembrest that thy brother hath ought against thee, leaue there thine offering before the Altar, and goe thy way: first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift: &c.

And in such cases, euerie Christian ought to remit and lay away the offence conceiued, with great facilitie, as they that are easie to be intreated: according to the further instruction of our Sauiour Christ, chapt: 18. verse. 21. &c. And Luk: 17. 3. 4. Take heede to your selues, if thy brother trespasse against thee, rebuke him. And though hee sinne against thee seuen times in a day, and seuen times a daye turne to thee, saying, It repenteth mee: thou shalt forgiue him.

But what if hee will not forgiue him so dooing?

The partie seeking reconciliation, may haue neuertheles, peace in his conscience before God: who accepteth of the submission, though the froward and vncharitable partie will not regarde it.

Let this suffice for the opening of the first branche of the answere.

Secondlie, concerning indignation and hatred againſt ſinne, yea againſt our ſelues for ſinne; read Pſal: 97. 10. Yee that loue the Lord, hate euill. Amos ch: 5. 15. Hate euill and loue God. And Rom: 12. 9. Abhorre yee that which is euill, and cleaue to that which is good. And in the Epiſtle of Iude. verſ. 13. Hate ye euen the garment ſpotted by the fleſh. This was the commendation of the Churche of Epheſus, that it could not forbeare them that were euill. And that they hated the workes of the Nicolaitans, which the Lord himſelfe hated. Reuel. 2. 2. 6. And contrariwiſe, a wicked man is deſcribed by this propertie, that hee doth not abhorre euill. Pſa: 36. 4. Wee abhorre and ſhunne many noyſome diſeaſes with much loathſomnes: as the pockes, the foule leproſie, the plague, &c. But wee ought to loathe and ſhunne ſinne, the cauſe of all loathſome and noiſome diſeaſes, much more.

Nowe for examples ſake, concerning ſuch as haue had indignation againſt themſelues for ſinne: conſider of Iob, chapt: 42. 6. I abhorre my ſelfe, and repent in duſt and aſhes. Namely, becauſe hee had ſometime vnaduiſedlie muttered againſt the correction of God vpon him. And of Dauid: Pſ: 73. 21. 22. Certainly my heart was vexed, and I was pricked in my reines. So fooliſh was I, and ignorant: I was a beaſt before thee. And of Agur: Prou: 30. 2. Sureſie, I am more fooliſh (or as the word ſignifieth) brutiſh, then any man ought to bee. I haue not the vnderſtanding of man in mee. The holie Prophet complaineth of his naturall ignorance, and of the euill fruits therof. Conſider alſo the example of the Apoſtle Paul: Rom: 7. O wretched man that I am. And of Ezra. 9. verſe 10. and of Daniel: ch: 9. 7. 8. And note alſo, that as wee muſt principally hate ſinne in our ſelues, and as it were, throw the firſt ſtone againſt our ſelues for it: ſo muſt wee, with like hatred, deteſt it in others, without reſpect of perſons: after the holie example of Iaakob, concerning the ſinne euen of his owne ſonnes. The which hee did not onely at the firſt, but to his dying day. Of Reuben his eldeſt ſonne he ſaith: Thou haſt loſt thy dignitie. &c. And of Simeon and Leui hee ſaith, they were brethren indeede, (as though he ſhould ſay, according to the common Prouerb, Neither barrell better herring.) Into their ſecret, let not my ſoule come: my glorie, be not thou ioyned with their aſſembly, &c. Curſed be their wrath, for it was fierce, and their rage, for it was cruell, &c. Gen: 49. 4. 5. 6. 7. In which anger of Iaakob, is repreſented, the verie indignation of God himſelfe againſt ſinne. Read alſo, Pſ: 26. 5. & 31. 6. &. 101. 3. and 139 21. 22. and 119. verſ. 128. & 163. And for the ſignes of deteſtation, read: Ier: 31. 19. I heard Ephraim lamenting thus, Thou haſt corrected me, and I was chaſtiſed as an vntamed calfe, &c. Surely after that I conuerted, I repented, and after that I was inſtructed, I ſmote vpon my thigh: I was aſhamed, yea euen confounded, &c. And Luk: 18. 13. The penitent ſinner is by our Sauiour Chriſt deſcribed to haue ſmote his breaſt, ſaying: God be mercifull to mee a ſinner. It is as much as if one ſhould ſay, O that my legge ſhould euer haue carried mee, to ſuch an enterpriſe. O that my hand ſhould euer haue bene employed about ſuch an euill ſeruice. O that my wicked heart eſpeciallie, ſhould euer haue yeelded conſent therevnto: &c. Read alſo, Nehemiah. chap: 5. 13. Hee ſhooke the lappe of his garment, with a holy imprecation againſt them that ſhould oppreſſe their brethren: ſhewing therby, how greatly the ſinne ſhould be deteſted. It is like to the ſpeach of our Sauiour Chriſt, that his Diſciples ſhould ſhake off the duſt of their feete, againſt the deſpiſers of the Goſpell. Note alſo the ſpeach of the Lord by his Prophet Iſai: chap: 30. 22. Yee ſhall pollute the couering of the images of ſiluer, and the rich ornament of thine images of gold, and caſt them away as a menſtruous cloth: and thou ſhalt ſay vnto it, Get thee hence. And chap: 31. 7. In that daye euery man ſhall caſt out his idoles of ſiluer, & his idoles of gold, which your hands haue made you, euen a ſin.

And by Ezekiel: chapt: 18. 31. Caſt away from you, all your tranſgreſſions, wherby ye haue tranſgreſſed: (not onely idolatrie, as before in Iſaiah) but alſo euery other ſinne. Conſider likewiſe, that which the Prophet Daniell ſpeaketh to Nabuchadnezzer, in the name of the Lord: Breake of thy ſinnes by righteouſneſſe,

Abrumpe,

Abrumpe. &c. Ther must of necessitie, be rough dealing, and an holy violence vsed against sinne. It will not yeelde, vnlesse it be vanquished. If it be not killed, it will kill, &c.

They therfore that striue most manfully and couragiously against sinne, yea euen to the death of it, they are to be accounted of all others the most valiant men: Prouer: 16. 32. Hee that is slowe to anger, is better then the mightie man, and hee that ruleth his owne minde, is better then hee that winneth a Cittie. And Hebre: 12. 4. Yee haue not yet resisted vnto blood, striuing against sinne. The weapons whereby sinne is to be incountred, must be spirituall, according to the nature of the aduersarie. Namely by holie prayers, and sometimes with fasting, as the importunitie of the enemie shall require. Our resistance or reuenge must not be by whipping of our selues, or by any other like Popish penance: but onelie as God requireth in his word.

All other practises and blinde deuotions, are of no reckoning with God. Colosſ: chapt: 2. 20. As touching those that make semblance of misliking sinne generallie: but when their owne particular sinnes come in question, they deale as fauourablie with them as may bee, they are too great triflers, and euen cowardes in this Spirituall warfare. They may well be compared to those that make as if they would throwe their children to the puttocks, (as they say) but they imbrace and holde them fast in their armes still. Sinne must not be so dallied withall, if we meane in good earnest to repent: wee must deale with it, as with a most impudent and shameles guest, that must be thrust out of dores by the head and shoulders (as they say) before he will departe.

Thirdlie, touching admonition to others, that they may learne from our example, and experience, to take warning: read the excellent practise of Dauid, Psalm. 32. and againe, Psalm. 51, 13. Restore mee to the ioye of thy saluation, and stablish mee with thy free Spirit, Then shall I teach thy wayes vnto the wicked, and sinners shall be conuerted vnto thee. And Psal: 124: consider both the title, & the Psal: And Ezekiel: 18, 30. Returne, and cause others to turne away from all your transgressions; so iniquitie shall not be your destruction. It is agreeable to the precept of our Sauiour Christ, Luk: 22. 32. When thou art conuerted (saith our Sauiour to Peter) strengthen thy brethren.

Fourthlie, concerning watchfulnes, that sinne renewe not the strength: read 1. Cor: 9. 27. I beat down my bodie, and bring it into subiection, lest by any meanes, after that I haue preached to others, I my selfe should be reproued. Sinne recouering strength, is more hard to be subdued afterward: Matth: 12. 43. &c.

Muta animalia cum fraude capiantur, si aliquo se modo, in fugam excitauerint, fiunt postmodùm cautiora: vitantq; semper ea omnia, in quibus dolos insidiasq; senserũt. Sic hominem (inquit Lactantius) pœnitentia cautum ac diligentem facit, ad euitanda peccata, in qua semel fraude decciderit. The dumbe creatures growe more warie, after they haue escaped their danger, much more ought man, a reasonable creature, growe daily more warie against the danger of sinne.

Fifthlie, how the feare of God helpeth forward this parte of repentance, yea how it preuenteth sinne: Read: Genes: 39. 9. How can I doe this great wickednesse, (saith Ioseph to his incontinent Mistris) and sinne against God? And againe, chap: 42. 8. and chap: 50, 19. Hee perswadeth his brethren, that he minded no reuenge against them, because hee had the feare of God before his eyes. Reade also, Prouer: 16. 6. By the feare of the Lord, men depart from euill. And chap: 14. 27. The feare of the Lord is a Well-spring of life, to auoyd the snares of death. and chapt: 23. 17. and Iob, chapt: 28. vers. 28. and Prou: 3. 7. Read also, 2. Cor: 7. 11. Wher the Apostle rehearseth this holie feare, among diuers other of the helping graces to repentance. Godlie sorrow (saith hee) causeth repentance to saluation, not to bee repented of. &c. For beholde, this thing, that ye haue beene godlilie sorie, what great care it hath wrought in you: Yea what clearing of your selues: Yea what indignation: Yea what feare, &c.

Read also Psal. 2. 11. Serue the Lord in feare, reioyce in trembling: And Ps: 4. 4. Trembte and sinne not: examine your owne heart vpon your bed, and be still: (that is) take heed, that ye doe not adde sinne to sinne in an obstinate rebellion against God, Selah. And Psalm. 99. 1.

Finallie, as for the meanes that hinder this parte of Repentance, aswell as that other part now following, we will consider of them together afterward.

In the meane season, let vs proceede to those helping graces, which doe formerly serue to stir vp to newnes of life, which is the second part of Repẽtãce.

Question. Which are they?

Answere. First and principallie; an earnest meditation and application of the Resurrection of our Saviour CHRIST, to our dull and dead soules, that by the vertue therof, they may be quickened, suppled, and made lithe, as it were with a most holie and pretious oyle, to rise vp to newnesse of life.

Secondly, a like earnest meditation, of all other the mercies of God, concerning the comforte of this life; whose bountifulnesse, and euery parte, fruite, or benefite thereof, ought to leade vs to Repentance: yea to carrie vs on forwarde, to this our second parte of Repentance.

Thirdly, a faithfull and beleeuing meditation, of all the sweet and faithfull promises of God, touching the blessednes of the life to come.

Finallie, the feare of God, is not onely as a bridle to with-holde from sinne (as was answered before) but it is also a sharp spurre to quicken vs to newnes of life.

Explication and proofe. It is very true: and therfore, when the Prophet Samuel exhorteth the people of God to serue the Lord, hee maketh the feare of God, the ground or cause of it. Therefore (saith hee) feare yee the Lord, and serue him in truth, with all your hearts: and consider how great things he hath done for you. 1. Sam. 12. 24. Yea the feare of God is not onely a helping grace to this parte of repentance, but it is a principall grace of repentance it selfe, according as it is written: Pro: 1. 7. and Ps: 111. 10. The feare of the Lord is the beginning (yea, as the word may well signifie a chiefe point) of wisdome. And Ps: 2. Wee must serue the Lord in feare, as we saw before. That godlines hath the promise of the life, both present, and to come: the Apo: Paul assureth vs 1. Tim. 4. 8. And that the meditation of these promises, help forward repentance, it may be perceiued by that wee read. Psal. 119. 11. I haue hid thy promise in my heart, that I might not sin against thee. And in the next vers. O blessed Lord teach me thy Statutes. Read also, 2. Cor: 7. 1. Seeing then wee haue these promises, dearely beloued, let vs cleanse our selues from all filthines of the flesh, and of the Spirit, and grow vp vnto full holines in the feare of God.

Yea generallie, that all mercies of God, aswell past and present, as to come, ought to moove vs to repentance: call to minde that place: 1. Sam. 12. 24. alledged euen now. For to this ende the Prophet of God, exhorteth the Israelites to consider the great things which the Lord had done for them: nothing doubting, but it must needes prouoke all that feared God among them, to settle their hearts to serue him. Read also in the same 1. book of Samuel, ch: 15. 17. and 2. Sam. 12. 7. 8. & Isa: 5. 1. &c. and Mica: 6. 3. 4. 5. & Ro: 2. 4. & ch: 12. 1. &c. where, and in many other places, the Lord calleth, & reasoneth earnestly for obedience, from the consideration of his mercies, & benefites bestowed vpon his people. Beholde (saith our Sa: Chr) to the impotent man, whom he had healed: thou art made whole, sinne no more, lest a worse thing come vnto thee. Iohn: 5. 14. Verilie, euery bit of bread which we eat, euery garment which we put on, euery creature that wee beholde: euery flower that we smell to, &c: they ought all and euery of them to be esteemed of vs, as continuall admonitors to moue vs to hearty repentance. Finallie, as touching the first branche of the Answer, concerning the power of our Sau: Chr: his resurrection, read Rmo: 6. 4. &c. and Ephes: 1. 19. &c. and chapt: 2. 1. Read also, 1. Pet. 3. 21.

These graces therfore, are those which we may reckon for the former sorte of helps, to stirre vp to newnesse of life.

Now

The Practise of Repētance.

Finally, as touching the first branch of the answere, concerning the power of our Sa: Ch, his resurrection, reade Ro: 6.4.&c. and Ephe: 1.19.&c. and Chap. 2.1. Reade also 1. Peter. 3.21.

These graces therefore, are those which wee may reckon for the former helps, to stirre vp to newnes of life.

Question. NOw which are those that may furthermore helpe forward the same?

Answere. First, an earnest meditation of our former vnprofitablenes, yea of our offensiue and harmefull life, among the people of God, euen to the dishonour of the most holy name of God himselfe.

Secondly, a like earnest desire to take a better course, for all time to come.

Thirdly, ioy and delight in well doing.

Fourthly, earnest prayer to God, for daily increase of his grace and power in vs, to the same end.

Finally, carefull meditating of all good reasons, and a diligent vsing of euery good and holy meanes, which God of his infinite mercy and goodnes, hath ordained to further vs, in the practise of either part of repentance: both to the honour of God, and also to the common benefit of his people.

Explicatiō & proofe. Touching our former vnprofitablenes, yea harmfulnes, by our euill example, and by our incouraging of others to doe euill; and that wee ought, euen from thence, to prouoke our selues to be the more carefull hencefor-ward, to walke in good duty: and for the same cause also, to watch for, and to lay hold on all good occasions to doe euery good worke wee may attaine vnto: to the end we may, by the daily increase of the amendment of our liues, more glorifie God, and also make amends among his people, whom wee haue any way damnified, or seduced, either in soule, or outward estate: read Ezek: 44. 6, Thus saith the Lord God, O house of Israel, ye haue enough of all your abominations. Likewise Ro: 13. 11. And that considering the season, that it is now time, that we should arise from sleepe: for now is our saluation nearer, then when we beleeued, to wit, when wee first beleeued. And 1. Pet: 4. 3. It is sufficient for vs, that wee haue spent the time past of the life, after the lust of the Gentiles, walking in wantonnes, &c. For seeing we owe the obedience of our whole life vnto God principally, and then for the Lords sake, vnto his people: the reason is plaine; that by how much, wee haue misspent a greater part of our liues heretofore, we ought to spend the rest of it more dutifully for the time to come. And therefore I cease to add any more at this time, concerning the first branch, saue onely, that which the Prophet of God saith: I considered my waies, and turned my feete into thy testimonies. Psal. 119. 59.

Secondly, concerning earnest desire and zeale to doe well: read 2. Cor. 7. 11. Where the Apostle commendeth the Corinthians for this grace, that there was a great desire and zeale in them. And hereunto he exhorteth all Christians. Tit. 2. 14. that they would be zealous of good works. And Cha: 3. 8. carefull to shew forth good works. And Reuel. 3. 19. Be zealous (saith the Lord) and amend.

Thirdly, for ioy and delight in well doing: read Gal. 5. 22. Ioy is a fruit of the Spirit. And 1. Cor: 13. 6. Loue reioiceth not in iniquitie, but it reioiceth in the truth. Read also Prou: 21. 15. It is ioy to the iust to doe iudgment. And Psal. 119. 14. I haue had as great delight in the way of thy Testimonies, as in all riches. And verse 16. I will delight in thy statutes, and will not forget thy word. And verse, 97. And Rom: 7. 22. I delight in the law of God, concerning the inner man. And againe. Psal: 119. 32. I will runne the way of thy commandements, when thou shalt inlarge mine heart. Verily, we ought to take more delight in godlines, then euer wee tooke in sinne.

The Practise of Repentace.

Fourthlie, for Prayer to this ende, Reade Pſalm: 19. 14. Let the wordes of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy ſight, O Lorde my ſtrength and my Redeemer. Read alſo, Pſalm: 139. 24. Conſider O God, if ther bee any way of wickednesſe in mee, and leade mee in the way for euer.

As touching other meanes and reaſons, to further repentance, wee will inquire of them by and by.

But before this, I would haue you ſhewe, why wee muſt be ſo pricked in our conſciences, and ſo ſorrowfull for ſinnes, and ſo aſhamed of them, &c. as hath bene declared.

Queſtion. WHy muſt theſe things be ſo?

Anſwere. Wee muſt a feele the moſt deadly wound which ſinne hath made in our ſoules: that from thence wee may bee moſt earneſtlie prouoked to ſeeke after the curing and healing of it.

a Matth. 9. 12. 13.

Wee muſt b be ſorrowfull for our ſinnes, becauſe wee haue grieued the Lord, and his holie Spirit, with them: remembring alſo c how deepely our moſt louing Sauiour was wounded for them: and becauſe otherwiſe wee cannot haue any comfortable perſwaſion and hope of the forginenes of them.

b Iſai. ch: 1. 11. &c. & c: 43. 22. 24. & 63. 10. Epheſ: 4. 30.

c Iſai. 53. & Matth. 26. 36. &c.

Wee muſt bee d aſhamed and wounded for our ſinnes, becauſe they haue brought deſerued ſhame and confuſion vpon vs. Yea becauſe euen in their owne nature, they are verie confuſed and ſhamefull.

d Pſ. 40. 15. Ezek. 16. 61. 63 Rom: 6. 21.

Wee muſt confeſſe and bewraye them, ſpecialie to God: becauſe otherwiſe in the guiltines of our conſciences, wee ſhould remaine ſtill e as acceſſarie to them.

e They that conceale the treaſon and rebellion of other, are acceſſary in humane iuſtice: much more before God if we conceale and hide our owne wickednes from him.

Wee muſt accuſe and f condemne our ſelues for them, that the Lord may cleare and acquite vs.

f 1. Cor: 11. 31. 32.

Wee muſt g pray to God againſt them, becauſe without his grace, they are to ſtrong for vs to encounter withall.

g 2. Cor. 12. 7. 8. 9.

Wee muſt hate, abhorre, and by all meanes reſiſt them, becauſe h they are our Spirituall enemies, and doe for their parts alwaies moſt malicioulie fight againſt our ſoules, as it were vnder the banner and deſignement of the Deuill.

h 1. Pet. 2. 11. Heb 12. 1. 4. 1 Ephe: 4. 22. Iames, 1. 14.

And for the ſame cauſe alſo, muſt we moſt vigilantly i watch againſt them, leſt we ſhould at any time be vndermined and ſurprized of them.

i Ephe: 4. 24. 1. Pet. 2. 9.

Finallie, wee muſt practiſe all righteouſneſſe, with earneſt deſire, holie ioye, readie diligence and conſtancie: becauſe herein chiefle, k doth the image of God our heauenly Father ſhine forth in vs, who hath called vs out of darkneſſe, into his maruelous light, that wee ſhould ſhewe forth his vertues: as the Apoſtle Peter teacheth vs.

So wee reade in the 1. Epiſt: of Pet: chapt: 2. 9. &c.

But of the ſeuerall branches of this anſwer (they being plaine in themſelues, & already proued in effect) I will not ſtand to ſpeake any thing further of them. Onely let vs obſerue, that the ſorrow of true repentance muſt be godly ſorrow: and not the ſorow of Iudas, which was worldlie, and not in faith, but in deſpair, &c. The teares of repentance, muſt not be Eſaues teares. The humiliation and faſting, not ſuch as Ahabs was: nor ſuch as is reproued, Iſai: 58. and alſo Zech: chapt: 7. 5. 6. The praier muſt not be the ſlight praier of Balaam, that we may die the death of the righteous onlie, but that we may liue their life alſo.

NOwe wee are come to inquire of thoſe lettes which hinder either parte of repentance ioyntlie, whether practiſes or perſwaſions: and on the contrarie, of other generall furtherances of the ſame.

Queſtion. Firſt therfore, which are thoſe practiſes, or perſwaſions, and fancies, which hinder Repentance whollie: and therefore are moſt carefullie to bee auoyded of vs?

Anſwere. Firſt, increadulitie, or vnbeliefe, as if neither promiſe nor threatning of God, were of any certaintie, and therfore that it is in vaine to ſerue God: or on the contrarie, preſuming vpon Gods mercie, without all feare of his iuſtice.

Secondly,

The practise of Repentāce.

Secondly, the inticing pleasure of sinne, which, for the present, is alwaies most delightfull to our wicked nature.

Thirdly, hope of long life: and therewithall, an opinion that it shall suffice, if at the last we crie God mercy, as they vse to speake, and so repent for all at once: or else, that our good deedes at the last, and the deuotion and prayers of other, may be set against our ill deedes, and so be auaileable for vs.

Fourthly, the fellowship and familiarity of some choise wicked companions, in the which, one doth mightily animate and imbolden the other, to hold on in their wicked course, contrarie to all godly motions, and perswasions.

Yea fiftly, the common example of the licentious multitude, is to enery one an vsuall let and hinderance of repentance.

Sixtly, the more generall prosperity of the wicked here in this present euill world, aboue the godly.

Seuenthly, some particular examples, of such, as hauing liued notoriously ill, for a long time: haue neuertheless at the last, seemed to die as well as the best of them all, as they say.

Eightly, long custome in sinning, worketh hardnes of heart, and obstinate wilfulnes in committing of sinne.

Ninthly, flattering Preachers, such as sing placentia (as they are termed) that is, such things onely, and in such manner onely, as may be best pleasing to the carnall eare of their hearers.

Tenthly, an opinion that there is too great austeritie, and vncomfortablenes, yea euen meere folly in a godly life: specially in times of cruell persecution and losse of all worldly things, for godlines sake.

Eleuenthly, a great let, and hinderance of repentance, is that delight, which euerie one of vs, haue naturally, to heare and talke of other mens sinnes, with secure neglect of examining, and censuring, of our owne; as if all were well, if we be not in our owne opinion, as bad as the worst of all.

Finally, the Deuill vseth his whole craft and power, to hinder, yea and if it may be, vtterly to ouerthrowe and frustrate, all our indeuours after the practise of true repentance.

Explicatiō & proofe. It is very true. And therefore we haue the greater neede to watch against all his hinderances, and to pray earnestly to God, for wisedome, and power, to escape his snare, and to keepe our selues, that we neuer fall into his hands againe. For not onely, are we all, at the first, in the snare of the Deuill, taken of him as captiues, at his owne will and pleasure. 2. Tim. 2. 26. but also after we are escaped, he seeketh by all meanes, how he may intrap vs againe, and so bring vs to a greater destruction. Math. 12. 43. &c. as was alledged a little before: and 1. Pet. 5. 8. and 2. Cor. 2. 11. and chap. 11. 2. 3. 14.

But let vs briefely consider of the seuerall branches of this answer.

And first concerning vnbeliefe; that it is a principall hinderance of repentance, it is of it selfe euident. For verily, if wee did beleeue the certaine truth, both of Gods gratious promises to the obedient, and of his most fearefull threatnings against the wicked; it must needes (by the grace of God) worke both a care of leauing sinne, and also of walking in the waies & commandements of the Lord: as we haue the notable exāple of the heathen Niniuites, who, beleeuing the threatnings of God to be true, vnlesse they should repent: did thereupon proclaime a fast, and repented in a very singular manner Ionah chap. 3. 5. &c. as we saw before. But where this faith is wanting, no maruell, though all such doe put off the feare of the euill day farre away from them, and imbrace the momentany pleasures of sinne, as if the Lord made no such great matter of sinne, as faithfull Preachers would make vs beleeue: or, though euill do come vpō others, yet euery man is readie to sooth himselfe, that it shall not come neare him, as if they were at agreement with hell. &c. and therefore are bold to elude and mock at all the iudgements of God, saying: Let vs eate and drinke, for to morrow we shall die:

And Mal. 3.14. It is in vaine to serue God, &c. Or else (as was answered) they doe so presume of the mercy of God, as if there were no iustice to be feared from him: as Ier. chap. 18. verse. 18. and Micah. chap. 3. 11. and againe, Ier. 7.4. &c. 9. 10.

But howsoeuer they flatter themselues, and suffer themselues to be bewitched of the Deuill: yet their iudgement sleepeth not, as it is expresly testified and denounced against all such, by the holy Prophets of God. Isai. chap. 5. 19. and cha. 22. 12. 13. 14. and cha. 28. 14. 15. &c. and Amos. cha. 5. 18. and chap. 6. 1. &c. and chap. 9. 10. Read also Psal: 10. 4. 5 6. and 50. 21. & 73. 11. and 94. 7. and Zech. 1. 12. And 1. Cor. 15. 32. 33. 34. Iob. ch. 22. 13.

Sinne may in this respect be compared to the poison of that kinde of Serpent, which though it sting deadly, yet affecteth the flesh of him that is stung with a pleasant and tickling delight.

Secondly, that the present pleasure of sinne, which is very vehement and inticing to our wicked nature, as a most sweet sugred & drunken baite is another speciall hinderance of repentance: it may be euident from that which we read of the wicked man: Iob: 22. 11. &c. His bones are full of the sinne of his youth, and it shall lie downe with him in the dust. When wickednes was sweet in his mouth, &c. Degustatis male iucundis voluptatibus (saith one) vix diuelli ab his possumus. We can hardly be haled from ill pleasures that be delightsome after we haue once tasted them. And Iames. 1. 14. Lust is compared to an inticing baite: And Heb. 11. 25. the Apostle giueth to vnderstand, that the wicked are caried after the momentanie pleasures of sinne. Which, Moses guided by the spirit of God, refused, and chose rather to suffer affliction, with the people of God, and therein made the best choise. But the wicked, they say, as the adultresse saith, Pro. 7. 18. Come let vs take our fill of loue, vntill the morning: let vs take our pleasure in daliance. And cha. 10, 23. It is as pastime to a foole, to doe wickedly, And Ier. 4. 10. The wicked delight to wander. And 2. Tim. 3. verse. 4. The wicked are described to be louers of pleasure more then louers of God. The Apostle speaketh not onely of inordinate and vnlawfull pleasures, but also of pleasures in things lawfull: so farre forth, as by the immoderate vse of them, the minds of any, are withdrawne from the loue of God. Thus the pleasure of sinne, and all sinfull pleasure, is a hinderance of repentance.

Thirdly, that hope of long life, with those false imaginations mentioned in the answere, are a great hinderance of repentance: not onely mens practises, in putting off from day to day, but euen the open speaches of many doe declare. For they say still, time enough yet. Euery one thinketh he hath a dispensation in youth, to follow the lustes of youth. It is enough, we thinke, to be sober and stayde, when we come to age. Yea and the Deuill hath made this beltish prouerb currant in the mouthes of many: A young Saint an old Deuill &c.

This wicked vanitie and presumption of youth, K. Salomon doth most wisely discouer, and sharply rebuke, and also correct by wholesome counsell. Eccles. 11. 9. 10. and so forth from the beginning of the next chapter. Reioice ô young man in the daies of thy youth, and let thine heart cheare thee in the daies of thy youth: and walke thou in the waies of thy heart, and in the sight of thine eies. As though he should say, Seeing thou wilt needes haue it so: well, goe on. But know (saith the wise King) that for all these things, God wil bring thee to iudgement: &c. Read also for the reproofe of this folly: Luke. 12. 20. Mark. chap. 13. 33. &c. 37. and Luke. 21. 34. 35. 36. and 1. Thessa. 5. 2. 3. Reuel. 3. 3. and chap. 16. 15.

And besides, though a man should liue long: who knoweth whether he shall haue grace, at the last to repent. It is well obserued, that although God would let vs haue one example of repentance at the last end, recorded in the holy Scriptures, namely the thiefe on the Crosse, that none, truly repenting at so sodaine an instant, should despaire: yet he hath recorded no more then one, that none might be imboldened to presume. Finally, this may euerie man assure himselfe of, that if hee doe not truelie repent, nothing nothing that he himselfe, or that any other can possibly doe for him, shall stand him in any steed before God. Except yee repent, yee shall all perish: as our Sauiour Christ flatly affirmeth, Luke chap. 13,3.5.

Fourthly, that wicked company is a hindrance to repentance, yea a mightie prouocation, to goe out euen to a desperate course of sinning: the holy Ghost giueth to vnderstand, by a most carefull warning against this danger. Pro. 1. 10, &c. and chap. 23,19,20, and chap. 24,21,22. Read also, chap. 22. verse 24. 25.

And fiftly, concerning the example of the multitude, and the broad and licentious way that they walke in, how dangerous a prouocation that is; it may be likewise perceiued by the admonition of the Lord: Exod. 23,2. Thou shalt not followe a multitude to doe euill &c. And Luke. 13,24. Striue to enter in at the straight gate &c. And Mat. 7. 13. 14.

Sixtly, what a stumbling blocke the prosperitie of the wicked is, wee may consider from the example of Dauid: Psal. 73. 2. 3. &c. As also in the same place, of what strength the seauenth hinderance is, in that there are no bandes euen to their death: but all goeth on, in an euen course, as the cloth that is wouen with euen and vnbroken yarne. But that this is no sure token, that God is pleased with such. Reade Iob. 21. 6.7. &c. And though one of a thousand, liuing wickedly, doe truly repent at the last: what incouragement may any take from thence, seeing such a one (a thousand to one) though he liue an hundreth yeeres, yet he shall be accursed. Isay. 65,20. Vaine is it therefore, that the cõmon sort are so much led away to like and speake well of them that haue liued wickedly, when they dye quietly like a bird as they say, and counterfet a little charitie in forgiuing all the world, &c.

Touching custome in sinning, how that confirmeth sinne, and hindereth all well doing: reade Ier. 13,23. Can the Black-more change his skinne, or the shee Leopard her spots? then may yee also doe good, who are accustomed to doe euill. Reade also. Titus. Chap. 1,12,13. Because the Cretians were accustomed to lying &c. the Apostle informeth Titus, that they must be the more sharpely rebuked that they might be sound in the faith.

The danger, and hinderance of flattering and corrupt Preachers, is testified: Ier. 23,13.14.21.22. and Lament. chap. 2.14. And Ezek, 3.6, &c. 10,22, read also Mat. chap. 23,13, and Luk. 11.52.

That the false opinion, which the wicked haue of the folly and vncomfortablenes of a godly life, is no small hinderance of repentance: it may well bee expressed from that figuratiue description of the thoughts of the wicked, in the Apocryphall booke of wisedome. chap. 5,4. We fooles, thought the righteous mans life madnesse, and his ende without honour, &c. And so Festus esteemeth Paul madde by much learning. Acts 26. 24. Reade also, chap. 18,15. What a base opinion, Gallio had of the Gospell of Christ. And thus (no doubt) but the common opinion, that true godlinesse, in the practise of godly sorrowe and repentance, is no better then a melancholy humour &c. it is a notable let vnto repentance. But the contrary is most true, that the right godly life, is the onely true comfortable & ioyfull life: yea so, that there is much ioy in godly sorrowe, in so much as it leadeth to repentance, not to be repented of. 2. Cor. 7. 10. Read also, Psal. 32,10,11, and Psal. 33,1.2.3. and Philip. chap. 4. verse. 4,5, 6,7. This therefore, ought to be an incouragement to repentance. It is a most certaine thing, that there is no sorrow in godlinesse: but all the sorrowe of the true seruants of God, is for that they can be no more godly. Touching that which was reckoned in the eleuenth place, experience sheweth plainely, that such as are most busie censurers of others, are most negligent in correcting their owne falts. And therefore well exhorteth and warneth the Apostle Iames, chap. 3,1. My brethren, be not many maisters, knowing that wee shall receiue the greater condemnation. And our Sauiour Christ the great Maister of vs all, hee saith to the rebuke of this dangerous hinderance of repentance, Why seest thou the moate in thy brothers eye, and perceiuest not the beame that is in thine owne eye? Or, how saiest thou to thy brother, Suffer me to cast out the moate out of thine eye, and behold a beame is in thine owne eye? Hypocrite, first cast the beame out of thine owne eye, and then shalt thou see clearely to cast out the moate out of thy brothers eye. Matth. 7. 3. 4. 5. But grant that other be neuer so bad, wee must not measure our selues by their example, but by the holy and incorrupt word of the Lord.

Finally, how the Diuel vseth all his craft and power, altogether to hinder, or if he cannot doe that, yet at the least to frustrate our repentance, by causing vs to returne as it were to the myre of our sinne againe, we haue already seene.

IT remaineth, that you shewe on the contrary, by what holy reasons and meanes, wee may further our selues in the way of true repentance. Sundry of them haue beene already mentioned.

Question. Which may the rest be?

Answere. A due consideration of the things following.

First, of the shortnes and vncertaintie of our fraile liues.

Secondly, of the end of our creation yea of our preseruation, redemption, iustification, sanctification, and calling to the faith and hope of our endlesse glorification: all of which, with one voice doe cry aloud vnto vs that it is our most bounden dutie, in all things, and by all meanes, to seeke to aduance the glory of our God.

Thirdly, by due consideration of the great dishonour, which we doe to God, so long as we continue in our sinnes, and therewithall, a due consideration of our owne dishonourable and vile estate, vnder the seruerie of the Diuell, so long as we doe so continue: as also of the great wrath which by the increase of our sinne, we treasure vp against our selues, against the day of wrath, and declaration of the iust iudgement of God, which shall one day, yea in a moment, certainly come vppon the whole impenitent world.

Fourthly, a like due consideration of the fewnesse of those which shall bee saued, for want of repentance: and of the fearefull plagues, which doe in the meane while fall vpon some notorious sinners, for the common admonition and warning of the rest: yea and also by the consideration of our owne punishments, and of the sharpe and long continued afflictions, which here and there, God laieth now and then, vpon some of his deare children, who (our owne consciences being iudges) haue serued God much more carefully, and better then our selues.

Fiftly, hope of forgiuenesse, is a very comfortable motiue, and incouragement to repentance: and the rather, if therewithall we shall consider, that the repentance of a sinner, causeth not onely ioy to the godly on earth, but also to God himselfe and his holy Angels in heauen.

Sixtly, an other speciall meanes of furthering repentance, is a diligent treasuring vp of the word of God in our hearts, partly for direction of life, and partly for comfort of faith: as also a religious frequenting of the table of the Lord, among other the faithfull seruants of God.

Finally, the holy societie and familiaritie of the godly, in the common conuersation of our whole liues, is a continuall cherishing, and watering of repentance, as it were by the sweet dewes of heauen.

Explicatio & proofe. These indeede are very effectuall reasons, and meanes, if they be duly considered and vsed.

And in this respect, first, concerning the shortnes and vncertainty of our life: Moses teacheth vs to make this notable praier to God? Teach vs so to number our daies, that we may apply our hearts vnto wisedome. Ps. 93, 12. For howsoeuer we may promise to our selues many daies; yet as our Sauiour Christ telleth the rich man reioycing at his prouision, laid vp for many yeares: this night may our liues be taken from vs, for any thing we know e.

Secondly,

The Practise of Repentace.

Secondly, touching the end of our creation, that this should moue vs to repentance, that so we may glorifie God in a godly and religious life: read Ps. 95.6. Come let vs worship, and fall downe, and kneele before the Lord our maker. And Psal. 100. Serue the Lord &c. For hee hath made vs. The same is much rather, the ende of our redemption. Luke. 1,74.75, and 1. Cor. 6.19.20. and Tit. 2.11.12. &c. And so of our calling likewise. 1, Pet. chap. 1, 15, 16. and chap. 2.9, 10. &c.

Thirdly, how can any, hauing the least grace, duly consider, that we dishonour God by our wicked liues, according to that, Rom. 2.24. And that it is our owne dishonour, as being therein slaues to the Diuell. Ephes. 1, 2. And also that wee thereby treasure vp wrath against our selues. Rom. 2, 5. How can it be I say, but that these cōsideratiōs, must through the grace of God, effectually moue vs to repentance? As the Apostle reasoneth against one sinne, so will we reason against all other: Shall I take the members of Christ, (that is, those members which are in profession honourably ingrafted into him, to the honour of his name) and make them the vile and base members of an harlot? (to his dishonour) God forbid.

Fourthly, from the consideration of the fewnes of those that shall bee saued, for want of repentance: our Sauiour Christ sheweth vs, that wee ought to take an earnest occasion from thence, to striue to enter in at the straight gate. Luke 13, 23, 24. And that there is no saluation without repentance, it is euident from the beginning of the same chap. And 1. Sam. 12, 25. If yee doe wickedly ye shall perish, both ye and your king. Reade also. Luk. 3.8, 9. and chap. 13, 6, 7. and Reuel. 2.21, 22, 23, & ch. 3.15, 16. Likewise, the examples of Gods iudgements vpon others, ought to admonish vs to repent. 1. Cor. 10. verse 11. Read also, Ier. 3, 8, and Dan. 5, 20, 21. 22, 23, 24, &c.

Euery mans owne punishments, ought much rather to haue the same effect in himselfe. Iob, 33, 29, 30. The want of making this vse of Gods corrections, is reproued, Isay 9, 13. The people turneth not vnto him that smiteth them, neither doe they seeke the Lord of Hosts. And Amos ch. 4, 6, &c. 11. Finally, this ought to be the vse of those afflictions, which God laieth vpon his best seruants. For thus we ought to reason, as the holy Scriptures teach vs. If the righteous be scarcely saued: where shall the sinner and vngodly appeare? And if such and such things be done to a greene tree, what shall be done to that which is dry?

Fiftly, that hope of forgiuenes, is a comfortable incouragement to repentance, it may be considered from that we read, Hosh. 6, 1. 2, 3, yea such an incouragement to repentance it is, that (as one saith truly) without hope of forgiuenes, none can kindly repent. Nemo recte egerit pœnitentiam, nisi qui speranerit indulgentiam. The Angels reioyce, when a sinner repenteth. Yea, God himselfe, is after a sort reioiced with it, Luk. 15.

Sixtly, that the treasuring vp of the word of God in our hearts, is a principall furtherance of repentance, it is proued by that we read, Ps. 17, 4. Concerning the workes of men, by the words of thy lippes, I kept mee from the pathes of the cruell man. And Ps. 19.11. By thy commandements thy seruant is made circumspect, And Ps. 119.11. I haue hid thy promise in my heart, that I might not sin against thee. And ver. 98. By thy cōmandements thou hast made me wiser then mine enemies: for they are euer with me, &c. Read also Pro. 2, 10. 11, &c.

Finally, for the benefit of the societie of the godly, to the nourishing and bettering of repētance, read, Ps. 141, 5, Heb. 3, 13, & ch. 10, 24, 25. Read also Ps. 133. No doubt, the goodnes & cōmoditie of the cōmuniō of Saints, cōsisteth in this, as in a speciall part of it, that we are thereby incouraged, & confirmed, in a godly course of life. Holy instructions, admonitions, and exhortations, are as the dewes of heauen, which make the barrē earth of our soules fruitful &c. Hetherto of repentance, what it is, and which are the helpes, or hinderances of it.

Question. Now when are we thus to repent?

Answere. We must begin presently, euen while it is called to day, as the holy Ghost speaketh; and thence forth we must labour to increase so long as we liue.

So indeed we read. Psal. 95, 7. 8. To day if ye will heare his voice, harden not your hearts, &c. And Heb: 3. 7: 8, 13.

Question. Why must we thus speedily repent?

Answere. Sundry of the former reasons, moving to repentance, are likewise of speciall weight, to moue vs to speedie repentance.

Explicatiō and proofe. It is true. For seeing our life is short, and vncertaine, it is necessary, that wee should not neglect the present opportunitie, lest that should come vpon vs, which is written. Pſ. 73, 19, O how sodenly are they destroied, perished & horribly consumed, As a dreame when one awaketh! Answerable to the example of the sodaine destruction of the Sodomites: &c.

Seeing also the increase of sinne (especially, if it bee ioined with contempt of the Gospell, which most graciously calleth vs to repentance) it increaseth wrath we haue cause to feare: yea rather, wee may be sure, that if we obstinatly refuse to repent, it shall be easier for Tyrus & Sydon, and for Sodom & Gomorrha then for vs, at the day of iudgemēt. Mat. 11, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24. Moreouer, seeing continuance in sinne confirmeth sinne, and maketh it more difficult & hard for vs to repent afterward, as wee haue learned from the Prophet Ieremiah: there is great cause, that we should speedily breake off the euil custome of sinning, that it get no prescription of time against vs.

These reasons haue beene already mentioned.

Question. But shew some other if ye can. What reasons else can ye alledge to this purpose?

Answere. By how much repentance is longer delaied, specially (as was said) if it be with contempt against the often admonitions of the holy word and Gospell of God: the truth of it, will be so much the more hardly discerned euen in the conscience of him, that at the last (it may be) doth truly repent.

It vsually falleth out so indeed, and therefore are such, more deepely plunged in sorrowe, &c. It may seeme, that late repentance, is rather an extorted, then a free and kindly repentance. It may seeme, that sinne hath forsaken such, rather then that they haue forsaken sinne, &c.

Question. What other reasons can you shew why we should speedily repent?

Answere. Because God vouchsafeth vs his holy Sacrament of Baptisme (the heauenly seale of his couenant & of our adoption to be his childrē,) euen frō our infancie: yea because he hath loued vs in his beloued son our Lord Iesus Christ, before we were conceiued and borne.

Explication and proofe. This verily (if it be duly pondred) is a reason of speciall waight and importance to bind vs, both to most speedy repentance, and also to most constant, and dutifull obedience: euen from the first time, wherein we may haue the least inckling and vnderstanding that may be, concerning the exceeding great grace and cōstancy of Gods purpose, in this his couenant sealed to vs, as it were from heauen, by Baptisme: to the very end of our liues, and for euer and euer. Mat. 21, 2[illegible], & Luk. 20. 4, 5, 6. For shall the Lord accept of vs miserable sinners, vassals of Satan, and children of wrath by nature: and shall we refuse him the God of mercy, the onely fountaine of spirituall freedome, and of euerlasting life and saluation? God forbid. Let vs therefore, hearken to the holy exhortation, of the most wise Preacher, that wee remember our Creator in the daies of our youth, &c. Yea, seeing our Sauiour Christ forbiddeth those that would hinder yong children, from comming to him: let vs speedily breake through all lets, that by no meanes we be kept from him. Thus much for the time when to repent.

Question. Now why must we continually repent, yea increase our repentance?

Answere. Because it will be alwaies failing, and vnperfect, here in this life.

Explication and proofe. It is very true. And therefore not without cause, doth the Apostle extend his exhortation, of casting away euery thing that presseth down, and the sin which hangeth so fast on, euen to the end of our race: that is, through the whole course of our liues, spending our blood as it were, in this most holy and iust quarrell. Heb. 12, 1. &c. 4. And the song of perfect triumph, is not till another life: when death shal haue fully lost sinne, which is the sting thereof. 1. Cor. 15. 54, &c,

But

Question. But what if our repentance ſtand at a ſtay, or goe backward: ſo that wee fall into ſome one particular ſinne or other, after that wee haue begunne to repent.

Anſwere. God will ſurelie chaſtice ſuch negligent and vndutifull forgetfulnes, in euerie one of his children, that ſhall deale ſo vnfaithfully with him. And as touching thoſe that continue and goe forward in a good courſe: it is the will of God that they ſhould with all kotie wiſedome, and in all tendernes of Chriſtian loue, and compaſſion ouer the ſoules of ſuch as are fallen, to procure their recouerie, as much as lyeth in them.

Explicatiõ & proofe. So wee reade: Galat: chapt: 6. 1. Brethren (ſaith the Apoſtle Paul) if a man bee fallen by occaſion, into any faulte, yee which are Spirituall, reſtore ſuch one with the Spirit of meekeneſſe, conſidering thy ſelfe, leſt thou alſo be tempted: Beare yee one anothers burthen, and ſo fulfill the Lawe of Chriſt. And read likewiſe, 1. Theſſalon: 3. 14.

And that God will chaſtice the negligence of his children, wee reade it expreſſely confirmed from the Lord himſelfe, by the Prophet Nathan, 2. Sam: 7.14. in his meſſage to king Dauid, concerning his ſonne Salomon. I will be his Father (ſaith the Lord) and hee ſhall be my Sonne: and if hee ſinne, I will chaſten him with the rodds of men, and with the plagues of the children of men, (that is, with ſuch correctiõs, as God vſeth to correct men withall, as one iudging without reſpect of perſon: like to that, Pſ: 82.6.7.) But my mercie (ſaith he) ſhall not departe away from him, as I tooke it from Saul: whom I haue put away before thee. And more generallie, wee reade, Pſalm: 89. 30. &c. from the miniſterie of Ethan, the Ezrahite. If his children forſake my Lawe (ſaith the Lord) and walke not in my iudgements: If they breake my ſtatutes, and keepe not my commandements: Then I will viſite their tranſgreſſions with the rodde, and their iniquities with ſtroakes. Yet my louing kindneſſe will I not take from him, neither will I falſifie my truth, &c. Dauid himſelfe, may be an example hereof vnto vs. And before him Moſes and Aaron, and others of Gods children, whom God did ſharplie chaſtice, when they had tranſgreſſed againſt him. Neuertheleſſe, God continued their good God and a gratious Father vnto them ſtill. For they ſinned of infirmitie, not in obſtinacie, &c.

Question. But what if anie doe vtterlie fall away from that grace, which they ſeemed to haue: and doe nowe deſpite the holie Spirit of grace, being growne worſe, then they were at the beginning?

Anſwere. Vnto ſuch, there is no place leſte for the renewing of their Repentance. And by the effect, they doe ſhewe further, that they neuer beganne to repent in truth,

Explicatiõ and proofe. For the proofe of this: read Hebr: 6.4. &c. chapt: 10.26. &c. And 2. Pet: 2.20. &c. and 1. Iohn. 2. 19. They went out from vs (ſaith the Apoſtle, Iohn: ſpeaking of ſuch kinde of Apoſtataes) but they were not of vs. For if they had bene of vs, they would haue continued with vs. But this commeth to paſſe, that it might appeare, that they are not all of vs.

THere is yet ſomething remaining, concerning the doctrine of Repentance: whervnto I deſire to heare your anſwere.

Question. Haue wee (ſuppoſe yee) anie power of our ſelues to repent, and to change our owne hearts, mindes, and wills: either at the firſt in generall, or after that Repentance is in ſome particular reſpects, to bee renewed againe?

Anſwere. No, no more then ther is in any creature, a naturall power to conceiue and bring forth it ſelfe into the worlde, at the firſt: or afterward, to make himſelfe a newe arme, or a newe legge, if it be once cutte off from the bodie.

You ſay well: for herein the proportion holdeth betwixt our naturall generation and birth, and our ſpirituall regeneration and new birth, as will yet further appeare in that which followeth.

Question. WHerefore, that wee may proceede: By whom are wee then to be conuerted or cauſed to repent vs of our ſinnes?

So indeed we read. Psal. 95, 7. 8. To day if ye will heare his voice, harden not your hearts, &c. And Heb. 3. 7. 8, 13.

Question. Why must we thus speedily repent?

Answere. Sundry of the former reasons, moving to repentance, are likewise of speciall weight, to moue vs to speedie repentance.

Explicatiō and proofe. It is true. For seeing our life is short, and vncertaine, it is necessary, that wee should not neglect the present opportunitie, lest that should come vpon vs, which is written. Ps. 73, 19, O how sodenly are they destroied, perished & horribly consumed, As a dreame when one awaketh! Answerable to the example of the sodaine destruction of the Sodomites: &c.

Seeing also the increase of sinne (especially, if it bee ioined with contempt of the Gospell, which most graciously calleth vs to repentance) it increaseth wrath we haue cause to feare: yea rather, wee may be sure, that if we obstinatly refuse to repent, it shall be easier for Tyrus & Sydon, and for Sodom & Gomorrha then for vs, at the day of iudgemēt. Mat. 11, 20, 21, 22. 23, 24. Moreouer, seeing continuance in sinne confirmeth sinne, and maketh it more difficult & hard for vs to repent afterward, as wee haue learned from the Prophet Ieremiah: there is great cause, that we should speedily breake off the euil custome of sinning, that it get no prescription of time against vs.

These reasons haue beene already mentioned.

Question. But shew some other if ye can. What reasons else can ye alledge to this purpose?

Answere. By how much repentance is longer delaied, specially (as was said) if it be with contempt against the often admonitions of the holy word and Gospell of God: the truth of it, will be so much the more hardly discerned euen in the conscience of him, that at the last (it may be) doth truly repent.

It vsually falleth out so indeed, and therefore are such, more deepely plunged in sorrowe, &c. It may seeme, that late repentance, is rather an extorted, then a free and kindly repentance. It may seeme, that sinne hath forsaken such, rather then that they haue forsaken sinne, &c.

Question. What other reasons can you shew why we should speedily repent?

Answere. Because God vouchsafeth vs his holy Sacrament of Baptisme (the heauenly seale of his couenant & of our adoptiō to be his childrē,) euen frō our infancie: yea because he hath loued vs in his beloued son our Lord Iesus Christ, before we were conceiued and borne.

Explication and proofe. This verily (if it be duly pondred) is a reason of speciall waight and importance to bind vs, both to most speedy repentance, and also to most constant, and dutifull obedience: euen from the first time, wherein we may haue the least inckling and vnderstanding that may be, concerning the exceeding great grace and cōstancy of Gods purpose, in this his couenant sealed to vs, as it were from heauen, by Baptisme: to the very end of our liues, and for euer and euer. Mat. 21, 25, & Luk. 20. 4, 5, 6. For shall the Lord accept of vs miserable sinners, vassals of Satan, and children of wrath by nature: and shall we refuse him the God of mercy, the onely fountaine of spirituall freedome, and of euerlasting life and saluation? God forbid. Let vs therefore, hearken to the holy exhortation, of the most wise Preacher, that wee remember our Creator in the daies of our youth, &c. Yea, seeing our Sauiour Christ forbiddeth those that would hinder yong children, from comming to him: let vs speedily breake through all lets, that by no meanes we be kept from him. Thus much for the time when to repent.

Question. Now why must we continually repent, yea increase our repentance?

Answere. Because it will be alwaies failing, and vnperfect, here in this life.

Explication and proofe. It is very true. And therefore not without cause, doth the Apostle extend his exhortation, of casting away euery thing that presseth down, and the sin which hangeth so fast on, euen to the end of our race: that is, through the whole course of our liues, spending our blood as it were, in this most holy and iust quarrell. Heb. 12, 1. &c. 4. And the song of perfect triumph, is not till another life: when death shal haue fully lost sinne, which is the sting thereof. 1. Cor. 15. 54, &c,

But

Question. But what if our repentance ſtand at a ſtay, or goe backward: ſo that wee fall into ſome one particular ſinne or other, after that wee haue begunne to repent.

Anſwere. God will ſurelie chaſtice ſuch negligent and vndutifull forgetfulnes, in euerie one of his children, that ſhall deale ſo vnfaithfully with him. And as touching thoſe that continue and goe forward in a good courſe: it is the will of God that they ſhould with all holie wiſedome, and in all tendernes of Chriſtian loue, and compaſſion ouer the ſoules of ſuch as are fallen, to procure their recouerie, as much as lyeth in them.

Explicatiõ & proofe. So wee reade: Galat: chapt: 6. 1. Brethren (ſaith the Apoſtle Paul) if a man bee fallen by occaſion, into any faulte, yee which are Spirituall, reſtore ſuch one with the Spirit of meekeneſſe, conſidering thy ſelfe, leſt thou alſo be tempted: Beare yee one anothers burthen, and ſo fulfill the Lawe of Chriſt. And read likewiſe, 1. Theſſalon: 3. 14.

And that God will chaſtice the negligence of his children, wee reade it expreſſely confirmed from the Lord himſelfe, by the Prophet Nathan, 2. Sam: 7. 14. in his meſſage to king Dauid, concerning his ſonne Salomon. I will be his Father (ſaith the Lord) and hee ſhall be my Sonne: and if hee ſinne, I will chaſten him with the rodds of men, and with the plagues of the children of men, (that is, with ſuch correctiõs, as God vſeth to correct men withall, as one iudging without reſpect of perſon: like to that, Pſ: 82. 6. 7.) But my mercie (ſaith he) ſhall not departe away from him, as I tooke it from Saul: whom I haue put away before thee. And more generallie, wee reade, Pſalm: 89. 30. &c. from the miniſterie of Ethan, the Ezrahite. If his children forſake my Lawe (ſaith the Lord) and walke not in my iudgements: If they breake my ſtatutes, and keepe not my commandements: Then I will viſite their tranſgreſſions with the rodde, and their iniquities with ſtroakes. Yet my louing kindneſſe will I not take from him, neither will I falſifie my truth, &c. Dauid himſelfe, may be an example hereof vnto vs. And before him Moſes and Aaron, and others of Gods children, whom God did ſharplie chaſtice, when they had tranſgreſſed againſt him. Neuertheleſſe, God continued their good God and a gratious Father vnto them ſtill. For they ſinned of infirmitie, not in obſtinacie, &c.

Question. But what if anie doe vtterlie fall away from that grace, which they ſeemed to haue: and doe nowe deſpite the holie Spirit of grace, being growne worſe, then they were at the beginning?

Anſwere. Vnto ſuch, there is no place leſte for the renewing of their Repentance. And by the effect, they doe ſhewe further, that they neuer beganne to repent in truth,

Explicatiõ and proofe. For the proofe of this: read Hebr: 6. 4. &c. chapt: 10. 26. &c. And 2. Pet: 2. 20. &c. and 1. Iohn. 2. 19. They went out from vs (ſaith the Apoſtle, Iohn: ſpeaking of ſuch kinde of Apoſtataes) but they were not of vs. For if they had bene of vs, they would haue continued with vs. But this commeth to paſſe, that it might appeare, that they are not all of vs.

THere is yet ſomething remaining, concerning the doctrine of Repentance: whervnto I deſire to heare your anſwere.

Question. Haue wee (ſuppoſe yee) anie power of our ſelues to repent, and to change our owne hearts, mindes, and wills: either at the firſt in generall, or after that Repentance is in ſome particular reſpects, to bee renewed againe?

Anſwere. No, no more then ther is in any creature, a naturall power to conceiue and bring forth it ſelfe into the worlde, at the firſt: or afterward, to make himſelfe a newe arme, or a newe legge, if it be once cutte off from the bodie.

You ſay well: for herein the proportion holdeth betwixt our naturall generation and birth, and our ſpirituall regeneration and new birth, as will yet further appeare in that which followeth.

Question. WHerefore, that wee may proceede: By whom are wee then to be conuerted or cauſed to repent vs of our ſinnes?

Answere. By the holie Ghost, whose entire work our whole regeneration is, and in no part or parcell of it, any of our owne.

Explication and proofe. It is most certainlie so. It is hee alone, who worketh both Repentance, and also Faith, with all spirituall and heauenlie wisedome, and vnderstanding in vs, with all the increases and renewings of euery decaye therof: as wee read, Iohn. 3, verse. 5. Verilie, verilie, (saith our Sauiour Christ to Nicodemus) except a man be borne againe of water, and of the Spirit, hee cannot enter into the kingdom of God. Read also, Galat: 5.22. The fruite of the Spirit is loue, ioye, peace, long suffering, gentlenes, goodnes, faith, meeknes, temperance. And Ephes: 5.9. The fruit of the Spirit, is in all goodnes, and righteousnes, and truth. And: 2. Cor: 3.17. 18. Wee are changed into the image of the Lord, from glorie to glorie, as by the Spirite of the Lord. And in this respect, the holie Ghost is called the Spirit of Sanctification; and wee our selues, are said to be sanctified, by the sanctification of the same Spirit, and not otherwise. Rom: 1.4. Christ our Lord was declared, mightilie to be the Sonne of God, touching the Spirit of sanctification, by the resurrection from the dead. And ch: 15. vers. 16. The Gentiles are acceptable to God, beeing sanctified by the holie Ghost. And 2. Thess: 2.13. Called to saluation, through the sanctification of the Spirit. And 1. Pet. chap: 1.2. Elect vnto sanctification of the Spirit. Read also Isai: 4.4. and chapt: 59.21. Mal: 3.2.3. and Matth. 3.11. Likewise Iere: 31.8. Conuert thou me, and I shall be conuerted. And verse 31. 32.33. The Lord (saith hee) will put his Lawe in the inward partes of his people, and write it in their hearts. This hee doth, by the finger of his holie Spirit. Ezek: 36.25. and Ioel: 2.28. Thus the whole worke of our regeneration, and sanctification is of the Spirit. Yet so as God giueth his children this grace and power, that they doe carefullie vse the meanes seruing herevnto: euerie one for his own part, and mutuallie one for another, as seruants to the prouident grace and mercie of God: As Ezek: ch: 18.30.31. Returne ye (saith the Lord) and cause others to turne away from all your trangressions: so iniquitie shall not be your destruction. Cast away from you, all your transgressions, whereby you haue transgressed, and make yee a newe heart, and a newe spirit: for why will yee die ô yee house of Israel? And our Sauiour Christ saith to Peter, Simon, Simon behold, Sathan hath desired to winnowe you as wheat: but I haue prayed for thee that thy faith faile not: therefore, when thou art conuerted, strengthen thy brethren. Luk: 22.31.32. And the Apostle Iames, ch. 5.19.20. Brethren if any of you haue erred from the truth, and some man hath conuerted him. Let him know, that hee which hath conuerted the sinner from going astray out of his way, shall saue a soule from death, and hide a multitude of sinnes.

But yet further, I would haue you shew, by what means the holy Ghost doth work our regeneration, and all the graces therof: to wit, knowledge, faith, and repentance, with euery other grace belonging therevnto, and withall the increases of the same.

Question. Which are they?

Answere. Principallie, and in an ordinarie course, the preaching of the glad tidings of the Gospell, and all the holy instructions thereof in our hearing: by such faithfull ministers of the word, as hee for the same purpose, sendeth vnto vs.

Herevnto also serueth the opening of the doctrine of the Lawe, and the vses thereof, by the same ministerie of preaching.

Moreouer, diligent and reuerend reading, and meditating vppon the holy Scriptures, by euery one by himselfe apart: as also conferring with other wise & godlie Christians, for mutuall edification, and comfort, in the clearing of necessarie questions and doubtes, which at anie time arise in our mindes: and therewithall the teaching and incouraging of those that are ignorant and weake.

Likewise the serious meditation of our Baptisme, with often and due resorting to the Lordes Table.

Finallie, earnest and constant prayer vnto God, for his gratious blessing vppon all these meanes.

The Practise of Repentance.

These indeed are the ordinarie meanes, whereby it pleaseth the holie Ghost, to worke his whole most gratious work in the hearts of all the children of God. What his more immediate working is, wher it pleaseth him, for supplie of the wants of any of these meanes, yea euen of the principall of them, as in the case of infants, &c: it is not for vs curiouslie to inquire, or trouble ourselues, let vs leaue it as a hidden secret to his own Diuine pleasure & wisedome: and with all thankfulnesse, let vs for our partes make the best vse of all the blessed meanes which he hath vouchsafed, aboue many others, to make vs partakers of.

And first, that the preaching of the Gospell, is the principall means of our Regeneration: Read Iames, 1.18.19. Of his owne will (the Father of lightes) hath begotten vs by the word of truth, that wee should be as the first fruites of his creatures. Wherefore my deare brethren (saith the holie Apostle.) Let euery man be swift to heare, &c. And 1. Pet. 1, 22. &c. Seeing your soules are purified in obeying the truth, through the Spirit, to loue brotherlie without faining, loue ye one another with a pure heart feruentlie. Beeing borne anew, not of mortall seed, but of immortall by the word of God, who liueth and indureth for euer. For all flesh is grasse. The grasse withereth, and the flower falleth away. But the word of the Lord indureth for euer: and this is the word which is preached among you.

Thus, the whole work of our regeneration, is generally ascribed to the preaching of the word, as the principall meanes which the holy Ghost vseth therevnto. Now more particularlie, touching knowledge giuen by meanes of the word, and principallie by it preached and applyed to our consciences: Reade Prou: 1. verse. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. The parables of Salomon, &c. To giue wisedome and instruction, &c. To giue vnto the simple, sharpnes of wit, and to the childe, knowledge and discretion. A wise man shall heare, and increase in learning, and a man of vnderstanding, shall attaine to wise counsells, &c. And cha: 23, 19. O thou my sonne, heare and be wise. And Psa: 2. 10. Be wise, ye kings, be learned yee iudges of the earth: that is: Submit your selues to be taught from the word of God, that yee may be wise. Read also, 2. Corinth: 4. 6. &c.

Touching Faith, by the preaching of the word: read Rom: chapt: 10. verses, 14. 15. 17. and chapt: 1. 17. By the Gospell, the righteousnes of God is reuealed from faith to faith. And Ephe: 4. 13. Till we all meet together in the vnitie of faith, and knowledge of the Sonne of God, vnto a perfect man, to the measure of the age of the fulnesse of Christ. And for repentance, let that one famous example, Actes: 2. 37. aboundantlie suffice. Where also obserue (according to that which hath heretofore bene noted) that the lawe of God hath his office to the convincing of the conscience, and consequentlie to the furthering of repentance.

Likwise also, more priuate instructions, together with the publike ministerie, yeeld their helpe herevnto: Rom: 1, verses 11. 12. and as was alledged a little while since, out of the last chapt: of the Apostle Iames, verses 19. 20. Neither is it to be doubted, but as in all other learning, they that are skilfull, doe by teaching the ignorant, growe more experte themselues: so is it in the Arte of all Artes, as touching those that instruct others vnto the kingdome of heauen.

Vnto reading also, and meditation, ther is a promise of blessing, Psal. 1. 2. And Reuel: 1. 3. Blessed is hee that readeth, and they that heare the wordes of this Propheste. And withall, mark also, that he requireth the keping of those things that are written therin. According to that of Iames, 1. 22. Be yee doers of the word, and not hearers onely. For this must in no wise be forgotten, that practise is a singular meanes of confirming: yea of increasing that knowledge, faith, and repentance, which is allreadie begonne in vs. As for Baptisme, it cannot be, but the due knowledge, & meditation of it, is a means of helping forward regeneration, seeing God hath appointed it, to be vnto vs, a signe & seale therof: as both our Sa: Christ, Ioh: 3. 5. And the Apo: Paul, Tit. 3. 5. do giue to vnderstand, by their speeches, wherin they do not obscurely point vs to the institution and vse of this Sacrament. Likewise, if the fault be not in our owne selues, great profite is to bee obtained by often resorting to the Lordes Table. 1. Corinth: 11. 17.

Finallie, that prayer is a helpfull meanes, to further Knowledge, Faith, and Repentance, yea the whole work of our regeneration: it may be discerned of vs, from the testimonie of the Apostle Iude, in the 20. verse of his Epistle, writing thus, Beloued edifie your selues in your most holy faith, praying in the holie Ghost. The gratious promises which God hath made vnto prayer, doe euidently confirme the same. Aske, and yee shall receiue (saith our Sauiour Christ) &c. Nowe, this wee knowe, is a speciall petition, which wee are to aske of God, that it would please him to increase our Faith: as wee haue the example of the Disciples of our Sauiour Christ. Thus much for the explanation and proofe of this answere.

NExt to this, it is not (as I suppose) amisse, that you shew, after what manner (I meane, in what course and order) the holie Ghost doth work this worke of our regeneration and newe birth: with the increases thereof in the seuerall parts or branches of it, so farre as for the present, wee can discerne.

Question. What is the order of this his working?

Answere. First, hee sheweth euery one of the Elect children of God, his owne ignorant, sinnefull, and damnable estate: yea hee subdueth their soules, to an acknowledgement of the iust deserued damnation, which is due thervnto, and accordinglie to feare and tremble at the curse of the Lawe.

Secondly, hee inlighteneth the minde to see the Saluation of God, with hope to bee a partaker thereof.

Thirdlie, hee stirreth vp the affection of the heart, to a longing desire after it: and therewithall to mourne for sinne, which might iustly separate betwixt vs, and it. Yet so, as hee causeth the heart to long with patience, in waiting for the comfort and assurance of attaining vnto it.

Fourthlie, he powreth into the soule and conscience, a feeling, and ioyous tast of Gods loue, and of his gratious readinesse to shew mercie: yea, hee giueth such a certificat, of their particular Adoption, to bee the children of God, that they reioyce more therein, then if they had wonne the whole world.

Finallie, the holy Ghost doth not cease to stirre vp euerie true beleeuer, to an earnest care and indeuour of daylie profiting by all holy meanes, both in Knowledge, and Faith, and also, in Repentance, and obedience of the Gospell: comforting, and strengthening them also, against all such lettes and discouragementes, as they doe meete withall.

For the first of these, read Iohn. ch: 16. 9. 10. 11. 12. The holie Ghost (as our Sauiour Christ hath taught vs) reproueth the world of Sinne, and of Righteousnesse, and of Iudgment. Of sinne, (saith our Sauiour:) because they beleeue not in mee: &c. Wherby it is euident, that not to beleeue in Christ, is a very great and a grieuous sinne.

For the second, read Ephes: 1. 17. 18. where the holie Ghost is called the Spirit of wisedome and Reuelation, inlightening the eyes of our vnderstanding, to know the hope of the calling of God. &c. Read also, 1. Cor: 2. 9. 10. The things which the eye hath not seene, &c. God hath reuealed them vnto vs by his Spirit: For the Spirit searcheth all things, yea the deepe things of God. And for the comfort of Hope; see Rom: 8. 24. Wee are saued by Hope.

Thirdly, for that desire, and longing after Saluation, which the holy Ghost worketh: read in the same chapt: the 23. verse, and also verses, 26. 27. Wee which haue the first fruits of the Spirit, doe euen sigh in our selues, waiting for the Adoption, euen the redemption of our bodies. Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities, for wee knowe not what to pray as wee ought, but the Spirit it selfe maketh request for vs, with sighes which cannot be expressed. &c.

And

The practise of Repentāce.

And the children of God are noted by this property, that they loue the ſaluation of God: Pſal: 40. 16. And (which is in effect all one) they are ſaid to be ſuch as loue the appearing of the Lord. 2. Tim. 4. 8. And therefore they pray, Come Lord Ieſu, come quickly. Reuel. 22: 20. And Pſal: 119. 41. Let thy louing kindnes come vnto me, ô Lord, and thy ſaluation, according to thy promiſe. Neuertheleſſe, they wayte with patience: according to that of the Patriarke Iaacob: Gen: 49. 18. O Lord, I haue waited for thy ſaluation. And as Simeon (vpon whom was the holy Ghoſt, as the Euangeliſt teſtifieth) waited for the conſolation of Iſrael. Luke. 2. 25. And as we read Rom: 8. 25. If we hope for that we ſee not, we doe with patience abide for it. According alſo, to that in the 123. Pſal. Behold, as the eyes of ſeruants looke to the hand of their Maiſters, and as the eyes of a maiden, to the hand of her Miſtres: ſo our eyes waite vpon the Lord our God, vntill he haue mercie vpon vs. And that the holy Ghoſt cauſeth the children of God, to mourne for their ſinnes, it hath beene ſhewed before: in which reſpect, they are ſaid to be ſuch as mourne in Sion. Iſai: 61. 3. The which mourning alſo, miniſtreth hope of Gods mercy. Lamen: chap: 3. 19. 20. 21. Ezek: chap. 9.

For the proofe of the fourth branch, read Rom: 5. 5. The loue of God is ſhed abroad in our hearts, by the holy Ghoſt, which is giuen vnto vs. And chap: 8. 15. 16. Ye haue receiued the Spirit of adoption, whereby wee crie Abba Father. The ſame Spirit beareth witneſſe with our Spirit, that wee are the children of God. Herein as the Apoſtle Peter teacheth, wee haue cauſe to reioice with ioy vnſpeakeable, and glorious. 1. Ep: 1, 8. And in compariſon hereof, all is but dung, as the Apoſtle Paul truly eſtimateth. Phil: 3. 8.

Finally, touching the care of further profitting, both in knowledge, faith, and repentance, which the holy Ghoſt worketh: it may be proued from that wee read Philip: 1. 7. God will performe the good worke, which hee hath begun. And the prayer of the ſame Apoſtle warranteth the ſame. 2. Theſſa: 1. 11. God will fulfill all the good pleaſure of his goodnes, and the worke of faith, with power. Hee will leade from knowledge to knowledge, from faith to faith, and from glory to glory, according to the image of God. Rom: 1. 17. 2. Corinth: 3. 18. Read alſo Prouerb: 4. 18. The way of the righteous ſhineth as the light, which ſhineth more and more, vnto the perfit day. And for proceeding in knowledge, conſider of that, 2. Cor: 5. 16. Henceforth know wee no man after the fleſh, yea though we had knowne Chriſt after the fleſh (that is, not ſo purely as we ought) looking too much to his abaſement, &c. Yet henceforth know we him (ſo) no more. A figuratiue conceſsion, like to that, 1. Corinth. 4. 6. Conſider alſo of the ſimilitude, which the ſame Apoſtle vſeth in the 13. chap: of the ſame Epiſtle, verſe, 11. When I was a childe, I ſpake as a childe, I vnderſtoode as a childe, I thought as a childe: but when I became a man, I put away childiſh things. So it is in the ſpirituall age as it were of Chriſt, not onely in compariſon of our eſtate heere, with that it ſhall be in the Kingdome of glory: but alſo in reſpect of that differing meaſure of grace, heere in the Kingdome of grace, which now wee ſpeake of. For as in the worke of nature, all the parts and powers, are not perfect at once, but they growe in the wombe firſt. Eccleſiaſt. 11. 5, and after by the milke of the mothers breaſt, &c: ſo is it in the worke of grace. Wee are borne of the Spirit, wee muſt growe vp ſtill, by the milke of the word. 1. Peter: 2, verſes. 2. 3.

Read alſo Hebrewes. 5. 12. 13. 14. and 1, Corinthians. 3. 1. 2. 3. By this ſpirituall foode, the inward man is renued daily, though the outward man be daily decaying. Read alſo Epheſians. 4. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16.

Thus we muſt vſe the ſame meanes for our continuall increaſe in knowledge, faith, and repentance; both for wiſdom & practiſe, and alſo for cõfort and ſtrength, all the daies of our liues: the ſame meanes, I ſay, wherby God vouchsafed to giue vs grace to make our beginnings in the same. Vnto the which care (as was answered in the last place) the holy Ghost will comfort and strengthen all that be his, so that they may say with the holy Prophet, Psal.42.5. &c. Why art thou cast downe, ô my soule, and vnquiet within me? Wait thou on God. For I shall yet giue him thankes, for the helpe of his presence. And for this cause, our Sauiour Christ calleth the holy Ghost by the name of a most gratious comforter, or incourager: Iohn, Chapters 14. 15. & 16.

HEtherto of the doctrine of Repentance, yea of the whole worke of our regeneration and sanctification. From the examination and declaration whereof, it may be perceiued, that albeit there is little or no difference betwixt our sanctification and regeneration; in so much as we may truly say, that our regeneration is no other grace, but that whereby we are wholly sanctified and set apart vnto God, from the sinfull corruption of our naturall birth, and the euil fruites thereof, to serue God in our whole man, both bodie, soule, and spirit: yet there is some difference or distinction, to be put betwixt our regeneration or sanctification generally taken, and repentance. I would haue you therefore, shewe in this our issue of this doctrine, what that difference is.

Question. What I pray you haue you learned that this difference is?

Answere. First I haue learned, that regeneration is more generall then repentance, comprehending Faith, as well as repentance; yea and knowledge also, the forerunner of them both.

Explication and proofe. You haue learned that which the truth it self teacheth. For so our Sauiour Christ (instructing Nicodemus in the true knowledge, faith & repentance of the Gospel: Ioh. chap. 3.) includeth all vnder regeneration, or new birth. As also the Apostle Paul doth. 2. Cor. 5. 17. saying; If any man be in Christ, let him be a new creature. And Gal. 6. 15. In Christ Iesus, neither doth circumcision anaile any thing, nor vncircumcision, but a new creature. Regeneration therefore, and repentance, differ as the part from the whole, or as the speciall from the more generall, or as the effect differeth from the cause.

Question. What other difference may there be?

Answere. A second difference may be this, that the worke of regeneration (to speake properly) is but one entire action once onely wrought, euen as wee are but once naturally borne: whereunto also, Baptisme the Seale of our regeneration answereth, in that being once baptized we are neuer to be baptized againe. But repentance is not onely a continued, but also a multiplied and increased grace and action, in the seuerall parts, and in the whole practise of it.

Explicatiõ and proofe. It is true: so that we may say, Regeneration doth properly note the first change of the naturall man, whereby is inspired, as it were, the whole and entire seede of godlines, though it doe but by little and little vtter it selfe, by reason of the contrarie lusting that is in our flesh: like as by naturall birth, we haue the seede of all sinne in vs, howsoeuer it doe not all at once breake forth, by reason that it is restrained, and holden in, and as it were chayned, by the secret hand of God. Yet so, as wee denie not, but regeneration also may be said to increase, in respect of the particular and seuerall parts or graces thereof, knowledge, faith, repentance, &c. according to the increases which it pleaseth the Lord from time to time to giue vnto it.

And thus be it spoken of the doctrine of the Gospell in generall, concerning faith and repentance.

A briefe

The doctrine of the Gospel dispersed through the holy scriptures.

A briefe summe of the doctrine of the Gospell.

Question. NOw in what place of the holy scriptures is the Gospel conteined?

Answere. It is dispersed through the whole bodie of them, from the 15. verse of the third chapter of Genesis, to the verie end of the Revelation; as it were the veynes & sinewes, or rather as the blood and life, yea as the euerliuing soule and spirit of them: but it is expressed and opened most fully and cleerly, in the writings of the new Testament.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is so indeed. For though (as our Sauiour Christ saith) the bookes of Moses, and of all other the holie Prophets, do testifie of him. Iohn. cha. 5. 39. 46. (Read also Acts 3. 21. 24. & chap. 10. 43. To him giue all the Prophets witnesse, that all that beleeue in him, shall receiue remission of sinnes. And 1. Pet. 1. 10. 11. 12. And Reue. cha. 10, 7. And ch. 14. 6. where the Gospell thus testified from the beginning, is by the holie Angell, called an euerlasting Gospell. So that the Gospell may not vnfitly be compared to the riuer of the garden of Eden, which diuided it selfe into all quarters round about it, compassing farre and neere, Gen. 2. 10. &c.) Neuertheless, (as you haue further answered) it is most fully, and most cleerly, opened by the holie Euangelists & Apostles of our Lord Iesus Christ, in the bookes of the new Testament: according to that we reade, Ro. 16. 25. 26. And Ephe. ch. 3. 1. 2. 3. 4. And 1. Pet. 1. 12. & Matth: 13. 16, 17. Blessed are your eyes (saith our Sauiour Christ to his Disciples) for they see, & your eares, for they heare. For verily I say vnto you, that many Prophets & righteous men, haue desired to see those thinges which ye see, and haue not seene them: and to heare those things which ye heare, and haue not heard them. From these holie Scriptures, are we therfore to learne and beleeue the whole doctrine of the Gospell, euen as it is in them recorded from the verie first beginning, to the ende and conclusion of them. But herewithall let vs consider further, that partly for help of memory, and partly for consent in profession of the doctrine of the Gospel: the same doctrine concerning faith, hath bin by some excellent & holy Ministers of the word, euen from the time of the primitiue Churches, gathered into as short a summe as might be, out of the bookes both of the old & new Testament. The which summe so briefly compriſed, is cõmonly called the Apostles Creed, because, for the most part, it is gathered out of their writings: or else it is called the Articles of our belief, because the chief points of faith are cõtained in it. Of this sum of the doctrine of faith, intend we henceforth by the grace of God to enquire. And afterward (if so it shall further please him) of the doctrine of the Sacraments of the Gospel, which are the seales of all the Articles of our Christian faith. And also of the Lords prayer; which is a principal rule of Christian prayer, a singular exercise of faith, &c.

Question. Which therefore first of all, be the Articles of our Christian beliefe, as they are in that briefe summe compriſed, and by the common consent of all true Churches of Christ, euen frõ the most incorrupt times, cõmended vnto vs?

Answere I beleeue in God the Father almightie, maker of heauen & earth: And in Iesus Christ his onely sonne our Lord, which was conceiued by the holy Ghost, &c.

Explicatiõ & proofe. This summe of the doctrine of the Gospel, concerning the chiefe Articles of our faith, gathered out of the holie scriptures (as hath bene said) it conteineth an bridgement of the most high & diuine mysterie of the nature of God: that is to say, of the incomprehensible Trinitie of persons, in the vnitie of one most absolute & perfect spirituall essence or beeing of the Godhead, so farre as it is meet for vs to enquire, or may be knowne and discerned of vs. And therwithall, it setteth out vnto vs fraile creatures, and most miserable sinners, the free couenant of Gods diuine mercy, fauour and grace towards vs. Herewithall also, it layeth forth these two things: first, the causes of our iustification: and secondly, the fruites or benefits thereof. The causes are these, first (to speake more generally) the whole Trinitie of persons, Father, Sonne and holy Ghost, eternally consenting in the vnitie of the Godhead, to elect and ordaine vs therevnto. But more particularly the Father (for orders sake) as the efficient cause: the Sonne (in that hee tooke our nature, and therein liued, preached, wrought miracles, fulfilled the righteousnes of the law, and at the last died for vs, and rose againe, &c.) the materiall cause: The holy Ghost, (in that by the preaching of the Gospell, he giueth faith) the formall cause: The finall cause, being the euerlasting praise of the same most glorious & free grace and mercie of God. Now the fruite and benefit of this grace of God towards vs, beeing generally comprehended vnder this worde saluation; the particulars are partly expressed, Communion of Saints in one holy catholike Church, forgiuenes of sinnes, resurrection of the body, and euerlasting life: and partly, they are to be collected from those that be mentioned, as vnspeakable peace of conscience heere, yea euen against death and hell it selfe: and the immortality of the soule in heauen, euen from the very time of our departure out of this life, &c.

This summe of the chiefe Articles of our faith therefore, containeth an abridgement of the Historie of all the greatest, and most glorious counsels and workes of God, and of his most wonderfull benefits towards vs: (Election, Prouidence, Creation, Adoption, Redemption, Iustification, Sanctification, Saluation, and Glorification) and to these ends and purposes, a like abridgement of the incarnation of the sonne of God, and therewithall, of the vnion of the humane nature with the diuine, in one most holy person of a mediator, and also of the sufferings of the sonne of God: &c. all of them (as was said before) proceeding from the infinite bountie of Gods mercie, to vs most vnworthie men. Of the which most great counsels and works of God it is worthily written by the Apostle Paul: 1. Tim: 3. 16. ⁂ Without controuersie, great is the mysterie of godlines, which is, God manifested in the flesh, iustified in the Spirit, seene of Angels, preached vnto the Gentiles, beleeued on in the world, and receiued vp in glorie. Read also Rom: 8. 29. 30. &c. Those which God knew before, he also predestinated to be made like to the image of his sonne, that he might be the first borne among many brethren. Moreouer, whom he hath predestinated them also he called, and whom he called, them also he iustified, and whom he iustified, them also he glorified. What shall we then say to these things? If God be on our side, who can be against vs? &c. And Ephes: 3. 8. 9. 10. &c. Euen to me the least of all Saints (saith the holy Apostle) is this grace giuen, that I should preach among the Gentiles, the vnsearchable riches of Christ. And to make cleare vnto all men, what the fellowship of the mysterie is, which from the beginning of the world hath beene hid in God, who hath created all things by Iesus Christ. &c.

⁂ Omologoumenos Confessedly, or by a generall acknowledgement, to wit, of all true Christians.

Of these most high and excellent things we will by the grace of God treat and inquire, according to this summe of the Articles of our faith in the order following.

First of all, wee will consider of some speciall ground of holy Scripture, whence euery article or point of our faith, may be warranted: and from whence also, the right sence & meaning thereof may be interpreted and opened. For the word of God contained in the bookes of Canonicall Scripture (the which God himselfe hath giuen and authorized for the instruction of his Church) it is the onely certaine and vndoubted ground and foundation of faith. And therefore also, it is our bounden dutie, to yeeld it the honour of teaching and confirming euery truth of God, from the sacred testimonie and witnesse thereof. And thus we read, how in matters of faith, the Scripture referreth it selfe to the Scripture; the latter to the former: Luke, 24. verses, 25. 26. 27. and verses, 44. 45. 46. 47. And before this, in the 22. chap: ver. 37. Reade also so Acts: chap: 26. verse, 22. and 1. Corinth: 15. 1. 2. 3. 4. and 2. Pet: 1. 19. And verily, it were too great & sluggish a folly, for any to content themselues so with any briefe abridgement, that the originall copie (wherein is the more full and perfect declaration of all things) should be neglected. A man will not doe so with his seuerall Deeds, and more large writings, shewing the conueiances of his landes: for any briefe extent or survey which hee hath taken of them. And shall we be more vnwise, concerning the grand euidence of our saluation? Nay rather, as great landed men, by how much they see by a short viewe, that their possessions are very ample, &c. they will make the more reckoning, of all their auncient Court-rouls, or Charters, &c. So let vs by all meanes prouoke our selues, notwithstanding any other testimony, to make our principall and most precious account, of the authenticall and diuine records of God. And that not onely for the points themselues, which concerne our faith: but also for the right vnderstanding of them, and for all holy circumstances belonging to them.

For in this respect, the holy Scriptures are so necessarie, that without them, wee should not by the shortnesse of our Creede, heare of many points, necessarily to bee bee beleeued of vs, for our holy instruction and comfort. And they that are mentioned, could not without the holy Scriptures bee throughly vnderstood of vs, as will appeare in the handling of the points themselues. For in the Articles of our faith, (as they are abridged) the doctrine of creation is mentioned but in part; for nothing is expressely set downe of mans creation, or of any other creature vppon earth, or of the Angels in heauen. Nothing is mentioned of the prouidence and gouernment of God ouer his creatures. And in the doctrine of redemption likewise, nothing is mentioned concerning the life, doctrine, or miracles of our Sauiour Christ. Neither is it expressed, what wee are to beleeue concerning the holy Ghost, nor wherein (as touching a principall part) the communion of Saints consisteth; nor what is the state of our soules immediately after this life, and so forth till the resurrection of our bodies, vnles wee bee aduertised by interpretation, that (though euerlasting life is set after the resurrection of the bodie) yet is it not then onely to begin: but that beginning by regeneration in this life, it continueth for euer, notwithstanding this naturall life endeth in death. And howe should wee knowe what is to bee beleeued, concerning the descension of our Sauiour Christ to hell, but by the interpretation of those Scriptures, whence that phrase of speech may be opened vnto vs?

Fidei fundamentum gratuita promissio. Ab ipsa (inquit Caluinus) incipit, in ipsa cõstat, in ipsam desinit. Instit: lib: 3. Cap. 2. Sect. 29. The promise of free grace is the foundation of faith. From it (faith maister Caluin) it beginneth, in it it consisteth, and it endeth also in the same.

Wherefore, in the second place, we will from the ground and warrant of the holy Scriptures, open the meaning of euery article.

Thirdly, insomuch as faith looketh directly, to the most free and gracious promise of GOD, wherein standeth the comfort and stay of it: yea, seeing it is the wisedome and prudence of Faith, to looke alwaies hereunto, as wee see the practise of it very often in the 119. Psalme, and Psalme 56, 3, 4, 10, 11. and Psalme 57, 1, 2, 3. we will therefore inquire out the promises of GOD, made to his people, concerning euery article. For in this respect, the faithfull are called heires by promise: Galatians 3, 29. and children of the promise. Chap. 4. 28. Read also, Heb. Chap. 4. 1. and chap. 10, 36, & chap. 11. ver. 13. Read the whole Chapter, and Rom. 4. from the 13. ver. to the end.

Fourthly, wee will shewe what comfortable fruites and benefites belong to the beleeuing of euery article.

Fiftly, seeing faith cannot bee idle, wee will likewise search out, what those duties bee, which GOD requireth as fruites of obedience and thankefulnesse, for so singular fruites and benefites of his loue, as faith assureth vs off.

The generall diuision of the Articles of our Beliefe.

Finally wee will note the iuſt puniſhment and danger of infidelitie: but eſpecially of hereticall and obſtinate opinion & fancie, gainſaying the truth and ſoundnes of any part of our true and orthodox Chriſtian faith and beliefe.

Queſtion. BVt before wee come to theſe points, how may the Articles of our faith (the ſumme whereof you haue rehearſed) be moſt ſhortly ſorted and diuided?

Anſwere. Into theſe two generall heads.

Firſt, they ſhewe both me & euery Chriſtian, how we ſtand bound to beleeue in our God.

Secondly, what euery one of vs ought to beleeue concerning the whole company of the people of God, called his holy Catholike or vniuerſall Church.

Explication and proofe. They may be ſo diuided indeede. And the like is the order of the lawe of God, for the direction of our life: and of praier, for the exerciſe of our faith: and of the Sacraments alſo, for the ſtrengthening of our faith. God hath worthily the firſt place, whoſe glory we ought principally to reſpect: and then it followeth, how God hath a moſt gracious regard of our ſelues, & of all the reſt of his people. So that if we would define faith, according to the articles thereof: we might well ſay; though (as may peraduenture be thought ſomewhat out of place now) yet not altogether without ſome good vſe: that it is a comfortable apprehending and applying of the whole doctrine of the Goſpell, in the right vnderſtanding of the ſeueral articles of it, to a mans own particular benefit, with ſome meaſure of aſſurance, that hee is a true member of the Church of Chriſt: and that his part is in all the ſpirituall priuiledges or prerogatiues, which doe belong vnto it, in the holy fellowſhip and communion of the Saints of God.

And further, the ſumme of this briefe profeſſion of our common faith, is in effect no more but this; that the onely true God, euen the father of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: is (through the mediation and interceſſion of the ſame Chriſt our redeemer and Sauiour) become my father; and that for his ſake, hee hath receiued me to mercy, and ſanctified me, and ſealed me by his holy ſpirit, to be one of his adopted children: and that he will for euer, make me a partaker of all the benefits of the moſt holy meditation, of the ſame Ieſus Chriſt his onely ſonne our Lord, to my endles ſaluation, euen to the fruition of vnſpeakable felicitie and glory in his heauenly kingdome. But theſe things require a very ample and large vnfolding.

Beliefe in one onely God.

Queſtion. LEt vs therfore come to the firſt part of your diuiſion of the Articles of faith.

How doe they teach vs, and all Chriſtians, that wee ſtand bound to beleeue in our God?

Anſwere. Firſt, that he is onely one in his diuine nature, or ſpirituall Eſſence and beeing. Secondly, that he is neuerthelesse in the ſame onely one nature and eſſence, three diſtinct perſons.

That this is ſo, it wil further appeare, in the particular opening of this moſt high myſterie.

Queſtion. In what words doe they teach vs, that we ſtand bound to beleeue in our God, as being one onely in nature or eſſence and beeing?

Anſwere. In theſe wordes: I beleeue in God.

Explication and proofe. It is true, and therefore is the word (God) but once mentioned, (euen to the ende that the vnitie of the Godhead might bee the more plainely teſtified and obſerued) although the ſame word, is in vnderſtanding to bee referred to euery one of the three perſons following, in this wiſe.

I beleeue

Beliefe in one onely God.

The ground of it.

I beleeue in that one onely God: who is God the father, God the ſonne, and God the holy Ghoſt: & yet not three Gods, but only one God. For like as whē mention is made indefinitely of the name of God, the whole Trinitie may bee vnderſtood coeſſentially and coniointly: ſo whē we apply the ſame name (God) to any of the three perſons alone, wee muſt take it perſonally, according to the diſtinction of the one from either of the other, by the proper & incommunicable proprietie belonging to the ſame, though not without reſpect to the vnitie of one eſſence of them all. So that, as it is well opened in the other Creeds of Athanaſius and the Nicene Counſell: we beleeue in one God, who is the father almighty, &c. And we worſhip one God in Trinitie, & Trinitie in vnitie. Neither confounding the perſons, nor diuiding the ſubſtance, &c. as we are further to conſider afterward.

Queſtion. BVt in the meane while, what ground of holy Scripture can you alledge, that God is one onely true God?

Anſwere. The 35. ver. of the 4. ch. of Deuteronomie, in theſe wordes: The Lord is God, and there is none but he alone. And ver. 39. Underſtand therefore and conſider in thine heart, that the Lord, hee is God in heauen aboue, and vppon the earth beneath: there is no other. And in the 4. ver. of the 6. chap. Heare ô Iſrael, the Lord our God is Lord onely.

Explicatiō & prooſe. This being a chiefe and principall ground of all faith, and true godlines: it is is euery where moſt plentifully teſtified in the holy Scriptures. Of the which teſtimonies, it ſhall be to good purpoſe, that we doe ſet down ſome more. And firſt, we wil begin with the words of God himſelfe. Deut. ch. 32. 39. Behold now (ſaith the Lord) that I, euen I am he, and that there is no God with me: I kill and giue life, I wound and I make whole; neither is there any that can deliuer out of my hand. Likewiſe Iſaiah, 42, 8. & ch. 43, 11, 12, 13. I, euen I, am the Lord, & beſide me there is no Sauiour, &c. You are my witneſſes (ſaith the Lord) that I am God. And in many other places of the ſame Prophecy, ch. 44, 6, & ch. 45, 5. I am the Lord, & there is no other: there is no God beſide me. The ſame is repeated ſix times in that ch. The often repetitiō ſheweth, that we haue need to be often & earneſtly put in mind of it, to the end it may be firmly rooted in our hearts. To this truth & principle of our faith, do the ſeruants of God, euery where giue witnes. As 1. Sam. ch. 2. v. 2. There is none holy as the Lord (ſaith Hannah in her holy thankſgiuing) yea, ther is none beſides thee, and there is no God like vnto our God. And Pſalme 18, 31. Who is God beſides the Lord? And who is mightie ſaue our God? And Pſ. 83. 18. Iehouah is alone, euen the moſt high ouer all the earth. And Pſ. 86, 10. Thou art God alone. And Nehemiah. 9. 6. Thou art Lord alone. And 1. Cor. 8, 4. There is no other God but one. Yea 2. Kings 5. 15. This teſtimonie is drawne from Naaman the Syrian, in experience of Gods gratious power, in the cure of his leproſie: Behold (ſaith he) now I know that there is no God in all the world but in Iſrael. His meaning is, that they onely profeſſed the Religion of the true God, the onely God of all the world.

There are many more teſtimonies: but we will ende with that of our Sauiour Chriſt: Iohn. chap. 17. 3. This is life eternall to knowe thee the onely true God, &c.

As touching the name of God attributed to the Gods of the Heathen, in the holy Scriptures: that is but according to the abuſiue ſpeech of the heathen, and for a refutation of their heatheniſh error. And when it is aſcribed to Angels, or men, it is not to be vnderſtood properly: but in reſpect of that ſpeciall dignitie and power, which God hath as it were lent them, aboue others, &c.

Let vs now proceede.

Shew likewiſe, from what ground of holy Scripture, you haue bene taught, that it is euery Chriſtians dutie to beleeue in this our one onely true God.

Queſtion. What proofe haue you for it?

Anſwere Our Sauiour Chriſt admoniſheth his Diſciples to haue faith in God. Mark. ch. 11. v. 22

Explicatiō & prooſe. The words of the greeke text are. Haue ye: (that is, ſee that ye haue) the faith of God; but in the ſelfe ſame ſenſe, according to the Syrian tranſlation: Let the faith of God be in you. Our Sa: Chr: calleth it, the faith of God, because he requireth his people to beleeue in him: & for that all faith placed any other wher, is vtterly profane, wandring & vaine. Yea (like as we saw euē now) that God by his holy spirit, gaue Naaman the Syrian grace to beleeue in God, from the experience of his gracious power manifested vppon him, in his miraculous cure: so doth our Sa: Ch: from the example of the fig-tree dried by the power of his diuine word, instruct his Disciples to gather an argument, for the strengthening of their faith, to beleeue in euery word of God, and principally in his promise touching euerlasting saluation. According to that of wise Agur. Pro. 30. 5. Euery word of God is pure, he is a shield to them that trust in him.

Beleefe in one onely God.

The ground of it.

Question. Haue you any other proofe, that it is the dutie of the people of God thus to beleeue in him?

Answere. In the 62. Psal. we haue not onely the doctrine, but also the practise set forth vnto vs, by a very notable and liuely example.

Question. Rehearse you the words of this Psalme: which are they?

Answere. Yet my soule keepeth silence vnto God. Or as we may read it in the Hebrew text, thus. My soule quietly resteth or reposeth it selfe onely in God (saith the holy Prophet) for of him commeth my saluation. He onely is my strength, and my saluation, and my defence: I shall not much be moued. Yea he repeateth the same words againe, to shewe his singular affiance placed onely in the Lord.

And then hee doth with like earnestnes (from the experience of his owne comfort) exhort and incourage all other the people of God, to doe the like; saying. Trust in him all ye people, powre forth your hearts before him. Selah.

Explication and proofe. This Psal. is very notable, no lesse for the wisdome, then for the earnestnes of the holy Prophet to this purpose; as was made plaine from the interpretation thereof. In the which, it was more largely declared then now time will suffer to be repeated, that the faithful seruant of God, reioiceth in that victorie, which (through the grace of God) he had obtained, against his troublesome temptations: in that he did bid silence (as it were) to his soule, against all impatient murmurings, by a quiet attendance vpon Gods mercy. In the same confidence also he triumpheth against his aduersaries. Neuertheles, because he felt his naturall infirmitie and corruption still present with him, he doth (together with this holy and triumphant reioycing) admonish his soule, to continue still in silence to God, and in a quiet resting vpon him, whithout wearines in waiting. And thus this first part of the Psal. vnto the 8. v. doth very liuelily represent vnto vs, the nature of faith, which continually animateth it selfe, to a holy strife and resistance, against the temptations of the flesh, the world and the diuell. For the beleeuing man, is not to be imagined, to be as one altogether at rest, and as one rowing at pleasure in a still and calme water; but hee is rather to be likened to one, that is (for the most part) tossed in the rough and raging waues of the maine sea, where one huge billow followeth vpon the neck of another: so that if hee should not looke well to his tackle, & cast the anker-hold of his soule, into the sure hope of Gods deliuerance, he could not be saued. And this plainely sheweth, that although the doctrine of beleeuing in God, is a lesson wherewith wee begin to teach and catechize children; yet it is in the practise of it, so great a lesson, that the oldest among vs, haue not so learned it, that we may perfitly take it forth, as children vse to speake.

Wherefore, let vs I pray you (euen al and euery one of vs) giue diligent heed to the Prophets holy exhortation; whom God hath set forth, as a most experienced School-maister of faith vnto vs, as it followeth in the latter part of the Psal. When at any time we find our selues combred in our minds (euen as if we should be ouerwhelmed with temptations) let vs practise the remedy which he telleth vs of, frō his own probatum-est: that is, let vs empty our hearts, by powring forth our complaints and supplications to our good and mercifull God. So no doubt shall the force of all the temptations bee broken, and continually let out, as the swelling waters by a most commodious sluce.

Neither

Beliefe in one onely God.

Neither let vs marueile, though toward the end of our Pſalme, the Prophet ſo greatlie debaſeth truſt in Man or in Riches: for alas, what are they, to deliuer or ſaue a man, &c?

Wherefore, ſeeing (as the Prophet concludeth) both power and mercie belonge vnto God: let vs (according to the paterne which is ſet before vs) quietly repoſe our ſoules, onely in and vpon the Lorde; nothing doubting, but with him wee ſhall finde moſt tempeſtiue, ſeaſonable, and happie deliuerance and ſaluation.

Reade alſo Pſalm: 33. 16. 17. and 146. 3. &c. Thus then, wee haue Dauid for one notable example. But he is not alone: wee haue Abraham alſo, Geneſ: 15. 6. & Rom. 4. 3. Abraham beleeued the Lord, and hee counted that to him for righteouſnes. And Paul, Acts 27. 25. I beleeue God (ſaith hee) that it ſhall be ſo, as it hath bene told me. Yea we haue a multitude of examples, which the Apoſtle calleth a clowd of witneſſes: Heb: ch: 11. And v. 6. of the ſame ch: it is affirmed generallie, that enery one that cometh vnto God, muſt not onely beleeue that God is: but alſo, that hee is a rewarder of them that ſeeke him.

Hitherto, concerning the proofe and ground of the article.

The meaning of it.

Queſtion. NOw in the ſecond place, how were you taught, according both to the doctrine, and alſo to the examples of faithfull men, recorded in the holie Scriptures, to vnderſtand theſe wordes: I beleeue in God?

Anſwere. I haue bene taught, that in profeſſing that I doe beleeue in God; my meaning muſt bee this, that I am verelie perſwaded, that the onely true God of Heauen and of Earth, is, and (according to his moſt holie and faithfull couenant) will forener be my good and gracious God, in all things: and that therefore, I doe vndoubtedly put my whole truſt and confidence in him, looking for all good things from him, for comfort in all and againſt all euill, and finally for my deliuerance out of all euill, and for eternall happines and glorie in his heauenly kingdome, through his free grace and mercie alone.

This is ſo euident, from that which hath alreadie bene declared, that wee will not ſtand vppon any further explanation or proofe of it. We will therefore goe on forwarde.

But before yee can beleeue in the onely true GOD aright, it is neceſſarie that yee knowe, who, and what manner of one, God is; that yee may be able to put an infinit difference betwixt him, and all things whatſoeuer beſides.

This hath bene partlie declared from the preface or generall reaſon of the tenne Commandements, in the former parte of our Treaſurie. Yet becauſe the more full declaration, or (as we may ſay) adornation and enriching of this excellent point of Doctrine, belongeth to the Goſpell; therfore it is meet, that here wee doe make a more full inquirie into it.

This wee may doe (as I ſuppoſe) in the order following.

Firſt, if wee ſearch out and ſorte togither, the excellent titles of the Deitie, which ſhew and declare what manner of one hee is, moſt entirelie in his owne Diuine nature.

Secondly, if wee conſider what thoſe titles bee, which ſhew what manner of one hee is, in reſpect of his creatures. And therein: firſt, what hee is more generallie toward all. And then more particularlie, what hee is: Firſt, in reſpect of their ſeuerall degrees in humane ſocietie: and then, in regard of their ſeuerall eſtate and condition touching the life and worlde that is to come, concerning both the wicked & alſo the Godlie. But principally if we call to mind, which thoſe moſt gratious Titles of God are, which concerne his elect people, and holie Churche, which is the moſt proper (and as we may ſay) the eſſentiall argument of our Chriſtian beleefe.

Not, that wee think that anie thing in God, is to be ſeuered from his nature, as if it were accidentall in or to him: For we know, that he was Eternallie, and in all perfection, that which hee is, without beginning, and so shall continue the same for euer, and world without end: but partly because we are to respect the order and time, both how and when, God hath manifested himselfe, by his externall works, either of creation and gouernment: and partly because we seeke some helpe to succour the weaknes of our vnderstanding, and the frailty of our memorie thereby.

Question. First therfore, I desire that yee rehearse those titles that doe shew vnto vs, what manner of one God is, most entierlie in his own nature. Which are they?

Answere. First, as our Sauiour Christ teacheth vs: Ioh: 4. 24. God is a Spirit (that is to say) he is a most spirituall, and Diuine nature, or Essence, and Beeing.

Explication and proofe. That is the meaning of our Sauiour Christ indeed. For he doth not in those words speake of the third person of the Trinitie, but of God in his Diuine nature, simplie and indefinitlie considered: so that it is the same in sense, with that which God himselfe saith of his owne nature and essence, in that he calleth himselfe: I am, that I am, Exo: 3. 14. As though the Lord should say: I am such a one as cannot be comprehended of any creature, as touching the perfection and Eternitie of my nature: who doe cause all other things to bee, but am caused of nothing, &c. And of the same word (as it is vsed in the holie language) doth the Lord vsually call himself by the name Iehouah; to the end he might be acknowledged, not only a perfect beeing in himselfe, & the onely eternall and efficient cause of all creatures: but also to be the cause of the effecting of all his promises and blessings, in the proper times, & seasons therof: as the Lord doth interpret his owne meaning. Ex: 6. 2. 3. Moreouer (saith the text) God spake vnto Moses, and said vnto him, I am the Lord, and I appeared to Abraham, Isaak, and to Iaacob, by the name of Shaddai, (that is all-mightie, or all-sufficient God) but by my name Iehouah was I not knowen vnto them. That is, I promised to Abraham, Isaak & Iaacob, the land of Canaan, for an inheritance; but I did not performe it vnto them, as touching the reall, and actuall possession of it, as I will now to you their posteritie, &c: as it followeth in that chapter. It is asmuch as if the Lord should haue said to the Iewes, at the cõming of Christ in comparison of the former ages, that hee neuer shewed himselfe so manifestlie, or by his name Iehouah, as hee did then: in so much as all the promises of God are Yea & Amen in Christ. In which respect, our Sauiour Christ himselfe telleth his disciples, that they were blessed aboue all other that were before thē: in so much, as they nowe saw and heard, that which the Prophets and Righteous men among them, desired to heare and see, but could not. Wherfore, worthilie might they then, and wee our selues now, in speciall manner hearken to the exhortation of the 68. Psal: vers: 4. Sing vnto God, sing praises to his name, exalt him that rideth vpon the heauens, in his name Iah, and reioyce before him. & Isa: ch: 26. 4. Trust in the Lorde for euer: for in the Lord God (Be Iah Iehouah) there is strength for euermore. Read also this name Iah, Ps: 89. 8. A mightie Lorde, Chasin Iah. and Ps: 94. twice, verses 7. and 12. and Ps: 118. fiue times, and 135. vers. 4 And in composition often times Halleluiah: praise yee the Lord. Iah, is but as it were a contraction of the name Iehouah. It noteth the Eternitie, yea the Sempiternitie or perpetuall eternitie of God, without beginning & without ending, He that was, & is, and is to come: as this name is interpreted in the new Testament, and applyed to Christ our Iehouah, the Lorde our righteousnes: as wee are after to obserue, when wee come to consider of the Deitie of his person.

God in respect of his Eternitie, calleth himselfe also the First, and the Last. Isai: 44. 6. and chap: 48. 12. I my selfe euen I am the first, I am also the last. & ch: 41. 4. I the Lorde, doe the first worke, & I am he that doth the last. Genes: 21. 33. Abrahā called vppon the name of Iehouah, the euerliuing God.

Question. But what other titles are there, which doe more entierly then the rest declare the nature of God?

Answere. Next vnto the name Iehouah, which (as I haue learned) wee doe English by the name Lord, & therby are to vnderstand his eternall nature & beeing, as was euen now declared: the most vsuall title of the Lord, is God: the which word as I haue bene also taught, is vsed of vs, in stead of that which signifieth in the Hebrew language, the almightines or omnipotencie of God, as though hee should call him the God of all might or power.

Explication and proofe. So is it indeed: For the Hebrew word El, or Eloah, & in the plurall number Elohim, Belefe in one onely God.

Elohim, ſignifieth the power, yea the manifold power and vertue of the Diuine nature: yea & with ſome learned interpreters alſo, the diſtinction of the perſons in God, vnto whom equallie, the almighty power of the diuine nature of God, doth belong, as we ſhall further conſider afterward, by the grace of God. Thus then the moſt vſuall titles, belonging to the nature of God, are in our language, Lord and God: as though we ſhould call him (as in other words we doe) the Eternall & Almightie God. In regard of which eternitie of God, the name of God, is oftentimes in the holy ſcriptures, ſaid to be eternall: & likewiſe, that his mercie endureth for euer: & that all his promiſes are ſure and ſtedfaſt; that his faithfulnes ſhall neuer faile; that his throne is for euer; & that his righteouſnes is everlaſting; and that ther is no end of his kingdome. And in reſpecte of his omnipotencie. He that is mightie hath done for mee great things (ſaith the Virgin Marie) and holie is his name. Luk: 1. 49. And the almightie God by the name Shaddai, Pſal: 68. 14. and Pſ: 91. 1. and often in the book of Iob, ch: 5. 17. & ch: 6. 4. 14. and chap: 8. 3. 5. and chapt: 22. fiue times, verſes. 3. 17. 23. 25. 26. But of the titles of the iuſtice, & mercie, & gouernment of God, we ſhall haue further occaſion to rehearſe them among ſome other ſorts of the titles of God.

The meaning of it.

El, & Elohim.

Pſalm: 50. 1. Deut. 32. 15. Eloah.

LEt vs therefore come to thoſe, which ſhew what manner of one God is named to be, in reſpect of his creatures: wherin alſo are noted the actions or works, as likewiſe the diuine properties and attributes of God.

Queſtion. And firſt (to ſpeake more generallie) which are they?

Anſwere. Creator, gouernour, and preſeruer of all things, moſt high poſſeſſor of heauen and earth, The Lord God of all fleſh, and of the Spirits of all fleſhe. The ſearcher of the hearts and reynes, Iudge of the whole worlde, who iudgeth without reſpect of perſones: The iudge which maketh lowe, and which maketh high, Lord of hoſts, and if ther be any other like to theſe?

Explicatiõ & proofe. Theſe are euery where to be found in the holie Scriptures Creator Eccleſ: chap: 12. 1. and Iſai: ch: 42. 5. and chap: 45. 12. & ver. 18. Acts 17. 43. &c. Pſalm: 33. 6. 7. 8. 9. Pſalm: 74. 16. 17. And Pſalm: 94. 9. Iob. chapt: 32. 22. &c.

Gouernour, Pſal: 22. The Lord ruleth among the Nations. And Pſ: 33. 10. 11. The Lord breaketh the Counſell of the heathen, and bringeth to nought, &c. He that chaſtiſeth the Nations, Pſal: 94. 10. and Pſalm: 47. 8. God reigneth ouer the heathen. And Pſal: 66. 7. Hee ruleth the world by his power, Iſai: 16. 1. The ruler of the worlde. Preſeruer, Iob, chapt: 7. 20. O thou preſeruer of men. And 1. Timot. 4. 10. Wee truſt in the liuing God, who is the preſeruer of all men, ſpecially of thoſe that beleeue. And Pſalm: 36. 6. Hee that preſerueth man and beaſt. No man could haue anie power or authoritie to gouerne, if God did not giue it him. Iohn chap: 19. 11. and Rom: 13. 4.

Moſt high God, poſſeſſor of Heauen and Earth, Geneſ: 14. 22. and. Pſalm. 104. 24. Tremell. The Lord God of all fleſh, Ierem. 32. 27. & of the Spirits of all fleſh, Numb: 16. 22. and chapt: 27. 16. And Hebr: 12. 9. Father of Spirits. Zech: 12. 1. The Lorde who hath formed the Spirit of man within him, &c. And Ezech: 18. 4. All ſoules are mine, both the ſoule of the Father, and alſo the ſoule of the ſonne are mine. Searcher of hearts and trier of the reines. 1. Sam. 16. 7. The Lord beholdeth the heart. And 1. Kings. 8. 39. The Lorde onely knoweth the hearts of all the children of men. And Prou: 16. 2. The Lorde pondereth the Spirits. Pſalm: 7. 9. The righteous God trieth the hearts and reynes. And Ierem: 11. 20. and chap: 17. 10. I the Lord ſearche the heart, and trie the reynes, Acts. 15. 8. God which knoweth the hearts. and 1. Theſſ: 2. 4.

Iudge of the whole world: Gen: 18. 25. Shall not the iudge of all the world doe right? ſaith Abraham to the Lord. Read alſo Iob. chap: 34. 10. &c. 19. He iudgeth without reſpect of perſons. Deut: 10. 17. 18. Acts 10. 34. Rom: 2. 11. And in many other places, The iudge who maketh lowe, who alſo maketh high. Pſalm: 75. 7. Lorde of Hoſtes. Pſalm: 46. 7. The Lorde of Hoſtes is with vs.

Beleefe in one onelie God.

The meaning of it.

And Psalm: 82. thrise in that Psal: And Ps: 84. fower times. and Psa. 89. 8. O Lord God of Hostes, who is like vnto thee; which art a mightie Lorde, and the truth is about thee? 32. 18. & Amos 4. 13. The Lord of Hostes is his name.

And note also, that the works of God, not onely of Creation, & of the ordinarie course of Gouernment, but also his extraordinarie and wondrous works, partly such as he worketh by his own immediate hand, & partly such as he worketh by the ministerie of his seruants, both for his people, and against the wicked; they are so manie declarations of his diuine wisedome, mercie, iustice, &c. According to that Psal: 9.16. The Lord is knowne by executing iudgement. Selah. A point worthie singular obseruation. And in respect of his mercie, according to that Psal: 68. 20. This is our God, euen the God that saueth vs. &c.

Question. NOwe which are the titles of God in a more particular respect of the degrees of his people, in humane societie?

Answere. He is in this respect, called the most high, & excellent, he that inhabiteth Eternitie, whose name is the Holie one. Isai: 57. 15. & Ps: 83. 18. The most high ouer the whole Earth. & Ps: 97. 9. And 1. Tim: 1. 17. The King euerlasting, immortall, God, onely wise. And ch: 6. 15. 16. He that is blessed, & prince onely, the King of Kings, & Lord of Lords, who only hath immortalitie, & dwelleth in the light, that none cā attain vnto, whō neuer man saw, neither cā see, vnto whō be honor & power euerlasting. Amē.

Explication & proofe. This title of GOD (Gneljon, the most high) is often in the Psalms, namelie in these, 7. 9 18. 21. 46. 47. 50. 56. 57. 73. 77. 78. 82. 83. 87 91. 92. 107.

Read also, 1. Chron: 29. 11. 12. 13. and Psal: 24. 7. 8. 9. 10. The king of glorie: that is, the most glorious King. And 82. 1. God standeth in the assemblie of Gods. (For Iudges & magistrates assembled, are the honourable assemblies which God himselfe hath called to the seate of iustice,) and hee iudgeth among Goddes: that is, among the same Iudges & magistrates, gathered togither in his name: either ratifying euery right sentence which they giue, or reproving the contrarie, as it followeth in the same Psalme. For all Iudgement is properlie the Lords; it is his soueraigne prerogatiue, belonging as it were to his Crowne and Dignitie: Deu: 1. 17. & 2. chro: 19. 6. 9. 10. 11. Read also Eccles: ch: 5. 7. If in a Countrie thou seest the oppression of the poore, and the defrauding of iudgement & iustice, be not astonied at the matter. For he that is higher then the high regardeth, yea, he that is most high aboue them. Where the word (Gebhohim) vsed in the plurall nūber, noteth the most high excellencie of God. And that also (as some interpret it) in respect of the most high misterie of the holy Trinitie. In Ezra: & Nehē: God is diuers times called, the God of heauen. Thus we see what manner of one God is, in comparison of those that bee in higher place aboue the rest. Though they be high, yea higher powers, as Ro: 13. 1: yet God onely is the most high. Wheras these are mortall: Ps: 146. 3. 4. & Isa: 51. 12. The Lord God is immortall. Though they dwell in Princely Palaces, yet their dwelling places are nothing cōparable to the habitation of his heauenly glorie. They are many, & so their gouernment is a parted gouernmēt: but God is one, & hath the whole soueraigntie, entierly vnited in himselfe. Ps: 47. 6. 7. 8. 9. God is called also oftentimes in the holy Scriptures, (Adonai) the chief Lord, authoriser, & supporter of all Lordship and Gouernment. And therfore the title is in a speciall forme of writing attributed to God, as some obserue (Adonai, not Adon, or Adoni,) as it is applied to mē. And in this respect of his soueraignty, he is called Adonei Adonim) Ps: 136. 3. the Lord of Lords, that is, the Lord of all that haue gouernment, whether domestical, eccl: or ciuill. And Mal: 1. 6. The plural nūber for the singular, in the same sense, twise in the same verse. Hence, or according to this, the word (Heden) is vsed for (basis or sustentaculum) the foundation of a thing.

Question. NOwe further, which are the Titles of God, which shewe what manner of one, God is; in respect of those of inferiour estate and low degree, who are humbled in themselues, &c?

Answer. Hee is the Father of Mercies, the God of all consolation and comfort. 2. Corinth: 1. 1. 3. 4. and chapt: 7. 6. The God that comforteth the abiecte. Hee is the Father of the Fatherles, and iudge of the Widowes: Psalm: 68. 5. and Psalm: 113. 6.

who is like vnto the Lord our God, that hath his dwelling on high? who abaseth himselfe to behold things in the heauens and in the earth. Hee raiseth the needie out of the dust, and lifteth vp the poore out of the dung, &c. And Psalm: 146.7. He executeth iustice for the oppressed, he giueth bread to the hungry. He looseth the prisoners. &c. It followeth that you shew which those kind of titles are, which declare what manner of one our God is against the wicked, whether Princes or any other.

Question. Which may they be?

Answere. He ouerthroweth the way of the wicked, as it followeth in the same: 146, Psalm, He is terrible to the Kings of the earth: Psal. 76, 12. Yea generally, it is a fearefull thing for any contemptuous sinner to fall into the hands of the liuing God. For vengeance belongeth to the Lord, and he will recompence. Heb: 10, 30, 30, 31. and Rom: 12, 19, according as Psal: 94, He is expresly called, God the auenger.

Explicatiõ & proofe. To this purpose we may call to mind againe, That God iudgeth without respect of persons. For seeing he will not haue his magistrates to respect the poore in any euill cause: Exod: 23, 3, and Leuit: 19, 15, Much lesse will God himselfe deale partially.

Question. NOw in the last place, what are those titles of God, which doe concerne his Church, and that speciall fauour which he beareth to it, and to euerie true member thereof?

Answere The Lord God of the Hebrewes: and the God of Abraham, Isaak and Iaacob, or Israel: in many places of the holy Prophets. The holy one, Iob. cha: 6. 10. The holy one of Israel: Isai. cha: 6. 3. and 41. 14. and cha: 43. 15. and Luke. cha: 1. 49. Holy is his name. The hope of Israel: Ierem. 14. 8. and Psal. 46. 1. and 62. 8. yea the hope of all the ends of the earth. Psal: 65. 5. The God both of Iew and Gentile. Rom: 3. 29. Redeemer, Deliuerer and Sauiour of his people: as he is often called, and as he himselfe calleth himselfe, in the writings of the Prophets, and euery where else in the holy Scriptures.

Explicatiõ & proofe. We shall finde it to be true for a good taste, if we doe call to minde the testimonies alledged before out of Isaiah, to proue that there is but one onely God, who there is called, the onely Sauiour. And likewise, The God of our saluation. Psal: 68. 19. 20. and Psal: 25. 5. and 27. 9. Moreouer Isaiah chap: 41. 14. The Lord calleth himselfe the redeemer, and the holy one of Israel. And chap. 44. 6. and chap: 47. 4. and chap: 48. 17. and chap: 49. 7. and chap: 59. 20. I know that my redeemer liueth, saith Iob, chap: 19. 25. This redeemer (as well writeth F: Iun:) is the father in the sonne by the spirit. And to this end and purpose, is the Lord also called the God who onely worketh wonders, for the deliuerance and safety of his people. Psal: 77, 14, and Psal: 72, 18, and 136, 4. And Dauid for his part, calleth God his deliuerer out of all his trouble, and from all his enemies. 2, Sam: 4, 9. and Psal: 18, 48. And otherwhere, a present helpe in time of neede: &c. And againe, Great are the troubles of the righteous, but the Lord deliuereth them out of all. He is the King of Saints: Reuel: chap: 15, 3. In all which respects, he is called The blessed one: that is, he that is for his incomparable goodnes to be blessed and praised aboue all, yea euen the wicked being Iudges. Marke, chap: 14, 61.

And thus we haue holpen our selues with some distinction of the manifold titles of God, that from thence we might learne, what manner a one our God is, in whom onely wee are to beleeue. There are some places of Scripture, wherein the principall of these titles, are purposedly set downe together. It were therefore to good purpose, that you doe rehearse some one or two of them.

Question. Which may they be?

Answere In the 6, and 7, verses of the 34, of Exodus: God himselfe proclaimeth his owne diuine name and nature in these words. The Lord, the Lord, strong, mercifull, and gratious, slow to anger, and aboundant in goodnes and truth, reseruing mercie for thousands, forgiuing iniquitie, transgression, and sinne, but not making the wicked innocent, visiting the iniquitie of the fathers, vpon the children, and vpon childrens children, to the third and fourth generation.

The

The ſame, almoſt word for word, is repeated by Moſes: Numb: 14. 18. which he maketh the ground of that his prayer, whereby he intreated and obteined mercy for the people, who had greeuouſly prouoked the Lord to anger againſt them by their infidelitie. Reade alſo Deut. 10. 17. 18. and Pſal. 103. 7. 8. &c. The like is in many other places. The which we muſt not think tedious to ſearch out, and to obſerue more diligently, from time to time. For when men of this world, are exquiſite in ſeeking out, and blazing and ſetting forth the titles and ſtiles of earthly Princes: ſhall not the ſeruants of God, much rather, vſe all holy diligence, to ſeeke and enquire after the knowledge of the excellency of God, what his diuine ſtile is; infinitely exceeding all the multiplied titles, that can be attributed to all the Princes of the world? Yes, & the rather are we to vſe al diligẽce herein, for the reproofe of the ſottiſh rudenes of a number who (notwithſtanding they are carefull to obſerue the titles of men) they wil not wholie and right out (as ſome vſe to ſpeake) or with any reuerence vtter one title of God. He is not God Almightie in the mouthes of many, but God a might: as if they might bee haile-fellow well met with him.

Here therefore, we will by the grace of God, ſtaie yet a little longer in this point. For ſeeing it hath pleaſed God, to expreſſe his owne nature, not only ſimply and entierly in it ſelfe: but alſo in way of compariſon, and that partly negatiuely, and by an infinite inequalitie; partly by ſimilitudes, in a certaine proportion of reſemblance, for a further helpe of our weaknes: we wil alſo cõſider of theſe things. And firſt of this, that by an infinit diſparagement (as it were) the Lord expreſſeth himſelfe after this ſort; that he is ſuch a one as none may be compared or matched with him: As Pſal: 89. 6. Who is equall to the Lord in the heauens? and who is like the Lord among the ſonnes of the Gods? that is, of the moſt mightie vpon the earth. Wherevnto, we may make that for a true anſwere, which we reade, Pſal. 97. 9. The Lord is moſt high aboue all the earth, and much exalted aboue all gods: that is, aboue all the Angels of heauen. And againe, Pſal: 86. 8. Among the Gods (that is to ſay, among any of thoſe, to whom the name of God is giuen, whether to Angels, or men of magiſtracy and power aboue the reſt; or to falſe Gods, ſuch as are ſo, onely by Idolatrous conceit) there is none like thee ô Lord, and there is none that can do like thy workes. And Pſal: 135. 5. 6. I know that the Lord is great, and that our Lord is aboue all Gods. What ſoeuer pleaſed the Lord, that did he in heauen & earth, in the ſea, and in all depthes. Herein therefore, the Prophet Iſaiah is earneſt: cha. 40. 18. To whom then will ye liken God, or what ſimiliſtude will ye ſet vp vnto him? And v. 25. To whom now will ye liken me, that I ſhould be like him, ſaith the holy one? And Exo: chap. 15. 11. Who is like vnto thee ô Lord among the gods? who is like thee ſo glorious in holines, fearefull in praiſes, doing wonders! &c And Deu: 32. 31. Their God is not as our God, euen our enemies being iudges. And alſo Pſal: 115. 3. &c. Our God is in heauen, he doth whatſoeuer he will. Their Idols are ſilner and gold, euen the work of mens hands. They haue a mouth and ſpeake not, &c. And Ier. 10. 16. The portion of Iaacob is not like them: for he is the maker of all things, and Iſrael is the rodde of his inheritance. The Lord of hoſtes is his name. And Gal: 4, 8. The gods of the heathen are not gods by nature, as our God is: to wit, of a moſt ſpirituall diuine nature, infinite and eternall, as hath bene declared before.

To this kinde of expreſsing the Lord, in way of compariſon negatiuely, belongeth that which is written, Numbers 23. 19. God is not as man that hee ſhould lye: neither as the ſonne of man, that hee ſhould repent.

Likewiſe 1. Samuel. 15. 29. The ſtrength of Iſrael will not lye nor repent, for hee is not man that hee ſhould repent. Moreouer Hoſh: Chap. 11. 9. I am God and not man, the holy one in the midſt of thee, &c. And Rom: 3. 4. Let God be true, and euery man a lyar. As though he ſhould ſay, howſoeuer man is found light and inconſtant: yet this is a principle which ought to be aboue all exception, that God is alwaies, and in all things, perfectly true. And on the

Beliefe in one onely God.

The Meaning of it.

the contrary, to the ſame effect: Iſai 31.3. The Egiptians are men and not God and their horſes fleſh, and not Spirit. Therefore prayeth the Church: O God giue thou vs helpe againſt trouble, for vaine is the helpe of man. Pſalm. 108. 12. and Pſ: 20. 7. 8. and 33. 16. Herevnto alſo may bee referred theſe Titles of God, onely wiſe, or infinite in wiſedome: Epiſtle of Iude, verſ. 25. and Pſ: 147. 5. Inviſible, Heb. 11. 27. Incomprehenſible. Pſ: 145. 3. His greatnes is incomprehenſible. Immortall, as before: 1. Ti. 1. 17. And who onely hath immortalitie ch: 6. 16. He that Reigneth of olde. Pſ: 55. 19. and Dan. 7. 9. and Iſai: 51. 9. 10. For theſe alſo haue a reference of compariſon, in reſpect of creatures. For man is mortall, and all things elſe tranſitorie, and mutable: God is not ſo: Hee is the euerliuing God, Pſ: 102. 23. 24. &c. There is no change in him, he is alwaies the ſame. Iames: 1. 17. And Ierem: 10. 10. The Lorde is the God of trueth: hee is the liuing God, and an euerlaſting King, &c. Enerie Creature hath his limited ſubſtance and place: yea place it ſelfe is limited. But God filleth all places, yea he comprehendeth them, bnt is not comprehended. Hee filleth heauen and earth. Ier. 23. verſ. 23, 24. Hee is greater then all creatures. Iſai: ch: 40. 12. &c. Not that wee are to aſcribe any materiall magnitude or greatnes to God (for he is a Spirit) but ſuch a greatnes as is to vs incomprehēſible, as was ſaid in the Pſalm. Such a greatnes, as filling all places, doth therwithall after a ſort fill all things, he being in them, & they hauing their being in & by him, though he be in no wiſe intermixed with any of them. So that when wee look vpon all things, and ſee the beautie of them, and comprehend in ſome meaſure the greatnes of the heauen and the earth: wee muſt conceyue of God to bee of an infinite Maieſtie and Glorie, euen by the greatnes of his throne and footeſtoole, &c.

Yea and though man hath much knowledge; yet beſide that hee hath none which God hath not giuen and taught him, according to that in the Pſ: 94. 10. & Iſa: 28. 24. 25. 26. And 1. Cor: 7. ver. 7. Beſides this I ſay, How little do we knowe of his wayes, and of his infinit knowledge and Iudgements, which are vnſearcheable? Iob: 26. 14. &c. Read ch: 9. & ch: 33. 13. 14. Read alſo Iſai: 40. 13. 14. Rom. 11. 33. O the deepnes of the Riches, both of the Wiſedom: and knowledge of God! How vnſearchable are his iudgemēts, & his wayes paſt finding out! For who hath knowne the minde of the Lorde? or who was his Counſeller? Or who hath giuen to him firſt, and hee ſhall be recompenced? For of him, and through him, and for him are all things: to him be glorie for euer. Amen. Let men therfore be as wiſe as they may be: that is, euen as wiſe as it ſhall pleaſe God to make them: yet GOD onely, is perfectly wiſe, like as our Sau: Chriſt ſaith of God, Hee onely is good: to wit, as touching the fountain, & alſo the perfection of goodnes.

And thus God vouchſafeth by ſpeach of compariſon, noting (as was ſaid) an infinit diſparagement betwixt him & all creatures, to giue vs ſome help toward the knowledge, which wee in our weakenes may be able to conceiue of him.

Let vs now come to thoſe familiar ſimilitudes, wherby it pleaſeth God, to expreſſe himſelfe in a certaine proportion, for a further helpe of our weakenes.

Theſe ſimilitudes wherevnto God likeneth himſelfe, they are partlie in reſpect of his Church and children: and partlie in reſpect of the wicked.

And that we may by an hyſteroſis beginne firſt with thoſe that concerne the wicked: God is in reſpect of them compared to a mightie Warriour to ouerthrow them: Exod: 15. 3. The Lord is a man of Warre, his name is Iehouah. And Pſalm. 76. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. There brake hee the arrowes of the bowe, &c. And Pſalm: 78. 65. 66. &c.

He is compared to a jealous houſband, that will take reuenge of their ſpirituall fornication: as in the 2. Commandement, & Ezod: 34. 14. The Lord whoſe name is iealouſe, is a iealouſe God. And Deuterono: 32. 21. They haue mooued mee to iealouſie, with that which is not God. And Nahum: chapt: 1. 2. Hee is compared to a Lion, or Beare of the Foreſt, in reſpect of his fearefull vengeance, to terrifie men from ſin. Pſ: 50. 22. Amos 3. 8. & Iſa: 31. 4. Yea & ſometime toward his owne children, Iſa: 38. 13. Hoſe: 5. 14. and ch: 13. 7. 8.

Beliefe in one onely God. The Meaning of it.

Finally, our God is to the wicked, euen a consuming fire. Deuter: 4. 29. and Hebr: 12. 29. Read also Isai. 33. 14.

Isai. 60. 1. 2. 3. 19. 20. and Psalm. 27. 1. God is the light of his Seruants. & Ps: 43. 3.

But vnto the Church and people of God, who truely beleeue in him, feare him, and walke in his wayes: The Lorde is a quiet and peaceable resting place. Psalm: 90. 1. Lorde thou hast bene our habitation, from generation to generation.

Hee is a Sanctuarie of refuge in time of danger. Isai: 8. 13. 14. A strong Tower of defence. Prou: 18. 10. and Nahum: 1. 7. The Lorde is God, and a strong holde in the day of trouble, and hee knoweth: (that is, hee tenderly regardeth them that trust in him.) Hee is the rocke of their saluation. Psalm: 89. 26. and the horne of their saluation. Hee is my rocke and my fortresse, saith Dauid: Psalm: 18. 2. And Psalm: 92. 15. The Lorde my rock is righteous. And Psalm: 95. 1. Let vs sing aloude to the rocke of our saluation. Reade also, Prouerbs, 30. 5. Hee is a shielde to those that trust in him.

And manie times in the Psalmes. Namely Psalm: 59. 11. and Psal. 115. 9. 10. 11. and 119. verse. 114. And Genes: 15. 1. The Lord saith to Abraham, Feare not Abraham, I am thy buckler, and thy exceeding great reward.

According to that Deuteron: 33. 29. Blessed art thou O Israell: who is like vnto thee, O people saued by the Lorde, the shielde of thine helpe, and sworde of thy glorie. &c. And Psal: 17. 8. and 57. 1. And againe Psal: 63. 7. and 91. 4. Hee is compared to a henne, gathering her chickens vnder her wings, for defence against the Kyte. Like as our Sauiour Christ speaketh of himselfe. Matth: 23. 37. But among all similitudes, the Lord vseth none so plentifully, as he doth man himselfe, for a representation of his Diuine vertues, insomuch as hee made him of of all other earthly creatures, more answerable to his own similitude and likenes, & so the more fitte to resemble himselfe by. And therfore he speaketh of himselfe, as hauing a resemblance to man, in all his powers, and parts, both inward and outward. Yea therfore also, hath he chosen to represent himselfe, sometimes to his seruants, in the likenes and shape of man by vision. Yet with such a dissimilitude, as was most fit to set out the excellencie of the diuine Maiestie and glorie, exceeding all humane representation & likenes. 1. Kings, 22. 19. Isai: chap: 6. 1. Ezech: ch: 1. 26. 27. and Dan: 7. 9. 10.

The particular speaches, (wherby the Lord is spoken of) as hauing a soule, a heart, a head, face, eyes, nostrills, mouth, hands, feet, &c: they are so frequēt in the Scriptures, that it is needles, and would be ouerlong to rehearse, in what respect the Lord doth thus speak of himselfe. We may read them to very good purpose, in the beginning of the first booke Of the substance of religion, by Amandus Polanus, who hath diligently gathered them together, and learnedly interpreted them to our hand. The eyes of the Lord, note his wisedome and prouidence, his mouth, the declaration of his will, his arme and right hand, his invincible power and gouernment, his feete and footesteppes, the proceeding and execution of his iudgements, &c. Psal: 68. 24. and Psal: 77. 18. and 89 51.

But in all such speaches, we must beware that we conceiue in our mind, nothing carnally of the diuine and Spirituall nature of God. For as it is said in the book of Iob: ch: 10. 4. that he hath no carnall eyes, neither seeth as man seeth: so is it to be acknowledged concerning the rest. For in so much as our Sauiour Christ saith of Spirits that are creatures, that they haue not flesh & bones, Lu: 24. 39 much lesse is the Creator of Spirits, to be thought to haue so; or to bee any substance of any shape and outward forme.

And thus, if we seek to know God, according to the instructions and testimonies of the holy Scriptures: we shall by the grace of God, know him as he is to be known, a thousand fold more perfitly, thē by all Philosophicall conceit & discourse of reason: & accordingly, we shal rightly beleeue in him. Yet, whē we haue vsed all good & holy diligence, we must rest our selues, in that knowledge which is vnto sobrietie. For as touching the nature of God, (as he is in himselfe) we cannot knowe it but by his backe parts, as hee himselfe speaketh. As for his most perfect glorie, which shineth aboue all visible britghtnes as it were were in his face, we cannot possibly behold or looke vpon it, saue onely as hee hath reuealed himselfe, in the face of our Lord Iesus Christ. 2. Cor. 4. 6. And yet this knowledge also is passing knowledge, as touching the full perfection of it. Ephes: 3. 19. And Galat: 4. 9. Wee cannot know God as wee are knowne of him. Hitherto therefore of the meaning of the Article, I beleeue in God.

It belongeth to euery Christian.

NOwe let vs inquire of the third pointe: to witte, what promise wee the Gentiles haue, that this onely true God, who was in speciall manner the God of Israell, wilbe likewise our God.

Question. What proofe haue you for this?

Answere. In the first chapter of the Prophesie of Hosea, verse 10: thus we read, In the place (saith the Lorde) where it was said vnto them, yee are not my people: it shall be saide vnto them, yee are the Sonnes of the liuing God.

And againe chapt: 2. the last verse: I will haue Mercie on her that was not pitied, and I will say to them that were not my people, Thou art my people, and they shall say, Thou art my Lorde.

This is indeede a generall promise concerning the calling of vs the Gentiles, including euerie one of euerie Nation, whosoeuer shall (in the time and season of this calling) haue grace, truelie to beleeue in God. Reade Rom: 9. 24. 25, 26. &c.

Question. But what proofe haue you, that the time of this generall calling, is allreadie come?

Answere. In the 3. chapt: to the Rom: verse 29. the Apostle Paul affirmeth, that euer since the Gospell hath bene Preached to all Nations by the Commandement of our Saviour Christ: God is to be acknowledged, not onely the God of the Iewes, but also of the Gentiles. For (saith hee) it is one God that shall iustifie the Circumcision of faith, and vncircumcision through faith.

Explicatio & proofe. By Circumcision of faith, the Apostle vnderstandeth the beleeuing Iewes, that were circumcised; as by vncircumcision the Gentiles beleeuing, though they were not circumcised. His meaning is therefore, that the same Faith in Christ, doth iustifie them both, in the sight of God. And let vs marke to our comfort (seeing the greatest cause and title that wee haue is pleaded) howe earnest the Apostle is in auerring and affirming the calling of vs the Gentiles, into the fellowship of the couenant of grace and saluation, togither with the Iewes. Is God (saith he) the God of the Iewes onelie, and not of the Gentiles also? Yes euen of the Gentiles also. Read also. 1. Corint: ch: 12, verse 13. and Ephes: 2. 11. &c. And Act: 11. 1. &c. and chap: 15. 7. &c.

This verilie is worthie our speciall obseruation. For in so much as it is certaine, that wee the Gentiles were cut off from Gods couenant: it is necessarie, that wee should haue ground and warrantise of our insition and ingrafting againe. To this purpose, the testimonies alledged, are infinitely more worthe, then their weight in Golde, as a man may say.

Question. BVt that we may proceed: seeing the faith of Gods elect (as it is called, Tit: 1. 1.) is common to all the people of God, whether Iew or Gentile (as hath bene shewed) and there is but one Faith, Ephes: 4. 5. Why doe wee in the profession of our faith single out our selues as it were (euery one for his owne part) saying: I beleeue in God, &c: And not, We beleeue.

Answere. First, because it is of the verie nature of the true Iustifying Faith, to make particular application of the Promises of Almightie God, to euerie one whom God hath indued with it.

Secondlie, because it is the duety of euery true beleeuer, to make profession of his owne Faith, rather then of any other mans: in so much as no man knoweth the truthe and certaintie of the faith of any other, so vndoubtedly as hee may doe of his owne.

Beliefe in one onely God.

It belongeth to euerie Christian.

Thirdly, because no man can be saued, but by his owne Faith.

Finallie, to the ende that euery beleeuer might be admonished and prouoked (each by the example of other) to seeke to haue the ground of faith firmely setled in him selfe: and euerie one to trie and examine himselfe concerning the truth of his owne faith, lest hee should (at vnawares) deceiue himselfe in a vaine opinion and imagination of faith, in steade of faith it selfe.

Explication and proofe.

These are verie good reasons in deede; for the particular confession, and profession, of euerie Christian his owne Faith. For the proofe wherof, touching the first, let vs consider, that it is the vsuall manner of the publishing of the Gospell, to applie it particularlie: as Roman: 10. 9. If thou shalt confesse with thy mouth the Lord IESVS, and shalt beleeue in thy heart that GOD hath raised him vp from the dead, thou shalt be saued. & Gal: 4.7. Act: ch.: 16. 14. 15. and verse 31. Beleeue and thou shalt be saued. Likewise Chapt: 8. 37. Philip saith to the Eunuch (Lord Treasurer to Candaces the Queene of the Æthiopians) If thou beleeuest with all thine heart, thou maiest be baptized. And hee answered, I beleeue that IESVS CHRIST is the Sonne of GOD. And then the Euangelist Philip baptized him. The same was the ordinarie manner of the Ministers of the Gospell, in the primitiue Church: to require a particular profession of the faith of such, as were from time to time, conuerted from Paganisme, and admitted to be Baptized for members of the Church of Christ.

Yea, it was the verie cause, why this forme of profession was collected, and set downe in this particular manner.

Touching the second pointe, reade, 1. Pet. 3. 15. 16. Be yee readie alwaies to giue an answere to euerie man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you. And that with meekenes and reuerence, hauing a good conscience, &c. And Reuelat: Chapt: 2. 17. Where the assurance of euerlasting life, and the care of newnes and godlines of life here (either of them springing from faith) they are fitlie compared to the Manna that is hidden, and to a white Stone, wherein a newe Name is written, which no man knoweth, sauing hee that receiueth it.

We may indeed, yea wee ought charitablie, and that with good hope and trust toward God, conceiue of such as are fruitfull in good workes, that they are the true elect of God; speciallie, if they are in speciall manner fruitfull, as the Apostle Paul was verie well perswaded of the Thessalonians. 1. Epi: 1. 3. 4. & 2. Epi: 1. 3. 4.

And of the Philipp: chapt: 1. 6. 7. But the certaine, yea the onely vndoubted certaintie, is principallie to be found of euery man, in the perswasion of his owne heart, confirmed vnto him by the testimonie of the Spirite of God.

Thirdly, that euery man liueth by his owne faith, and not by the faith of an other. Reade Hab: Chapt: 2. 4. The iust shall liue by his Faith. Yea by that faith whereby hee is assured, that Christ liueth in him; according to that of the Apostle Paul, Galat: 2. 20. I liue, (saith hee) yet not I nowe, but CHRIST liueth in mee: and in that I nowe liue in the flesh, I liue by Faith in the Sonne of GOD, who hath loued mee, and giuen himselfe for mee. And Rom: 8. 35. 38. 39. Hee teacheth that euery Christian ought to bee so perswaded, that hee may comfort himselfe: that neither death nor life, nor any thing else, shall bee able to separate him from the loue of God, which is, in Christ Iesus our Lorde.

For the last pointe, reade 1. Cor: 11. 28. and 2. Cor: 13. 5. Proone your selues whether you are in the faith: examine your selues: knowe yee not your owne selues, how that Iesus Christ is in you, except yee be reprobates? That is, no better then such, as for the present, haue no grounde to thinke better of themselues, then of such as bee counterfetted Christians, and no true members of Christ, &c.

So

Beliefe in one onely God.

It belongeth to euerie Christian.

So then, by all these reasons it is manifest, that the articles of our faith, and the faith and beleefe of them, doth belong to euery true Christian, that none may put them off from himselfe: as that the common sort of Christians should say; these thinges containe such high mysteries, that they belong onely to learned men: or that any of the learned should say; these are so cõmon matters, that they are rather for children then for vs. No, no: they are both for children which be of yeeres of discretion, and for growne men too: they are for the learned to studie a more exact and full knowledge of them, and also for the most simple Christian to labour to vnderstand and beleeue them in some measure: whosoeuer doe minde vnfainedly, the way of their eternall saluation.

It is not enough for any to say, I beleeue as the Church beleeueth, vnlesse he do know that the Church beleeueth as it ought to do. Nay rather, it is the duty of euery Christian, to seeke after such a measure of knowledge, that he may be able to discerne betwixt the true Church of Christ, and euerie false or Antichristian Church: betwixt the true faith of the one, and the erroneous faith of the other, &c. according to that we reade, 1. Iohn, 4. 1. Dearely beloued, (saith the Apostle) beleeue not euery Spirit, but try the Spirits whether they are of God, &c. And Math: 7, 15. Beware (saith our Sauiour Christ) of false Prophets: that is, of such as teach false doctrine, &c. Otherwise, wee shall indanger our selues to the wrath of God, and to be partakers of those plagues which GOD will cast vpon them. Reuelation: chapter: 14. 9, 10. 11, 12.

Let euery true Christian therefore, not onely say, I beleeue: but let vs euerie one be carefull, to vnderstand and beleeue those high mysteries which we doe commonly professe, euery day better then other. For this wee may be sure of, that none can beleeue them in any measure, but such as doe vnderstand them in some measure.

Question. But that wee stay not too long in one thing: Why doth euerie one of vs say: I beleeue in God: and doe not content our selues to say, I beleeue God?

Answere. In the vse of our language, when wee say: I beleeue in God, it is a more significant phrase of speach, to expresse that particular apprehension and application of Gods mercie and goodnes (as belonging particularly to euery one) then if euery one should onely say: I beleeue God.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is so in deede. For a man may be saide to beleeue God: to wit, that hee is true, though hee be interressed in no part of the benefit of the iustification and saluation of God. And besides, this phrase of speech is very fit and commodious, to put a difference betwixt our faith toward GOD, and that which wee beleeue concerning the Church of GOD. For albeit we doe beleeue, that God hath his catholike Church, consisting of Iewes and Gentiles, & that there is a communion of Saints, &c: yet we may not say without great caution, that wee beleeue in the Church, no not in the true Church of God.

It sufficeth that wee beleeue, that God hath his catholike and inuisible Church, in the which there is certainely a sweete communion of Saints: and that to the true members thereof, forgiuenes of sinnes belongeth, and also the resurrection of the bodie and euerlasting life: though wee doe not beleeue in it.

The most that wee may beleeue concerning the true Church of God, is that it is a faithfull witnesse of Gods holy truth, to vphold it against all Infidels and Athiests that denie it, and against all heretikes which seeke to deprane it: to the end it may remaine inuiolable, to the posteritie and ages to come, according to that of the Apostle Paul. 1, Timoth. 3, 15. The house of God which is the Church of God, it is the pillar and ground of truth. But of this more afterward.

Beliefe in one onelie God.

It belongeth to euerie Christian.

There is a like good vse also, of the difference which learned Interpreters put betwixt the diuerse phrases of the Latine speach: * Credere Deum: sc: esse Credere Deo: and Credere in Deum. For as touching the former two, the wicked may doe them: the last onelie, is proper to the children of God.

* To beleeue that God is. 2 To giue some credit to God, as true. 3 To repose sure trust in God, as most gratious and mercifull to a mans selfe truly beleeuing in him.

And although in the holy Scriptures (as they are written in the Hebrewe and Greeke languages) there is not so exact a difference put betweene these kinde of phrases: yet they must be diuerslie vnderstoode and interpreted, according as they are referred either to GOD, or to man. For although the preposition Beth in the Hebrewe, be ioyned with the word of beleeuing when it is referred to men, as well as to GOD: as wee finde it, Exodus, 14.31. and 2. Chronicles, chap. 20, verse, 20. (As though wee should in our language reade it thus. Beleeue ye in the Lord and in his Prophets:) yet of necessitie, must wee vse a differing interpretation, because GOD onely is simply and for himselfe to be beleeued in; but no creature, no not the holy Prophets, are to be beleeued, but for the Lords sake, and according to the Lord, as they are faithfull witnesses of his vndoubted truth.

And againe, although sometime the Preposition Beth which is in the Hebrewe, as Genesis. 15. 6. is left out in the Greeke allegation: as Romanes, 4, 3. yet wee are to vnderstand Paul, as well as Moses, to speake of one and the same true and vndoubted iustifying faith. For both of them, speake of one and the same faith of Abraham: who most faithfully and firmely beleeued in God.

The same is to bee saide of diuers other places of the newe Testament, that the word of beleeuing vsed without a preposition (as Acts, 27. 25. and 2. Timothie, 1. 12. Acts, 8. 37. Romans, 10, 9.) doth note the true Christian faith, as well as where the preposition is added: as Iohn, 6, 29, and 1. Ep: 5. 10. Rom. 4. 5. and 1, Tim: 1. 16.

Finally sometimes, though the preposition be added, as Iohn, 2, 23. and chapters 12, 42: yet the word of beleeuing so vsed, doth not note a true and vndoubted faith, in some of those that are saide to beleeue in Christ. But of this enough, though not vnprofitable, as I trust. Hetherto of the meaning of this article of our faith: I beleeue in God.

NOwe let vs come to the fourth point of our inquirie touching the same.

Question. What are the comfortable fruites and benefites, which belong to that gratious promise, which GOD of his mercie, hath made to all and euerie one of those that shall beleeue in him, that hee will assuredly bee their God?

Answer. To speake generally, It is our whole blessednes and our onely true glorie and reioycing, that wee haue the onely true GOD for our GOD. For our safetie and whole welfare vnder his protection and gouernment, in the way of his true worship and seruice, (yea euen in the manifolde afflictions and trials of this life) it is infinitely to be preferred aboue all worldly riches, honour, and pleasure, whatsoeuer might be enioyed, vnder the most flourishing gouernment and defence of the richest, mightiest, and bountifullest Monarch, of the whole world.

Explicatio and proofe. It is verily so, according as the Lord our GOD is of infinite wisedome and power, and of vnmeasurable riches and mercie, &c. aboue all the Potentates and Rulers in the whole world. For the proofe whereof, wee shall not reade in vaine, Psalm, 33, 12. and Psalme. 89. 15. 16. &c. and 144. 15. and 146, 5. Wee may see the confirmation heereof further, if wee reade Psalme. 84. 4, 5, 9, 10, 11, 12. and Psal. 141. 4. 5.

And seeing (as hath beene alreadie shewed) GOD is all onely goodnes, perfectly good, and the alone fountaine thereof: it must needes bee, that it is the onely happinesse, and (as wee may say) the summum bonum, the perfect blisse of the whole Church, and of euerie member thereof: to haue

Beliefe in one onely God.

The Comforts and benefits.

God to bee their God, and to participate of that goodnes, which is infinite in him. Reade Geneſis, 17.7, 8. I will eſtabliſh my couenant (ſaith the Lord to Abraham) betweene mee and thee, and thy ſeede after thee in their generations, for an euerlaſting couenant, to bee GOD vnto thee, and to thy ſeede after thee. &c.

It is the couenant of all mercie, not onely concerning the bleſſings of this life, but alſo concerning the happineſſe of the life to come: as our Sauiour Chriſt interpreteth it, Matthew, 22.31.32. Luke, 20.35.36.36.37.38. Reade alſo Ezek. 36, 26.27,28. &c. 37, 38. And Hebr: 8, 10. And chap. 11.13,14, 15, 16.

Verily, there is no doubt, but if wee doe truly beleeue in our onely true God, wee may aſſuredly perſwade our ſelues, that according to his manifold, and moſt gratious promiſes; hee will vſe his diuine wiſedome, power, mercie, iuſtice, faithfulnes, and truth, to our vnſpeakeable benefit aboue all that wee can aske or thinke. For what comfort and ſecuritie can be greater: nay what can be equall to this, to haue the moſt gratious promiſes of him, who is moſt faithfull, made vnto vs? Pſal. 36. 5. and 89.2. and 146.5. 6. To haue the moſt readie aide of him that is the ſtrongeſt? Rom. 8, 31. To bee guided by the counſell of him, that is the wiſeſt? Pſal. 16,7. and 73.24. Who knoweth how to deliuer thoſe that be his out of their greateſt perils & dangers: 2. Pet. 2, 9. in ſo much as to him belong the iſſues of death? Pſal. 68. 20. and 1. Cor: 13, 13. Finally, what comfort can be like to the comfort of a great offender (ſuch as wee are all before God) to ſtand at the mercie of him, that is moſt pittifull and mercifull: to all ſuch as attend vpon his mercie, and craue it of him: Pſal. 86. 15. and 147. 11. Micah, 7, 18. &c. in ſo much as it ſhall neuer be in vaine to call vpon him? Pſal. 17,6,7,8.

Behold therefore, how all things are in all perfection, in the diuine nature of God: whatſoeuer may be required, to the grounding and eſtabliſhing of vndoubting beliefe in him. If hee did onely perfectly knowe how to doe vs good, and were not able to performe it: Or if beeing wiſe and able, hee were not willing: Or beeing both wiſe, and able, and willing, if hee were not faithfull and conſtant, to confirme and eſtabliſh his goodnes toward vs: there might be ſome occaſion of doubting. But ſeeing the Lord our God, is both perfectly wiſe, and ſufficiently able, and readily willing, and conſtantly bent to doe vs good, yea to make vs for euer partakers of all his mercie and goodnes: there is no place left, why wee ſhould bee in any the leaſt doubt thereof.

Theſe comfortable fruites, and prerogatiues of faith, haue heeretofore cauſed the Church of GOD, to place all faith and truſt onely in GOD: and ſo ought they to doe ſtill. Yea, notwithſtanding wee ſhould haue at anie time (if ſo it were poſsible) as valiant and mightie Captaines and Rulers, and as tender and vigilant Foſter-fathers vnto vs, as Moſes, Ioſhua, Dauid, and other were to them: yet muſt our faith and truſt, bee fixed onely in the liuing GOD: who alone, maketh all meanes of ſuccour, mighty and effectuall for the defence of his people.

For the proofe whereof, conſider that which wee reade, Pſalme, 20. and Pſalme, 21. Heere call to minde againe, Pſalme, 89. 15. &c. and Pſalme, 144. 15. Bleſſed are the people whoſe GOD the Lord is. Wherevpon alſo, iuſtly is the exhortation made vnto all the people, that they would reioyce in him: Pſalme, 66. 1, &c. and 67, 4. and 68, 32. yea many Pſalmes together, following after the 95, Pſalme.

The experience of this comfortable fruite of faith, is teſtified in the holie Scriptures, both generally and particularly. Our Fathers truſted in thee (ſaith the Prophet Dauid) they truſted in thee, and thou diaſt deliuer them. They called vpon thee, and were deliuered: they truſted in thee, and were not confounded. Pſalme, 22, 4, 5.

Beliefe in one onelie God.

The Comforts and benefits.

And more particularly concerning himselfe, In the Lord doe I put my trust: how say ye then to my soule, flee away from your mountaine as a little bird? to wit, as one chased away as easily as a silly bird is scared from place to place: Psal. 11, 1. And Psalm. 18. 16, 17. Likewise Iehoshaphat, and Hezekiah, godly Kings of Iudah: they trusted in the Lord, and prayed vnto him, and they were deliuered from their mightie aduersaries. 2, Chron: 20, 20. and chap: 32. The Lions also did not hurt Daniel, because hee beleeued in his God. Dan: chap. 6. 23.

According to the comfort of the same experiments, iustly may we hearken to the generall incouragement of the same the holy Scriptures of God: such as we may read. Psal. 31. 24. All ye that trust in the Lord, be strong, and hee shall establish your heart. And Psal. 37, 3, 4, &c. and 55. 22. Read also Heb. 13. 5. 6. And consider that God hath bound his holy promise with an oath: that hee might thereby, helpe the weakenes of our faith. chap. 6. 17. 18. 19. Yea, this comfort may wee haue in our greatest afflictions, that the Lord will not leaue vs. Prou. 24. 16. and Rom. 8. 28. There are many comfortable testimonies, euery where in the holy Scriptures, to this end. Great therefore, is the generall comfort, and benefit of faith in one onely true GOD, euen one onely, in his diuine nature and essence, as hath beene prooued before.

And yet one thing more let vs obserue heere, the which may be of good vse for afterward: and that is this. Whereas wee doe generally ascribe all comforts to beleefe in GOD, as hee is one onely in nature, wee doe not exclude the Trinitie of Persons. For faith in the vnitie of the Godhead, and faith in the Trinitie of Persons, it is all one and the same faith: and the comfort of both, is one and the same comfort. So that as a learned Father saith well: * I cannot thinke of the vnitie, but the brightnes of the Trinitie shineth about me: neither can I distinguish the Trinitie, but my thoughts doe send me to the vnitie.

Grego: Nazianz. Ou phthano to en noesai, kai tois trisi perilampomai. Ou phthano ta tria dielein, kai eis to en anapheromai.

Onely for orders sake, and to make the doctrine of faith, and the manifold instructions thereof, more plaine: wee take the occasion heere, to gather the comforts of faith, as they are in the holy Scriptures rehearsed vnder the name of God indefinitely, and without distinction of person; as afterward wee shall likewise, by the grace of GOD, obserue the comforts which be ascribed to faith, as it beleeueth distinctly in euery person: yet so, as it continually looketh to the vnitie of the Godhead, without all distraction or diuision of the minde.

The like is to bee considered concerning the duties. But before wee come to them, let vs more particularly examine the comforts of this principle of our faith in one onely true God; in that hee is the eternall, and almightie, the most wise, and gratious Creator, Gouernour, and Preseruer of all things, the most righteous Iudge of all men, &c. according to the seuerall titles belonging vnto him.

Question. AND first, what is the comfort of this, that the Lord our God, is Iehouah, the onely eternall and euerliuing God, in whom wee liue and moue and haue our beeing, as the Apostle Paul teacheth. Act. 17. 28. Yea that he is in his diuine nature, a most holy GOD: What (I say) is the comfort of this?

Answer. The comfort arising from hence, is this; that the same our God, who hath giuen vs a beeing, and life, and moning, who also is the father of our soules and spirits: will (no doubt) preserue and maintaine vs in this life, according to his owne good will and pleasure, against all aduersarie power whatsoeuer. Yea more then this, that hee will sanctifie vs to himselfe, and effectually accomplish all the holy promises which he hath made, to his whole Church, and to euery true member thereof: concerning a most happy and glorious estate after this life, euen for euer and euer.

So indeed, the Lord himselfe assureth his people from this his name Iehoua; as we read: Exod. chap. 6, 2, 3, 4, &c. Whereupon also, the Church of God praieth against the enemies thereof, that they may be so confounded in their wicked enterprises, that they may know by experience, that God, who is called Iehoua, is God alone, euen the most high ouer all the earth: Psal: 83, 16, 17, 18. Read likewise, Psal. 31, 14, 15. I trusted in thee ô Iehouah, I saide thou art my God. My times are in thy hand, deliuer mee from the handes of mine enemies, &c. And Psal. 68: verse: 4. Exalt God in his name Iah, and reioyce before him. For according as hee is in himselfe eternall, so it pleaseth him to bee our God for euer, and euer: Psal. 48, 14. And Psal. 102, verse 24, &c. euen to the ende of the Psalme. The eternitie of the Church is lincked with the eternitie of God, by vertue of the most gracious and faithfull promise of his couenant. And Psal. 111, 9. He hath cõmanded his couenant for euer, holy and fearefull is his name. Finally, as our Sauiour Christ hath testified, Matth. 22, 32. God is not the God of the dead, but of the liuing: hee therein assuring the faithfull, of their immortalitie with faithfull Abraham, and that euen from the faithfulnesse of the immortall God. And that God, being in himselfe most holy, wil sanctifie his people; it is euidẽt by his ordaining & sanctifying of his Sabbath, euen from the beginning: Gen. 2, verses 2, 3. And Exod. 31, 12, 13, 14. And Ezek. 20, 12. God calleth it a signe betwixt him and his people, that hee doth sanctifie them. Yea, and it is a speciall meanes of sanctification, to all such as doe religiously sanctifie it by the exercise and practise of the holy duties of Gods worship. Reade also, Hab: 1, 12. Psal: 22, 3, 4, 5. And the praier of our Sauiour Christ: Iohn 17, verses 17, 18, 19. Sanctifie them with thy truth: thy word is truth, &c. All is very comfortable.

The comfort of faith in Gods almightie power, and in this, that hee is our Creator and Gouernour, followeth next in order: but seeing wee shall haue a speciall occasion offered vs hereafter, to inquire of them: wee will of purpose omit them here.

NEuertheles, we wil proceed to those comforts, which arise from other consideration; and namely from this in the next place; that the Lord our God is of a most spirituall nature and beeing, of infinite Maiestie, filling both heauen and earth, &c.

Question. What therefore is the comfort of this?

Answere. The comfort hereof is this, that God euery where present with vs by his spirit; is a mercifull beholder, pittier, and moderator of all our troubles and griefes: our vpholder in euery griefe and distresse: and finally, our deliuerer out of all our troubles, though with our bodily eyes we see him not.

Explicatiõ and proofe. For the proofe of this, read Exod. 3, 7, &c. I haue surely seene the trouble of my people which are in Egypt (saith the Lord) and I haue heard their cry, because of their taske-maisters: for I knowe their sorrowes. That which the Lord did then, hee doth continually, as the necessities of his people doe require; as we may further perceiue, by other proofes of the same kinde. As Zech: 4, 10. The eyes of the Lord goe through the whole world. Neither is he an ydle beholder, in seeing how things goe, as we may further perceiue by that we reade in the 9, chap. and 8. verse of the same prophesie. I will campe about mine house against the army, against him that passeth by, and against him that returneth, and no oppressor shall come vppon them any more: for nowe haue I seene with my eyes. Likewise, Prou. 15, 3. The eyes of the Lord in euery place behold the euill and the good. And Psal. 33, verses 13, 14. The Lord looketh down from heauen, and beholdeth al the children of men. From the habitation of his dwelling, hee beholdeth all them that dwell in the earth. He facioneth their hearts euery one, and vnderstandeth all their workes, &c. Likewise, Psal: 34. verses 15, 16. The eyes of the Lord are vppon the righteous, and his eares are open to their crye. But the face of the LORD is against them that doe euill, to cutte off their remembrance from the earth.

And Heb. 11.27. We haue the example of Moſes, who comforted himſelfe againſt the fiercenes of the king of Egypt, by looking vp to him that is inuiſible, as the Apoſtle teacheth: that is, by looking vp to God whō he deſcribeth to be hee that is inuiſible: according to that 1. Tim. 1, 17. where he is called the King inuiſible.

NOw let vs goe forward. What is furthermore the comfort of this, that he Lord our God, is moſt perfect, entier, and abſolute in himſelfe: ſo that albeit he is euery where preſent (filling heauen and earth, and vpholding all things) yet he is neuertheles, altogether an other, and moſt perfectly, (in his diuine nature and eſſence) ſeperated from them, neither is contained in any place, nor vpheld by any creature, &c.

Queſtion. What I ſay is the comfort hereof?

Anſwere. This may exceedingly comfort vs, that although all creatures in heauen and earth ſhould ſeeme to forſake vs, yea to be vtterly bent againſt vs: yet ſo long as we put our truſt in God, we may be ſure that both he can, and alſo that he will cheriſh & maintaine vs, yea in this fraile life, ſo long as hee ſeeth ſo meete, againſt all creatures that ſhould conſpire to diſcomfort and deſtroy vs.

Explication and proofe. It is true that you ſay. For God worketh moſt freely in all things: hee is nothing intangled and ſnared any way: hee is not limited, nor tyed to any ſecond meanes and cauſes. And for the proofe of this comfort, reade Heb. 13.5.6. God hath ſaid, I will not faile thee, neither forſake thee. So that wee may boldly ſay, The Lord is my helper, neither will I feare what man can doe vnto me. Read alſo, Pſal. 34, 19. The Lord is neare to them that are of a contrite heart, &c. Whereupon, well obſerueth Maiſter Caluin, that herein is contained a doctrine, full of moſt ſweete conſolation and comfort; that God doth not then leaue vs, when a huge heape of euils doe ſo ouerwhelme vs, that we are (as one would ſay) ſtifled thereby: or ſo daunted, that we cannot tell almoſt what wee may doe. His wordes vpon thoſe wordes of the Pſalme, are theſe, Plena ſuauiſſimæ conſolationis doctrina, Deum nunquam quidem a nobis diſcedere, quum malorum congeries nos quaſi examinatos obruit.

Here alſo call againe to minde, Pſal. 23, 4. Though I ſhould walke through the valley of the ſhadowe of death, I will feare no euill: for thou art with me: thy rod and thy ſtaffe they comfort me. A particular experience whereof, we finde recorded, 1. Sam. 30, 6. Where we reade that Dauid comforted himſelfe in his God, when his owne company mutinouſly intended forth-with to haue ſtoned him. Remember alſo to this purpoſe, the 46. Pſalme. And Pſalme 115. the third verſe. Our God is in heauen, he doth whatſoeuer he will. Moreouer, Deut. 8, 3. and Mat. 4, 4. Man liueth not by bread onely, but by euery word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord. And 1. Sam. 14. 6, and likewiſe, 2. Chron. 14, 11. The Lord helpeth with fewe, as well as with many. And Zechar. 4, 6. Neither by an army, nor ſtrength, but by my ſpirit ſaith the Lord of Hoſts. And Iſay. 59, 16, &c. and Chap. 63. 5. As God in the beginning made all things of nothing, without any helper: ſo, (as it pleaſeth him) he can helpe as it were without helpe, &c. But let vs proceede to ſome other particulars.

Queſtion. WHat is the comfort of this, that as the Lord our God is of an infinite, and (as one would ſay) of a tranſcendent nature, and in his diuine Maieſtie of incomprehenſible greatnes: (as Pſal. 145. 3. His greatnes is incomprehenſible) ſo he is alſo in dignitie and worthines infinitely excelling al creatures whatſoeuer?

Anſwere. The comfort hereof is, that when our God ſhall giue iudgement on our ſide: all creatures muſt be ſilent before him, and reſt in his iudgement.

In the meane while, it may iuſtly be a ſpeciall comfort to the ſeruants of God, that as they ſerue him, which is the chiefe Lord and maiſter aboue all, ſo their ſeruice is the moſt honourable and happie ſeruice that may be.

The Comforts and benefits.

Here indeed, the common prouerbe may haue chiefe place: There is no fishing to the fishing of the sea, nor seruice to the seruice of the King, &c. The reward of no earthly Prince, is or can be cõparable to the reward of the king of heauẽ. For this happines of the seruants of God, Read how they are priuiledged aboue all other, yea euen in the times of greatest danger: Isay. chap. 65, 8, 9, 13, 14. Thus saith the Lord, As wine is found in the cluster, & one saith: destroy it not, for a blessing is in it; so wil I doe for my seruãts sakes, that I may not destroy them whole. As though hee should say, were it not for my seruants sake, Israel should bee whole destroied. For so it followeth in the next verse, in these wordes: But I wil bring a seede out of Iaakob, & out of Iuda, that shall inherit my mountaine: mine elect shall inherit it, and my seruants shall dwell there. And Sharon shall be a sheepfold, &c. And verse 13. Thus saith the Lord God: behold my seruants shall reioyce, and yee shall be ashamed, &c. Read also Mal: ch. 3, 16, 17, 18. The Queene of Sheba prouounced Salo: seruãts to be happy men, in that they serued so wise a King: 1. Kin. 10, 8. but more happy was Salomon himselfe, in that hee was the seruant of the most wise God. Herein also did king David his father reioyce: as Ps. 119, 124, 125. Deale with thy seruant according to thy mercy, and teach me thy statutes. I am thy seruant, grant me vnderstanding, that I may knowe thy testimonies.

Finally, that Gods sentence shall stand on the behalfe of his seruants, so as none shall be able to reuerse it: it may be perceiued from that we read: Isay ch. 41, 1, &c. Keepe silence before me, &c. And Micah. 7, 16. The nations shall see and be confounded for all their power. They shall lay their hands vpon their mouth, &c. And Habbak: 2, 20. When the Lord chief Iustice of a nation, giueth sentence; none (no not of the bench) replieth: much lesse shall any dare reply, when the Lord of Lordes, the chiefe Iustice of all the world shall pronounce his sentence and iudgement, Read Isay 52, 7, 8, 9. and Rom. 8, 31, 32, 33, 34.

Question. WHat is the comfort of this, that the Lord our God is infinite in wisedome, and that according as he hath made all things in wisedome (as Ier. 10. 12. and Ps. 104, 24. Lord, how manifold are thy workes! in wisdome hast thou made them all) so doth he in like perfection of his diuine wisdome, order and gouerne them all. What I say, is the comfort of this?

Answere It is very comfortable to vs, in that, hereby we are assured, that there is no wisdome, nor vnderstanding, nor counsell, which can possibly preuaile against the Lord.

And likewise, it is no small comfort to so many as are wise in the Lord, and according to the instructions of his holy word: that they may thereby assure themselues, that they are truly wise, and of the truth, as the Apostle Iohn writeth. 1. Ep. chap. 3, and verse 19. And that no craft or subtiltie of their aduersaries, shall finally preuaile against them, no more then they can preuaile against God himselfe.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is true: as it is expressly testified: Pro. 21, 30, Read also, Ier. 8, 9, & ch. 9: 23, 24. Iob. 5, 12, 13. Luk. 1, 51, & 1. Cor. 3, 19, 20. Read also. Psal. 23. 4. The Lord is my shepheard &c. Yea, though I should goe through the shadow of death, I will feare no euill: for thou art with me, thy rod and thy staffe they comfort me.

Question. Now what is the cõfort of this, that the Lord our God is likewise, not onely long suffering, & of great patience toward vs, when we offend him: but also infinite in all goodnes and mercy, according to his owne most free grace and purpose? Psal. 145, 8, 9.

Answere. It cannot but be exceeding comfortable, if we consider that no multitude or greatnes of sinne, nor any indignitie & vnworthines of person, can hinder the most free course, (and as it were the streame) of Gods mercy, from those that doe truly seeke mercy and forgiuenes at his hands.

Explicatiõ and proofe. Likewise, it cannot be but exceedingly comfortable, to consider that the mercy of our God, yea that the bountifulnes of his mercy, is greater then all our wants and miseries can be: and that he will in his due time, aboundantly succour and relieue vs, in and against them all.

This infinite goodnes and mercy of God, is most comfortably described, and testified, in the 103. Psal. verses. 8, 9, 10, &c. Read also, Ier. 31, 10, 11, 12, 13, &c. and Mich. 7, 18, 19, 20, and Ezech. 16, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, &c. God is so exceeding exceeding in mercy, that the wickednes of the wicked, cannot altogether alienate, and restraine his mercy from them: Act, 14, 17. Much rather then, will he be mercifull to his children, that feare him: Isay 30. 18, 19, &c. chap. 49; 15. &c. 1. Tim. 4. 10. Yea, God preserueth bruite beastes: much more will he preserue men; specially his owne elect children, Psal. 36. 6. and 147, 9. and that also most freely euen for his owne sake Isay 43, 25. Rom. 9, 15.

Let vs proceede to the rest.

Question. What is the comfort of this, that the Lord our God is perfectly righteous?

Answere. That he wil in his good time, right all iniuries and wrongs, done to his faithfull seruants: and that he will certainely fulfill, both all his promises towards his seruants, and also all his threatenings against the wicked.

Explication and proofe. For a proofe of this comfort, arysing from the most perfect and incorrupt righteousnes of God, Read Eccles. 5. verse 7. If in a countrie thou seest the oppression of the poore, and the defrauding of iudgement and iustice, be not astonished at the matter: for he, that is higher then they that be high, regardeth, yea euen he that is the most high, aboue them all.

And further for the proofe of the rest of this answere, read 2. Thes. 1, 6, 7. and Heb. 6. 10. Rom. 3, 25, 26, and Psal. 119. verses 137, 138. Righteous art thou ô Lord, and iust are thy iudgements. Thou hast commanded thy Testimonies, which are exceeding righteous and faithfull. And Psal. 33, 5. The Lord loueth righteousnes and iudgement. And Psal. 37, 28. The Lord loueth iudgement and forsaketh not his Saints: they shall be preserued for euermore, &c. And Psal. 45, 7. Thou louest righteousnes and hatest wickednes.

Question. SHewe therefore now furthermore, what the comfort of this is, that the Lord our God is most faithfull and true, immutable and vnchangeable in all his promises: as Psal. 89, 28, &c. and 105. 8, and 110. 4, and 146. 6, Rom. 11, 29. Numb. 23, 19.

Answere. Nothing can bee more comfortable, then the assurance of Gods euerlasting mercy and fauour, to our eternall happines and saluation.

Explication and proofe. It is vndoubtedly true. The fauour of God is better then life, as Psal. 63, 3. Thy louing kindnes is better then life, therefore (saith the holy Prophet) shall my lips praise thee. And we may all of vs iustly say, as we read, Psal. 60, 6, God hath spoken in his holines therefore I will reioyce. And againe, Psal. 56, 10. I will reioyce in God because of his word &c. And Psal. 119, 162. I reioyce at thy word as one that findeth a great spoile.

YEt one thing more, and so an end of this point of our inquirie for this time.

Question. What is the comfort of all these, laide (as it were) in the ballance together? I meane that the Lord our God, one onely, alwaies without any change, is both infinitely wise, and also infinitely mercifull and righteous, and most constant faithfull and true: whereunto let vs adde, that he is also of an infinite and almightie power:

What I say, is the comfort of all these, laide as it were in the scholes, together?

Answere. The comfort hereof, shall be found by due estimate, to be aboue all valuation & waight.

Explication and proofe. It shall verily be found to be so, to all true beleeuers. If, (as was said in the beginning of this part of our inquirie) God did onely perfitly know how to doe vs good, but were not able to performe it: or if being both wise and able, hee were not likewise willing: or being wise, and able, and willing, if he were not faithfull and constant, to confirme and establish his mercy toward vs: there might be some cause of doubt and discomfort. But seeing all these meete, and are perfectly linked together, yea infinitely aboue all that perfection, which we are able throughly to discerne: so that God is euery way good, yea perfect goodnes it selfe, and therefore may iustly be called the God of all consolation and comfort, as was answered before: the comfort of the faith of euery true beleeuer, must needes exceede all comfort of sence, yea of the vnderstanding it selfe. Let vs therefore I pray you, here call againe to minde, the holy exhortation of the holy Psalmist, Psal. 31, 24. All yee that trust in the Lord, be strong &c. Psal. 34, 8. Taste yee and see that the Lord is good: blessed is the man that trusteth in him. Let vs againe and againe, to the increase of our comfort, consider that which is written, Psal. 37, 3, 4, &c. and 55, 22, & Heb. 13, 5, 6, and ch. 6, 17, 18. Where the Lord to the end hee might certifie vs, of his immutable counsell and purpose of confirming his mercy to his faithfull children, hee hath added his oath to his promise. Doubtlesse the Lord will not leaue the least of his, in the least of their troubles; much lesse will he leaue thē in the greatest of them, Pro. 24, 16. & Ps. 27, 3, 4, &c. and 76, 7, 8, & 145, 14, and 146, 7, &c, and Ps. 91. Which is to this purpose a most comfortable Psalme.

And thus feeding and solacing our soules, with the comforts of our faith in our one onely true God, Let vs cheerefully proceed to the consideration of the duties belonging to the same.

FOr is it not, thinke you, most equall, that according to the comfort of faith, which (as hath beene shewed,) is vnspeakable: that there should be, at the least in some speciall measure, an answerable care and desire, to shewe forth speciall fruites of true thankfulnes and obedience, to so good a God, who is all perfection of goodnes it selfe:

Question. I say, is it not thinke you so meete?

Answere. It cannot, with any reason, be denied, but that it is most equall and iust, that it should bee so: according to the determination of God himselfe, who in the beginning of the 17. ch. of Gen. saith thus to Abraham, the father of the faithfull: I am God all sufficient, walke thou before me, and be vpright.

Explicatiō & proofe. This indeed, may well be a general ground of all obedience, as a iust fruite due to the manifold comfort of our faith in one onely true God. For in that the Lord saith: I am God all sufficient, he giueth therby assurance of al protection and blessing (according to that ch, 15, 1. I am thy buckler, and thine exceeding great reward.) And the wordes following in the 17. ch. Walk before me; they are words requiring all good seruice and dutie, as it is further expressed in the other wordes next after them. Be thou vpright. Or as they may well be englished: Be thou entire: that is, See thou detract no part of holy obedience, but obey in one dutie as wel as in another. And accordingly there is no doubt, but Abraham had conscience, and care of walking in such a kinde of obedience before God, euen from the comfort of Gods couenant made with him, as the former words of God doe declare. Read also the notable example of Iosua, and of the people of God: Iudges. ch. 24, 14, 15, 16, 17. We will serue the Lord (say they all) For he is our God.

But it shall be profitable for vs, to inquire more particularly, into the seuerall duties, as we haue done into the seueral comforts. The which (though peraduenture, it will be found painfull to doe) yet in so much as this our labour, is imploied about the getting of treasure, to the most precious inriching of our poore soules; let vs therfore, account no paines or trauaile, too great to be spent about it: remembring well, what toile, with extreame danger, worldly minded men are usually content to indure, in an vncertaine hope of obtaining earthly, that is to say transitorie and deceiuable riches, as our Sauiour Christ calleth them Luke, Chap. 16, 9, &c.

And further also, let vs herewithall obserue (concerning the duties of faith) that some of them may be accounted as more appertaining to the truth & vprightnes of iudgement. Others to the purenes of affection, answereable to the vprightnes of the same good iudgement & holy discretion. And some againe, are belonging to life and conuersation as outward fruites of both the former.

Of these duties therefore, let vs henceforth inquire, according as the occasion shall be ministred vnto vs: and that in such order as we haue inquired after the comforts.

Beluse in one onely God.

And first, which are the duties belonging to the comfort of this, that the Lord, who hath created vs, vouchsafeth to be our God; and that he hath chosē vs for his inheritance, and therefore hedgeth and walleth about, buildeth and planteth among vs, as it were in his fee-simple; esteeming the children of the world but as cōmon or wast and heath ground, in comparison of his church: Which, I say, are the duties, belonging vnto this comfort?

Answere. Question.

As the Lord of his most free grace, hath set vs vp to be a precious and peculiar people, (euen as it were a choise inheritance to himself, as we haue seene before): so is our most bounden dutie, as a necessarie fruite of our faith, to set vp and aduance him aboue all in our hearts; esteeming him as our most honourable portion and inheritance for euer, yeelding also, at all times, the best and most plentifull fruites of obedience, which possibly we may.

Explication and proofe.

It must needes be so, according to that we read: Deut. 26, verses, 16, 17, 18. 19. And Psal. 16. verse. 5. and Psal. 119. verse 57. And Isay, chap. 51, &c. Read also, Leuit: 19, 3, 4, &c. in many verses of that chapter. Ye shall doe thus, and thus, &c: For I am the Lord your God: And Psal: 50. 7. Heare ô my people, &c. For I am God, euen thy God Finally, Ps. 95. 6. 7. Come let vs worship and fall downe and kneele before the Lord our maker. For he is our God, and we are the people of his pasture, &c.

But proceed to some other duties belonging to the same comfort:

Question. Answere.

Which may they be?

From this comfort, the grace of faith striueth against naturall infidelitie, and distrust, or doubting of the goodnes and mercy of God.

It renounceth all selfe-trust, and trust in any creature.

It abandoneth all selfe-loue and vaine glory, yea and all inordinate loue of any creature, which would hinder, or impaire our loue toward our God.

And on the contrarie.

It delighteth it selfe in the knowledge of God, & labowreth after the own growth and increase.

It maketh euery true beleeuer, willing and ready, boldly to professe his faith, yea euen before the aduersaries thereof, to the glory of God: though (if need so require) it be to the perill and losse of their life. Finally, the faith of euery true beleeuer, worketh by loue, and is (to the power of euery one of them) beneficiall and helpfull, to euery Christian brother and sister, as they themselues finde all succour and helpe from God.

Explication and proofe.

That true faith is at warre with infidelitie, it may be prooued from the praier of the man in the Gospell: Lord (saith he) I beleeue, helpe my vnbeliefe: Mark. 9, 24. And by the praier of the more choise Disciples of our Sauiour Christ: Luke. 17, 5. Lord increase our faith. Read also Psal. 42, and Psal. 43. Dauid was in earnest combate against his temptations of vnbeliefe.

That it renounceth all selfe-trust: read 2. Cor. 1, 9. Likewise, all trust in creatures; as the practise of the seruants of God, euidently sheweth: as Psal. 25. 1, and 31, 1. and euery where.

That faith striueth against selfe-loue: read Galla. 5. verse 6. and against vaine glory, as against a deadly enemie to the true faith: Iohn. 5. 44. For how can ye beleeue (saith our Sauiour Christ: speaking to the ambitious Pharisies, who receiue honour one of an other, and doe not seeke the honour which commeth of God alone? It striueth also against all inordinate loue of the creature, because it cannot stand with the loue of the father: 1. Iohn, 2, 15.

That faith delighteth in the knowledge of God, and seeketh after the own increase, the praier of the Apostles (before alledged) may confirme: as also the excellent estimation which they haue hereof, aboue all things of this world. Philip. 3, 7, 8. Read also, 1, Cor. 15, 34, and Isai: 43, 10. That it is ready to professe and vtter it selfe, to the glory of God; it may be considered from the precept of the Apostle Peter in this behalfe. 1. Ep, 3, 14, 15, 16, and ch. 4, 16, 19. And the same is plentifully confirmed, by the practise of thousands, and ten thousands of holy Martyres: who haue not regarded their liues to that ende. Read also, 2. Cor. 4, 13, &c.

Finally

Beliefe in one onely God.

The Duties

Finally, touching that loue, which euery true beleeuer beareth to his Christian brethren, as a fruit of their faith and loue to God: read Iames, 1.14,15,&c. And ch.1,27. Read also, 1, Iohn.4,7,8,20, 21, and chap.5, 1, These are the first sort of duties.

Question. NOw in the second place, which are the duties belonging to the comfort of this, that the Lord our God is eternall, euerlasting, and most holy?

Answere. It is the dutie of faith from that comfort, which the eternall, euerlasting, and most holy beeing of God yeeldeth vnto it; to acknowledge an infinite difference and inequalitie betwixt him and all other: yea euen the most excellent of his creatures, whether men, or Angels; who as they haue their beginning of God, so they are either mortall, as men here in this world, or else they haue their immortalitie onely from him, as Angels from their first creation, and as the faithfull shall haue it in the kingdome of heauen.

And further also, seeing we, and all things else, receiue our beeings, and life, & all that we haue from God: faith doth likewise acknowledge, that it is the bounden dutie of all mankind, whom hee hath indued with reason and vnderstanding, both to imploy themselues, and also to vse all things whatsoeuer they doe through his goodnes inioy, so as hee may haue the whole honour and glory thereof.

Moreouer, faith (looking for immortalitie from the eternall and immortall God) prouoketh euery true beleeuer, the more seriously to follow after peace and holines, without which, none shall see God, as the Apostle teacheth vs. Heb. 12,14.

Finally, faith (looking for immortalitie) endureth with patience, al the afflictions of this life, accounting the greatest of them (and those also of longest continuance) to be but light and momentany, in comparison of that most excellent and eternall waight of glory, the which, it doth comfortably looke and wait for.

Explication and proofe. It is vndoubtedly true: according to that profession, which the Apostle Paul maketh in the name of other, as wel as of himself, 2.cor.4.17,18. And Heb,10. 34. And therefore much lesse will true beleeuers sell their birth-right, as profane Esaue did, preferring the transitorie things of this life, to euerlasting happines: as it followeth recorded in the same Chap. Read also Leuit: 11,44, and ch. 19,2, & ch.20,7,8. & 1. Thes.4,3. & 1. Per.1,15,16. Read also: Mal.2,11. where is set down an earnest reproofe of the Iewes, for that they profaned the holines of the Lord, which they ought to haue loued and reuerenced.

And that all, whosoeuer haue reason and vnderstanding (by the gracious gift of God) ought to imploy themselues; with their vnderstanding, memories, &c. and vse all things else, to the honour and glory of God: it may be euident from that conclusion of the holy Apostle, Rom. 11,36. insomuch as of him: to wit, as from the author: and through him, as the disposer and gouernor: and for him: that is, for his glory, are all things. For this is the end & scope of all. Therefore it is most meet, that the Lord our God should be glorified in and aboue all, as faith doth iustly, and dutifully acknowledge. And in this respect it is, that the Church of God is so often exhorted, and that it doth also so often praise God, in his glorious name Iehouah, and in his name Iah, vsed in the same sence: as we read, Ex.15,3. & Ps.68,4. & in the titles of many Psalms at the end of this word Halleluiah, praise yee the Lord. Read also, Isay.26.4. where this eternitie of the Lord God (expressed in the names Iah, and Iehouah) is noted for the ground of faith.

Halleluiah, Praise ye the Lord

Finally, that we may end with the proofe of that, which was first mentioned in the answer: read Ps: 102.23. He abated my strength in the way, and shortened my dayes. And I said, O my God take mee not away in the middest of my dayes: thy yeares endure frō generation to generation. Thou hast aforetime laid the foūdation of the earth, & the heauens are the work of thy hands. They shall perish, but thou shalt endure: They shall euen all waxe olde as doth a garment: as a vesture shalt thou change them, & they shalbe changed. But thou art the same, and thy yeares shall not faile. And Ps: 35. 10. Lord who is like vnto thee, who deliuerest the poore frō him that is too strōg for him, &c?

These are the second sorte of duties.

Beleefe in one onely God.

SHewe now in the third place, which thoſe duties are, which faith yeeldeth from the cõfort of this, that the Lord our God is of a moſt ſpirituall nature, infinite & euery wher preſent, vnmeaſurable, inuiſible and incomprehenſible.

Queſtion. Which be they?

Anſwere. From theſe conſiderations, faith doth withdrawe the thoughts of our mindes from thinking God to be like any bodily creature in outward forme or ſhape; much more the hands from making and ſetting vp any bodily repreſentation of him; moſt of all, the heart, from yeelding any diuine worſhip to any creature, the which it doth acknowledge to belong onely to the Lord our God.

Explication and proofe. This indeede is one ſpeciall dutie of faith, touching the ſpirituall nature of God, in that he is infinite and euery where preſent, &c. according to that we read: Iſay: 40, 18. Ier. 16, 6. Deut. 4, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19. And Act. 17, v. 24, &c. 29, Queſtion. What other duties doe belong to the ſame comfort of faith?

Anſwere. It requireth of euery true beleeuer, that he be wiſe vnto ſobrietie, without all curious ſearch into the diuine nature of God: the which may ſo onely be known, as it is alwaies to be acknowledged infinitely exceeding all that our weake knowledge and vnderſtanding can reach vnto.

It teacheth vs to worſhip God in ſpirit and truth. It warneth vs to beware of all hypocriſie, and to take heede that we do in no wiſe peruert or corrupt the moſt holy and pure doctrine of his truth.

Theſe and ſuch like are the duties belonging to the former comfort of faith.

Explication and proofe. They are ſo in very deed: as may appeare, firſt frõ that generall admonition which we read, Rom. 12, 3. Let no man vnderſtand, aboue that which is meete to vnderſtand, but let him vnderſtãd according to ſobrietie, as God hath dealt to euery man the meaſure of faith. For if we may not in things reuealed, boaſt of a greater meaſure of knowledge thẽ God hath giuẽ, much leſſe may we pry curiouſly into his vnſearchable ſecrets. Read alſo, Deut. 29. v. 29. Pro. 25, 1, 2, 16, 27. And Iudg ch. 13, 18, 22. There is alſo a wiſe admonition (though Apocriphall) to the ſame purpoſe, Eccleſ. ch. 3, 22. Seeke not out the things that be too hard for thee, neither ſearch the things raſhly that be to mightie for thee.

Secondly, call againe to mind here in this place, that excellẽt example of our Sauiour Chriſt: Iohn 4, 24. God is a ſpirit, & they that worſhip him, muſt worſhip him in ſpirit and truth. For ſuch as God is, ſuch alſo muſt his worſhip be.

Thirdly, read Pſ. 44, 20, 21, If we have forgotten the name of our God, and holden vp our hands to a ſtrange God ſhall not God ſearch this out? For he knoweth the ſecrets of the heart. And Pſ. 139. O Lord thou haſt tried and knowne me, Thou knoweſt my ſitting & my riſing, &c. The whole Pſal. is of exceeding good vſe to this purpoſe.

Finally, read, Ier. 23, v. 23, 24, 25. Am I a God at hand, (ſaith the Lord) and not a God farre off? Can any hide himſelfe in ſecret places, that I ſhall not ſee him, (ſaith the Lord) Doe not I fill heauen and earth, ſaith the Lord? I haue heard what the Prophets ſaid that propheſie lies in my name ſaying, I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed, &c. And Pſ. 119 verſe 168. I haue kept thy precepts and thy teſtimonies: for all my waies are before thee. Hether to of the third ſort of duties.

Queſtion. Let vs come to the fourth. what duties belong to this comfort of faith, that although all creatures ſhould forſake vs, yet the Lord our God will not leaue or forſake vs?

Anſwere. This ought to cauſe vs to preferre the Lord our God in our hearts, and to loue and imbrace him infinitly aboue all creatures: ſo that euery one of vs ſhould reſolutely ſay in himſelfe, as we read Pſ. 73, 25. whõ haue I in heauen but thee? and I haue deſired none in the earth with thee. And ſo forth, as it followeth to the end of the Pſalme.

I ought to cauſe vs to doe ſo indeede.

Queſtion. AND what are the duties belonging likewiſe to this comfort of faith, that the Lord our God is the moſt worthy and excellent; yea euen infinitely moſt high, and excellent aboue all?

Anſwere. We ought, for this, to reuerẽce him with moſt high reuerẽce aboue al as much as we may poſſibly attaine vnto: according to that in the 89. Pſ. v. 6, & 7. Who is equall to the Lord in heauen, heauen, and who is like the Lord among the sonnes of the mighty? God is greatly to be feared in the assembly of the Saints, and to be reuerenced aboue all that are about him.

This also is very right, and meet, and our bounden duty.

Question. NOw, what are the duties of faith, in respect of this comfort, that the Lord our God is infinite in his diuine wisedome, and that accordingly, hee doth rule and gouerne all things?

Answere The duties heereof are these.

First, that we denie our owne naturall and fleshly or worldly wisedome, condemning it as meere folly and enmitie against God.

Secondly, that we make it our wisedome, to be wise in the Lord, and according to the instructions, limits, and bounds of his holy word.

Thirdly, that we iudge reuerendly of all those counsels and waies, and works of God, whereof we cannot sounde the reason.

Fourthly, that, while wee walke in his holy wayes, yea, or hauing erred from them, doe vnfainedly returne, and repent, and seeke the Lord; we doe hope for a blessed issue, out of the most intricate and confused temptations, feares and dangers, and euen out of death it selfe. And therefore also, (as a further fruit hereof) that touching all such deliuerances and blessings, we submit euen our most holy prayers, desires, & indeuours herein, to the most gratious wisedome of God: as to him that knoweth best, both what, and when, and how, euery thing may proue best for vs, and accordingly, will most gratiously dispose of the same.

Finally, that we acknowledge all wisedome (whatsoeuer is in men or Angels, or in anie creature else, according to their kind) to be the gift of our only wise God: and that we glorifie him in this behalfe, vsing our wit & all other his good gifts, onely to that end.

For the proofe of the first of these duties, read Rom. 8.7. The wisedome of the flesh is enmitie against God. The issue whereof is death, to those that follow it, as it is in the former verse. And Pro. 14.12. Read also 1, Cor. 3.18. Let no man deceiue himselfe. If any man among you seeme to be wise in this world, let him be a foole that he may be wise.

Explicatiõ and proofe. For the proofe of the second duty, Read Deu. 4,6,7,8, and Ier. 8. ver. 9. and ch. 9. verses 23,24. as before in the comfort.

For the third, read Ro. 11,33. and Eccles. 3,11. He hath made euery thing beautifull in the time and season thereof, &c. Yet no man can finde out the worke that God hath wrought from the beginning euen to the end. And chap. 7,15,16. &c.

For the proofe of the fourth duty, read Psal. 34.17,18,19.20. and 68.20. 1. Cor. 10.13. Eccles. 7,28. Read also Psal. 25.10. The way of the Lord, is strength to the vpright man. In which respect, well saith our learned Interpreter, Via Domini est per invia. That is, God maketh way where there is no way.

For the last duty of giuing God the glory, for the gift of all wisedome and vnderstanding: Read Exod. 31,1,2,3.4.5.6. 1, Sam: 18.14. and Isai. 28.23. &c. to the end of the Chapter. Read also Prou. 6.6.7.8. and cha. 30.24.25.26. 27.28. Ier 8.7. And yet more principally: Read Dan. 2,19.20,21,22,23. And in the Ep: of Iude verse, 25. To God onely wise our Sauiour be glory, and maiestie, and dominion, and power, both now and for euer, Amen.

The duties belonging furthermore, to the comfort of faith in the almighty power of God, and generally touching the work of creation and gouernment, we doe here of purpose omit, as we did before in the comforts: becausse wee shall afterward haue a speciall occasion to consider of the same.

WE come to the duties of faith cõcerning the long suffering & patience, yea the infinite mercy and goodnes of the Lord our God.

Question. Which are they?

Answere. By how much the mercies of the Lord our God are more aboundant toward vs, by so much ought wee, first of all, to take the more diligent heed that wee doe not in any wise despise or lightly esteeme them.

Secondly, that we doe not distrust or despaire of the same his mercies, as if there were any defect or failing in them.

Thirdly, that we doe not in any case presume or waxe wanton against them, albeit, God is easily intreated, and ready to forgiue such as offend him.

Explicatio and proofe.

These euils (euen as very wicked extremities) are carefully to be auoided; yea to be accursed, and abhorred of euery true beleeuer. For they are most contrary to the nature of true faith.

Against the first wherof, read Rom. 2.4. Despisest thou the riches of Gods bountifulnes, and patience, and long suffering? We must take heed therefore, that wee be not like those graceless subiects, or children, which are ready to despise the clemencie and lenitie of their gentle Princes and Parents.

Against the second, read Ier: Lamen, ch. 3.22. His compassions faile not. Read also Isai. 1.18. and ch 40.28.29.30.31. And Rom: 5.20. Though sinne aboundeth, yet grace aboundeth much more. and 1, Tim: 1,15.

Against the third, read Rom: 6,1, &c. What shall we say then, shall we continue still in sinne, that grace may abound? God forbid. &c. Read Ep: Iude, 1,4. Though God be perfectly mercifull, yet we must know, that he is not so mercifull, but that he is iust also.

We may not thinke God to haue but one eye, as it were. As he hath an eye of mercy, so he hath an eye of iustice. As he knoweth how to pitty humbled sinners, and repenting sinners, &c: so will he surely punish seuerely, euerie obstinate and presumptuous transgressour and rebell. He will deale wel, with those that are well disposed, &c.: but he will deale roughly with those that be froward, according to that which we read, Psal. 18.25.26. This, hath God himselfe, with so loud a voice proclaimed of himselfe (as wee saw before) that we neede to speake the lesse of it now.

Question.

BVt is there no other duty belonging to that singular comfort, which faith taketh in the infinitnes of Gods mercies: but only, that we abuse thē not?

Answer.

Yes: it is on the contrary, the most bounden duty of euery one of vs, whosoeuer doe beleeue in the mercies of the Lord our God; to be so much the more loth to displease him in any thing: yea rather to be so much the more carefull and studious to please him in all holy obedience; by how much he is not onely more loth to enter into iudgment against vs, but also more ready, euery way to doe vs the most and greatest good.

Explication and proofe.

Thus generall indeed, is the duty, or (as we may rather say) the dutifulnes of faith, in the comfort of Gods aboundant, yea infinite mercies. The mercies of the Lord our God, ought to be esteemed of vs, as the most pretious and dainty Iewell that we haue to deale withall. And accordingly, they are most charily & holily to be dealt with of vs. For if we should prophane the mercies of God, what refuge or sanctuarie should be safe for vs to flie vnto for rescue, against the hote and fierce pursuite of his iustice? For the proofe wherof, read Rom. 2.4. The bountifulnes of God leadeth thee to repentance. And ch: 12.1.2. I beseech ye therefore bretheren, by the mercies of God, that ye giue vp your bodies, a liuing sacrifice, holy, and acceptable vnto God, which is your reasonable seruing of God. And fashion not your selues like vnto this world, &c. Read also 2, Cor: 7,1. and 1. Sam. 12.24. and Isai, 5.1. &c. Moreouer, call to mind, Mat. 4.17. 1. Iohn. 3.8.9.10. and Gen. 39.9 And Psal. 130.4. Mercy is with thee (O Lord) that thou maiest be feared. And Psal. 5.7. In the multitude of thy mercy, I will come into thy house, and in thy feare will I worship toward thine holy temple. Yea, we ought to serue the Lord with ioyfulnes, and with a good heart for the aboundance of all things: Deut. 28.47, And Psal. 119,64. The earth, ô Lord, is full of thy mercy, teach me thy statutes.

Question.

BVt shew you, yet something more particularly (if you can) what some of the duties of faith are, which doe belong to the comfort of Gods infinite mercy and goodnes toward vs. Which may some of them be?

Answere.

Seeing the Lord our God is so aboundant in mercie to vs, that hee forgiueth vs all our sinnes, though neuer so great and grieuous, so often as we do truly repent and turne vnto him: it is our duty, to be readily affected, to forgiue one another our mutuall offences, and both to admit & seeke reconciliation, how often & in how great matters soeuer we haue iust occasion, euen so farre as they concerne one another. Moreouer, seeing the Lord our

God is in all things beneficiall to vs, pitying & tendering vs in all our neceſſities, though we are altogether vnworthie: it is likewiſe our duty, to our ability to doe good vnto all, though ſpecially, to thoſe that be of the houſhold of faith, as God himſelfe cõmandeth.

Finally, it is our moſt bounden duty to yeeld vnto our God the whole glory and praiſe of all his mercies: Yea euen of thoſe, which he maketh vs partakers of, by any of his good and holy inſtruments.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is moſt meet that we ſhould do ſo indeed. For whoſoeuer the inſtrument may be, and howſoeuer we are to be in ſome meaſure thankfull to them; Yet God is the onely author, and therefore the whole praiſe, muſt principally redound to him alone: according to that which we read, 1. Cor. 3. 21. 22. 23. Read alſo Pſal. 13. 5. I truſt in thy mercy, mine heart ſhall reioice in thy ſaluation: I will ſing vnto the Lord becauſe he hath dealt louingly with me. And Pſ. 22. ve. 22. &c. Praiſe the Lord ye that feare him, &c. For he hath not deſpiſed nor abhorred the affliction of the poore, &c. and 27. 6. & Pſ. 30. verſes, 11. 12. Thou haſt turned my mourning into ioy: thou haſt looſed my ſackcloth, and girded me with gladnes. Therefore ſhal my tongue praiſe thee, and not ceaſe: O Lord my God I will giue thanks to thee for euer. And Pſal. 71. 14. 15. 16. Read alſo Pſa. 103. 1. &c. and Pſa. 116. 1. &c. and Pſa. 136. The whole Pſalmes is ſingular to this purpoſe. And Iſai 63. 7. There are many other places like to theſe.

Touching the other branches of this anſwer, read for the proofe of mutual forgiuenes: Math. ch: 5. 23. &c. and ch. 18. 21, 22, &c. to the end of the chap: And Luk: 17, 3, 4, and Col: 3, 12, 13. Now therefore as the elect of God, holy and beloued, put on tender mercy, kindnes, humblenes of mind, meekenes, long ſuffering: forbearing the one the other, forgiuing one another, &c.

And for mutuall beneficence, read Gal. 6, verſes, 9. 10. Let vs not be wearie of well doing, &c. And, while we haue time, let vs doe good vnto all, &c.

Thus much for the preſent, touching the duties of faith, from the comfort of Gods mercies.

Queſtion. IT followeth that you ſhew, what duties belong to the comfort of faith, in reſpect of the incorrupt and moſt perfect righteouſnes of the Lord our God: which are they?

Anſwere The righteouſnes of God, noteth his faithfulnes in the certaine and ſure performance of all his gratious promiſes: and therefore we are in this reſpect moſt thankfully and dutifully to praiſe him. It noteth alſo the ſeueritie of his Iuſtice in the puniſhment of the wicked: for the which we are not onely to praiſe him, but alſo to feare before him.

Finally, the righteouſnes of God, doth note the whole vprightnes of his wil and nature, as the perfect rule and ground of all righteouſnes: and therefore we are iuſtly to account euery word of God and all his waies and works, aboue all exception, moſt perfectly iuſt.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is very iuſt indeede, that we ſhould ſo doe. The iuſt Lord (ſaith the holie Prophet) is in the middeſt of his Citie: he will do no iniquitie: euery morning doth he bring his iudgment to light, he faileth not: but the wicked will not learne to be aſhamed, Zeph. 3. 5. Neuertheleſſe (as the Lord in the ſame place ſheweth further by his holy Prophet) it is the duty of his people, to feare him, becauſe of his iudgements, and to receiue inſtruction, & c. Read alſo Iſa. chap. 26. 9. And Pſa. 52, 6. The righteous ſhall ſee it and feare. And Heb. 11. 28, 29. Let vs haue grace, whereby we may ſo ſerue God, that wee may pleaſe him with reuerence and feare. For euen our God is a conſuming fire.

I know, O Lord (ſaith the holy Pſalmiſt) that thy iudgements are right, and that thou haſt afflicted me iuſtly. Or in truth (in fide) that is, no otherwiſe then thou haſt forewarned in thy word.

That wee are to praiſe God for his righteous iudgements againſt the wicked, read Pſal. 9. 11. 12. and 35. 8. 9. &c. and 44. 5. 6. 7. 8. and 47. 11. &c. and 52. 9. and 58. 10. 11. and 64. 9. 10. and Pſal, 119. 62. At midnight will I riſe to giue thanks vnto thee, becauſe of thy righteous iudgements. That is, for thoſe righteous lawes of God, the breach wherof he iuſtly puniſheth vpon the wicked, which band themſelues together, to rob and ſpoile his faithfull ſeruants.

Beleefe in one onely God.

Touching the faithfulnes of God, the which (as was answered) is sometimes meant by the righteousnes of God: It is written Ier. Lament. chap. 3, 23. His compassions are renued euery morning. Great is his faithfulnes. For the which (as was answered in the beginning of the answer) wee stand bound most thankfully and dutifully to praise our God. And so we read Psal. 89. 5. Where, often mention is made of the faithfull couenant and oath of God. O Lord (saith the Prophet Ethan) euen the heauens shall praise thy wonderous worke, yea thy truth in the congregation of Saints, &c.

But there are other duties, belonging to the comfort of faith in the constant faithfulnes & vnchangeable truth of God. Of whō it is written. 2, Tim: 2. 13. Though we beleeue not, yet abideth he faithfull, he cannot denie himselfe. And Tit. 1. 2. God that cannot lie, hath promised eternall life before the world began. And Ro: 3. ver: 3, 4. What though some did not beleeue? Shall their vnbeliefe make the fauth of God without effect? God forbid. Let God be true, and euery man a liar, &c.

Question. VVHat therefore may the other duties of this comfort of faith be?

Answer. It requireth earnestly of vs, first that we depart from iniquitie.

Secondly, that we ioine to our faith euery other vertue of true godlines, and the holy fruites and practise of them, to the warranting vnto our owne consciences, the truth of our assurance touching our election and saluation.

Thirdly, that we remaine firme and constant, in the faithfull profession of our hope, without wauering: as also in the practise of true loue toward our Christian bretheren without ceasing.

Fourthly, that we doe not onely continue, but also grow and increase in all holinesse, continually.

Finally, the comfort of God his most stedfast fidelity and truth, requireth of euery faithfull beleeuer, that he admit nothing, either interpretation of holy Scripture, or prophesie, or miracle, or any pretended reuelation, or assertion, either of man or Angel, to the preiudice of any the least part of the diuine truth of Gods word, which is most perfect and intire in it selfe.

Explicatiō and proofe. It is very true: euery part of this your answere hath expresse warrant from the holy Scriptures of God.

For the proofe of the first, read 2. Tim. 2, 19. where the Apostle making mētion of some of corrupt minds that had erred frō the faith, who also had destroied the faith of certaine; he affirmeth neuertheles, that the foundation of God remained sure, and both had and hath stil this seale; The Lord knoweth who are his (that is, he so knoweth them, that he wil certainly preserue them, to wit so many as shal truly forsake their sinnes: according to that which followeth in the same text) let euery one that calleth on the name of Christ, depart from iniquitie.

For the proofe of the second part, read, 2. Pet. 1, 5. &c. Therefore giue ye euen all diligence thereunto: ioyne moreouer vertue with your faith, and with faith knowledge: and with knowledge temperance & patience, &c. And thus brethrē (saith the holy Apostle) vse diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye doe these things, ye shal neuer fal. For by this meanes, an entrance shal be ministred vnto you aboundantly, into the euerlasting kingdome of our Lord and Sauiour Iesus Christ.

Notable to this purpose, is the profession of the holy Prophet, Ps. 119, v. 166. and v. 174. Where he ioineth this trust and longing after saluation, with delight in obeying the law of God. Lord (saith he) I haue trusted in thy saluation, and haue done thy cōmandements. And againe, I haue longed for thy saluation ô Lord, and thy Law is my delight. To this purpose also, is that of the Apostle Paul. Phil. 2. 12. My beloued, as ye haue alwaies obeied, not as in my presence onely, but now much more in my absence, so make ye an end of your owne saluation with feare and trembling. And Rom. 11, 20, Thou standest by faith, be not high minded, but feare, &c.

For the proofe of the third part of the answere, read Heb: 10, 22. 23, 24, 25, Let vs draw neare with a true heart, in assurance of faith, &c. And let vs keepe the profession of our hope without wauering: for he is faithfull that hath promised. And let vs consider one another, to prouoke vnto loue, and to good works, not forsaking the fellowship which wee haue among our selues. &c.

Touching the 4. part, read 1. Thess: 4. 1. &c. Furthermore, we beseech you brethren, and exhorte you in the Lorde Iesus, that yee increase more and more, as yee haue receyued of vs, how yee ought to walke, and to please God, &c. And chapt: 5. 23. 24. Nowe the verie God of peace, sanctifie you throughout; and I praye God, that your whole spirit, and soule, and bodie, may be kept blameles, vnto the comming of our Lorde Iesus Christ. Faithfull is hee which calleth you, who will also doe it. Brethren pray for vs.

For the proofe of the last branche, reade, Rom: 12. 6. All Prophesie must be according to the proportion of faith: Reade also, Galat: 1.8 9. Though that wee or an Angell from heauen, preache vnto you otherwise, then that which wee haue preached vnto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say we now againe &c. And againe. 2. Thes: 1. 2. 2. We beseech you, &c. Be ye not sodainly mooued from your minde, nor troubled, neither by spirit, nor by worde, nor by letter: &c. let no man deceiue you by any meanes, &c. and verses, 9. 10. 11. 12. And 1. Iohn 2. 21. No lye is of the truth.

Hetherto of the dueties of the particular comforts.

Question. NOw what is the duety of all the comfortes of faith, in our one onely very true God, eternall and almightie, infinite, inuisible, &c. they being all put as it were together?

Answere. It is our duty, both generally, & in euery particular respect, in most solemne, reuerēd, & religious māner, to magnifie the most glorious & reuerend name of the Lord our God.

Explicatiō & proofe. This is indeede a generall duety as it were, belonging both iointly and severally, to all the former comforts of faith. The practise wherof, we may read to our own instruction, and for our example, and imitation. 1. Chro: 29. 10. &c. King Dauid blessed the Lorde before all the congregation: And Dauid saide, Blessed be thou, O Lord God of Israell, our father for euer, and euer. Thine O Lord, is greatnes and power, and glorie, and victorie, and praise: For all that is in heauen and in earth is thine: Thine is the kingdome, O Lord, & thou excellest as head ouer all: Both riches and honour come of thee, and thou raignest ouer all, and in thy hands it is to make great, and to giue strength vnto all. Now therfore our God, wee thanke thee, and praise thy glorious name. Read also, Psal: 47. and Ps: 72. 18. 19. & Ps: 89. 52. & 106. 48. Rom. 16, 25, 27. 1. Tim. 1. 17. and ch: 6, 15, 26. and 1. Pet: 5. 10. 11. and in the Epistle of Iude, verses 24. 25. and Reuel: 5. 13.

Thus therfore, according to the holy exhortation, Psalm: 34. 3. Let vs euerie one, for our owne parts, praise the Lord with the rest of his faithfull seruants: and let vs all magnifie his name together. Yea, let vs, to this ende, abound in all particular fruites of true thankfulnesse, to his most plentifull honour and praise, as much as wee may possiblie attaine vnto. For assuredlie, faith receiuing the manifolde and aboundant comforts, of the manifolde and superabounding grace of God, it standeth deeply bound to yeeld all the fruits of thankes that may bee: neyther can it receiue the grace of our most gracious God in vaine.

THe last point of our inquirie, now onely remaineth, concerning this Article of our faith in one onely true God: that is, touching the danger of not beleeuing in him:

Question. What is that?

Answere. Such as will not beleeue in him to their comfort, neither walke dutifully before him, in the obedience of faith, as a fruite thereof: besides that they shall want that vnspeakeable peace and comfort of conscience which faith yeeldeth (the which of it selfe is a heauy punishment) they shall finde in the end, that both the wisedome, and power, and iustice of God: yea, that euen God himselfe, and all that he is in his eternall and infinite nature, will be armed against them, to their euerlasting and most wofull destruction.

Beleefe in one one-y God, three distinct persons. Explication and proofe.

The Danger of not beleeuing.

It shall certainly come so to passe indeede, If yee beleeue not (saith the Prophet Isai: chap: 7. verse 9.) surely yee shall not be established. And further, Ier: chapt: 17. 5. Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arme, and withdraweth his heart from the Lorde. For hee shalbe like the heath in the wildernes, &c. And yet further. Psal: 73. 27. 28. Loe (saith the Prophet) they that withdrawe themselues from thee shall perish, thou destroyest all them that go a whoring from thee. And againe Psal: 78. 21. 22. Wrath came vpon Israell, because they beleeued not in God, and trusted not in his helpe. For they perished in the wildernes, chiefly because of this their sin. Likewise Hebr: 10, 38, 39. They that withdraw themselues from faith, doe it to their perdition. Finallie Reuelat: 21. 8. The fearfull and vnbeleeuing, shall haue their portion in the lake that burneth with fire & brimstone, which is the second death. And if, moreouer & beside all these testimonies, wee would see a very euident (and as one would say) a pregnant iudgement of God, vpon vnbeliefe: Read 2. Kings. 7. 19. 20. The Prince which answered the man of God, and said: Though the Lord would make windows in the heauen, could it come so to passe? That is, could corne be so cheap in Samaria, as thou hast said? To whom the Prophet answered: Behold thou shalt see it with thine eyes, but thou shalt not eate thereof. And so it befell him: for the holie storie testifieth, that the people preassing to buye the corne, trode vppon him in the gate, and that so hee died.

From the faith of this Article, (as it is recorded in Ecclesiasticall histories) those Heretikes haue dangerously and damnablie erred, who are condemned by the name of Tritheites: who are said to haue helde, that the three persones of the Deitie, are three seuerall and separated Gods: & the Triformiani, who, of the other side, helde that they were onely three formes and differences in one God, as it were accidentallie belonging to God, without any personall subsistence.

To conclude, all that beleeue not rightly in the one onely true God, (as hath bene declared from the holy Scriptures of God) both Atheists, Epicures, and Worldlings, &c. They haue the Deuill for their God; they make their belly their God: their riches their God, &c. whose end (no doubt) shalbe most ruefull, and their iudgement sleepeth not.

Wherefore, wee earnestly calling vpon our good God, for his most holie and heauenly grace, to preserue our hearts and mindes in all faithfulnes and good duety to him: let vs with all our power, mightilie striue against infidelitie, and in all holie wisedome, circumspectly auoyde and abhorre all hereticall opinion & fancie. Our good God, of his infinite mercie, graunt it vnto vs, & to all & euery one of his elect childrē, for our Lord Iesus Christ his sake Amen.

Thus farre of these first wordes of the Creede. I beleeue in God. From the which hath bene declared, howe wee and all true Christians, are to beleeue in God, as one onely in his most Diuine nature, or spirituall Essence and beeing, together with the comforts and dueties therof.

Beleefe in one onely God, three distinct Persons.

LEt vs now come to that which was further answered, that the Articles of our faith, doe teache vs, that wee are to beleeue so in God to bee one onely in nature: that wee holde him neuertheles, to be three in a most holie and glorious distinction of persones. And first, how can you make it plaine, that this is the true meaning and intent, of the Articles of our beliefe?

Question.

Answere. Because after the name of our one onely true God, once onely set downe, they doe thenceforth make expresse mention, both of the Father, and of the Sonne, & of the holy Ghost: Yea and that also in the same forme of words and profession, as if euerie one should saye: I beleeue in the Sonne, and in the holie Ghost, aswell as in the Father: the which verily,

wee

Beliefe in one onely God, three distinct Persons. Explicatiõ and proofe.

The Ground and meaning of it.

wee might in no wise doe, vnlesse either of them were verie true God, aswell as the Father.

It is verie true. Wee must onely trust in the true and euerliuing God, and in no other, either person, or thing whatsoeuer: according to that wee read. 1. Timoth. 4. 10. And according to that which was lately alledged out of the Prophet Ierem: chapt: 17. 5. And as we may perceiue by the practise of the seruants of God in their prayers. &c. Psa: 42. 2. Read also Psal: 146. 3. Put not your trust in Princes, &c. And Ier: 3. 23. Trulie the hope of the billes (that is, of the Idolls accustomed to be worshipped, in such places of Idole worship) is but vaine, or (the hope) of the multitude of mountaines. But in the Lorde our God, is the health of Israel. Wherfore seeing (as by the grace of God it shalbe plentifully declared from the holy Scriptures) we are to beleeue both in the Father & also in the Sonne, & in the holy Ghost: It foloweth necessarily, that the one aswell as the other, is very true God. And therefore also, it is euen of it selfe manifest & cleare: that when we say, I beleeue in God the Father, our meaning is, not that God is onely a Father. For then where were the Sonne, and what should become of the holie Ghost. But our meaning is, and so ought to be, that God is so a Father, and wholie very true and perfect God: that yet the Father is no more the onely God, then is the Sonne, neither the Father and the Sonne, more then the holy Ghost. For euery one is whole God, and yet all three are but one God: as hath bene allreadie, and shall againe further be confirmed.

Question. But it will likelie be obiected, that the Articles of our beliefe make no mention of the word Personne: what may wee answer to this?

Answere. Inasmuch as mention is made of three, necessitie of interpretation requireth, that wee should vse this word Personne, aswell for the discouerie and confutation of Heresie, as for the helpe of our vnderstanding, to conceiue and beleeue rightly this most high Mysterie: because wee haue no other word, more fit and familiar, to expresse that very true Subsistence, which each of the three, hath distinct from eyther of the other, albeit euerie one, and all of them, are really and truelie but one and the same Diuine essence, or beeing and nature.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is verilie so indeede. For seeing mention is made of three, it may iustlie be demaunded, what three they are? wherevnto wee may not answere, that they are three Gods, for that is contrarie to the doctrine of faith, in one onely true God. What are theythen? Are they three Diuine natures or beeings? Wee may not say so, least wee should at the least seeme to say as much as before, that they are three seuerall Gods. What shall we say that they are then? Are they onelie three diuerse Names, to expresse one and the same thing to our capacitie, without the truth of any distinct Subsistence? This may in no wise be affirmed: for it is flatte contrarie to the holie Scriptures. What shall wee say then, to those that shall vrge vs to declare, what the meaning of our faith is? It is necessarie that wee say, that God the FATHER, God the SONNE, and God the HOLY GHOST, in whom wee beleeue, are three distinct Persones; as well to expresse the true meaning of the holy Scriptures, concerning this most high Mysterie; as also to defend the truth therof, against all misconceiuing, and against euerie profane or hereticall gainsayer. Of the which there are manie sortes, as wee are hereafter to note, in the conuenient place of this our inquirie.

Question. But why is this word Person, so fitte for this purpose?

Answere Because the worde Person, doth to the familiar and common vnderstanding of euery man, not onely note that thing which is verilie and in truth to be distinguished from euerie other: but also that, whereby the same thing, may be most liuely so distinguished and discerned of them.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is most certainlie true. For the word Person, doth in the vulgar construction and conceite, not onely signifie a man himselfe alone, as when wee say, there were about 500. Persons at the Sermon: &c. But also it signifieth that, whereby euery man may be most certainely discerned from other.

That

Beleeue in one onely God, three distinct Persons.

The Ground and meaning of it.

That is to saye, his fauour, or countenance: and his stature, but chiefflie his fauour or countenance: as we vse to say of such or such, that they are beautifull persons, comely persones, goodly persons of flesh and blood, &c.

The same is the vse of the Greek word (Prosopon,) which we, in this mysterie and otherwise, doe often englisn by the word Person. For 2. Cor: 1.11. the Apostle Paul requireth, that many persons, (that is, many Christians both men and women) should giue thanks to God, for the deliuerance of himselfe and Timotheus, from a very imminent death.

Ther might other such like places be alledged. But most vsuallie, and properly it signifieth the face of a man, wherby (as was said) euery one is most apparantly discerned from other, as Matth: 6. 17. Wash thy face. And cha: 17.2. the face of our Sauiour Christ did shine as the Sunne. And Act: 6.15. the face of Saint Stephen, was before the Councill as the face of an Angell: that is, hauing a most comely grace, full of all reuerend grauite, &c. Read also Iames, 1. 23. and often in the new Testament. Hence also, and that more neare to our present purpose, it doth metaphorically, or in way of a speach borowed to an other purpose then it is properlie applied, signifie a more cleare manifestation of that which is in it selfe more secret, and hidden. As for example, the face of God, noteth the brightnes, and glorie of God, so farre as it pleaseth his diuine Maiestie to reueale himselfe: according to that Matth: 18. 10. wher our Sau: Christ saith, that in heauen the Angells see the face of his Father, which is in heauen. And as wee read, 2. Cor: 4.6. God that commanded the light to shine out of darknes, is hee that hath shined in our heartes, to giue the light of the knowledge of the glorie of God, in the face, (that is,) in the reuelation of Iesus Christ: to wit, by the preaching of the Gospell, the which doth manifest vnto vs, the glorie of Gods grace and mercie represented (as it were) in the sweete face and countenance of our Lord IESVS CHRIST. And as we read, 1. Cor: 13.12. the same Apostle affirmeth, that we shall see face to face: that is, we shall haue more cleare knowledge of God there, then now we haue, or can possiblie haue here.

The same is the signification of the Hebrewe word (Panim:) according to that Genes: ch: 32. 30. I haue seene GOD (saith Iaakob) face to face: that is to say, appearing most gratiouslie and familiarly vnto him. And Psal: 27.8.9. And psal: 105.4. By the face of God, is meant God himselfe, in respect of his manifestation of himselfe among his people, in the holie Temple, &c. And in this respect, our Sauiour Christ is called the Angell of the face of God, Isai: 63. 9. And the Angell in whom is the Name of God. Ezod: 23.21.

But more properlie, the same word signifieth the face of a man, and Synecdochicallie, the whole man or Person: as Genes: cha: 32.20. the face of Esau, and the face of Iaakob, doe note Esau and Iaakob themselues. And chap: 46. 30. The face of Ioseph is mentioned to expresse the person of Ioseph. And 2. Kings, chapt: 3. 14. The face of King Iehoshaphat, is put for the person of Iehoshaphat. Whence also, it is not lesse fitting (as wee may perceiue) that the Hebrew writers, treating of the distinction of persons in the Diuine nature, should (as they doe) call and expresse them by this word (Phanim) then wee doe, by our word Person.

Mornæus lib: de verit: Rels: cap: 6.

So then, according to the vse of this worde Persone, both in our owne language, and also in the Latine, Greeke, and Hebrewe tongues; our one onely true God is called of the Church of God three Persones: euen because God himselfe hath, according to this māner of his Beeing or Subsistence, made himselfe more clearely and comfortablie knowne to his Church, then otherwise they could euer haue conceiued of him.

And verilie, the doctrine of the holie Trinitie of Persons, in the vnitie of the most sacred Godhead or Deitie, it is the onely liuely vnvailing, as it were, and discouering of the glorious face of God vnto vs. Yea so, as no doubt, heeis not truelie knowne and beleeued in of anie, to whom this mysterie is not in some good measure truelie vnderstoode and beleeued.

Neuertheleſſe, euen heerein, according to the moſt reuerend greatnes and glorie of ſo high a myſterie, it becommeth euerie one of vs, to humble the verie Spirit of our mindes, with moſt humble and lowe humiliation, before the footeſtoole of the Throne of Grace: and to take diligent heede, that we doe not carnallie conceiue or fancie in our thoughts, any thing vnworthie the moſt glorious and incomprehenſible Maieſtie of God. For all be it the diuine Perſones in God, are truelie, and in verie deede ſo perfectly diſtinct, that the one neither is, nor can bee the other: that is to ſay, neither can the Father bee the Sonne, nor the Sonne the Father, nor the holie Ghoſt either of them both, no more then of any three men, one of them can be perſonallie the other. Yet we muſt in no wiſe thinke, the Perſones in the Godhead, to be ſeuered as diuerſe perſons are ſeperated, in one and the ſame nature of man. For as the Diuine nature is infinite, ſo are alſo the Perſones, and therefore there cannot bee any partition, or diuiſion and ſeparation, betwixt them.

Neither maye wee ſuffer our ſelues once to thinke, that the Diuine nature hath a naturall and viſible face, like to the face of Man: for God is a Spirit, that is, (hee is a ſpirituall and inuiſible Nature) as hath bene declared before.

Onelie thus much are wee to apprehend and conceiue in our mindes by compariſon, that like as the face of a man, is that wherby hee may be diſcerned from other: yea and further, that as the excellent countenance of a man, is a reſemblance of that excellent Spirit which is in him, aboue any other earthlie creature: ſo the Doctrine and Reuelation of the Trinitie of Perſones, in one and the ſame Diuine nature of God, doth make God moſt clearely and comfortablie knowne to his people, as one infinitelie vnlike to all falſe Gods or Idolles, &c.

For hee is that God, who beeing Eternall and Allmightie, &c: is not onelie the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt: but alſo a Father to vs, for the Sonnes ſake, according as the holie Ghoſt, both from the Father and the Sonne beareth a moſt effectuall witneſſe to our ſoules and ſpirites. And this is vnto vs, as the face of God, moſt comfortablie ſhining vpon vs.

To this ende alſo, let vs diligently obſerue, that God is not called a Father, only in way of compariſon: to ſignifie his loue toward vs, as tender and deare as the loue of a naturall Father here on earth toward his naturall childe.

But hee is a heauenlie Father, in reſpect of his eternall Sonne moſt naturallie, and in all perfection of truth. And accordingly the Sonne of God is the naturall and onely Sonne of the Father. And the holy Ghoſt likewiſe, is naturallie, and in all perfection of truth and ſubſtance, the Spirit of them both: farre aboue and beyond all that wee, or any Angell of heauen can throughlie conceiue.

So then, whatſoeuer ſimilitude wee doe alledge one way or other, to expreſſe this ſingular and piereleſſe Myſterie, wee muſt of neceſſitie acknowledge, that there is in the things themſelues, an infinite diſsimilitude alſo: ſo that the ſimilitude, can, but onely in ſome reſpecte, ſhadowe out that, which the holie Ghoſt alone, muſt cauſe vs to vnderſtand, ſo farre as it is meet for vs to vnderſtand; euen farre aboue that, which any ſimilitude, of it ſelfe can teach vs.

If wee might beholde in any outward repreſentation, the nature of God; whether ſhould we rather caſt our eyes, then vpon the ſweet face of the Sonne of God INCARNATE: in whom GOD hath reuealed his glorie, as it were with open face, as wee read, 2. Cor: 3. 18? And yet, as experience hath ſhewed, the naturall face, or outward Perſon of our Sauiour Chriſt, (if we may ſo ſpeake) could not ſuffice to the manifeſting heereof, no not to thoſe, who were daylie conuerſant with him.

For manie looked vpon him bodilie, while hee was here on earth, who by that outward viewe, knewe God neuer the more ſpirituallie.

Beliefe in one onely God, three distinct Persons.

The ground and meaning of it.

It was his holie Doctrine, and his most gratious and Diuine workes, and his excellent vertues, which caused the face & glorie of God, to shine forth from him, vnto those onelie, who had the eyes of their mindes opened so to behold him. And this was that, which mooued the Apostle Paul to say: Hence forth know wee no man after the flesh, yea though wee had knowen Christ after the flesh, yet now hence forth know we him no more. And much rather, would the Apostle refuse to knowe Christ, and the holie Trinitie, by anie bodilie, and deade pictures, or images of them by Crucifixe or any other way.

And as for similitudes borowed from any spirituall thing, the soule of man, made in the image of God, may seeme of all other things that wee haue occasion to be best acquainted withall, to be most like; in that, it beeing a spirituall substance, is onely one, though it haue diuerse distinct properties, vnderstanding and reason, memorie, will, and affection: yet how infinite oddes there is, it is easie to vnderstand. For the soule of man, though it be spirituall and immortall, yet it is a created substance. And the qualities thereof are created qualities in the soule, and not the soule it selfe, either anie one, or all of them together. What then? Wee must of necessitie content our selues, and our soules, so to knowe, both the nature of God, and the Persons of the Godhead perfitlie distinct in the same: that wee may, as the truth it selfe requireth, acknowledge, that in the full perfection of it, the Diuine nature is infinitelie, aboue the weake capacitie or vnderstanding, eyther of vs, or of anie other creature.

Wherefore, wee, most humblie, and thankfullie acknowledging the vnspeakable mercie of God, for that measure of the reuelation of this most high & incōprehensible Mysterie, which it hath pleased him to reueale vnto vs in his holie Scriptures; and holding our selues fast and Religiouslie to them: Let vs in like humble manner, beseeche our most good and gratious God, to vouchsafe to giue vs of his grace, that wee, soberlie captiuating all similitudes, yea and reason it selfe, to the obedience of Faith, whose nature is to beleeue, that which is aboue all naturall sense and reason, whatsoeuer hath witnesse and warrant from the word of God: let vs, (I say) as on the one hand, cast away all ignorance and neglect of due search after the due knowledge hereof; so on the other hande, let vs in like manner, beware of all presumptuous and vaine curiositie; lest preasing too farre, wee be confounded and ouerwhelmed of the brightnesse and glorie of it.

For like as our bodilie eyes, are not able to looke directlie vpon the seate, or as it were centre of brightnesse, which is in the Sunne: no more, nay much lesse, are wee able, with the eyes of our mindes, to behold the infinite brightnesse, and most glorious Maiestie of the Lorde God, the Father of all Light, as hee is in himselfe: whether wee looke to the vnitie of his Diuine nature, or to the distinction of the Persons in the same. According as it is said, No man can (so) see God and liue. Exod: 33. 20. 1. Timoth: 6. 16. Read also Genes: 16. 33. Trem: interpret: And Iudges, chap: 13. 22. where it is recorded, that the Parents of Samson were afraide they should die, as if they had seene God, aboue that had bene meete for sinfull creatures to see him.

God, who set bownds for the people, which they might not passe toward the mountaine, at the giuing of the law. Exod: 19. 12. 13. Neither would haue the arke of the Testimonie, commonlie looked vpon, vncouered. Numb: 4. verse 5. &c. 20. and 1. Sam: 6. 19. The same our God, no doubt, cannot like, that anie should vnreuerendlie prye into this most holie secreat, concerning his owne Maiestie and Diuine nature: with a minde to see further into it, then it hath pleased himselfe to reueale the same.

Wee may most iustlie saye of this knowledge of the Diuine nature of God, and of the manner or order of the Beeing thereof, as touching the Existence of them internallie, or (ad intra) as the learned speake: to witte, how the Father is of himselfe and of no other, eternally without all beginng;

the Sonne eternallie begotten of the Father, before all time; and the holie Ghost proceeding from them both, and yet neuertheleſſe, beeing alwaies Eſſentiallie preſent, in and with them both: wee may (I ſay) iuſtlie determine of this knowledge, according to that wee read, Pſal: 139. 6. It is too wonderfull for vs: it is ſo high, that wee cannot attaine vnto it.

Wee knowe not the way of the winde (or as ſome tranſlate, of the Spirit) to witte, how it commeth into man, nor howe the bones doe growe in the wombe of her that is with childe: Eccleſ: 11. 5. nor how the ſoule of man, dead through ſinne, is againe regenerated and renewed within him. Iohn. 3. 7. much leſſe can wee vnderſtand, what the eternall generation of the Sonne of God, or the eternall proceeding of the holy Ghoſt, do meane.

Neuertheleſſe, as touching the manner of the working of God externallie, or (ad extra as they ſay) the Father by the Sonne, and both the Father and the Sonne by the holy Ghoſt, and the holy Ghoſt from them both (whether in the workes of the common creation and gouernement of them all, or more ſpeciallie, in the ſpeciall worke of the redemption of the elect children of God) this knowledge from outward effectes, declared from the holy Scriptures, and teſtified by the holy Ghoſt, inlightening and certifying our mindes, and conſciences thereof; it is, through the grace of God, ſo familiar, and ſo full of comfort, that the more wee vnderſtand and taſte it (the which no doubt, wee may doe with dailie increaſe ſo long as wee liue) the more may wee, with holie reuerence and boldeneſſe, euen to the ſame ende, looke into it: according to that Epheſ: 2. 18. By him (that is, by the Sonne of God, our Lord Ieſus Chriſt) we haue an entrãce vnto the Father by one Spirit. And chapt: 3. 12. &c. By faith in him wee haue boldneſſe and entrance with confidence. Read all that followeth, to the ende of the Chapter. But of the comforts more afterward.

Queſtion. In the meane ſeaſon, that we may proceed, and make all as plaine as we can? What meane you by a Perſone of the bleſſed TRINITIE, in the one onely moſt holie and Diuine nature of God?

Anſwere. A Perſone in the Diuine nature, is an eternall Subſiſtence, the which hauing the whole Deitie or Godhead (as it were in common, or rather in a moſt holie Communion) the one equallie as well as the other: it is neuertheleſſe, diſtinct from either of the other, in way of a ſupernaturall relation, and according to the Diuine manner or order of their Beeing and working; onely by one proprietie, which it hath incommunicable to either of the other.

Queſtion. Howe is that?

Anſwere. The FATHER, who is the firſt Perſon in the holie Trinitie, though not the firſt in time or dignitie, but onely in the order and manner of Beeing, as was anſwered euen now; hee hath eternallie, and without all beginning, begotten the Sonne, and ſo hath, both taken to himſelfe, and alſo communicated to the Sonne, the whole nature or Eſſence of the Deitie.

The SONNE of GOD, is the ſecond Perſone of the ſame moſt holie and bleſſed TRINITIE, eternallie, and without all beginning, begotten of the Father; and ſo hath eternallie receiued the whole Deitie, or Eſſence of the Godhead from the Father.

The HOLY GHOST, is the third Perſon, eternallie proceeding, both from the Father and alſo from the Sonne; and ſo hath the whole eſſence of one and the ſame DEITIE, eternallie and coequallie communicated to him from them both.

Explicatiõ & proofe. This is indeed the true and onely diſtinction of the Perſones, in the one onely and vndeuided Nature or eſſence of God. For as touching the Deitie or Godhead it ſelfe, it neither begetteth, nor is begotten, neither yet proceedeth. The diſtinction therefore, by the proprieties rehearſed, it doth onely concerne the Perſons of the Diuine Nature. And although the Diuine nature belongeth equallie (as hath bene obſerued) to euery one of the Perſones: For the Father is God, the Sonne is God, and the holy Ghoſt is God, not three Gods, but one onely God, one in nature, one in wisedome, one in power, one in will, one in glorie: (for the Father is the Father of glorie, Ephes: 1.17. the Sonne, the Lord of glorie. 1. Cor: 2. 8. Iohn: 1, 14. and ch: 12, 41. and ch: 17. 5. and Heb: 1. 3. Iam: 2, 1, and 2. Pet. 1. 17. Matt: 16. 27. & cha: 25. 31. the holie Ghost the Spirit of glorie. 1. Pet: 4. 14. and 2. Cor: 3, 17. 18. so that the Father, who is the God of glorie, Act: 7. 2. and giueth his glorie to no other. Isaia: 48. 11. Yet hee doth after a sorte, giue it to the Sonne, and to the holy Ghost: that is, he is well pleased that they should haue it, because they are one with him) howesoeuer no one Person can be any of the other. The Father cannot be the Sonne, or the holy Ghost: the Sonne cannot be the holy Ghost, or the Father: neither can the holy Ghost be either the Father or the Sonne, as was said before.

The Ground and meaning of it.

Beleeue in one onely God, three distinct Persons.

But of this, that the Father is verie true God, and consequently eternall and euerliuing, infinite in wisdome, power, mercie, iustice, &c: and that the Sonne is so also; and likewise the holy Ghost; wee shall, by the grace of God, make it plaine, in the handeling of the seuerall Articles of our beliefe, the which doe concerne euery one of them.

In the meane while, let vs make some further search after those grounds of holie Scripture, which God, of his infinit goodnes and mercie, hath vouchsafed vs, for our assured direction and warrant, touching the things allreadie affirmed by vs.

Question. AND first, what ground and warrant can you alledge to proue, that our God, in whom wee beleeue, beeing one onely in Nature, is neuertheless three distinct Persons?

Answere. In the 5. chap: of the first epist: of the Apostle Iohn, verse, 7. There are three (saith the holie Apostle) which beare record in heauen, the Father, the Worde, and the holy Ghost: and these three are one. And in the Gospell, according to the same Apostle. chapt: 10. 30. I and my Father (saith our Sauiour himselfe) are one.

Explicatiõ & proofe. Read also cha: 17. 21. 22. wher our Sauiour Christ prayeth for all true beleeuers, that they may be one, as hee and the Father is one: the Father in him, and he in the Father., &c. And as the Father & the Sonne is one, so is the holy Ghost one, with and in them both: according to the first testimonie, alledged in the answere, out of the 3. epi. of Iohn. For there it is said, that all three are one: not onely consenting in one, as it is said in the next verse, that the three which beare witnes on earth; to wit, the Spirit, and the water, & the blood, are (Eis to en,) that is agreeing in one: but the Father, and the Worde, (that is the Sonne, as he is called in the Gospell, ch: 1. 1. &c.) and the holy Ghost, are one: (En eisi:) that is, they are naturallie, and Essentiallie one, and consequentlie also, most perfectly consenting in one. It is euident therefore, by the testimonie of the holie Apostle: that God beeing but one in Nature, is neuertheless three Personet.

This distinction of Persons in one God, may also be prooued from the holie Scriptures of the old Testament: partly by such testimonies, wherin God is spoken of, in the plurall number: as Genes: ch: 1. 1. Bara Elohim. The Godes hee created the heauens, &c.

And likewise verse 26. & ch: 3. 5. & ch: 20. 13. & ch. 35. 7. Iob: 35. 10. and Ps: 149. 2. Lætetur Israel in facientibus ipsum. Let Israell reioyce in them that made him. Deut: 4. 7. Ioshua. 24. 19. Elohim quedoshim hu. The Goddes hee is the holie ones. Eccl: 5. 7. Gebohim, he is the high ones. And Ier: 10. 10. Iehouah Elohim, hu Elohim chaiym (that is) the Lord Godes, he is the liuing Godes. And 2. Sam: 7. 23. Read also Isai: 6, 8. and chapt: 54. 5. Thus, the distinction of Persons, may be proued, partly by the vsuall phrase, or form of speach in the holy language. And partly, it may be prooued by such testimonies, as doe, in our owne translation, make more expresse mention of the Persons: as Psalm: 33. 6. By the worde of the Lorde were the heauens made, and all the hoste of them by the breath of his mouth.

That

Beliefe in one onely God three distinct Persons.

The Ground and meaning of it.

That is, as Iunius interpreteth: Pater in filio per spiritum. The father in the sonne by the spirit. And Isai. 63. 9. 10. In all their troubles hee was troubled; and the Angell of his presence saued them: in his loue and in his mercie he redeemed them, and hee did beare and carie them alwaies continually. But they rebelled and vexed his holy Spirit: &c. Hæc tota narratio (vt idem Interpres) est in primis euidens si qua in vetere Testamento, ad confirmandum doctrinam Christianam de vno Deo & tribus Personis. This whole narration (as saith the same Interpreter) is as euident, as any in the olde Testament, to proue the Christian doctrine, concerning one GOD and three Persons. Likewise Hagg: 2. 5. 6. Yet nowe be of good courage ô Zerubbabel, &c. for I am with you saith the Lord of Hostes. According to the word that I couenanted with you, when ye came out of Egipt: so my spirit shall remaine among you, feare ye not. Est hic locus de sancta Trinitate euidentissimus. This place (say Trem: and Iunius) is a most euident place concerning the holy Trinitie.

But it will peraduenture be obiected of some, that in none of these places, no nor in that of the Apostle Iohn, where hee saieth: There are three which beare witnesse in heauen, there is any mention of the word Person.

Question. What other testimonie or ground of holy Scripture haue you, that wee may safely and boldly assure our selues to beleeue, that these three, are, and may be called, by the name of three Persons?

Answere In the first Chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrues, verse. 3, the Apostle saith of our Saviour Christ, the Sonne of God; that he is the brightnes of the glory, and the ingrauen forme of the Person of the Father. Wherefore, seeing the Father is a person, in a respect or relation to the Sonne; so is the Sonne, in a like respect or relation to the Father: and consequently also, the holy Ghost is a person, in a like respect and relation to them both.

Explicatiõ & proofe. There is in deede, the same reason of all three persons mutually, which is of any one, to either of the other. And touching the Sonne, of whom it is said, that he is the ingrauen forme of the person of the Father: the Sonne himselfe our Lord Iesus Christ, saith in this respect, that he which knoweth the Sonne, knoweth also the Father: Iohn, ch: 14. 7. &c. If ye had knowne me (saith our Saviour Christ) ye should haue knowne the Father also, &c. I am in the Father and the Father is in me, &c. Read also chap. 8. 19.

Onely it must be confessed, that the Apostle in the place of the Epistle to the Hebrues, vseth the word Hypostasis, the which, word for word, is a Subsistence: but assuredly, hee vseth it altogether in the same sence, as wee commonly vse the word person. as it is rightly translated, according to the vse of all true Christian Churches. For these words Hyphistamenon, Hypostasis, Prosopon, with the Christian Grecians, are the same in common interpretation with our English word Person, as it is vsed of vs from the Latine word Persona, in such sence as it is applied of all Latine Diuines, to the opening of this mysterie. Of this therefore, for this present, enough.

Shew now likewise, what ground you haue, that the Persons in the Deitie, are to be distinguished: not onely in the relation of words, but also really as we may say, and in respect of the order of the Beeing of the diuine nature it selfe.

Answere. What proofe haue you for this?

Question. At the baptisme of the Sonne of God our Lord Iesus Christ, Math. chap. 3. verses, 16. 17. God the Father, did actually make it most cleare: in that, by audible voice from heauen, he pronounceth of the Sonne, then vpon earth in the nature of man: This is my beloued Sonne in whom I am well pleased. And the holy Ghost, in the likenes of a Doue, descended and lighted vpon our Saviour Christ the sonne of God, at the very same time.

This is a liuely proofe, and declaration of it, in very deede.

Question. But what ground haue you, that the Persons are to be distinguished, in such manner as was before affirmed: by generation, and by beeing begotten, and

Beliefe in one onely God, three distinct Persons.

The ground and meaning of it.

by proceeding?

Answere, In the 1. verse of the first Chapter of the Gospell according to Iohn, our Saviour Christ the Sonne of God, is called the onely begotten Sonne of the Father, full of grace and truth. And chap. 3. verse, 16. God so loued the world, that he hath giuen his onely begotten Sonne, &c. And Heb. chap. 1, verse, 5, 6. Vnto which of the Angels said he (that is, God the Father) at any time: Thou art my Sonne, this day begat I thee? And againe: I will be his Father, and he shall be my Sonne. And againe, When hee bringeth his first begotten Sonne into the world, he saith: And let all the Angels of God worship him.

Explication and proofe, Heere it is plaine, that the Father hath begot, and that the Sonne is the onely begotten of the Father. The which generating or begetting, that it was eternall, and before all beginning, we read Prou. 8, 22. &c. The Lord (saith wisdome, euen the eternall wisedome of God, the euerliuing Sonne of the Father) he hath possessed me in the beginning of his way: I was before his works of old. I was set vp from euerlasting, from the beginning and before the earth. When there were no depthes was I begotten, &c. And must it not needes be, that the Sonne of God is begotten in speciall manner (that is after a most diuine manner) seeing it cannot agree to the Angels of God, though they be the chiefe of all his creatures? Neither is it against the eternitie of this generating and begetting of the Sonne of God, that he saith: This day begat I thee. For these words, concerne onely the manifestation of the Sonne of God, in the nature of man: either typicallie in King Dauid, who was a figure of him, or properly by his owne appearance in the flesh, in the due time and season thereof. But the former words: Thou art my Sonne (as they are referred to our Sauiour Christ) they are spoken of the eternitie of the Sonne of God before all worlds: according to the witnesse of the Sonne of God himselfe, Iohn 17. 24. Father thou louedst me before the foundation of the world.

Now shew likewise some testimonie, for proofe of the eternall proceeding of the holy Ghost:

Question, Where may that be found?

Answere. In the 14. chapter of Iohn, verse, 26. our Saviour Christ certifieth vs, that the Father sendeth the holy Ghost in his name. And chap. 15. the 26. verse, hee saith further, When the Comforter shall come, whom I will send vnto you from the Father, euen the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth of the Father, hee shall testifie of me.

Explication and proofe. This sending and comming of the holy Ghost in time for our benefit and comfort, is but an effect (as it were) of that naturall proceeding of the holie Ghost, which is eternall before all time, and from euerlasting to euerlasting, without all limitation of time. Neuertheless, wee may from hence, euidentlie discerne the eternitie of the proceeding of the holy Ghost. For that which is his naturall propertie now, or euer was at any time heeretofore, it is his naturall propertie still: and so was before beginning, and shall for euer so continue.

Now that it hath beene alwaies, the naturall propertie of the holy Ghost, to proceede from God: it may appeare, both from the beginning of the workes of the Creation, and also from the perpetuall gouernment of the same. From the beginning, Genesis, 1. verse, 2. The Spirit of God moued vpon the waters: or as the Hebrue word (merachepheth) signifieth, hee did support the waters, and euen the whole indigested substance of the world, as beeing the mightie arme and power of God: or, as wee may say, the wing of God spreading it selfe euer it, in a tender and cherishing manner. And further, for the continuall supporting, and preseruing of all creatures, after their Creation, wee reade Genesis, 6. 3. My Spirit shall not alwaies striue for these men: to wit, about their preseruation, as hetherto it hath done, seeing they will not be reclaimed from their extreame wickednes, &c.

Reade also Iob. 26. 13. The Spirit of God hath garnished the heauens. And chap. 32. 8. The inspiration of the almightie giueth vnderstanding. And Psal. 104. 30. and Psalm. 33. 8. Reade also Iohn. 20. 22. Our Sauiour Christ breathed on his Disciples when hee gaue them the holy Ghost. Now the same holie Ghost, is both the Spirit of the Father, and also of the Sonne our Lord Iesus Christ. Wherefore, euen as God the Father, at the beginning of the creation of man, did by his Spirit breath naturall life into him. Genesis, 2, 7. so did the Sonne of God our Lord Iesus Christ by his Spirit: that is, by the same holie Ghost, breath the spirituall grace of life and holinesse, into those, whom hee made his speciall and most choise instruments, for the rectifying and reforming of the wicked and crooked worlde. But of this more afterward.

Question. THe former points, thus cleared in the particulars: nowe what is the meaning of these wordes together: I beleeue in that one onely God, who is three distinct Persons?

Answere. The meaning of them is this: I beleeue that in the one onely diuine nature, or essence and Beeing of God, there are neither more nor fewer, then three Persons, euen the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost. I beleeue also, that they beeing coessentiall, coeternall, and coequall: haue equally, and eternally consented, both in decreeing before all time, and also in performing in due season, all the workes, not onely of creation and gouernment ouer all the world: but also, (and that in a singular manner) the most wonderfull worke of the redemption, and saluation, of all and euery one of the elect of God, from the beginning of the world, to the end of the same.

The truth and certaintie of these thinges, may partly be discerned from those Scriptures which haue beene alreadie alledged: and they shall (by the grace of GOD) bee more fullie confirmed heereafter, when wee shall come to the handeling of the seuerall Articles concerning euerie Person.

Question. In the meane while, what singular manner of the consenting of the most holy Trinitie, concerning the redemption and saluation of the elect of God, is that, which you speake of?

Answere. God the Father, of his most free and vnspeakeable, yea euen of his incomprehensible loue, hath giuen his onely begotten Sonne, to abase himselfe, by taking our nature, by subiecting himselfe to the law, and by dying the death, yea euen the most cursed death of the crosse, for our sinnes.

God the Sonne, according to the same most gratious good will and pleasure of the Father, most willingly yeelded to the same.

God the holy Ghost (by whose most holy conception, the Sonne of God tooke our humane nature, and by whom hee offered vp himselfe an euerlasting sacrifice, to satisfie the wrath of God for our sinnes, and to purge our consciences from dead workes to serue the liuing God) hee, according to the good will and pleasure of them both, doth likewise, of his owne most gratious accord, seale vp the whole fruite of the death of the Sonne of God, to our endlesse saluation and comfort.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is very true, which you haue answered. For although in some respects (according to the Articles of our beliefe) the Father is more expressie acknowledged, the Creator of all thinges: the Sonne, the Redeemer: and the holy Ghost, the sanctifier of the Church of God. Yet the whole Trinitie, doth so wholly consent in all the works, both of the creation and gouernment of the world, and also in the worke of the redemption and saluation of the Church: that the Father doth nothing, either in the one, or in the other, without the Sonne, but by and with the Sonne; neither doe the Father and the Sonne any thing, but by and with the holy Ghost: as Gen. 1. 26. Let vs make man in our image, &c. And Ioh. 5. 17. My Father (saith our S: Ch:) worketh hitherto, and I worke. And verses, 19. 20. The Sonne can doe nothing of himselfe, saue that hee seeth the Father doe: for whatsoeuer thinges hee doeth, the same thinges doeth the Sonne also. &c. And Zech: 4. 6. Neither by an armie nor strength: but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of Hostes. Read also Luke, 4. 1. and verses, 14. 18. But of these things likewise, wee shall haue further occasion to speake againe more fully, afterward.

Beleefe in one onelie God three distinct Persons.

Question. NOw in the third place, what promise haue you, that the holy Trinitie of Persons, in the vnitie of the Godhead: doe in so singular a manner consent, in the most blessed worke of our redemption, and saluation?

Answer. Our Christian baptizing into the name of the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost by the commandement of our Saviour Christ: it is from God himselfe, as it were the broad seale of the Kingdome of heauen, to confirme the holy promise and couenant hereof vnto vs, and to so many as shall beleeue, vnder the warrant of them all.

Explicatiō and proofe. It is true indeede. This forme of our Christian baptisme into the name of the holy Trinitie, doth so verily assure vs, that it is the good will and holy pleasure of GOD our heauenly Father, euen for his Sonne our Lord Iesus Christes sake, and through the sanctification of the holy Ghost, to take and adopt vs for his children: that wee may after a sort, sensibly feele and handle the vndoubted certaintie of one couenant made by them all. Wherefore, like as it is written of circumcision, that it was vnto the beleeuing Iewes, a seale of that righteousnes which they had by faith, Rom. 4. 11: so may wee, assuredly say of our Christian baptisme (the which is vnto vs the same, which that was to them) that it is a most gratious and authenticall seale of our iustification, through faith, by the consent of the whole Trinitie.

Yea, so assured a cōfirmatiō hereof is baptisme, that the Apostle Peter doubteth not to affirme, that we are alreadie saued thereby. And so we are indeed, as touching the blessed entrance into the state of grace and saluation: (I speake of all such, as doe by the grace of God, truly beleeue and trust in that grace, which by the will of God himselfe, is signified and sealed thereby) yea and we may also, and ought of dutie, by the vertue of the promise of God, to be as verily perswaded of our full and perfect saluation in due season yet to come, as if we had presently the full fruition of it: 1. Pet. 3. 21. Read also: Iohn, cha. 14. verses, 15. 16. &c.

he and the man doth shew that baptism to the child is of profit but not in these ways

This promise therefore, must needes be exceedingly comfortable, according as the benefit is most singular and great. The which comfort of the promise, is the next point of our inquirie, according to our order propounded.

SHew therefore in the next place, some proofe of holy Scripture, for that comfort which we may iustly take, in the most blessed testimonie and consent which the holy Trinitie giueth, concerning the promise of our redemption, iustification, and saluation.

Question. What proofe can you alledge for the warrant heereof?

Answere. In the 5. Chapter of the first Epistle of Iohn, verses, 9. 10. 11. the holy Apostle setteth out the greatnes of this comfort, by a familiar comparison.

If (saith he) we receiue the witnesse of men, the witnesse of God is greater: for this is the witnesse of God, which he testified of his Sonne. He that beleeueth in the Sonne of God, hath the witnesse in himselfe: hee that beleeueth not God, hath made him a liar, because hee beleeued not the record which GOD hath witnessed of his Sonne. And this is the record, that God hath giuen vnto vs eternall life, and this life is in his Sonne.

Expōcation and proofe. Heere is in deede a very plaine, and familiar demonstration of it. For seeing among men, the confirmation of euerie matter, is established by the testimonie of two or three witnesses: Deut. 19. 15. Math. 18. 16. 2. Cor. 13. 1: infinitely much more, ought the three-fold diuine witnesse of the most holie Trinitie from heauen, preuaile with vs, to the establishing and confirming of our faith, in the most certaine truth of the promise of God. And the rather also, are wee to comfort our hearts in this assurance, because the Lord our God, euery way tendering our weakenesse, hath added to this threefolde witnesse in heauen, a like three-fold witnesse on earth. For so saith the same Apostle Iohn, in the 8. verse of the same fift Chapter. There are three also which beare record in earth, the Spirit, and the Water, and the Blood: and these three agree in one. And I beseech you, let vs marke this comfortable addition, diligently. For (as was obserued before) if wee should onely looke to this mysterie of the Trinitie, as it is hidden in it selfe, and as it were in the most secret closet of the highest heauen, it would rather astonish and confound vs, then comfort and cheare vp our hearts: at the least we should find it so high, that wee could not bee able to reach vnto the comfort of it. It is Gods exceeding mercie therefore, that he hath vouched safe to descend (as it were downe to the earth, to succour and helpe our weakenesse: and to this ende, not onely to giue vs the witnesse of his holy spirit inwardly in our soules, but also, to let vs (after a sort) to see with our eyes, and to feele (as it were) with our handes, life and saluation brought to light for vs: insomuch as the blood of our SAVIOVR CHRIST, yea euen that water and blood which issued out of his most holy side, they doe cleanse vs from all our sinnes, and set vs in the high fauour of our most good and gracious God.

Beliefe in one onely God, three distinct Persons.

Thus then, wee looking to the testimonie of the Father, manifested by the Sonne appearing in our nature, and immediately sealed vp in our hearts by the holy Ghost, who is euen therefore called the Comforter: great and singular, well may the comfort of our faith bee, in the holy Trinitie. Yea iustly may it bee esteemed the very treasurie of our comfort. According as when the Apostle Paul would wishe and pray the greatest comfort, yea euen all the true and best, and most compleat comfort that might bee, to the Church of GOD, in the Citie of Corinth; hee concludeth his holy Epistle which hee wrote vnto them, with this most sweete farewell: The grace of our Lord Iesus Christ, and the loue of God, and the communion of the holy Ghost be with you all. Amen.

To which purpose also call to minde that which is written, Iohn, Chap. 17.3. and Rom. 5.1.2.3.4.5. and Ephes. 2,18. And in the beginning of the first Epistle of the Apostle Peter: his entrance, is likewise most comfortable, from this doctrine of the Trinitie, in respect of the consent both of the Father the Sonne, and the holy Ghost, in the election, redemption, iustification and sanctification of his people.

Question. NOw, the comfort being thus exceeding great to euery true beleeuer: it followeth that the obedience of faith, ought of singular dutie, to be likewise exceeding great. I aske therefore in the fourth place of our inquirie concerning this article: what is the dutie, belonging to the most sweete and full comfort of faith, in the most holy Trinitie.

Answere. The dutie hereof, is generally all dutie; and the same also to be performed in the most dutifull, chearefull, earnest, and constant manner that may bee: euen the same, which our Christian and holy Baptisme into the name of the most holy Trinitie, doth require.

That is to say, that by the grace of our God we doe (as becommeth the obedient children of God, our heauenly father) most carefully indeuour, to shewe forth the fruites of the spirit, in the obedience of the Gospell of our Sauiour Christ the Sonne of God: and that in all things, wee worship the vnitie of the Godhead, in the Trinitie of the Persons, and the Trinitie in vnitie, as the Churches of God haue of ancient time, right Christianly professed, and so doe also euen at this day.

Explicatiō & proofe. It is very true, that you haue answered. For Baptisme, being the seale of GODS couenant to vs, as circumcision was to the Iewes: Genesis. 17. it dorh likewise answerably require of vs, that wee doe enter into couenant with God, in all holy care and conscience of walking in all good dutie before him, as Abraham and all the faithfull of his posteritie did.

Beliefe in one onely God, three distinct Persons.

For as our Sauiour Christ saith, the children of Abraham will doe the workes of Abraham, &c.

And verily, all the dutie that we (yea that all the Church of God can yeeld) is too shallowe a fruite of obedience and thankfulnes to God, for the reuelation and comfort of this most deepe and high mysterie. For insomuch as the Lord God, our onely Lord, of his infinite mercie, wholly consenteth, both in vnitie of nature, and according to the eternall distinctiō of the persons, to the endles perfitting of our redemption & saluation: what dutie of ours (though we were able to yeelde him all the seruice, both of vnderstanding, and reason, of will and affection, yea both of spirit, soule, and body) could be answerable to this his infinite goodnes and mercy?

But to speak something more particularly: it is the duty of the whole church of God, and of euery true beleeuer, to hold, maintaine, and defend this most holy doctrine, against all Anti-trinitarians, Atheiests, or Profane persons, whosoeuer shall shewe themselues, to be despisers, gainesayers, and blasphemers thereof. In which respect, the holy and diligent labours of Athanasius, Nazianzene, and many other in former times; as also of Caluin, Beza, Vrsinus, Zanchius, &c. they are in these our daies very excellent.

The aduersaries of this most high point of doctrine, haue beene, from time to time, many and great in the church of God: the lesse to be maruelled at; because it is the doctrine of a most secret and high mystery, infinitely exceeding all comprehension of corrupt naturall reason. The lesse also is it to be maruelled at, because the Diuel (who in all things, enuieth the glory of God, and euery way maliceth the saluation of his people) taketh all the occasions he can, to hinder, yea to corrupt, and vtterly to peruert, the true knowledge, & faith of this most glorious and healthfull mysterie.

The former, and more ancient of these wicked aduersaries (as learned Daneus hath gathered and sorted them together in his booke of heresies) they were first, the Apelites, Messaians, Deïtes and Monarchites, who deny ing the distinct Persons, held that God is onely as it were a sole and solitarie Monarch of the world.

Secondly, the Simonians, Ptolemies, Colarbasies, Montanistes, Noetians, Praxeans, Sabellians, Apolinaristes, who affirmed that there is but one person in the Trinitie, onely called by these three sundry names: Father, Sonne, and holy Ghost.

Thirdly, the Marcellians, who taught that the Trinitie is but an extension or dilating of one and the same thing, as it were waxe.

Fourthly, the Hieracites, who said that the Persons in the Trinitie, are but as it were two lights of one candle.

Fifly, the Metangismonites, who imagined the Persons to be like to diuerse vessels, the one contained within the other, and as a scroule of diuers skinnes.

Sixtly, the Tritheïtes, and Trifermians, who contended that the three Persons, are three diuerse and sundry Gods.

Seauenthly, the Marcites, and Tetratheïtes, who make a quaternitie of Persons. The which hereticall blasphemie, when Anastasius the Emperour, attempted to establish by his Edict, about the yeare of our Lord, 485. he was by the hand of God, stricken with lightening, and died miserably. Daneus, chap. 47. in his booke of Heresies.

The last of the more ancient aduersaries, which the same writer rehearseth, were the Aetians, who made no more account of the three Persons, then of three qualities. All these were worthily resisted, and refuted by the excellent Ministers of Gods word in former times.

Now, in these latter daies, rose vp one Seruetus, and other, who went about to reuiue the former heresie of the Simonians and such like heretikes of their rancke.

Wherefore, by how much the Diuel raiseth vp more hostile warre, against this

Beliefe in one onely God, three distinct persons.

The Danger of not beleeuing this Article.

this sacred ground of our Christian faith, to the dishonour of our God, and to the endangering of our soules to euerlasting perdition; as also to the opening of the mouthes, of the profane and vngodly, to blaspheme that most holy and sacred mysterie which they knowe not, neither haue learned to reuerence and adore: by so much ought all the seruants of God, at this day, and from time to time, according to the example of those that haue beene before vs; to be the more studious and carefull, both to settle our owne vnderstanding and faith more firmely, and also more wisely, soundly, and faithfully, euery one according to his place and calling, to teach and strengthen one another: and all of vs, with one consent, to pray the more feruently to God, that it would please his diuine maiestie, still to vphold this his blessed truth of doctrine, which teacheth the truth of his most blessed nature, & the māner of his glorious Essence, against all aduersaries thereof, as euer heretofore he hath done. Amen.

THat which now remaineth, concerning this article, is the danger of not beleeuing in the blessed Trinitie.

Question. What is that?

Answere. It is vnpossible, that any which beleeue not in the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost, three Persons one onely true God; should either know rightly the fountaine from whence, or the meanes by whom, or the manner how, life and saluation is brought to light: much lesse can they feele the comfort of it here; and least of all, shall they be partakers of the happines and glory of it, in the kingdome of heauen.

Explicatiō & proofe. It is vnpossible in very deed. For all is contained within the reuelation, and faith of this most blessed mysterie, as wee may clearly perceiue, by calling to minde that which wee reade in the places of holy Scripture before alledged: Rō: 5.1.2.3.4.5. Eph. 2.18. & 1. Pet. chap. 1, v. 2. & 2. Cor. ch. 13. v. 13. which is the last of the whole chapter. Yea, so is all contained and treasured vp in this mystery, that whosoeuer doe not rightly beleeue it *, they shal most assuredly, wofully perish for euer frō the most glorious presence of God, & haue their portion among the most hellish and diuellish aduersaries of his glorie. According as it hath beene long since, well acknowledged and determined, and so is stil in the true churches of Christ: that whosoeuer desire to be saued, must necessarily and before all things, hold the true Christian and Catholike faith. And that whosoeuer doe not keepe it holy and vndefiled, shal without doubt perish euerlastingly. The which Catholike faith (that is to say, the common faith of all true beleeuers) is this, that we doe acknowledge, and worship one God in Trinitie, and the Trinitie in vnitie. Neither confounding the Persons, nor diuiding the substance, &c.

* Vnderstand it of those that be willingly ignorant, or heretically minded against this holy Mysterie.

Whosoeuer doe not beleeue thus, it is most certaine that they doe not beleeue in the true God rightly. Nay it is vnpossible, that any, who professing Christātie, doe not beleeue in one onely God, three distinct Persons; should auoide the opinion, either of many Gods, or of the inequality of Gods. For the name of God, is cōmunicated to euery one of these Persons, in the holy Scriptures. Finally, they that doe not thus beleeue, doe deny vnto God his due worship and honour, seeing the Father requireth to bee honoured in his Sonne, & that his Sonne should be honoured with him, and that both Father, and Sonne should be honoured, in and with the holy Ghost.

From all miserable vnbeliefe therefore, specially from all hereticall, blasphemous, and obstinate contradiction, to this so chiefe and foundamentall a point of our onely orthodoxe and true Christian faith: the Lord our most gracious and mercifull God, euen the Father, for his onely Sonne our Lord Iesus Christs sake, by the grace of the holy Gost, preserue and keepe vs for euer Amen.

Thus much, concerning the doctrine of beliefe in the most holy and glorious Trinitie of Persons in one onely true God, more generally or conioyntly.

Hence-

Beliefe in God the Father.

Question. Henceforth wee are to examine the doctrine of our faith, concerning euery distinct Person.

And first concerning the Father: how doe the articles of our faith teach vs to beleeue in him?

Answere. They doe teach vs to beleeue in the Father, as in the almightie God, the maker of heauen and earth.

It is so. They are the very wordes of the Creed: I beleeue in God the Father almightie, maker of heauen and earth. Here are many things to be considered.

Question. BVt first of al, what proofe haue you, that God is a father, or (as the words of the articles of our beliefe are) the Father: that is, such a father, as none else is, or possibly can be, euen he that is almightie, &c. and that therefore wee are accordingly to beleeue in him?

Answere. Beside other diuine testimonies, we haue the witnes of Saint Paul in the 8. Chapter of his first Epistle to the Corinthians, the 5, and 6. verses. And likewise in the 5. and 6. verses of the 4. chap. to the Ephesians.

Rehearse you the words of the holy Apostle, in the first of those places.

Question, Answere. Which are they?

Though (saith the Apostle) there be that are called Gods, whether in heauen or in earth (as there be many Gods and many Lords) yet vnto vs, there is but one God, who is the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him.

Explication and proofe. The meaning of the holy Apostle is, that howsoeuer, partly by most wicked and abusiue custome, the name of God, hath by idolaters, beene vsually attributed to their idolls, and false Gods: (for so, as he saith, there be many Gods, and many Lords, to wit, cõmonly so called: according to that, 2. Kings chap. 1, 2, and chap. 18, 33, 34, 35. and Amos, 8. 14. and Ier. 2, 26. They say to a tree, thou art my father, and to a stone thou hast begotten me: for they haue turned their backe vnto me, and not their face: but in the time of their trouble, they will say: Arise and helpe vs. But where are thy Gods which thou hast made thee? Let them arise, if they can helpe thee in the time of thy trouble: for according to the number of thy cities, are thy Gods ô Iudah.) Thus I say, howsoeuer, (as the Apostle saith) partly by abusiue and idolatrous custome, the name of God is ascribed to idolls and false Gods: and partly also, albeit God himselfe, doe in most wise considerations (as hath beene declared in the Treasury vpon the 5. Commandement) impart his most holy & honourable names, God and Father, to ciuil Magistrats, and to naturall Parents, &c. Psal. 82, and Iohn, 10. 34. 35, 36. and in many other places. Yet to speake properly, and from the originall roote and fountaine of all Father-hood, and power, or authoritie: God the father onely, is both Father, and God, according to that of our Sauiour Christ. Matth. 23, 9. Call no man your Father vpon earth: for there is but one your father, euen hee that is in heauen.

Read also Isai. ch. 44, 17, 18.

The other place to the Ephesians (mentioned in the former answere,) is like to that alreadie rehearsed out of the Epistle to the Corinthians. For these are the wordes of the Apostle in that fourth Chapter to the Ephesians. There is one Lord, one faith, one Baptisme, one God, and Father of all, who is aboue all, and through all, & in you all. Not that the diuine nature of God the father, is mixed with ours, or with the nature of any other creature (for he is onely, and altogether entire and perfectly consisting in and by himselfe) but because it is his power, which continually supporteth all creatures, as wel as at the beginning, he did originally, create and make them all.

Thus therefore, seeing God is a father, yea rather the onely father of all fatherhood: that is, so a father as none else is, or can be (as was said) we haue no cause to doubt, but that wee are to beleeue in him accordingly, that hee is such a Father, as is very true God, euen God the Father almightie, &c. And thus, when the Apostle Peter, 1. Epist. Chap. 1. verse, 21. (writeth) that God hath raised vp Christ from the deade, and giuen him glorie, that our faith and hope might bee in God: it is plaine from that which goeth before in the 17. verse, that the Apostle writeth of that God, who is the Father. Yea euen our Father, and the Father of all true beleeuing Christians, by the grace of that adoption and couenant, which of his infinite mercie, it hath pleased him to make with vs, through his owne onely and naturall Sonne, our Lord Iesus Christ; as we are hereafter further to consider.

Beleefe in God the Father.

And now furthermore, this also we are to vnderstand, that insomuch as our heauenly Father, in whom wee are to beleeue, is very true God: therefore, all the essentiall attributes of the diuine nature, doe essentially belong vnto him, in that he is the Father. So that we are not onely to beleeue in him, as in an Almightie Father (of the which his almightie power, wee are to consider afterward) but also, as in our eternall Father, according to that which we read: Isay: chap: 63. 16. Thou ô Lord art our Father, & redeemer, thy name is for euer. Neither are we to beleeue in the Father, onely as in an almightie and as in an eternall Father, the maker of heauen and earth: but also, as in a most prouident Father, euen the most gracious ruler and gouernour of all thinges, specially ouer his Church. As Iohn. 5. 17. My Father worketh hitherto, saith our Sauiour Christ. And Matth. 6. 26. Your heauenly Father feedeth the fowles of heauen. And Chap. 10, 29. 30. A Sparrowe falleth not to the ground, without your Father. Yea and all the haires of your head be numbred. Read also, chap. 18. 10. and 24. 36. and 26. 53. and Act. 1. 7. But of the fatherly prouidence and gouernment of God our heauenly Father, we shall likewise haue iust occasion, to consider more fully afterward. Wherein also, the most perfect wisedome of this our Father, wil be mademore manifest vnto vs. And that, yet further accompanied with his most tender mercy, according to that thanksgiuing of our Sauiour Christ: Matth. 11, 25, &c. and according to that of the Apostle. 2. Cor: 1. 3. Blessed be God, euen the Father of our Lord Iesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and God of all consolation and comfort.

Moreouer, we are to beleeue in him, as being most righteous; according to that, 1. Pet. 1, 17. For he is such a Father, as iudgeth without respect of persons. And therefore doth our Saui: Christ pray to him, as being a righteous Father Iohn. 17, 25. And likewise also, as being a holy Father, in the 11. verse of the same chapter. Finally, we are to beleeue in him, as being most faithfull and true according to that which we read in the same Euangelist, ch. 8, 14, 16. Though I beare witnesse of my selfe (saith our Sauiour Christ) yet my record is true: for I knowe whence I came, &c. And if I also iudge, my iudgement is true: for I am not alone, but I and the Father that sent me. And ver. 26, 27. He that sent me is true, and the things which I haue heard of him, those speake I vnto the world. They vnderstood not (saith the Euangelist) that he spake to them of the Father, &c.

And thus, we may see, that we are to beleeue in God our heauenly Father, the first Person in the holy Trinitie: as being an eternall, almightie, the most wise, most holy, most righteous and most mercifull Father, the most faithfull and true, &c. For whatsoeuer is ascribed to the Father, who is God; it must be vnderstood, as attributed vnto him absolutely, and in all diuine perfection, aboue all comparison to bee made with any creature. Yet so doe we attribute these things to the Father, that we doe not, neither may wee exclude either the Sonne, or the holy Ghost; as hath beene obserued before: and is more fully to be cleared and confirmed hereafter.

These things thus obserued, let vs now goe forward, to those points, which are to be furthermore considered, for the vnderstanding of this Article.

And first, insomuch (as was a little before touched) God is termed, and is in very deed, a Father in diuerse respects: I desire that you doe make a more full rehearsall of this point.

Question. What are those diuerse respects, according to the which, God is called by the name of a Father?

Answere. First, God is called, and is in truth, most properly a Father; onely in respect of his naturall, and onely, eternally begotten Sonne, our Lord Iesus Christ.

Secondly, in respect of his workes of Creation.

Thirdly, in respect of his fatherly prouidence, preseruation and gouernment, ouer all his creatures, euer since he created and made them.

Fourthly, in respect of his holy Church, and elect people, whom he hath in special manner, most graciously adopted, in his beloued and onely begotten Sonne by nature, to be his children, of meere fauour and grace.

Explication and proofe. That God is most properly a father in respect of his naturall and onely begotten Sonne, it is euen of it selfe euident. For Father and Sonne, are naturally, and properly relatiues euen here among men on earth; but principally, whē we speake of God the heauenly Father, and his Sonne. For though, as touching the earthly nature of man, one Father may haue many naturall Sons, the which haue all of them their seueral participation in the nature of their Father: yet in the diuine nature, there cannot possibly be more then one Sonne, seeing the whole nature of the Father, is essentially, eternally, and euerlastingly, communicated vnto him alone. And likewise, howsoeuer the naturall Father on earth, hauing many children, doth by naturall instinct, diuide as it were his affection among them, according as he had, euen by nature, a distinct and often renewed affection and desire to enioy them: yet the heauenly Father, hauing but one entier, infinite and eternall desire of generation in his diuine nature, he hath wholly, and without all possibilitie of distribution, or reiteration; from before all beginning, and for euermore, placed his whole desire, delight and affection, in his owne onely Son. And euen so much, doth the Father himselfe testifie at the baptisme of the same his Sonne; hee hauing then taken to his diuine nature, the nature of man. This is my beloued Sonne (saith the Father) in whom I am well pleased. And thus doth the word (Abba) vsed in the holy language for Father) signifie, from the roote (Abba) which is in the proper signification of it, so to desire or affect a thing, that the desire and affection doth rest it selfe in the same, being once attained vnto. This is perfectly & naturally, to be found onely in the minde and will of God the Father, according to that in the Prophesie of Hosh. chap: 11.1, I called my Sonne out of Egypt, because I loued him (Ahabehu). For these wordes doe principally respect our Sauiour Christ the Sonne of God, eternally, and most perfectly beloued of him; yea so, as he is for euer setteled in this his loue: as we read, Mat: chap, 2.15. Thus then in the first place, God is a Father in respect of his owne one onely begotten and naturall Sonne our Lord Iesus Christ.

Secondly, that he is called a Father, in respect of his workes of creation, it may appeare by this: that the Angels of heauen, are called the children of God: as Iob: chap: 1.6. The children of God, came, and stoode before the Lord: Satan came also among them. And againe, Chap: 2.1. And Chap. 38.7. All the children of God reioyced from the beginning of their Creation. Read also, Dan. 3.25. Where the Angell that preserued the three children of Israel from burning in the fierie fornace; is said to be like to the Sonne of God, as one of singular comlines and beautie, &c. Thus Adam also, though in a degree a little inferiour to the heauenly Angels, is called the Sonne of God: as we read, Luk. ch. 3.38. And the posteritie of Adam also, though degenerated; are called the off-spring of God, Act. 17.29. Not by generation (to speake properly) but by Creation. And so is that word off-spring to be vnderstood. According to that, Isai: ch: 64.8. O Lord thou art our Father & we are the clay &c. And Mal: 2.10. Haue we not all one Father? hath not one God made vs? And Heb: 12.9. God is called the Father: that is, in a special manner, the creator of spirits. For he hath made our soules, as well as our bodies, yea our soules, by a most excellent excellent creation, as shal further appeare, when we come once to the purposed handeling of that doctrine.

Beliefe in God the Father.

The Ground of it.

Now in the third place, that God is a father in respect of his most fatherly prouidence, and of the souereigntie of his gouernment: it may hence appeare, in that hee is called the father of the fatherlesse, Psal. 68.5. And againe, as was alledged before, in that our Sauiour Christ saith, Call no man your Father vpon earth: for there is but one your Father, who is in heauen. Neuertheless (as was also alledged) God doth not refuse to impart this his name, not onely to natural Parents; but also to ciuil Magistrates, in regard of that dignitie & authoritie, which they haue receiued of him, as Ps. 82.6. Iohn. 10.34.

Fourthly, that God is a father, in respect of the adoption of his holy Church, and elect people (both Iewes and Gentiles) euen so many as shall truly beleeue in him, as in their heauenly Father: and likewise, that he is a Father, in respect of his most gracious prouidence and gouernment ouer it: this may bee made plaine, and confirmed, by that which wee reade, Deut. 14.1. Where Moses saith to the Iewes: Yee are the children of the Lord your God. And Chap. 32.6. Doe yee so reward the Lord, ô yee foolish people and vnwise? Is not he thy Father that hath bought thee? he hath made thee, and proportioned thee.

Likewise, Elihu of olde, called God his father: as Iob. Chap. 34. v. 36. My Father (saith he, as Trem: and Iunius doe well translate that word) let Iob be tryed, &c. And thus also, Isaiah: Chap: 43. 8. the Israelites are called the Sonnes and daughters of the Lord: And Chap. 63. 16.

Doubtlesse thou art our Father, &c. This dignitie, and preheminence of the Filiation or Son-ship (as one may say) of the Church, is fitly expressed by this, that God calleth it, his first borne: to wit, in comparison of all the worlde beside. As Exod: 4. 22, 23. the Lord saith to Moses. Thou shalt say to Pharaoh, Thus saith the Lord; Israel is my Sonne, euen my first borne. Wherefore, I say vnto thee, let my Sonne goe, that he may serue me, &c. And Ierem: 31.9. I am a Father to Israel, and Ephraim is my first borne. And thus King Dauid, and King Salomon, (speciall tipes and figures of our Sauiour Christ, the onely naturall Sonne of God) they are by special grace and fauour, called the Sonnes of God: as Psal: 2. Thou art my Sonne, and 2. Sam: 7, 14. I will be his Father, and hee shall bee my Sonne. And Psal. 89, 26, 27. Hee shall cry vnto mee, thou art my Father, &c. But more generally, concerning both Iewe and Gentile, the Apostle Paul saith, Ephes. 3, 15, 16. Of the Father of our Lord Iesus Christ, is named the whole family, in heauen and in earth. And in this respect, doth the Euangelist Iohn teach vs, that the children of God, are borne not of blood, nor of the will of flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God. To the which purpose also, serueth that which we read, Rom. 8, 14. 15. 16. Gal. 4. verses, 5. 6. and 1. Pet. 1. 3. Blessed be God the Father, who according to his aboundant mercy, hath begotten vs againe, vnto a liuely hope, by the resurrection of Iesus Christ from the dead. To an inheritance immortall, &c.

It is true indeed, that in respect of this worke of our spirituall regeneration and sanctification, and of our preseruation in the same; the Sonne of God hath the name of an euerlasting Father giuen vnto him, Isay: ch. 9. 6. And ch. 8. 18. mention is made of his children. And ch. 53. 10. the promise is made by God that he should see his seed. The accomplishment whereof is testified: Heb: 2. 10. 11. 12. 13. He brought many children to glory. And therefore is he brought in, speaking thus: Behold here am I, & the children which God hath giuen me. In which respect also, he said while he was yet with his Disciples: I will not leaue you as orphanes (that is) fatherles or comfortles: Iohn, ch: 14, 18. Likewise, the holy Ghost, whom our Sauiour Christ thus promised to send, for the cõfort of his church, is in the same worke of our spirituall regeneration and sanctification, as a father to vs, and to the whole church, together with God the father and the Son: according to that we read, Ioh. ch. 3, 5, 6. Except a man be borne againe by the holy Ghost, &c. and Rom. 8, 14. As many as are led by the spirit of God, they are the Sonnes of God. Yet this ioint work of the whole Trinity in this whole ſpiritual work of grace, muſt ſo be vnderſtod, to wit: in a certain metaphorical or borrowed ſenſe when it is attributed to the Son & the H. G. as it may in no wiſe preiudice the diſtinctiō of Perſons, nor impeach the proprietie of this name Father, as properly attributed to the firſt Perſon of the holy Trinitie, of the which we treat.

IT is therefore to very good purpoſe, that you doe in the next place expreſſe what you meane when you ſay, I beleeue in the Father almightie maker of heauen and earth. What doe you meane by theſe wordes?

Queſtion.

Anſwere.

My meaning is, to proteſte that (according to the two former acceptions of the word Father) I doe vndoubtedly beleeue, that God the Father, the firſt Perſon in the moſt holy and bleſſed Trinitie (euen the naturall Father of his eternall and onely begotten Sonne) hath by the ſame his Sonne, together with the holy Ghoſt: in infinite wiſedome, and by his almightie power, made the heauen and the earth, the Sea and all that in them is, of very nothing at the firſt.

Here in, your meaning is agreeable to the truth it ſelfe: according to that we read, Ioh. ch. v. 1, 2, 3, 4. Col: 1, 15, 16, 17. & Heb: 1, v. 2. Read alſo Gen: ch: 1. verſe 2. 26. And Iob: 26. 13.

Queſtion.

But hath God the Father, by his Sonne, together with the holy Ghoſt the ſpirit of them both: onely created and made all things at the beginning, and thenceforth left them to themſelues, to be as we vſe to ſay, at vncertaine?

Anſwer.

Nothing leſſe. And therefore according to the third acception of the word Father: I doe beleeue, that God in his moſt ſouereigne and fatherly prouidence, hath from the beginning of his creation, doth ſtil, and will likewiſe (by the ſame his Sonne, together with the holy Ghoſt) continually euen to the end of the world, vniuerſally rule, gouerne, and preſerue, all his creatures, in all wiſedome and righteouſnes, according to the moſt holy and determinate pleaſure of his owne moſt gracious and diuine will.

Explication and proofe.

This alſo is very true, and agreeable to the holy Scriptures, as we may read further: Iohn ch: 1. verſes 5, 9. 10. & ch. 3. 17, Col: 1. 17. In the Sonne all things conſiſt, from the Father. And Heb: ch: 1. 3. The Father, by the Sonne, beareth vp all things. Read alſo, Pſal, 104. 30. If thou ſend forth thy Spirit, they are created and thou reneweſt the face of the earth. And in the 24. v. of the ſame Pſ. O Lord, how wonderfull are thy workes! In wiſedome haſt thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches. So is this Sea great and wide, &c. Ier: 10, 12, 13. and Mat: 6, 26. Your heauenly Father feedeth the fowles of heauen (ſaith our Sauiour Chriſt) And ch: 10. 29. A Sparrow falleth not on the ground without your Father. And as it followeth in the next verſe of the ſame ch: he giueth to vnderſtand, that the Father hath a ſpeciall regard of his adopted children, through his owne Son our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. For our Sauiour himſelfe ſaith, the haires of their head are numbred.

This ſpeciall prouidence of God the Father toward his Church, you alſo mentioned a little before.

Queſtion.

Now what doe ye beleeue in this reſpect, to the more full clearing of this Article of our faith in the firſt perſon of the holy Trinitie, God the Father?

Anſwere.

I doe, in this reſpect, according to the laſt acception of the word Father, furthermore vndoubtedly beleeue, that God the Father, of his moſt free grace, and in moſt tender pittie and compaſſion, according to his diuine counſell, purpoſe, and predeſtination, euen before the foundation of the world was laid: hath in his beloued Sonne choſen and adopted vs, and all the elect people, to be his children, through the ſanctification of the holy Ghoſt: to the end that we truly knowing & truſting in the ſame his grace, ſhould obtaine the glory of our Lord Ie: Ch: yea & that euē in this life alſo, we ſhould enioy a ſpecial fruite of the fatherly prouidence of our moſt good & gracious God, aboue al the childrē of this world.

Explication and proofe.

You may ſafely, and with good aſſurance, beleeue this alſo: according to the teſtimony of the Apoſtle Paul, as we read 2. Theſ: 2, 13, 14. and in many other places. For one & the ſame (though it may be in ſome differing meaſure) is the happie & glorious eſtate of al true beleeuing Chriſtiās, in the kingdome of heauen. Read alſo, Pſ: 4, 6, & Pſ. 31, 19, 20, & 46, 7, 8, 9. But of al theſe points, which you haue anſwered for the clearing of this article (inſomuch as they are all of them them matters of great importance) let vs, trusting in the grace of God, set our minds to inquire more particularly, into the grounds and doctrine of them; by a more large discourse, to the more plentiful inriching of this part of the Treasurie of our faith. First concerning this, that God is our Father.

Beliefe in God the Father.

The Promise

Secondly, concerning his almightie power.

Thirdly, concerning his creation, and the seuerall workes thereof. And fourthly, concerning his fatherly prouidence, both generally ouer all the workes of creation, and also more specially toward his Church, in the election, calling, gathering together, and preseruation thereof.

Question. FIrst therefore, what promise haue you in the holy Scriptures, that God is minded to be a Father vnto vs? For, that God is a Father (that is to say, the first person in the most holy Trinity) we haue seene the ground & proofe of it already. Now what ground haue you (I say) for the promise?

Answere. In the 2. Epistle to the Cor. chap. 6. The Apostle alledgeth the Prophesies of the old Testament, concerning vs the Gentiles in this behalfe.

Question. Which are those Prophesies?

Answere. In the 16, verse of that chapter, the Apostle hath these words, God hath said, I wil dwel among them, and walke there, and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. And verse 17. I will receiue you. And verse 18. I will be a Father vnto you, and you shall be my sonnes and daughters, saith the Lord almightie.

Explicatiõ & proofe. These Prophesies (the which, as the same Apostle calleth them in the beginning of the next Chapter, are so many promises) they are diligently to be marked, and to be surely laide holde vpon, and apprehended of vs; because, if God were onely a father in respect of his natural and onely begotten Sonne, and not also for the Sons sake, a Father to vs, by the couenant of grace and adoption: we could not possibly beleeue in God, to our comfort. For by our Apostacie in Adam, wee are wholly fallen from God: not onely from the Father, but also from the Sonne of God simply considered in the Deitie of his person, and from the holy Ghost also, the onely Spirit of them both. Yea we are so fallen, that we cannot possibly, by any meanes, be raised vp and restored againe: but by the free grace of the Father, through the mediation of the Son taking our nature: and in the same, by his redeeming, iustifying, & sanctifying of vs vnto himselfe by the holy Ghost. And for this cause it is, that our Lord Iesus Christ, of his tender loue, is so earnest, to assure vs in his holy Gospell, that God is our Father. For so hee speaketh oftentimes of him before his death; teaching vs to pray to him, as being our heauenly Father; and after his resurrection also saying: I goe vp to my Father and your Father, &c. Iohn, chap. 20. 17.

Such therefore, and so worthie and necessarie, is the obseruation and faith of this most comfortable promise of God, that he will be a Father vnto vs, reconciled in and by his sonne our Lord Iesus Christ.

Question. NOw let vs come to the comforts themselues, such as belong to this article of our faith: Which are they?

Answere First, insomuch as God vouchsafeth to be a Father vnto vs: his loue toward vs, must needes be more pure and tender (in that he is of a most holy and mercifull nature) and infinitely more constant also in his loue (in so much as hee is most faithfull) then can be the loue of any the most louing and tender naturall Parents, to their most deare and naturall children.

Secondly, the comfort of this, that God is our Father, is very great: in that according to the exceeding greatnes of his loue (infinitely aboue the loue of all naturall parents) so are his gifts and and benefites to his children, infinitely aboue theirs: both in number, measure, weight, and value.

Expãcatiõ & proofe. It is very true. And therefore it is, that the Lord saith thus, by his Prophet Isaiah. ch. 49. 15. 16. Though a woman should forget her child, & not haue compassion of the sonne of her wombe, yet would not I forget thee. Behold (saith the Lord) I haue grauen thee vpon the palmes of my hands, thy walls are euer in my sight.

Beliefe in God the Father.

The Comforts.

And chap. 63. 16. Doubtleſſe thou art our Father: Though Abraham would not know vs, nor Iſraell acknowledge vs (to wit, to be kindely children to them, inſomuch as wee haue not walked in their ſtraight ſteps, nor done their good workes, but haue committed much wickednes, &c.) Yet, O Lord (ſaith the holy Prophet in the name of all the faithfull, repenting them of their ſinnes) thou art our Father, and our Redeemer: Thy name is for euer.

God loueth all his creatures, euen for that they are his creatures, and ſpecially mankinde. From hence doth Iob make it a part of his pleading with God, chap. 10. 8. &c. Thine hands haue made me, and faſhioned me wholy round about, and wilt thou deſtroy mee? Remember I pray thee, that thou haſt made mee as the clay: and wilt thou bring me into duſt againe? &c. And chap. 14. verſe, 15. Thou loueſt the worke of thine owne hands. In which reſpect alſo, God expreſſeth the greatnes of the prouocation of the wicked, in that hee is cauſed by the grieuouſnes of their ſinnes, as it were to forget them to be his creatures. As Iſaiah. chap. 27. 11. Therefore (ſaith the Prophet) hee that made them, will not haue compaſſion on them, and hee that formed them, will haue no mercie on them.

But the loue which God beareth toward all men, in reſpect of Creation, is little in compariſon of that loue, wherewith he loueth his elect children, in reſpect of their redemption. Whence it is, that Iob (of whom wee made mention before) doth afterward principally comfort himſelfe, in reſpect of this loue of God, ſaying as wee reade, chap. 19. 25. O that my wordes were now written: O that they were written euen in a booke, and grauen with an Iron penne in Lead, or in Stone, for euer. For I am ſure that my Redeemer liueth, &c.

This ſingular and matchleſſe comfort, doth our Sauiour Chriſt moſt liuely lay forth in the parable of the prodigall Sonne: Luke, chap. 15. For when all comforts failed the moſt vnthriftie, and riotous ſpend-all: Yet this comfort ſtoode him in good ſtead. I will riſe (ſaith hee) and goe to my Father, and ſay vnto him, Father I haue ſinned againſt heauen, and before thee. And I am no more worthie to bee called thy Sonne: make mee as one of thy hyred ſeruants. So hee aroſe (ſaith our Sauiour Chriſt) and came to his Father, and when hee was yet a great way off, his Father ſaw him, and had compaſſion, and ranne and fell on his necke, and kiſſed him, &c.

* Quicquid beneuolētiæ, amoris, ſtudij, curæ, officij inter homines inueniri poteſt longē inferius eſt paterna Dei miſerecordia, qua ſuos complectitur, &c.

So that well may it be ſaide (as a moſt learned Interpreter hath written) That * whatſoeuer good will, loue, ſtudie, care, and dutie, may bee found among men: it is farre inferiour to that fatherly pittie, wherewith God imbraceth thoſe that be his.

* Vnde ſequitur perperam a nobis eſtimari Dei gratiā, niſi omnes carnis ſenſus fides noſtra ſuperet. Centies enim cōtinget euerti naturæ ordinem votiua quā vt Deus ſuis adſit.

And againe, * Albeit earthly parents are naturallie inclined, to ſuccour thoſe that are borne and bred of them: Yet, when all pittie ſhall faile in the world, God will doe the part, both of a Father and alſo of a Mother, to all that beleeue in him. Wherevpon it followeth (as hee further addeth) that wee ſhall make too light account of the fauour of God; vnleſſe our faith doe ſurmount all that wee can conceiue by our carnall and fleſhly wiſedome. For bee it (ſaith hee) that the courſe of nature be an hundreth times peruerted: yet God will neuer faile thoſe that be his.

Calvin: Commentar: in Pſal. 27. 19.

Queſtion.

Secondly, concerning the exceeding effects of Gods moſt bounteous and fatherly loue; it is of it ſelfe moſt cleare, that they are infinitely aboue all gifts and benefits, which naturall Parents can beſtowe vpon their children. The very mention of the benefits will ſhew it to be ſo. Yea, when naturall Parents cannot helpe at all, God remaineth a ſure defence: according as the Prophet Dauid ſaith in the Pſal. euen now alledged, Though my Father and my Mother do forſake me (to wit, as being vnable to relieue me) yet the Lord wil gather me vp, &c. But which, I pray you, are theſe ſo exceeding gifts, & benefits of God, which be as fruites and effects of his moſt fatherly loue toward his children?

Firſt,

Beliefe in God the Father. The Comforts.

Answere. First, that hee, by the grace of his adoption in taking vs to bee his children, doth therewithall make vs heires annexed with his owne onely Sonne our Lord Iesus Christ, of a like excellent Patrimonie: that is, of eternall happinesse and glorie, in the heauens with him.

Secondly, that he will indue and furnish vs, with all spirituall gifts and graces, necessarie and meete, to accompanie the same our euerlasting happinesse and saluation.

Thirdly, that he will suffer vs to want nothing which hee knoweth shall be necessarie and good for vs, here in this transitorie life.

Fourthly, that whereas wee cannot in this our fraile life, liue so well as wee gladly would, much lesse so well as in most bounden dutie we ought: he will most tenderly beare with our infirmities so long as we are vnfainedly desirous, with a child like affection, to serue and obey him.

Fifthly, that whensoeuer he seeth it meete to correct and chastise vs, hee will not doe it, but of the same his most tender and fatherly loue, and not otherwise. So that neither in the greatnes of the measure, or in the length of the continuance of the correction will he proceede any further, then he will dispose of it to our best good.

Finally, that he will most graciously heare vs, in all our holy complaints and prayers, which we haue at any time neede to make vnto him: and especially, in the times of our greatest distresses.

Explicatiõ & proofe. Touching the first branch of this Answere, call heere againe to minde, Iohn, 1. 12. and Rom. 8. 15. 16. 17. Ye haue not receiued the Spirit of bondage to feare againe: but ye haue receiued the Spirit of adoption, whereby we crie Abba, Father. The same Spirit, beareth witnesse with our Spirit, that wee are the children of God. If we be children, we are also heires, euen the heires of God, and heires annexed with Christ: if so be that we suffer with him, that we may also be glorified with him, &c.

Most sweet & comfortable to this purpose, is that preceptorie exhortation of the Apostle Iohn, 1, Epist. chap. 3. verses, 1. 2. Behold, what loue the Father hath shewed on vs (to wit, as a gift of free grace and fauour: for so is the speech of the Apostle, Behold what loue the Father hath giuen vnto vs) that we should be called the children of God. &c. Dearely beloued, wee are now the children of God, but it doth not appeare what we shall be, &c. The Apostle giueth to vnderstand, that the gift and preferment, is greater then can be conceiued of vs, till we shall haue the actuall fruition of it.

Thus then, whereas it is the property of euery good and kinde Father (as a learned Teacher obserueth) First to desire that his sonne might be like him in graces and vertues; secondly, that he may leaue him some patrimonie, to be as a comfort and countenance vnto him, &c. So, yea infinitely much more doth our heauenly Father desire, not onely that his children should shew forth his vertues, but also that they may be partakers of a most rich patrimonie and inheritance. Wherevpon our Sauiour Christ, Luke, 12. 32. doth notably incourage his Disciples, saying, Feare not little flocke, it is the Fathers pleasure to giue you a Kingdome. Pet. Mart. in Symb.

Secondly, that God (as a most louing and bountifull Father) wil indue and furnish his children, with all spirituall gifts & graces, &c. consider it from the parable of our Sauiour Christ. Luke, chap. 15. 22. 23. 24. The prodigall child hath spent all his worldly riches: but his Father inricheth him with a spirituall treasure: and feedeth him with heauenly dainties, &c. Read also Isa. ch. 11. 9. & ch. 54. 13. Call to mind againe, Eph. 1. 3. and verses 16. 17. &c.

For the third branch, read Math. 6. 31. Take no thought, saying, what shall wee eate, &c. For your Father (saith our Sauiour Christ) knoweth that ye haue need of all these things. But seeke ye first the Kingdome of God, and his righteousnes, and all these things shal be ministred vnto you.

Seeing God is minded (as we haue seene before) to giue his children a heauenly Kingdome: doubtlesse, he will not denie them earthly things, so farre as is meete for them. Seeing hee hath already giuen his owne sonne for vs: how shall he not with him, giue vs all things also? Rom. 8. 32.

Beliefe in God the Father.

The Comforts.

Fourthly, that God is minded to beare with the infirmities of his children, that are carefull to obey him: read Mal. chap. 3. 17. They shall be to me, saith the Lord of Hostes, in that day that I shall doe this (that is, execute my iudgements against the wicked) for a flocke, and I will spare them as a man spareth his owne sonne that serueth him. Then shalt thou returne and discerne betweene the righteous, and the wicked, betweene him that serueth God, and him that serueth him not. Read also Psal. 103. 8. 9. The Lord is full of compassion slow to anger, and of great kindnes. He will not alwaies chide, neither keepe his anger for euer. He hath not dealt with vs, after our sinnes, nor rewarded vs according to our iniquities. As high as the heauen is aboue the earth, so great is (the mercie of God) toward them that feare him. As farre as the East is from the West, so farre hath hee remoued our sinnes from vs. As a Father hath compassion on his children, so hath the Lord compassion on them that feare him. For he knoweth whereof we be made, he remembreth that we are but dust. And Psal. 130. 3. 4. If thou Lord straitly markest iniquitie, O Lord, who shall stand? But mercie is with thee that thou maiest be feared.

Fiftly, that when God correcteth his children, he doth it in loue: reade Heb. 12. 6. And that as a fruite of his loue, he keepeth measure: wee reade Psal. 89. 32. 33. And Psa. 125. 3. The rod of the wicked shall not rest on the lot of the righteous, &c.

Finally, that God of his most gratious and fatherly goodnes, will heare the complaints and supplications of his children, in all their necessities: it is euident by this, that our Sauiour Christ hath most comfortably taught, and commanded, and incouraged vs to pray to God, as to our heauenly Father: Math. 6. 9. &c. And chap. 7. verse. 7. &c. Aske (saith our Saviour Christ:) and it shall be giuen vnto you, &c, For what man is there among you, who, if his sonne aske him bread, would giue him a stone? Or if hee aske fish, will hee giue him a Serpent? If ye then who are euill (saith our Sauiour) can giue your children good gifts: how much more shall your Father, which is in heauen, giue good thinges to them that aske him? Yea as wee reade further, Luke, chap. 11. 13. How much more (saith our Sauiour Christ) shall your heauenly Father giue the holy Ghost to them that desire him? It is very comfortable also, that wee reade in the same Chapter, from the 5. verse. Which of you shall haue a friend, &c. And Iohn, chap. 16. 23. Our Sauiour Christ is earnest in this point. Verily, verily (saith hee) I say vnto you, whatsoeuer ye shall aske the Father in my name, hee will giue it to you. For (as it followeth, verse, 27.) the Father himselfe loueth you, because ye haue loued mee, (saith our Sauiour Christ) and haue beleeued that I came out from God.

Thus farre of the comforts of this, that God vouchsafeth to bee a Father vnto vs.

THe duties pertaining to the comfort of this Article of our faith, are next to be considered of vs.

Question. Which are they?

Answere. First, in so much as it is our principall comfort, that God is our Father, and that of his meere fauour and grace; it is our dutie, first of all, to keare in remembrance, what our miserable estate is, from our naturall parents, of whom wee are conceiued in sinne, and borne in iniquitie: Yea, that as wee are naturally descended of them, wee are no better then the children of the Diuell, to whom the wrath of God is due for euer and euer.

This, I say, we are first of all, to call to remembrance, to the end we may continually put our selues in minde, of that constant and euer increasing thankfulnes, which is due for so inestimable and euerlasting a benefit and aduancement.

Secondly, it is our most bounden dutie, to withdrawe our selues from all the wayes, motions, and lustes of our owne sinnefull flesh, and of this worlde, and of the Diuell.

Thirdly,

Beliefe in God the Father,

Thirdlie, it is our dutie, to walke most chearfullie, in all humble obedience and childe-like dutie toward God our heauenly Father: beeing sorie, aboue all things, that wee haue hetherto bene so vndutifull vnto him.

Fourthlie, wee are likewise admonished, that it is our duety (in that wee are children of God) to bee imitators and followers of the same our heauenlie Father, in all his most noble and diuine vertues: so farre as wee may employe our selues for the common benefit of all men, specially concerning our Christian brethren, who are members of the same houshold of faith with vs.

Finallie, in that wee beleeue in God to be our Father, it is our bounden dutie, to depende vpon his Fatherlie prouidence; and in all things to account our selues to bee most graciously dealt with and ordered, in whatsoeuer estate and condition of life, he hath placed vs, for the time of our so beeing: and so long also, as it shall seeme good vnto him, that wee doe so abide and remaine.

Explicatio & proofe.

These speciall dueties, doe verie iustlie arise from the comfort of this so principall a point of our faith: as may appeare by the proofes heereafter following.

Touching the first, the Proph: Ezekiel may be a worthie admonitor vnto vs, in the name of God himselfe, chapt: 16. of his Prophesie, from the beginning of the chapter in a very large and elegant discourse, manie verses togither: though verie sharpe and reprehensiue, as the intollerable ingratitude of that people had fullie deserued. Sonne of man (saith the Lorde) cause Ierusalem to knowe her abominations. And say thou, thus saith the Lorde God vnto Ierusalem, Thine habitation and thy kindred is of the lande of Canaan: thy father was an Amorite, and thy mother an Hittite. And in thy nativitie when thou wast borne, thy nauell was not cut, &c. And when I passed by thee, I saw thee polluted in thine owne blood, and I said vnto thee when thou wast in thy blood: Thou shalt liue: euen when thou wast in thy blood, I said vnto thee, thou shalt liue. I caused thee to multiplie, as the budde of the fielde. &c.

Who, duely considering this forlorne estate of the Church, and of euerie member of it, as the Lorde findeth it; and the great pittie which hee taketh on it, and the manifold blessings which hee bestoweth vpon it: Who, I say (duelie considering these things) can doe lesse then acknowledge, that God is most highlie to be honoured and praised for euer therein, and that the forgetfulnes thereof, is a most hainous sinne?

And herewith also, howe can it be thought, but that it must be one bounden duetie, to loue the Sonne of God with a singular loue; in so much as God is not our Father but by meanes of him? According to that which our Sauiour Christ himselfe saith, Iohn: 8.42. If God were your father, then would you loue mee. And likewise, it is our dutie to loue the children of God, for Gods cause, who is their Father. 1. Iohn: 5.1.2. Euerie one that loueth him which begate, loueth him also which is begotten, &c.

Secondlie, that this reason ought effectuallie to mooue vs to withdraw our selues from the lusts of sin, &c: the Apostle Iohn telleth vs plainly, saying: 1. Epi: 2.15.16. That the loue of the Father cannot be in them that loue the world & the lusts thereof: &c. And ch: 3. verse. 3. That euery one that hath the hope of euerlasting life and glorie, through the mercie and goodnes of God, purgeth himselfe (that is more and more indeuoureth after it, by vsing all good and holie meanes appointed of God) considering that God our heauenly father is pure, and that no vncleane thing can haue any abiding with him.

Read also verse 9. Whosoeuer is borne of God, sinneth not. &c: that is, hee doth not giue himselfe ouer to sinne, but earnestlie resisteth it, &c. Moreouer, read Deuteron: 14.1.2. Ioshua: 24.1.2. &c. Read also, 2. Corinth: 6.14. &c. The want of this care in the people of God (who glorie in this, that God is their father) it is no lesse iustlie, then vehementlie reproued, in the holy Scriptures: as Deuteron: 32.4.5.6. Isai: chapt: 1. verses 2.3.4. and Ierem: chap: 2.26.27.28. and chap: 3. verses. 2.3.4.5. and verses. 19.20.21.22.

Beliefe in God the Father.

The third part of the Answere, resteth vpon as good reason, and is a consequent of the former. For wherfore is vndutifulnes reproued, but to the ende that the children of God should be stirred vp to care and conscience of all good dutie. To this purpose therefore, let vs thinke often of the holie and zealous exhortation of the Apost. Pet: 1. Epist: chap: 1. verses 13, 14, 15, 16. &c. in these words, Wherefore gyrde vp the loines of your minde, &c. as obedient children, &c As hee which hath called you is holie, so be ye holie, &c. And if yee call him Father, who iudgeth without respect of persons, &c. Let no word of so weightie and precious an exhortation be vnweighed and vnvalued of vs. Read also Iohn, 4. 23. The hower cometh, and now is (saith our Sauiour Christ to the woman of Samaria,) when the true worshippers, shall worship the Father in spirit and truth: for the Father requireth euen such to worship him. And 2. Cor. chap: 7. 1. The holy Apostle of our Sauiour Christ, hauing made mention of the most gratious promise of God, (that hee will be a Father to all such as shall forsake Idolatrie, and the fellowship of Idolaters) he thervpon inferreth this his earnest exhortation: Seeing then we haue these promises dearely beloued, let vs cleanse our selues from all filthines of the flesh, and of the spirit, and grow vp vnto full holines in the feare of God. Read also 2. Epist: of Iohn: verses 4, 9. And Mal: cha: 1. 6. A Sonne honoureth his Father (saith the Lorde by his Prophet) and a seruant his maister. If then, I be a Father, wher is my honour? And if I be a maister, where is my feare, saith the Lorde of Hostes? &c.

In all these places of holie Scripture, wee see how the spirit of God calleth for all manner of good duetie toward God: in this respect especiallie, that he is a most gratious and honourable Father, aboue all other. And hee doth it most iustlie. For seeing ther are no naturall parents, which doe not, or which may not of good right, looke for readie and constant dutie from their children: while they themselues performe the care of good parents toward them. And on the contrarie, if children shall stubbornelie refuse to yeelde good duetie to their parents: they are so farre from taking delight, to heare their children to call them Father, that they rather enter into purpose to cast them off, and to refuse to take them for their children. Infinitelie much more, may the Lorde God our heauenly Father, cast off all such as hypocriticallie call him Father: and in the meane season, denie the obedience of children vnto him. For in verie truth, they shew themselues not to be the kindely children of God, but the base borne of their father the Deuill, as wee shall haue further occasion to obserue, and to produce some proofe of it by and by.

In the meane while, for the shutting vp of this pointe: worthie is the example of him, whom our Sauiour Christ describeth, for the common imitation of euerie true childe of God, that after former neglect of his dutie, shall returne to performe the dutie of a childe againe. Father (saith he, and so is euerie one of vs to say, in remembrance of our former vndutifulnes) I haue sinned against heauen, and against thee, I am not worthie to be called thy Sonne, &c.

Now further, as touching the fourth branch of the answere, which sheweth that it is required of euerie true childe of God, that he bee an imitator of God himselfe in all goodnes, and helpfulnes towards others: read Matth: 5. 43. &c. and Luk: 6. 35. 36. And Ephes: chapt: 5. 1. 2. Be yee therefore followers of God, as deare children, and walke in loue, &c. And Colos: 3. 12. Newe therefore, as the elect of God, holie and beloued, put on tender mercie, kindenes, &c. And 1. Iohn. 3. 10. In this are the children of God knowen, and the children of the Deuill: Whosoeuer doth not righteousnes, is not of God, neither he that loueth not his brother. For this is the message that yee heard from the beginning, that we should loue one another; Not as Caine, who was of the wicked, and slewe his brother, &c. Reade also in the Gospell according to Iohn: chap: 8. 44. They that doe the lusts of the Deuill (as our Sauiour Christ saith) they are not the children of God, but of their father the Deuill. To conclude this fourth branche, that the houshold of Faith, is chieflie to be respected, in the practise of the offices and duties of loue and kindnes:

kindenesse: let vs call to remembrance the wise aduertisement of the Apostle Gall: 6. 10. &c.

As for the fifte, which is the last branch of this Answere, wee haue partelie seene the ground and proofe of it in one pointe of the former answere: and wee shall haue further occasion to set downe more to this purpose, in the doctrine and vse of Gods holie Prouidence: and therefore wee will here, by reference to other places, passe it ouer, for this time.

Thus much therfore, shall for the present suffice, concerning the duties belonging to God, in that (of his great mercie) hee vouchsafeth to be our Father.

NOwe for the full conclusion of this pointe of our Faith, according to the order of our examining the doctrine and vse of it: what is the danger of not beleeuing in this first Person of the most blessed Trinitie, the naturall Father of our Lorde Iesus Christ, and in him our Father, through the adoption and Couenant of his most free grace and fauour?

Question. What I say, is the danger of not beleeuing in him to bee so, and of not obeying him as his duetifull and obedient children?

Answere. All such are hetherto the base-borne of this worlde. They lye yet in the filth of their sinnes. They are the seede of the Serpent, euen the children of the Diuell: and so consequently the children of Gods wrath, and of euerlasting miserie and condemnation.

They are not to be reputed among the honourable Off-spring of God, nor to haue any parte or portion with the children of God, in their spirituall inheritance or heauenly preferment and dignitie.

Explicatiō and proofe It is verie true. For by faith onely, we haue assurance that wee are the children of God: as Iohn chapt: 1, 12. before alledged. And likewise Gal: 3. 26. Yee are the Sonnes of God, by faith in Christ Iesus. And Acts: 15. 9. By faith our hearts are purified. And Acts: 26. 18. It is faith, whereby wee are deliuered from the power of Satan. Whereby also wee ouercome the world. 1. Iohn. 5. 4. and whereby wee are still preserued against the power and rage of the Diuell. 1. Pet. 5. 9. Finallie, faith is that, wherby wee attaine to euerlasting saluation. Ephes: 2. By grace are ye saued through faith, and that not of your selues: it is the gift of God.

Wherefore it cannot bee (but as it was alledged a little before, out of the 8. chapt: of Iohn: verse 42. &c. and 1. Epis: 3. 8. and as we may perceiue furthermore, by that which wee read: Act: 13. 10. and Ephes: chap: 2. 2.) that all such as bee without faith in God the Father, are hetherto in the state of the children of the Diuell. They may iustlie say to corruption, Thou arte my Father, and to the worme, thou art my mother, and my sister, as we read in the book of Iob: ch: 17. 14. But not as Iob, who by faith ouercame this feare, as wee haue seene before, from the 19. chap: of his booke: in so much that he knew that his redeemer liued, &c: But so farre from all conceite of true comfort in affliction, that euery former punishment, may be vnto them a forerunner of a farre more heauie and terrible wrath shortly to follow: and the feare of death it selfe, may iustlie be most horrible to them, as beeing the very mouth of hell, to swallow them vp into the gulfe of euerlasting and most woefull destruction. And that they haue no portion with the children of God: read Gal: 4. 30. The sonne of the seruant, shall not be heire with the sonne of the free woman. According to that also which the Apostle Peter saith to Simon the sorcerer, Acts. 8. 21. Thou hast no parte nor fellowship in this busines, &c.

To conclude. Touching this Article, albeeit (as is obserued by some of the learned) no heretick either old or newe: haue euer denied God to be a Father personally subsisting in himselfe. Yea and the heathen also, haue declared by their writings, that they haue acknowledged God to be a Father.

Neuertheles, in so much as manie of the same heretikes, which seeme to acknowledge the person of the Father, doe (as is afterward more fully to be considered of vs) denie the eternall person of the Sonne, (in respect of whom, and his his Eternall Deitie, God is naturallie and chiefelie, yea onely and properlie a Father) and likewise, insomuch as the Heathen, haue for the most part esteemed God a Father, onely as a fountaine or autor of goodnesse towardes his creatures. Yea to speake of the chiefe of them (in so much as they haue for anie thing wee can perceiue by their writings, onely some darke conceit of the Deitie of the Sonne; either by tradition from the first Fathers or Patriarches in the church of God, before the dispersion of the Nations, or by conference with some true worshippers of God in latter times, or by reading some of their writings: but neuer apprehended God as a Father to his elect children, according to his free couenant of Grace, made in his eternall Sonne, in regard of his mediatorship, by taking the nature of man, &c: for this hath allwaies ben a secret, trulie knowne and acknowledged, onely in the true Church of God, as that wherin standeth the very marrow, as we may say, & life of faith.) Vpon all these considerations I say, wee may boldlie conclude, that neither the one, nor the other, haue beleeued God to be a Father, according to the true sense of this Article: and therfore also, that they could not haue the true comforte and benefit, which belongeth therevnto.

Beliefe in God the Father Almightie.

The same in effect, may we affirme of all Idolatrous and obstinate Papists, who (though in words they goe further, and acknowledge God a Father, in respect of the eternall Sonne incarnate) yet doe they not worship the Father in the Sonne, spirituallie and in truth. For herein, they are within the compasse of the Idolaters of Israell, of whom the Lord himselfe speaketh shame, and refuseth to be their father, becaus[e] they set vp Idolls vnto him: as we read: Ier: chapt: 2. verses 26. 27. 28. As the thiefe is ashamed, when hee is found (saith the Lorde by his Prophet) so is the house of Israell ashamed, (hee sheweth how it was, or at the least how it ought to haue beene with them,) they, their Kings, their Princes, and their Priestes, and their Prophets. Saying to a tree, thou arte my father, and to a stone, thou hast begotten mee. For they haue turned their backe vnto me, and not their face: but in the time of their trouble they will say, Arise thou and help vs. But where are thy Gods, that thou hast made thee? let them arise, if they can helpe thee, in the time of thy trouble: for according to the number of thy Cities, are thy Gods, ô Iuda. Wherefore will yee pleade with me? yee all haue rebelled against mee, saith the Lorde.

Thus farre of our true Christian faith, in the first Person of the holie Trinitie, God the Father: so farre as this word Father, expresselie leadeth vs.

Beliefe in God the Father Almightie.

THe same our FATHER, is called the ALMIGHTIE: and for the declaration of the omnipotencie or allmightines of his power, by a most noble and admirable effect: hee is furthermore intituled in the Articles of our beliefe, the maker of heauen and earth. Let vs therefore, henceforth proceede to these other points.

Question. And first; touching the Almightie power of God the Father; What ground of holie Scripture haue you, for the confirmation and proofe of it?

Answere. In the 10 chapter of the Euangelist Iohn, our Saviour Christ saith, My Father is greater then all, and none is able to take them out of my Fathers hand.

And againe, Marke 14. 36. Abba Father, all things are possible vnto thee.

The Apostle Iohn also, 1. Epist: ch: 4. verse 4. speaking of God the Father, saith: Greater is hee that is in you, (to witte, by his holy Spirit, in the Name and power of his Sonne Iesus Christ) then hee that is in the worlde. That is to say, God is of greater power, to preserue vs by his grace, then the Diuell and Antichrist (with all their hellish craft and power) are to pervert and destroye vs.

Explicatiõ and proofe These indeede are plaine Testimonies, to prooue the Almightie power of God: euen in that hee is the Father, the first Person of the holie Trinitie.

Yea,

Beliefe in God the Father Almighty.

The Ground and meaning.

Yea, and all the Scriptures, which ſpeake of the Almightie power of God indefinitly, albeit they may and ought to be referred to the whole Trinitie: yet for orders ſake (which is to be moſt religiouſlie obſerued, concerning the moſt holie Trinitie) they may be ſaid principally to confirme vnto vs, the omnipotencie of the Father, and ſo conſequently of the Sonne, & of the holy Ghoſt, the ſecond and third Perſons in the ſame moſt bleſſed Trinitie. Such as are theſe places, Geneſ: 18.14. Shall any thing be harde to the Lord? And Ier: 32. 27. Is there any thing too harde for mee, ſaith the Lorde? Likewiſe, Iob: chap: 42.1. I know (ſaith Iob) thou canſt doe all things. And Deut: 32.39. None (ſaith the Lord by Moſes) can deliuer out of my hand. And 1. Sam: 15.29. God (ſaith Samuel) is the ſtrength of Iſraell. Read alſo Iſai: 8.10. and chap: 43, 11, 12, 13, &c. and ch: 46.10. And Pſ: 62.11. Power belongeth to God. And Pſ: 115. 3. Our God is in heauen, he doth whatſoeuer he will.

Theſe and all ſuch places, doe (as was ſaid) for orders ſake, principallie confirme vnto vs, the Almightie power of the firſt Perſon in the moſt holie Trinitie, God the Father.

NOwe therefore, that wee may goe forward.

Queſtion. What is the meaning of this, to beleeue in the Almightie power of God the Father?

Anſwere. The meaning of it is thus much: that by Faith wee are perſwaded, that as God our heauenly Father is moſt willing, and alſo for wiſedome knoweth beſt how: ſo hee is alſo moſt able, to doe whatſoeuer beſt pleaſeth him, both in heauen and in earth, for the full and perfect benefit, comforte, and Saluation of all, and euerie one of his electe children.

Explicatiõ and proofe The meaning of it is thus much indeed. And ſo we ought euerie one of vs to beleeue: as it is euident from the holie Scriptures before alledged. The ſumme whereof is this, that as none can take any of the wicked out of the hands of God, to deliuer them from his iuſt vengeance: ſo likewiſe, none can take any of his children out of his hands, to bereaue them of his mercie & ſaluation. In your anſwer alſo, it is to very good purpoſe, that you ioyne the power, and the will, and the wiſedome of God, together. For wee may in no wiſe ſeperate them, leſt wee ſhould deceiue our ſelues, by building vpon falſe grounds and principles, contrarie to the true faith: as ſome doe in their fancie, touching the vbiquitarie preſence of the humanity of Chriſt in the ſacramẽts, &c. For it is moſt certaine, that God will not doe all that hee can doe. Nay, wee may aſſuredly perſwade our ſelues, that hee will neuer doe anie thing, which ſtandeth not with the moſt high honour of his wiſdome ſo to doe. Yea, to goe further; wee may without impeachment to his Almightie power, truelie beleeue: that hee can doe nothing which ſhould be in the leaſt point, to the diſhonour of his moſt excellent Maieſtie.

It is impoſsible that God ſhould denie himſelfe: that he ſhould lie: that hee ſhould doe anie iniquity, &c: yea, that he ſhould not faithfully, and to the vttermoſt performe all whatſoeuer hee hath in his worde reuealed to be his holy will, and pleaſure to doe.

Not that there is any inabilitie, or weaknes in God: but becauſe of the perfection of his power, ioyned with the infinit holines of his wiſedome, mercie, iuſtice, faithfulnes, &c. All true ſtrength is in vertue: but all ſtrength of ſinne is of corruption, and weaknes, and haſteneth to vtter deſtruction.

This therefore, muſt be our Faith, in the Almighty power of our heauenlie Father; that although hee can doe all things, yet his power, is ordered, yea limited according to the wiſedome and holineſſe of his bleſſed will: yea euen of that will which hee hath reuealed to vs in his holie word, and propounded to himſelfe, in his owne vnchangeable Counſell. So that it falleth out to be to no purpoſe, for any to reaſon from the Almighty power of God, to confirme any thing that he hath not the warrant of the word, that it is agreable to his will to worke as great a worke in the same or like kinde: at the least, so farre forth, as hee may see it to be meete for his glorie, and the benefit of his children: vnlesse onely to shewe man his owne weaknes, and to beate downe his vaine and hautie presumption, as Iohn the Baptist reasoneth against the prowde Pharisies: Matth: chap: 3. 9. and telleth them, that God is able, euen of stones to raise vp children to Abraham.

The promise.

This may for this time suffice (as I trust) for the ground and meaning of Faith in the Almightie and Fatherlie power of God.

Question. NOwe what promise haue you, that God of his Fatherlie goodnes, will vse his Almightie power, for the benefit and saluation of all and euerie one of his children: both Sonnes and Daughters, young and olde, small and great?

Answere. In the first verse of the 91. Psalm: the holie Prophet of God assureth vs, that whosoeuer dwelleth (to wit by Faith) in the secret of the most High, hee shall abide in the shadowe of the Almightie.

Explication & proofe. This agreeth with the promse which wee had before 2. Cor: 6. 18. where the Almightie Lorde promiseth to be a Father to his people, and to receiue vs for his Sonnes and Daughters.

Yea, and whereseoeuer the promise is repeated (as it is verie often in the holie Scriptures) that God is the God of his people: vnder that word God, (which noteth his Almightie power) this promise is alwayes assured vnto vs. Of the which point (seeing wee haue spoken before) wee will not now staye any longer, to alledge the particular testimonies of it.

LEt vs come to the comforte, which may arise in our heartes, from beliefe in the Almightie power of God.

Question. What may the comfort hereof bee vnto vs?

Answere. First, faith in the Almightie power of God our heauenly Father, is exceedingly comfortable: because hereby we are assured that no strength of sinne, or of the world, or of the Diuell, shalbe able vtterlie & altogether, to hinder the conuersion of anie, whose hearts God mindeth to conuert and turne vnto him; nor to with-holde any grace from vs, which is necessarie to saluation, or to the comfort of this life.

Secondlie, because nothing can at anie time vtterlie peruerte and turne away anie from God againe: after that God hath once converted them to him, and giuen them a true and liuelie Faith.

Thirdlie, because it is a speciall incouragement and prop, to the supporte of our faith, in all our prayers which we doe make vnto God.

Fourthly, because it animateth and incourageth vs, against all tyrannicall & boysterous terrour, which any would dismaye vs withall: in so much as wee knowe certainlie, that none can doe the least euil against vs, further then our heauenly Father shall thinke good to permitte them.

And hereupon ariseth another comfort, that although it doe please God to let anie trouble tarie long vpon vs, as wee count length of time (yea though he should not at all deliuer vs, out of the present trouble and triall) that it is not, because hee is not able: but because hee seeth it not, either to be so meete for vs, or that it is not so much to his honour and glorie, that wee should be deliuered according to our desire.

Last of all, faith in the Almightie and Fatherlie power of God, is in speciall manner comfortable, because it giueth vs singular assurance, that nothing shalbe able, finallie to frustrate our eternall happines and saluation.

Explication and proofe. The comforte of these excellent fruites and benefits of beliefe in the almightie power of God, it is included in this, that GOD is our FATHER, as wee haue seene before: like as also, the promise of God in the same respect is, as wee called to minde euen nowe.

Neuertheless, in so much as this comfort, that God is our Father, is more expreslie inlarged, from the further consideration of this, that the same our

Father

Beleefe in God the Father Almightie.

The Comforts.

Father is Omnipotent or Almightie: it shall, (through the blessing of God) bee worth our labour, to seeke after those confirmations, from whence this further inlargement of these excellent comforts, may be more plentifully warranted vnto vs.

First therefore, that nothing is, or can be able, by any resistance against the most gracious and fatherlie power of our good God, vtterlie & altogether, to hinder the conuersion of anie that doe belong vnto him: it is euident from the testimonie of our Sauiour Christ, Mark, chap. 10. verses 23. &c. 27. How hardly (saith hee to his Disciples) doe they that haue riches, enter into the kingdome of God? But hee himselfe, answereth the difficultie, and saith: With men it is vnpossible, but not with God. For with God all things are possible. And Matth: 3. 9. God is able (saith Saint Iohn Baptist) of these Stones to raise vp children vnto Abraham. And Rom: chap: 11. 23. 24. God (saith the Apostle Paul) is able (to wit, by his all-sufficient grace, and powerfull mercie) to grafte the Iewes into their Olive tree againe. And 1. Cor: 1. 25. &c. The weakenes of God, is stronger then man. &c. And againe, God chooseth the weake things of the worlde, to confound the mightie things, &c. And things that are not, to bring to nought, things that are. Moreouer Acts: 11. 17. the Apostle Peter, reporting the conuersion of the Gentiles, to the other of the Apostles: Forasmuch (saith hee) as God gaue them alike gifte as he gaue vnto vs, when wee beleeued in the Lorde Iesus Christ, who was I, that I could let God? Then (as it followeth in the Text) The rest helde their peace, and glorified God. So then, no sinnes, great or manie, or of neuer so long continuance, nor anie thing else, is any kinde of way, able to hinder the strong streames of Gods great mercie, whereby hee maketh glad the hearts of his children.

And let it be diligently obserued of vs, concerning this first branche: that neither this Knowledge, nor Faith, nor Repentance, nor any other Grace, can be begonne in vs, much lesse continued, & augmented; but by the powerfull working of Almightie God, euen against the strongest gates & power of hell;

For the proofe of the second branche of this Answere, call to minde, that mentioned before, out of the 10. chap: of the Euangelist Ioh: verse 29. wher our Sauiour Christ, (after that hee hath assured his Disciples of his owne constant mercie,) hee testifieth thus of God the Father, My Father (saith hee) is greater then all, and none is able to take my sheepe out of my Fathers hands. And againe the same Euangelist, in his first Epistle chapt: 4. verse 4. Call to minde also Rom: 11. 20. The gifte and calling of God, are without repentance. And 2. of Timoth: 2. 19.

Thirdlie, that our faith in the Almightie power of God our heauenly Father, is a singular incouragement to Praier, and a chiefe Supporter euen of faith it selfe: it may be euident from the practise of our Sauiour Christ, in his Praier which he made in one of his chiefe distresses, saying: Abba Father, all things are possible vnto thee. Marke 14. 36. And likewise, the conclusion of that praier, wherin he hath taught vs how to pray, it is an euident prose of it, in that he appointeth this to be the conclusion of our prayer: For thine is the kingdome, and the power, and the glorie. Amen. Read also the practise of the Apostles, Act: 4. 24. &c. For they make the power of God manifested in the Creation, a ground of that their prayer, wherin they intreat the manifestation of Gods diuine power in the Ministerie of the Gospell: to a new creation (as it were) of all the faithfull, that they might bee made newe creatures, to God the Father, through Iesus Christ his deare Sonne. Coloss: 1. 11, 12, 13, &c.

Fourthly, read Dan: 3. 17. 18. For wheras king Nebuchadnezzar, had threatned the three men of Israel, with the fierie furnace: saying proudlie, Who is that God, that can deliuer you out of my hands? They answered the Tyrant boldly, and with good courage in the Lord: Behold (say they) our God whom we serue, is able &c. Read also Psal: 3. & Ps: 27. 1, 2, 3. and Psal: 43. Isai: 8. verse. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13. Matth: 10, 28, 29, 30, 31. and 1. Pet: 3. 14. 15.

Fiftlie, for that comfortable consequence, which ariseth from the former comfort, consider againe the notable example of the three men of Israel there mentioned: who professed that they would not worship King Nebuchadnezzars Idoll, though God should not see it meete for them, or for his owne glorie, to deliuer them.

Finallie, for the proofe of the last branch, Reade Rom. 8. 31. For seeing the Almightie God is our Father, wee may boldely comforte our selues, with the words of the Apostle there: saying, If God be on our side, who can be against vs? And so forth as it followeth in a most comfortable triumph of Faith, described to the end of the chapter. Read also Hebr: 6, 17, 18, 19, 20. Where the Apostle teacheth vs, that the promise and oath of God, beeing both of them immutable: do minister vnto vs strong cōsolation, & a most sure refuge, to hold fast the hope that is set before vs. Read also, 1. Pet: 1. 5. Wee are kept by the power of God, through faith, vnto saluation. Herevnto also belongeth the comfort of the resurrection of our bodies: and of the renewing of all the creatures, to a farre more excellent state and condition, then they were created in, at the first. For all these are effects of the almightie power of God. For by the same power wherwith God made the worlde, and after destroyed it by water, and restored it againe, and shall at the last day destroye it yet againe with fire: by the same power (I say) shal he restore it at the last of all, and set all things in a more comfortable estate, then at anie time before. According to that which wee read, Rom: 8, 19, 20. and 1. Corinth: 6. 14. and 2. Thessalon: 1, 9, 10, 11, 12. And as wee read further, 2: Pet. 3. 10, 11, 12, 13. and Reuelat: chap: 21. 1. &c.

These are the comforts: and we cannot, but (to the glorie of God) acknowledge that they are verie gratious and great.

Question. NOwe which are the duties, which the faith of these so great comforts, ought to yeelde in obedience to God: in regarde of the same his almightie, and most gratious and Fatherlie power, extended towardes vs?

Answere. First, it is the dutie of a true, and liuely faith in the allmightie power of God our heauenlie Father, to acknowledge and ascribe all power to God, as belonging onely to him: and accordingue to giue the whole praise and glorie therof to his Name alone.

Secondly, it is our duty to praye vnto God, that he would, to the further glorie of his name, make his power more & more manifest, in, & toward his whole church, & euery one of vs his weak and fraile children: specially, that power which he hath made knowne by his Gospell, through his Sonne our Lorde Iesus Christ, to the crucifying of sinne, and to the quickening of vs to newenesse of life, with mightie increases against all naturall strength of corruption, and against the supernaturall power of the Diuell.

Thirdly, it is our duetie, beleeuing in the almighty power of God, so to tremble at his iudgements: that wee doe make his feare as a bridle to holde vs backe from sinne.

Fourthlie, it is our dutie, from the same comfort of Faith, to animate and incourage our selues, and one to incourage and imbolden another, against our owne timorousnes, or distrustfulnes: and against euerie terrour, whereby, either the Diuell, or any of his instruments, would goe about to discourage and dismay vs, from doing of our duties, in our seuerall places and callings.

Finallie, it is our dutie in all things, yea euen in the doing of our best duties, either to God or man: to humble our selues vnder the mightie hand of God.

Explication and proofe. That these are duetie belonging to the comfort of faith in the Almightie power of God. First, Reade Psalm: 62. 11. God hath spoken once, yea twise (that is often) haue I heard the same: that power belongeth to God. And Rom: 13. 1. There is no power but of God. Read also Iohn 19. 11. It followeth therfore, according to that wee read, Psalm: 68. 34. that wee are to ascribe All power to God: for his Maiestie is vppon Israel, and his strength in the clowdes.

O God

Beliefe in God the Father almighty.

O God (saith the Psalmist in the next verse) thou art terrible out of thy holy places. The God of Israel is hee that giueth strength and power vnto the people: praised bee God. See the practise, 1. Chronicles. 29. 10. 11. 12. 13, &c. and Psalme. 44. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. Reade also Psalme. 21. 13. Bee thou exalted, O Lord in thy strength: so will wee sing and praise thy power. And Psalme, 28. 7. 8. The Lord is my strength and my shield, my heart trusted in him, and I was helped: therefore mine heart shall reioice, and with my song will I praise him. The Lord is their strength, and he is the strength of the deliuerances of his Anointed.

And then in the same place, the last verse of the Psalme, there followeth a prayer, according to the second branch of your answere, Saue thy people, and blesse thine inheritance, feede them also, and exalt them for euer. Reade also the next Psalme: which celebrateth the power of God, &c. But more neare to the purpose of this second point, lay the Answere of GOD to the prayer of the Apostle Paul. 2. Corinthians. 12. 8. 9. My grace (saith the Lord to Paul) is sufficient for thee: for my power is made perfect through weakenes. Most of all consider to this purpose, the earnest and (as hee professeth) the often prayer of the same Apostle, for the Ephesians. chap. 1. of that Epistle. verses, 16. &c, 19. 20. &c.

For the third point, reade Hebrues, 10. 30. 31. Wee knowe him that hath saide, Vengeance belongeth to mee, and I will recompence, saith the Lord. And againe, The Lord will iudge his people. It is a fearefull thing to fall into the hands of the liuing God. And 1. Corinthians, 10. 21. Doe wee prouoke the Lord to anger? Are wee stronger then he? And Psalme, 90. 11. Who knoweth the power of thy wrath? For according to thy feare is thine anger. That is, No man can feare more then there is iust cause. The anger of the mightie God scareth vs not in vaine. Worthily therefore (saith the Prophet Ier. chap. 10. 6. 7. In so much as there is none like vnto thee, O Lord: seeing thou art great, and thy name is great in power: who would not feare thee, O King of Nations? for to thee appertaineth the dominion or power, &c.

For the fourth point, concerning incouragement to well doing, against all distrust, and against euerie timorous and femile feare, &c. Reade Matthew 10. 18. &c. Feare ye not them which kil the bodie, but rather feare him which is able to destroy both soule and body in Hell. In which wordes our Sauiour Christ incourageth his Ministers to preach the Gospell boldly, without feare of any man. Reade also, 2. Corinthians. 5. 11. and Ieremie. chap. 1. 17. Trusse vp thy loynes (saith the Lord to his Prophet) and arise, and speake vnto them, all that I command thee: Bee not afraide of their faces, lest I destroy thee before them. But not onely the Ministers of the word, but also euery faithfull seruant of God, ought to be of good courage for the truth, and to vse all holy boldnes in doing of their duties. Yea euen women (though naturally most subiect to feare and discouragements) they ought to bee of a good and chearefull heart, in all well doing, not beeing afraide of any terrour: no not from their most churlish husbands, &c. 1. Pet. 3. 6. Read also verses 13. 14. 15. 16. &c. See the practise of this: Psalme. 42. 5. &c. 9. Why art thou cast downe my soule? &c. I will say vnto God, who is my rocke, &c. And Psalme, 43. 1. 2. &c. Iudge me O God, &c. For thou art the God of my strength, &c. And Psalm. 46. 7. 11. The Lord of Hostes is with vs, &c. The contrarie faint-heartednes is reproued. Ierem. 9. 9. Yea and grieuously threatened, both there: and also Reuelation, chapter. 21. 8. The fearefull and vnbeleeuing, &c. shall haue their part, in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death.

And that the due consideration of the almightie power of GOD, is an argument of great strength to incourage to all good dutie, wee may profitably see it by some instances: namely, 2, Corinthians. 9. 7. 1. Where the Apostle vseth it for a speciall reason to perswade the Corinthians to the exercise of liberalitie. For God (saith hee) is able to make all graces to abound towards you, that yee alwaies hauing all sufficiencie in all things, maye abounde in euerie good worke.

Beliefe in God the Father almighty.

The Danger of not beleeuing.

And by the same reason a Prophet sent of God to King Amaziah, perswaded and preuailed with the King, to lessen his Armie, and to loose a great summe of money, which hee had allreadie defrayed about the leuying of it. God hath power (saith the holie Prophet) to helpe and to cast downe. And againe, The Lorde is able to giue thee more then this. 2. Chron: 25. 7. 8. &c. The same reason is of like strength, to incourage the faithfull, to euery other good dutie: if it be duely pondered and weighed.

Finallie, that it is our duetie, in all things to humble our selues vnder the mightie hand of God: Read 1. Pet: 5. verse 6. Humble your selues vnder the mightie hand of God, (saith the Apostle) that hee may exalt you in due time.

For as it is in the verse before that: and likewise as wee read Iames chap: 4. verse 6. God resisteth the prowde, and giueth grace to the humble.

Thus much for the duetties.

Question.

NOwe last of all, what is the danger of not beleeuing in the Almightie power of God our heauenlie Father: and of not trembling at his iudgements, nor submitting of our selues vnder his mightie hand?

Answere.

Without Faith, in the Almightie power of God, wee cannot possiblie, truely beleeue any of those workes of God, to haue beene wrought by him, or which are hereafter to bee wrought by him: to the working whereof, an Almightie power both was, and is allwaies necessarie.

Neither can wee possiblie be established with sound and stayed comforte, in our owne hearts: but contrariwise, wee shalbe ouerwhelmed and confounded, with euery vaine feare. Yea so, as the shaking of a leafe, or any like sodaine (though a small noise) shall terrifie and dismay vs, specialie in a time or place of any great danger, and in the darke or deade of the night.

Explication & proofe.

So indeed we read Leuit: 26. 16. 17. The Lord threatneth vnfaithfull and disobedient persons, that he will appoint ouer them fearfulnes: to wit, as a Tyrant, to vexe them, &c. And that they shall flee when none pursueth them. And againe, verse 36. that he will send euen a faintnes into their hearts, in the lande of their enemies, and that the sound of a leafe shaken, shall chase them, and that they shall flee as fleeing from a sworde, and that they shall fall, no man pursuing them, &c. Likewise Deuteronomy. 28. 65. The Lorde (saith Moses) shall geue thee a trembling heart. Read also agreable to this. Psalm: 14. 5. They shalbe taken with feare. And Psalm: 53. 5. There they were afraide for feare, where no feare was.

Yea, not onely the wicked, but sometimes the children of God themselues, for want of faith, or at the least, through the weakenes of their faith, are thus terrified with small and sodaine causes of feare: as Peter at the speach of a maide, &c.

The ground or cause of this fearfulnes, no doubt, is the want or weakenes of faith in the Fatherlie and powerfull goodnes of God.

And therefore it is, that the Prophet Isaiah doth so peremptorilie tell Ahaz, and the people of Iudah (whose hearts were mooued for feare of the Aramites, as the trees of the forest are mooued with the winde,) that Surelie, if they beleeued not, they should not bee established. Isai: chap: 7. 1. 2. &c. 9.

For want of this Faith, wee reade a fearefull example of Gods iudgement, vppon a nobleman in Israell. 2. Kings chapt: 7. 1. 2. Reade also verses 19. 20.

And I beseeche you, howe should wee beleeue firmely, and without wauering, that the whole worlde was at the beginning, created by God the Father of nothing: if we doe not beleeue in him as in the Almightie.

Likewise also, how shall wee possiblie beleeue the Resurrection of our owne bodies, and of the bodies of the thousand thousands of those that haue dyed, died, and shall dye, and rot away, or otherwise be consumed, and brought euen almost to nothing: vnlesse we beleeue, in the almightie power of our God? And how, shall wee vndoubtedly looke for a new heauen, and a newe earth, after the resurrection, and that the power of the Diuell shall bee vtterly and for euer ouerthrowne: if we doe not beleeue in the almightie power of God? Yea in the almightie power of God our heauenly Father. The Sadduces not considering nor beleeuing this almightie power of God, could not beleeue the resurrection of the dead. Yee erre (saith our Sauiour Christ) not knowing the Scriptures nor the power of God.

The grnnd and meaning.

Finally, to the establishing of the hearts of the children of God, these two (the power of God, and the mercy of God) must goe linked together, and accordingly bee apprehended and beleeued of the faithfull: euen as to the terrour of all infidelles and vngodly ones, the fearefull iustice of God shall be armed with his infinit power, and so shal for euer confound them all.

To God therefore almightie, and euerlasting; yea, euen to GOD our most gracious and mercifull Father, bee all praise, and honour, and glory. Amen, Amen.

Beliefe in God the Father, maker of heauen and earth.

LEt vs now come to the doctrine of creation, the which is of all other, the first and the same also a most notable manifestation of the almightie power of God.

And first, what ground of holy Scripture haue you, that this worke of Gods Creation (being most outward and sensible) should neuertheless, be a matter of faith? For faith is described to be of things that are not seene, as we read in the beginning of the 11. chap. to the Hebrewes.

Question What ground therefore may we haue, for the clearing of this doubt?

Answer. In the 3. verse of the same 11. chap: thus we read. Through faith (saith the holy Apostle) we vnderstand that the world was ordained by the word of God, so that the things which we see, were not made of things which did appeare.

Explicatio and proofe. This Testimonie indeede sheweth plainely, that this visible worke of Gods creation, is a matter of faith. But how? Not in that it is visiblie and sensibly, euery way seene, felt and discerned of vs, but in respect of the originall of it: in that, first of all, it was by the almightie power of God made of meere nothing. For that is the meaning of the Apostle, in that hee saith, it was not made of things which did appeare. So that, euen that which was nothing before, was made something; contrary to the rule of mans philosophicall principle, from the which they doe stifly (though falsely contend) that nothing can be made of nothing. It is faith therefore, that must teach vs this principle, which is so contrary to carnall reason. And the rather, when wee see so goodly and magnificent a worke to be so aptly composed and made, as the word (Katertisthai) englished (ordained) doth signifie. Whereas being nothing at the first, it was also at the beginning onely a rude heape, vtterly voide of all the present furniture and beautie: according to the beginning of Gen: chap: 1. v. 2. So that then, hereby we may perceiue, that the office of faith is twofold as it were. For it looketh both retrorsum and antrorsum: that is backward and forward, as one may say. Backward, to those things which beeing now, had neuer any beeing before: vntill God by his almightie power gaue a beeing vnto them. And forward, to such things, as though they are not yet, be neuertheles (by vertue of the word and promise of God) as surely expected, as if they were already performed: namely, that these heauens, and this earth (being, through our sinnes, made subiect to vanitie, and shall certainely be dissolued) shall bee renewed, yea in effect made new againe: and that, in a more glorious and excellent manner (and the same also as certainly) as they were at the first made and disposed, in such manner as we see them now to be.

Beliefe in God the Father maker of heauen and earth.

The ground and meaning.

It looketh also forward, to the expectation of the resurrection of our bodies, after this life, at the last day: and after the glorifying of them then, &c. as certainely, as wee knowe that wee are nowe mortall creatures, and haue the feeling of our present miseries, &c.

So that faith, being of a spirituall nature (a very diuine gift of God to man) it resteth it selfe, and as it were hideth it selfe onely in the eternall and almightie God. Who, as he was before the beginning of all creatures, so shall he, and so will hee continue for euer the same: and giue all true beleeuers, a most happie and euerlasting estate and condition, after that this world, and all thinges touching their present, vaine, and transitorie estate, shall come to an end.

But thus we are, as it were vpon the winges of faith, caried very farre. Let vs returne to the doctrine of creation, hauing alreadie seene, that howsoeuer, the world now made is a matter of sence, and not of faith: yet in respect of the creation and making of it, it is a singular point of beliefe.

Question. FIrst therefore, what ground haue you, that God the Father, hath, by his almightie power, created the heauens, and the earth, and all creatures, that haue any beeing at all in the same?

Answere. It is euery where testified in the holy Scriptures: but first of all, and most fully and plainely in the two first chapters of Genesis, which is the first booke of the Prophet Moses.

Explication and proofe. It is so indeede. For as touching the often witnessing of Gods creation of all things: we may remember, that diuers testimonies of the holy Scriptures, haue beene mentioned alreadie. And wee may euerie where finde more. As namely, Isai, 40. 26. The Lord hath created all things, hee bringeth out their Armies by number, and calleth them all by names, By the greatnes of his power, and mighty strength, nothing faileth. And verse, 28. The euerlasting God the Lord hath created the ends of the earth. Hee neither fainteth, nor is wearie, there is no searching of his vnderstanding. And againe, chap 42. 5. Hee hath created the heauens, and spread them abroade, hee hath stretched forth the earth, and the buds thereof: hee giueth breath to the people vpon it, and spirit to them that dwell therein. And yet againe, chap. 45. 11. 12. Thus saith the Lord, the holy one of Israel, and his maker, &c. I whose hands haue spread out the heauens, I haue euen commanded all their Armies. And Psalme. 89. 11. 12. The heauens are thine, and the earth also is thine, thou hast laide the foundation of the worlde, and all that therein is, Thou hast created the North and the South, &c. And Psal. 148. 5. Hee commanded, and they were created.

Likewise Psalm. 33. 6. though expressed by another Hebrue word then is vsed in the former places. By the word of the Lord were the heauens made, and all the hoste of them, by the breath of his mouth. And Psalme. 121. 2. and 124. 8. And Psalme. 136. 5. 6, 7. 8. 9. Which by his wisedome made the heauens: for his mercie endureth for euer. Which stretched out the earth vpon the waters, &c. And Psalme. 146. 6. Which made heauen and earth, the Sea and all that in them is. Reade also Exodus 20. in the fourth Commandement. And Isa. 44. 24. I am thy Lord that made all thinges, who spread out the heauens alone, and stretched out the earth by my selfe.

Likewise Ier. 10. 12. Hee hath made the earth by his power, and established the world by his wisedome, and hath stretched out the heauens by his discretion. And chap. 32, verse, 17. Ah Lord GOD (saith the holy Prophet in his prayer to GOD) Behold thou hast made the heauen and the earth, by thy great power, and by thy stretched out arme, and there is nothing hard vnto thee, &c. Reade also Acts 4. 24. in the praier of the holy Apostles. O Lord (say they with one accord). thou art the God, which hast made the heauen, and the earth, the Sea, and all things that are in them, &c.

And

Beleefe in God the Father, maker of heauen & earth.

The ground and meaning.

And chap. 17, 24. The Apostle Paul, describing the true God to the ignorant and Idolatrous Athenians, Whom yee ignorantly worship (saith he) him shew I vnto you: God that made the world, and all things that are therein: seeing that he is Lord of heauen and of earth, he dwelleth not in Temples made with handes, &c. And if we wold read yet a more large discourse, concerning the works of Gods most mightie and wise creation, more immediately as it were from the Lords owne mouth: wee may haue our recourse to the 38. and 39. chap: of the booke of Iob. The Psalmist doth also excellently celebrate the praises of the Lord, for the same his notable workes, Psal: 104. And thus we may see the workes of Gods mightie creation, euery where testified in the holy Scriptures. Neuertheless, insomuch (as it was further truly answered) the holy historie of them is first of all, most fully and plainely (and as we may say originally) described in the 2. first chapters of Genesis: wee will in this our exercise of gathering the doctrine of the principles of religion, fundamētally inquire of thē, according to the ground & direction of those chapters. Now therefore that we may proceede, in as plaine and familiar a course as we can: Let vs make our entrance from the consideration of the meaning of this word, to Create.

Question. What haue you learned to be the meaning of it?

Answere. This word (to Create) signifieth most properly to make a substance or beeing of a thing, where there was nothing at all before.

Explicatiō & proofe. It is very true. And thus did the Lord at the beginning create the substance and beeing both of the heauens and also of the earth: that is, he caused them to be, when they were nothing at all before. For this is the most proper and originall signification of the word Bara.

Question. But doth the signification of it extend no further then thus?

Answere. Yes, and therefore I said (as I haue beene further taught) that it signifieth, not onely to make a substance, but also to giue a beeing, which is more generall, and noteth the qualitie and whole estate and condition of the thing, as well as the substance it selfe: this being the creation of God, as wel as the other.

Explicatiō and proofe. You haue learned to answere as the truth it selfe teacheth. And therefore doe the best learned, vpon diligent obseruation affirme, that the word Bara doth not onely signifie, producere a non esse, ad esse: that is, to bring forth the beeing of a thing from no being: but also, that God hath herein wrought as excellently for the manifestation of his diuine wisedome and gracious goodnes, as of his almightie power. And therefore well saith Iunius, a learned Interpreter of Gods word, God created: that is, Fecit ex nihilo: he made of nothing. Et quidem potentissimè ac magnificentissimè: no lesse stately or gorgeously, thē mightily. Nā hæc propria est Hebrei verbi significatio: For this (saith he) is the proper signification of the Hebrew verbe. And besides, it is easie to obserue, that the same verbe is vsed to note wisedome in discerning of a thing vppon mature deliberation, or in making of a special choise: as 1, Sam: 17, 8. Choose you a man for you, &c. And Ezek: chap: 21, 19. Choose thou a place, and choose it in the corner of the way of the Citie. In the Hebrew distinction of this chapter, it is the 24. verse.

Gen. 1. 1. Annot: post:

Furthermore, as touching the qualitie and excellent estate and condition of a thing, whereto the word of Creation extendeth it selfe: it is euident in that it is expresly said, that the Lord created all things very good. And Psal. 51, 10. King Dauid repenting him, of his owne corruption, whereby hee had peruerted his owne soule, praieth God to create in him a cleane heart, Read also, Isay. 54. 16. behold I haue created the smith, &c. and I haue created the destroyer to destroy. And chap. 57. 19. I create the fruite of the lippes to be peace &c. And 65. 17. 18. Newe heauens and a new earth, and ioy to Gods people.

And besides all this, the word of creation, doth not onely signifie, the making of the first matter and ground of all thinges, called the heauen and the earth: but also the first producing and making of all Creatures, in their kindes from them, or like to them: as the Sunne, and the Moone, and the Starres, like to the matter of the heauens in proportion: as Adam and other earthly creatures were created from the earth, and out of the water, Gen. 1, 20, 21. and ch: 3.19. And Eue of the ribbe of Adam. For God created them male and female Gen. 1.27. and ch: 1.2. yea, & the propagation of all creatures in their kinds, it is called a new creation, Gen. 6. 7, Psals 102. 18. and 104. 30. and Ezek: 28. 13, 15. Iob: 31. 15. He that hath made me in the wombe, hath he not made him? Hath not he alone facioned vs in the wombe? And Ier: 1. 5. To this purpose it is, that to the clearing of the full signification of this word of Creation, diuers wordes are somtimes put together. And namely these two, (Iatsar) and (Gnasa) are ioined with (Bara) the one signifying to doe a thing in a more generall signification; the other, to make one thing of another, giuing it a newe forme and beautie &c. as the potter doth his pot out of the clay. From the which similitude, the Lord expresseth the creation of the body of Adam, out of the dust of the earth, as it were mixed with water: and so moulded vp to a lumpe, and fashioned, to his excellent forme and shape, and to that excellent estate and condition wherein God did set it, As* Gen: 2. verse 7. So that although the soule is signified to be by creation most properly taken, yet it is more immediately from God. Concerning the similitude of the Potter, reade Isaiah: chapter 45. 9. Woe vnto him that striueth with his Maker, the pot shard with the potshardes of the earth: that is, as well one as other, all being fraile and earthly, &c. In the which Chapter also, are the former three wordes, noting this more full signification of creation, ioined together: as we may read them, verse 7. I forme the light, and create darknes, I make peace and create euill: I the Lord doe all these things. And in the same chap: verse 18. Thus saith the Lord, that created heauen, God himselfe that framed the earth and made it: he hath prepared it, he created it not in vaine: he formed it to be inhabited, &c. And before this, ch. 43. 7. Euery one (saith the Lord) shall be called by my name: For I created him for my glory, formed him and made him. Moreouer, Gen: 2. 22. there is yet another word vsed, to expresse the manner of the creation of Eue. For the Lord taking a ribbe, as it were a rafter or sparre out of the side of Adam, is said to haue builte Eue: that is to say, to haue framed and fashioned her as an excellent building: yea with a body of more large capacitie, and with more roomes and inclosures (as one well saith) for the more cōmodious propagation of children. And as touching her soule, that also was properly created as was the soule of Adam, and so are the soules of all men and women to this day.

* The Lord God made mā of the dust of the ground, & breathed in his face breath of life: and man was a liuing soule.

The Greeke words answering to these as the learned obserue: are Ktisis) for creating of nothing. Poiesis) for making into some outward forme. Plasis) for a through working and fashioning both within and without. Iunius Annot. post:

Finally, in respect of the most proper signification of creation, euery newe and strange work or iudgement of God, is diuers times expressed by the word Bara: as Exod. 34, 10. I will doe such miracles (saith the Lord) as haue not beene wrought in all the world. Likewise Numbers 16. 30. Likewise Isai: 41. 20. and ch. 48 6. and Ier: 31. 12.

Thus much for the opening of the signification of the word (to create) whereby euery way may appeare the infinite excellencie of Gods making of things: from all that making which is, or may be attributed to man. For although, by the gift of God, and in an artificiall imitation of his workes of nature, man doth make many beautifull formes of things; yet he cannot possibly make the least substance of any thing, nor inspire any life or liuely and naturall motion in the least degree. And euen his formes also, are infinitely inferiour, to the beautie of the things themselues, which God formeth and beautifieth, aboue all the most exquisite artificers skill.

NOw after the vnderstanding of the meaning of the word: let vs goe forward to the matter it selfe.

When you say that the substance, and frame, and whole furniture of the heauens, & of the earth, were created when they were nothing at all before: You doe therein affirme, that the world is not eternall, and without beginning, as God himselfe is; but that in time it had a beginning.

Question. Is not your meaning so?

Yea

Beliefe in God the Father. maker of heauen & earth. Explicatiõ & proofe.

The Ground and meaning.

Yea the holy Scriptures teach me to beleeue that the whole world, both the heauens and the earth, had their beginning with the beginning of time it selfe: and that also within lesse then the space and terme of six thousand yeares.

It is very true, as the certaine and vndoubted Chronologie of the holy Scriptures themselues, doe euidently declare, to all such as doe make diligent and religious search thereinto. The which verily, is the dutie of euery true beleeuer, to doe more or lesse either by his owne industrie, or by the helpe of others, for the confirmation of his faith therein. And that from thence also, our faith may be confirmed, concerning the appearing of our Sauiour Christ in the fulnes of time, according to all the holy Propheſies thereof.

But this were too long a busines, and peraduenture too troublesome, for the present exercise. Neuertheles, it shal be meet and profitable for you, at your leisure, to read that diligently, which hath beene purposedly collected out of the holy Scriptures, for your instruction in this point: or else to read the labours of some other. The which their labours may easily come to your hands, if you shewe your selues to haue anie godlie desire after the same. The summe of al, we wil here set downe, as it is compriſed in certaine verses, already gathered to your hand for some furtherance of your vnderstanding, and for a familiar helpe of memorie herein.

Sacred Geneſis first of all,
The Scripture storie doth containe:
Of yeares two thousands, hundreds three,
And sixtie eight since world began.

The bookes of daies or Chronicles,
No longer storie doe set downe.
Saue fortie fiue, to Cyrus reigne,
They make increase to seuentie one.

The second Booke which Moses wrote,
Cald Exodus of going out:
One hundred fortie adding sixe,
This is the summe whereto tis brought.

Then Ezra, Nehem' & Esters booke,
Shewe captiue Iewes sent home againe:
Where they abode. 4. hundred yeares,
Yea nnetie more, till Christ was slaine.

The third, of Levie bearing name,
Shewes many things, but eeks the skore,
With neuer a yeare: but Numery
Hath thirtie eight, and neare one more.

For thus is Daniel rightly skand,
I meane the speech of Angell there:
Who thither, from thrall seuenties end,
Defineth seuen times seuentie yeare.

Then Deutronomie doth supply,
All which that yeare to want we see:
So all fiue bookes, to thousands two,
Adde hundreds fiue, and fiftie three.

So then, since man was first create,
And likewise, since his wofull fall,
Till Christ his death: tis thousands three Hundreths nine, and sixtie sixe in all.

Next, Iosua space of 17. yeares,
Iudges two hundreths, ninetie nine:
The first of Samuell foure score,
The next hath fortie, Danids reigne.

Whence, take wee thirtie three, and then,
There doe remaine, but thonsands three:
And hundreths nine, thirtie and three,
Till Christ tooke flesh to make vs free.

The first of Kings from Salomon,
Hath yeares one hundred and seuenteene:
Next, hundreths three, fortie and fiue,
As by due triall may be seene.

Now since that time, how many yeares,
Haue passed iust, by yearely count:
He knoweth but little, that cannot tell,
The summe whereto they doe amount.

This storie reacheth to the time,
When captiue state to Iuda fell:
Yea to the yeare of fortie fiue,
That they were thrall in strange Babell.

But vse hereof, what should be made,
Most wise may liue, and still may learne:
Christ taking life, and dying death,
To life doth call, from sinne doth warne.

For

'Beliefe in God the Father, maker of heauen & earth.

The ground and meaning.

For as he came in base estate,
And stayed no whit, the time once come:
So will he hast a glorious Iudge,
Of life and death, to giue last doome.

Thus, times and seasons if thou weigh,
The more exact, the better stay:
But if thou doe, this vse neglect,
The greater skill, the worse defect.

Repent therefore, thy sinnes forsake,
Beleeue in him whom God hath sent:
Be sorie for all dayes and times,
Wherein thou hast thy life misspent.

Thy friend doth friendly wish thee well,
Let small default, not much offend:
One yeare, yea more, may penne escape,
But Gods accounts, can none amend.

The more full opening of these verses, is to be examined from the Booke it selfe, printed to that end.

But may we possibly conceiue in our minds, that there should euer haue bin a nullitie, or (if we may so speake,) a nothingnes of all things?

Because it cannot be conceiued by reason, or compassed by our vaine, or curious, and confused thought: therefore doe the holy Scriptures teach vs, to vnderstand and beleeue it by faith, as we haue learned before.

Explicatiõ and proofe.

It is Gods great mercy, that he hath vouchsafed to reueale this to be so. And it is our dutie, in the humble obedience of faith, withall thankfulnes, to acknowledge the same: and to restraine our thoughts, from all wandrings any other way; which cannot but be infinitly confused, and very sinfull and perillous to our soules. Onely therefore let it content vs to knowe, that God himselfe, was in himselfe, the perfect fulnes of all in all things, before there was any thing at all: as well as now, and euer since he hath giuen to all things their proper continuance and beeing. And that we may the better helpe our selues, to giue credit to the doctrine of the creation of the great world: let vs consider our selues, who are (after a sort) so many little worlds, for the wonderfull manner of our creation. And herein let vs all consider earnestly, what we were but one hundreth of years agoe: yea a great deale lesse. And as for many of vs, what were we but euen a fewe yeares since? Where were we in all the world? what were we? were we not iust nothing? Our owne creation therefore, may iustly be a strong argument vnto vs, of the creation of all other things, and of the world it selfe. For seeing that God by his almightie power, hath made our selues in this our time, as all other in their ages: why should it be strange to vs to heare the word of God to teach vs, that all things were created of nothing? Surely, that creatures who haue reason, should call into question the truth of the doctrine of creation: it is not onely without reason, but also euen vnnaturall. For a created nature hauing reason, and not being peruerted in it selfe: must needs easily see, and (feelingly, as it were) acknowledge, euen from the own state, the creation of all other creatures.

WE therfore putting away all doubt herein: Let vs proceed to the manner of the creation, as the Lord himselfe, hath (of the same his most gracious goodnes) made it knowne vnto vs.

Question. How was that?

Answere. All things at the beginning, that is, so soone as time it selfe had any beeing; they were created and began to take their beeing: onely by the word and commandement of God, according to his owne eternall decree in this behalfe.

Explication and proofe.

This is indeed the true meaning of the first wordes of the holy Bible: euen of the first wordes of the first booke of the Scriptures of God. In the beginning (saith the Prophet Moses, who hath this testimonie of God, that he was very faithfull, Heb: 3, 5.) God created the heauens and the earth. In the beginning: that is to say, euen so soone as there was any beginning of any creature, did the creation of all things begin: yea euen so soone as time it selfe began. The which time God made also, as the measure of all the rest of his creatures and works, in regard of their first beeing, when they began: and also of their continuance,

The ground and meaning.

as they are former or latter, euen to the laſt ende of the longeſt time that may be, of this ſhort and tranſitorie world. According to that, Pſal: 102.25.26.27. They ſhall periſh, but thou ſhalt endure, &c. And 1. Cor: 7.29. The time is ſhort. And verſe 30. The faſhion of this world goeth away. And 1. Pet: 4.7. The ende of all things is at hand. But touching the newe heauen, and the newe earth which ſhall bee eſtabliſhed, (the time of the continuance of this preſent euil, and ſinnefull world once ended) as they ſhall bee in a more excellent eſtate, ſo ſhall their continuance for euer, be meaſured by another kinde of meaſure, euen aboue meaſure; that is, by time as it were timeleſſe, for euer and euer: euen by time, and times, time without ende. As Reuel: 21,23. The Citie ſhall haue no neede of the Sunne, &c. Neither is there any night there, &c. Of the which enough for this time.

Wherefore, that wee may proceede. It is true alſo, that you haue anſwered, that the onely immediate cauſe efficient, of the creation, was the word and commandement of God: without all inſtruments and meanes, which the wicked and vngodly Epicures, and Atheiſts of the world, mockingly aske after. According to the holy teſtimonies of the diuine Scriptures, Pſ. 33. 6. as it hath beene alledged before. And againe, Pſal: 148. 5. He commanded, and they were created. Euen according to the hiſtoricall narration of Moſes in this our firſt Chapter of Gene: God ſaide, let there be light, and there was light. Let there be a firmament, or ſpreading out of the aierie regions &c. And all were preſently, ſo as God ſpake and commanded.

Queſtion. But I pray you, doe you vnderſtand this ſo, as if God vttered any ſound of words: and that by the vertue thereof he created all things?

Anſwere. I haue beene taught to vnderſtand them otherwiſe then ſo.

Explication and proofe. There is good reaſon thereof. For hether to, there was no vſe of vocall and ſounding ſpeech: ſeeing there was yet no creature to heare it, nor inſtrument to ſound it, or place whether the ſound thereof ſhould bee carried no nor ayer wherein it ſhould bee ſounded: I meane at the firſt inſtant of the creation?

Queſtion. How then haue you learned to vnderſtand the ſpeech and commandement of God at the firſt beginning, and ſo forth in the whole worke of creation.

Anſwere. It noteth the execution of his eternal decree, in the beginning of time, according as eternally, and before all time (without beginning) he purpoſed in himſelfe, to accompliſh his worke, by his Sonne, together with the holy Ghoſt: who are eternally and without all beginning, the eſſentiall wiſedome and power of God.

Loquutus eſt Deus: hoc eſt (inquit Caluinus) æternum ſuum decretũ protulit. Comment: in Gen. 1. 11. God hath ſpoken (ſaith Caluin) that is, hee hath performed his eternall decree.

Explicatiõ and proofe. Thus indeed, concerning the ſonne of God, doth the holy Euangeliſt Iohn moſt diuinely expound this creating WORD: chap: 1, 1. &c. In the beginning (ſaith he) was the word, and the word was God. The ſame was in the beginning with God. All things were made by it, and without it was made nothing that was made. In it was life, and the life was the light of men, &c. And verſe 10. The world was made by him, &c. And thenceforth, he proceedeth to ſhewe, that as the world was at the firſt made by him, and ſet in good eſtate: ſo it being peruerted by the ſinne of man, it is againe renewed & deliuered from vanitie and corruption by him, &c. 2. Cor. 5. 17.

And touching the holy Ghoſt, that hee was as the hand and euen the very power of God, in this mightie worke of his creation: Moſes himſelfe expreſly affirmeth it, in the ſecond verſe of his firſt chapter.

So then, by the teſtimony and interpretation of the Euangeliſt Iohn, it is plaine; that as well the heauen and the earth at the firſt inſtant, as afterward, the whole diſpoſition of them, and the creation of all the other earthly and viſible creatures out of them: were created by the word or ſpeech and commandement of God, in ſuch ſence as hath beene already expounded.

Queſtion. Doe you not ſee this to be plaine from the Teſtimonie, and interpretation of the Euangeliſt Iohn?

Beliefe in God the Father, maker of heauen & earth.

The Groũd and meaning.

It is very cleare and plaine: And the Apoſtle Paul alſo, doth as clearly confirme the ſame in his Epiſtle to the Coloſ: chap: 1. 15. 16. and 17. verſes.

Rehearſe you the wordes of the Apoſtle.

Which are they?

Who (that is the deare Sonne of God, whom hee had mentioned a little before) is the Image of the inuiſible God, the firſt begotten of euery creature: that is, eternally begotten, and hauing his perſonall ſubſiſtence from God the Father, before there was any creature at all.

For by him (as the Apoſtle ſaith further) were all things created, which are in heauen, and which are in earth, things viſible and inuiſible: whether they be Thrones or Dominions, or Principalities or Powers; all things were created by him and for him.

And he is before all things, and in him all things conſiſt.

Explicatiõ and proofe.

This place indeede being as cleare as the former of the Euangeliſt Iohn: it is alſo more particular and full, then that is.

For in this, the Apoſtle, according to the excellent knowledge which was reuealed vnto him, he ſetteth out the moſt high excellencie of the moſt glorious Sonne of God our Lord Ieſus Chriſt; in that, not onely the inferiour creatures were created by him, & therfore be inferiour to him: but alſo euen thoſe that are moſt excellent aboue the reſt. That is, not onely were theſe viſible heauens created by him but alſo the heauens of heauens, as King Salomon calleth them, 1. Kings: 8. 27. Euen thoſe which the Apo: vnderſtãdeth by the third heauen, whereunto he was taken vp: 2. Cor: 12. 2. Neither was man onely created by him, but alſo euen the Angells themſelues, how high ſoeuer aboue men: and by what high names or titles ſoeuer they may be eſteemed: whether Thrones, as it were the Lords chayer of eſtate: or Dominions, by whom it pleaſeth his diuine maieſtie (as by his ſeruants) to execute and adminiſter his gouernment ouer the reſt of his creatures: or Principalities, as chief in any ſpecial ſeruice: or Powers, as being indued with ſpeciall might and ſtrength, moſt effectually to accompliſh the ſeruice appointed to them: according to that Pſalm: 103. 20. And all theſe are infinitely inferiour to the Sonne of God, inſomuch as they were created by him: not as by an inſtrument, but as by their very Lord and ſouereigne maker. Yea, ſo that though the Angelles bee admitted to bee as the Thrones of God: yet they may not bee permitted to ſit once at the right hand of the Maieſtie of GOD, as the Sonne of God is, yea euen in that nature of man, wherein hee abaſed himſelfe for the deliuerance and aduancement of man.

Thus therefore I ſay, this teſtimonie of the Apoſtle Paul, doth moſt fully, as well as moſt clearely, lay open vnto vs, the moſt high excellencie, and ſouereigne dignitie of the Sonne of God, from the whole worke of creation: the which, God the Father, hath begunne, and perfected all together by him, together with the holy Ghoſt, the diuine ſpirit of them both. Read alſo, Eph. 3. 9. God hath created all things by Ieſus Chriſt.

BVt now, that we may goe yet one ſtep forward, though ſomewhat ſlowly and at ley ſure, wading as it were in ſo high a ſtreame, wherein, without ſure footing, the talleſt wader, may eaſily be ouerthrowne.

Queſtion. Was the heauen and the earth, with the Angels and mankinde, and all other creatures, made at one inſtant?

Anſwere. No, but the contrarie, is moſt euident, and plaine.

So it is indeed. Shewe therefore in what ſpace of time, they were created.

Queſtion. What ſay you to this?

Anſwere. The heauens, and the earth, and all creatures therein, euen the whole companie of the thouſand thouſands of Angels in heauen, the Sunne and the Moone, and all the Starres of heauen: and all earthly creatures, in their ſeuerall kinds, they were all created within the ſpace of ſixe ſeuerall daies.

Explication & proofe. This alſo is manifeſt in the. 1. ch. Gen: and in the beginning of the ſecond chap: verſe. 1. 2. 3. Where, not onely the finiſhing, and perfecting of all the workes of the creation is assured vnto vs: but also the seuerall workes of euery day, are distinctly described vnto vs, for the more certaine credit of the holy storie; which God himselfe hath reuealed, and caused by his faithfull Prophet Moses, to be recorded and deliuered ouer vnto vs. The ground and first matter of all (the Angells and soules of mankind excepted, as we must confesse) was created at once, and in the beginning of the first day: but the seuerall kinds, were not all finished till the sixt day.

Question. But insomuch as God was able to haue made them all together at one instant: why did hee continue the worke of creation so many daies?

Answere. Herein, it pleased God to tender our weakenesse, to the ende that our mindes, which are of themselues vaine and flitting, being holde in the distinct consideration of the particulars: might receiue our more full instruction, concerning the mightie power, manifold wisedome and bountifull goodnesse of God, expressed therein: and so also might be prouoked thereby, to giue the greater glory, and to powre forth the more plentifull praises and thankesgiuing to his most excellent and diuine Maistie, for the same.

Explicatiõ & proofe. These are sufficient reasons thereof, and we cannot sufficiently glorifie and praise the Lord our God, for the same. I meane, not onely for the Creation it selfe, but also for the excellent order, which the Lord hath obserued in the working of it, most graciously and wisely, for our better instruction and cõmfort: as by the grace of GOD, wee will obserue in the particulars, as the occasion, shall by the goodnesse of GOD, bee offered vnto vs, in the examination thereof.

LEt vs therefore come to the workes of the seuerall daies.

In which of them, were the Angelles, and the inuisible heauen, created and made? Is there any certaine ground for this? It seemeth that Moses minded to write nothing of their Creation, but to hold himselfe within the compas of the visible creatures, for the instruction of the more rude and simple:

Question. What should we say to this?

Answere. Although the Prophet Moses, doe in the holy historie of the creation, set downe nothing expresly, concerning the Creation of the Angels: nenertheleſſe, insomuch as in the processe of his writings, hee doth afterward make often mention of them: as being the most excellent creatures and seruants of God: there is no doubt, but hee minded to comprehend them, within the compasse of the creation of the heauens. And that also most likely, in the first day with the first of the creatures as being the chiefe of them: euen so soone as GOD had prepared, a meete place of heauenly habitation, for them.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is most likely so indeede. I meane as touching the point as it were, of the time: euen with the first of the Creatures in time, as they are the first in dignitie. But that they were created within the space of the sixe dayes, wherein God perfected all his workes of Creation, it may iustly bee a matter of faith, and out of all question with vs; according to that generall testimonie, Gene: 2, 1. Thus the heauens and the earth were finished and all the host of them, And againe, verse, 2. and verse 3. they are said to be all the workes of God, which hee had created and made. So that it is plaine, that the whole worke of creation, was a continued worke, without any interruption, or intermission; from the very first point of the beginning, to the last accomplishment of the same,

The inuisible Angels therefore, and so likewise the inuisible heauens, must be in that space created: or else they should be, to our knowledge, no creatures. For wee haue no warrant of any creation, but of this one; which God hath, of his mercy reuealed to his Church, by his faithfull seruant Moses. Neither can there any sufficient reason be alledged, why any one of the Creatures,

Beliefe in God the Father maker of heauen & earth.

The ground and meaning.

ſhould preuent the time of the vniuerſall creation of the reſt. For God, the Creator of all, to be bleſſed for euer: he both is, and was from before all beginning, moſt perfect and intire in himſelfe, without any creature whatſoeuer; lacking nothing, either for neceſſitie of his beeing, or for happineſſe and delight, or for moſt high glory and maieſtie therein, &c. aboue all that can enter into the conceite of man: yea aboue all that the holy Angels can conceiue. Read Iohn, ch: 17.5. and 1. Tim: 6. 16. What reaſon therefore may we haue why wee ſhould goe about to fancie any creation, before this that Moſes, by the cõmandement of God, doth certifie vs of. Verily no reaſon ſhall be found worthy, the mouing of one ſtep, (as a man may ſay) to ſeek after it: it ſhal be but as the catching at a ſhadow, &c.

Now, that the holy Prophet of God Moſes, doth write expreſſely of the Angels, it is euident: euen immediatly after the hiſtorie of the Creation, ſo ſoone as Adam and Eue were fallen away from the Lord. Gen: 3. 24. For vnder the name of Cherubims, hee noteth the Angels, as it was familiar to the Iſraelites, for whoſe inſtruction firſt of all he wrote: inſomuch as they were to them; in the Tabernacle of God, repreſentations of the Angels attending the preſence of God among them: Exod: 25, 18, &c. 22, & ch: 26, 13. Read alſo, Pſal. 18. 10. and Ezek. ch. 10.

But that Moſes doth yet more plainely write of the Angels, yea euen in his firſt booke, in ſuch ſort that it may appeare, that the ſeruants of God did vnderſtand this part of Gods creation: read Gen: 24. 7. 40. and Chap: 28. 12. and chap. 31. 11. and chap: 32. 1, 2. and chap: 48. 16. Albeit in this laſt place now cited, and alſo in the firſt of them: wee are to vnderſtand them prophetically, of him that is the prince of all Angels, Chriſt the Sonne of God. As though Abraham and Iaacob ſhould haue ſaid. That great Angell by his ſeruants the Angells, will goe with yee, and deliuer yee, and proſper ye, &c. Yea, and that long before this, the Church of God, was poſſeſſed with this part of the doctrine of creation; it is euident by the Teſtimonie of the Apoſtle Iude, who affirmeth plainly and vndoubtedly, that euen Henoch the ſeuenth from Adam, propheſied of the comming of the Lord, to the laſt iudgement, with the thouſands of his Saints: or rather as it is in the Text, with his holy thouſands (to wit of his Angels) according to that which our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ſaid concerning himſelfe, Mat: 25. 31.

The like is to be obſerued, concerning the ancient knowledge and faith of the inuiſible heauens: according to that, Gen: chap: 38. 17. where after that Iaacob had ſeene a viſion of Angels, &c. This is the houſe of God (ſaith hee) and the gate of heauen. He taketh his compariſon, no doubt, from the inuiſible heauen; aboue the top of that ladder, wherevpon he ſaw the Lord to ſtand. Of theſe heauens, had all the faithfull Patriarkes, the promiſe of God, vnder the ſigne of the earthly Canaan: as the Apoſtle to the Heb: doth aſſuredly confirme vnto vs. chap: 11. v. 8. 9, 10. 13. 14. 15. 16. They looked for a heauenly Citie; that is, for heauen it ſelfe, whoſe builder and maker (as the Apoſtle ſaith) is God. Theſe heauens, are that habitation, or dwelling place, which ſo many of the Angels, bereaued themſelues of, as from the beginning fell away from the Lord, Iude. v. 6. And Henoch mentioned before, was knowne to be taken vp by the Lord, euen in that young age of the world, into theſe heauens. Gen. 5, 24. So that, throughly waying all things: we may iuſtly conceiue, that the doctrine of the Creation, euen touching theſe points; was known and beleeued in the church of God, from the beginning of the world.

It is true indeed, that Moſes doth not at the firſt, ſo diſtinctly ſpeake of them: becauſe in the wiſdome of the holy Gho: he haſteth to thoſe things which doe more immediatly concerne our ſelues. Neuertheles (as was truly anſwered) that which he himſelfe writeth afterward, and (as we may adde further) that which we read in other places of the holy Scriptures, (though writtē by the appointment of God, in times more or leſſe remoued from the daies of Moſes: they are ſo many teſtimonies that this point of doctrine was known and beleued in the church of God, from the beginning.

Such

Beliefe in God the Father maker of heaue and earth.

The Ground and meaning.

Such places as we may take for inſtance, Iob.chap:38. where, the Lord himſelfe ſpeaketh of the Angels, whom he calleth the children of God; as hauing their beginning at the ſame time, when the foundations of the earth were laid, and when the ſtarres of heauen were created, &c. And of the inuiſible heauens: that which we reade, Neh.chap.9.6.and 1.King.8.27.where King Salomon calleth them the heauens of heauens: and Pſ.68.18.33.35.Pſ.148.1.2.3.4.5. Where they, together with the Angels, are expreſly named among the other creatures. And yet more fully, in the New Teſtament, as hath bin mentioned before: in ſo much as the creation of all inviſible creatures, is ioyned arme in arme as it were, with the creation of thoſe that are viſible: Col:1.16. Luk:2,14. And Acts chap:1,9,10,11. and chap:7,55,56. 2.Cor:12,2.Heb.7 26,& chap:8.1. Wherefore from theſe after teſtimonies, we are to holde, that Moſes (as we may truly call him) the firſt Canonical and fundamentall writer of all holy writ: did ſet downe the ground of our preſent doctrine, euen from the beginning of his writing. For doubtleſſe there is no other doctrine, not onely of creation, but alſo euen of redemption (which yet was more leiſurely opened to the full, in the Church of God) in any or all of the latter Scriptures; the entyer ground, and as it were the ſeede whereof, was not laide by Moſes, in his writings; which are as the firſt originall ground of all the holy Scriptures: God euermore by his Spirit, directing all his Prophets to looke backe, and to haue their reference to him, &c. The latter alwaies to the former, and the former, to him whom God made the formoſt of all: that is to Moſes, vnto whom our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe appealeth, for proofe againſt the abuſe of marriage, that it was not ſo from the beginning.

Thus much, for the time of the creation of the inviſible heauens, where the Angels ſtand in the preſence of the maieſtie of God: and for the time of the creation of the Angels themſelues. Now what manner of creatures were they created?

Queſtion.

Anſwere. The Angels were created, moſt ſpiritual, but finite in ſubſtance: moſt mightie & wiſe, moſt holie and righteous in qualitie: and in eſtate and condition, moſt happie, aboue all other creatures. And the inuiſible heauens, aboue compariſon, were created more glorious, then are theſe viſible heauens, which we daily behold with our bodily eyes.

So indeed we may perceiue by that which the holy Apoſtle Paul writeth, 2.Cor:12,4. And by that we read, Pſ.11,4. For how ſhould it be, that the place where God appeareth in ſpeciall maieſtie and glorie, ſhould not be moſt glorious? We may reaſon in this caſe, as the Apoſtle doth in his compariſon, betwixt the lawe and the Goſpell: 2. Cor:3, 11. If that which ſhould be aboliſhed, were glorious, then much more ſhall that which remaineth for euer be glorious. Thoſe heauens no doubt, ſhall remaine for euer vnſhaken, yea vntouched: when theſe ſhall be changed, at the leaſt from that vanitie, which hitherto they are ſubiect vnto.

And as for the Angels of heauen, which for number are innumerable, euen thouſand thouſands, as the holie Scriptures aſſure vs: that they were created in ſubſtance moſt ſpiritual, & for qualitie, moſt wiſe and mightie, &c. aboue all other creatures: the ſame holy Scriptures do plentifully confirme.

That the Angels are in number aboue all that we can, or ought to goe about to take the accouut of them: we may reade Pſ:68,17.& Dan:7.10.Heb. 12.22. They are innumerable.

That they are ſpirituall ſubſtances, euen ſuch as haue euery one of them, a proper beeing and life; each of them, diſtinct both in nature & qualitie, from other: it is euident, Hebr:1,7. where the Apoſtle calleth the Angels by the name of Spirits.

Now a Spirit, is not a bodie, as a man is: as our Sauiour Chriſt teacheth vs, Luk:24,39: howſoeuer they haue diuers times, by ſpeciall diſpenſatiõ (and as it were by commiſſion from God) taken to them, ſome bodily ſhape & ſubſtance for a time, and afterward laide it downe againe, as not belonging or agreeing

Beliefe in God the Father maker of heauen & earth.

The ground and meaning.

greeing to their nature. But that they are euery one finite and distinct, and not of a mixed or confused nature (as a man might peraduenture imagine by taking a similitude from the likenes of the aire; which is after a sort spirituall) it is euident, by those actions which are attributed to them: sometime to one alone, sometime to many together. For they moue from place to place. They defend and comfort the godly. They discomfort & destroy the wicked, so soone as God commandeth them. God hath vsed them for his instruments to giue his lawe, to publish his Gospel, to declare the secrets of his kingdom and gouernment. They do most purely and zealously blesse and praise the Lord continually.

And hereby also doth it appeare, that they are creatures of singular wisedome: for else God would neuer vse them, in such seruices, wherevnto speciall wisedome is necessary.

Their holines also is thereby manifest, as also their religious will & nature. In which respect, they are called holy Angels: Luke 9.26. & Mar. 25.21. And as we saw from the Apostle Iude before, the holy thousands of the Lord. Such were all of them in the beginning, by creation.

But many corrupted themselues, and so became (as we may say) reprobate Angels: and are now wicked & vncleane spirits, and diuels. Of the which (by the grace of God) more afterward. Wherefore they onely that continued in their first estate, wherin God created them, are called the elect Angels: to shew that their surenes, standeth in the free mercy & fauour of God the Father, in his Sonne, through the holy Ghost: in such a manner, and vpon such a ground as is vnknowne to vs, saue onely that it was the good will & pleasure of God it shuld be so. But that they are elect, the Apostle sheweth, 1. Tim. 5.21. These are also, for excellencies sake, called the Angels of the Lord, & the Angels of God in many places. As also the Angels of heauen, and the Angels of light. The other are diuels of hell, and of darknes, &c.

That the holy Angels (yea that all the Angels generally) were at their creatiō, endued with great power, the which also remaineth to the wicked Angels, far aboue the power of man, though inferior to the power of the good Angels: Read Ps: 103.20. 2. Pet: 2, 11. We may see it also by the effect. 2. Ki: ch. 19.35. Reu: ch. 12.7, 8. The excellency of the holy Angels, doth euery way appeare, in that they are reckoned for the neerest vnto God, in dignitie & glory. As 1. Tim: 5.21. Mar: 8.38. Heb: 2.9. Ps. 8.5. Read also Mat: 25.31. And for that the chiefest excellency and happines of men, is this: that they shall be like to the Angels. And here vpon earth, God giuing to Stephen (when he witnessed his holy truth before the aduersaries therof) a singular grace & comelines, or beautie of face: the same is expressed by a comparison taken from the likenes of an Angel, Act. 6.15. And likewise all excellēcy of speech (as we know) is expressed by a comparison borrowed from the tongue of an Angel, 1. Cor: 13.1.

Thus then (as you answered) the Angels were created by God, spiritual substances, endued with singular power & wisedom, &c. aboue all other creatures.

And all this is insinuated, yea groundedly affirmed (though not so plainly expressed & opened, by the holy & wise Prophet of God Moses) in the verie first words of the holy Bible: in that he saith, In the beginning God created the heauens.

NOw let vs come to the visible works of Gods creation, and consider (as briefly as we can) of the seueral works of euery one of the six daies, which it pleased the Lord to imploy about the same?

Question. And first, what was the first daies worke, of the visible: or at the least, the more externall creation of God in such order as the Lord created it?

Answere The principall matter, and ground-worke (as one may say) of all the rest, was, as we were taught before, created at one instant, in the beginning of the first day: euen all the wide heauen, and the huge and thick earth which we see. Yet so, as the heauen which we see, and the whole aire, had then no light at all: and so continued the space of the whole first night, twelue houres at the least, together.

The

Beliefe in God the Father, maker of heauen & earth.

The Ground and meaning.

The earth also, had no seemely forme or shape: neither was it furnished with any creature, which now we see it to be in great varietie stored and adorned withall. Onely the waters, as a deepe poole or deuouring gulfe couered it all ouer: and from the face thereof, a most blacke (and as we may say) euen a palpable darkenesse, more grosse and thicke then that of Egipt, did lift vp it selfe as high, and spread it selfe as large as the heauens, which are now the instruments of this bright and comfortable light, which shineth forth vnto vs.

Neuertheless, so soone as the space of one night, (that is of the first night which euer was) came to an ende; the Lord God, by his gratious word and commandement, created and brought forth light: yea, before there was yet either Sunne, or Moone, or any one Starre in the whole compasse of heauen; o the ende it might most euidently appeare, that God is the immediate author of this excellent creature. And thenceforth, did the Lord, in his wisedome, establish the order and succession of the day and night, euen to this day: so to continue to the end of the world.

Thus, the whole space of the first day, and of the first night, doth by the determination of God himselfe, of the more worthie and excellent part: take the denomination of the first day.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

It is verie true. And thus, you haue in one Answere, laid open the meaning of Moses, in the first foure verses of our first Chapter of Genesis: according as it is both plaine in it selfe, and also confirmed by other testimonies of the holie Scriptures of God, in this behalfe. As first, touching the heauens (which we do vulgarly call the Element) and the large spreading thereof: read Iob 9.8. He himselfe alone spreadeth out the heauens. And chap: 37.18. Hee hath stretched them out firme, as mouten glasse. And Psal: 104.2. Hee hath spread them like a Curtaine. This large extension and spreading out of the highest visible heauen, is also called the Firmament, from the Greeke and common Latin Translations: as Dan: 12.3. They that be wise, shall shine as the brightnes of the Firmament. Read also Isai: 42.5. He hath created the heauens and spred them abroad. And chap: 44. 24. Read also Psal: 136.5. Hee hath made the heauens by his wisedom, &c. And Ier: 10,12. Hee stretcheth them out by his discretion.

And touching the earth, it is written in the Psal: 104. 5. mentioned euen now: that God hath so set it vpon the foundation, that it cannot be moued. And Psa: 102.25. Thou hast laide the foundation of the earth, and the heauens are the worke of thy hands. Reade also Iob: 38.4. and Prou: 8, 29. The earth therefore may iustly be called the Lords earth, as Ps: 24. 1.

Touching the couering of the earth by the waters: reade Ps: 104.6. Thou coueredst it with the deepe, as with a garment; and by their owne nature, they would stand aboue the mountaines.

Touching the creation of the light and darknes: reade Isai 45.7. I (saith the Lord) forme the light, and create darknes. Herevpon also, the day and the night, is by good right, ascribed to the Lord. Psal: 74.16. The day is thine, and the night is thine. And herevnto hath the Apostle Iames respect, when chap: 1,17, hee calleth God the Father of lights.

The constant order & succession of the day and the night, according to the law which God hath set in nature, is set downe to the praise of God, Ps: 19. 2. And Ier: 33.19.20.21. The Lord maketh it an argument of his faithfulnes in his couenant of euerlasting mercy, toward his people. This breaking forth of the light, is to be thankfully acknowledged for euer, for a very gratious & glorious worke of the Lord. Reade Psa: 104.23.24. and Iob ch: 38,12.13.14. But ch: 24.17. The morning is to the wicked, as the shadow of death.

Now let vs heare the holy words of Moses himselfe, from whence all these things are cleared vnto vs. Which are they?

Question.

Answere.

1 In the beginning (saith Moses) God created the heauens, and the earth.

2 And the earth was without forme, and voyd, and darknes was vpon the deepe, and the spirit of God moued vpon the waters.

3 Then God said, let there be light: and there was light.

4 And God sawe the light that it was good, and God seperated the light from the darknes.

Beliefe in God the Father maker of heauen and earth. Explicatiō & proofe.

The Groūd & meaning of it.

5. And God called the light day, and the darkneſſe he called night: ſo the Euening and the Morning were the firſt day.

In theſe words, we haue the ground of your former anſwere: and we may ſee the truth of it, fully warranted vnto vs.

And beſides, the holy Prophet ſheweth vs, how the rude, lumpiſh, and indigeſted matter of the earth, and the huge gulfe of waters, aboue the ſame: were as it were moulded vp, held together, and made apt and fit, to receiue that excellent forme, which, in the third day, they were faſhioned into. That is, how they were thus ſupported: to wit, by the holy Ghoſt, the diuine Spirit and power of God himſelfe.

Moreouer, we haue a ſingular commendation of the light, as of a moſt comfortable and commodious creature, euen from the approbation of God himſelfe: who ſaw, that it approued it ſelfe to be good, according to that Eccleſ. 11.7. Surely, the light is a pleaſant thing. So that hereby we are admoniſhed, to be in ſpeciall manner thankfull to God for it: and that we ought to be carefull to vſe it well, euen as we may thereby, giue the greateſt glorie to God that we can: walking as becommeth thoſe, whom hee hath vouchſafed to call, to be the children of light: and to this ende hath cauſed the light of his Goſpell to ſhine forth vnto vs. Yea euen to this our God, who thus, at the beginning, commanded the light to ſhine out of darknes, as the Apoſtle Paul writeth. 2. Cor: 4,6. ought we to giue all the glory we can. On this firſt day alſo, it may appeare, that the vpper Region of the aire, was made apt to ſend forth thunderings and lightenings, by the fierie brightnes of it: the which, as we know, is a very glorious and fearefull creature of God. Reade Iob: chap: 37.1,2,3,4,5. and chap: 38.24,35.

But whereas Moſes telleth vs, that God calleth the light day, and the darknes night: hee would not haue vs to thinke, that hee gaue thoſe names vnto theſe things, but that he appointed, and ordeined the things themſelues, to continue ſuch, and in ſuch order, as he had alreadie created and made them. For ſo the Lords calling, doth vſually note his effectuall eſtabliſhing of things thēſelues, rather then the giuing of them their names: according to that of the holy Apoſtle, Rom: 4.17. God calleth thoſe things that be not, as though they were. And 1. Cor: 1.26. Brethren, ye ſee your calling. And our Sauiour Chriſt in the Goſpel: I came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance.

Finally, Moſes in ſaying that the euening and the morning were the firſt day, he ſpeaketh by a double Synedoche. Firſt, putting the part for the whole; that is, the day, both for the day, and alſo for the night: and then the beginning of the day, and of the night, both for the whole day, and alſo for the whole night. This firſt day of the creation, is that which ſince the reſurrection of our Sauiour Chriſt, is called in the holy Scriptures, the Lords day to Chriſtians, euen that wherin our redemption was perfected: as the 7. day which was the next day after the creation finiſhed, was then the Lords day to all people: that is, a day of ſpeciall worſhip to God, euen from the beginning of the world.

Queſtion. THeſe things thus obſerued: Let vs now come to the ſecōd daies work: the which, for our more familiar vnderſtanding, we vſe to cal Monday. What did the Lord create in it?

Anſwere. The Lord ſo cleared and ordered the regions of the aire, as they might be moſt commodious for the placing of all heauenly creatures, in their proper ſeates, limits, and circuites, as it were in their chambers and lofts, each aboue other: and likewiſe, that all earthly creatures might liue comfortably vpon the earth, euery one according to their kindes, when they ſhould afterward be created. As it followeth in the 6.7.& 8. verſes of this firſt chapter of Geneſis.

Queſtion. Rehearſe Moſes his own words, as they are there conteined. Which are they?

Anſwere. They are theſe. Againe God ſaid; Let there be a firmament (or as it is Engliſhed more agreeable to the Hebrew word, in the margent of our Bibles) Let there be a ſpreading ouer (and therewithall aire) in the middeſt of the waters: and let it ſeperate the waters from the waters.

7. Thus,

Beleefe in God the Father maker of heauen and earth.

The Groũd and meaning.

7 Thus, God made a certeine firmament, (or ſpreading ouer, as before) and ſeparated the waters which were vnder the ſame firmament, from the waters which were aboue it: and it was ſo.

8 And God called this firmamẽt heauẽ: ſo the euening & the morning were the 2. day.

Expticatiõ & proofe.

The work of the Lord in this ſecond day, though it be recorded but as one: yet it is a very great and a gratious one. For therin he fitted the regions of the ayre for all excellent vſes: that the Sun, and the Moon, and the Starres, might haue their places & courſes in them: that the clowds might haue their place, & courſe, as the bottels of God, to water the earth in due time: & that the ſnow, and the haile might be congealed and ſpred abroade in their due ſeaſons, &c. And that the earthly creatures, might haue a cleare and thin, not a groſſe and foggie aier to draw their breath in: and that alſo, to this end, the windes might with their blaſts purge the ſame. For to theſe, (& if ther be any ſuch like purpoſes) God in this ſecond day, fitted the whole aier: and diſpoſed of the ſeuerall regions, (as it were the ſollers and loftes, and chambers thereof, according to that of the 104. Pſal: verſe 3. The Lorde layeth the beames of his chambers, in the waters, and hee maketh the clowdes his Chariot, and walketh vpon the wings of the winde. And verſe 13. Hee watereth the mountaines from his chambers. And Gen: 7. 11. it is ſaid (to note aboundance of raine) that the windowes of theſe chambers were opened, the which are called the windowes of Heauen. Likewiſe Mal: 3. 10. In this reſpect alſo, the clowdes are called the bottels of Heauen. Iob: 38. 37.

On this day alſo, this part of the firmament had a diſpoſition giuen it, in the times and ſeaſons therof, to ingender ſnowe and haile, &c. Of the which wee read in the ſame 38. chapt: of the booke of Iob.

So that from hence, wee may not vnfitlie gather, that the clowdes and the windes had their creation in this ſecond day: beſides that all was fitted to all ends before ſpecified. Read alſo Iob: chap: 38. 9. where the clowdes are ſaid, to haue beene the couering of the Sea, while darkneſſe, was as the ſwadling bands therof. Amos 4. 13. God is the Creator of the windes.

Thus therefore did the Lord in the ſecond day, cleare and order the aire, in moſt excellent manner: euen before the deepe gulfe of the waters were emptied out of the earth, and before ther was any drie land at all: to the end that herein as well as before (and as we ſhall haue occaſion to obſerue afterward) the wiſedome, and power, and goodneſſe of God, might rather be conſidered in it ſelfe, then from the reaſon of naturall cauſes, as the ouerwiſe Philoſophers of the world, haue too buſilie accuſtomed themſelues to doe, for want of the true knowledge of the word of God herein.

This firmament, or ſpreading out, and the ordering of the aire, and namely of that region or circular ſpace, which the Lorde hath appointed for the raine and moyſture of heauen, to be ſtaied in ouer our heads: and euen this lower aire alſo, wherin we liue and breath: God called heauen; that is, he appointed them to be (as wee may ſay) the aiery heauen, according as wee vſe to call the foules, or raine, and ſuch like things; which are in theſe partes of the aier, the fowles, or clowdes, or raine of heauen, &c.

This (as Moſes aſſureth vs) was God his wiſe, gratious, and mighty work, in the ſecond day. For the which we ought to glorifie & praiſe his moſt holie and glorious name: as Pſ: 148. 4.

Queſtion. THe worke of the third day is next. Howe doth Moſes reporte that?

Anſwere It foloweth thus, in the 9. 10. 11, 12, & 13. verſes of the ſame 1. chap: of Gene.

9 God ſaid againe, let the waters that be vnder the heauen, gather themſelues, (or flowe together) into one place, and let the drie land appeare: and it was ſo.

10 And God called the drie land Earth, and he called the gathering together of the waters, Seas: and God ſaw that it was good.

11 God ſaid alſo, let the earth bud forth the bud of the herb, that ſeedeth ſeed, the fruitfull tree, which beareth fruit according to his kinde, which hath his ſeede in it ſelfe, vpon the earth: and it was ſo.

Beliefe in God the Father maker of heauen and earth. Explication and proofe.

The Ground & meaning of it.

12 Thus the earth brought forth the budde of the herbe that seedeth seede, according to his kinde: also the tree that beareth fruit, which hath his seede in it selfe, according to his kinde. And God saw that it was good.

13 So the euening and the morning were the third day.

This day was that which we commonly call Tuesday. Here are two mightie workes of God. The one, the clearing of the land, as before the Lord had cleared the ayre. The other, the repleniſhing of the earth, with hearbes and trees, bearing their ſeedes and fruits.

But becauſe the clearing of the earth from the waters, could not be done, without another worke, for the conveyance, and (as we may ſay) channelling, and banking in of the Seas: therefore we may iuſtlie vnderſtand this to be a third worke of God, vpon the third day. The leaſt whereof, could not poſſiblie be wrought, and brought to paſſe, but by an Almightie and creating power. Of theſe things therfore, let vs ſtand to conſider a little: that our mindes may be the better informed, concerning the greatnes and excellencie of them; by the help of ſome other teſtimonies of the holie Scriptures, which doe worthilie ſtand in the commemoration of the ſame.

Note alſo, that the riuers and fountaines or ſprings of water, were ordered & diſpoſed in this day, read Reuel: 14.7.

And firſt, for the clearing of the earth, by the emptying of the waters: it is ſpoken of, as of a worke of a newe creation. For before this, it was as if it had not bene, in ſo much as it was couered with moſt thick darknes, in the former part of the firſt day: and yet ſtill remained rude and couered with the deep waters, vntill this third day. Wherfore, as the creation of the viſible heauens, are noted by the ſpreading of them out: ſo this clearing and drying of the earth, is reckoned for the creating and making of it, for the vſe of habitation to man, & to all other earthly creatures; though as touching the ſubſtance of it, it was made and created of nothing before. Read Pſal: 136.6. The Lord hath ſtretched out the earth vpon the waters (or rather as we ſhould read it) aboue the waters: for his mercie indureth for euer. So before, in the 24. Pſalm: verſe 2. Hee hath founded it aboue the Seas, and eſtabliſhed it aboue the floodes. For naturally, as the firſt creation ſheweth, and as hath beene alreadie alledged out of the 104. Pſal: They would ſtand aboue the mountaines. But at thy rebuke (ſaith the holy Pſ:) they flee: at the voyce of thy thunder (that is, when thou as it were thundereſt out thy commandement) they haſt away. And the mountaines aſcend, and the valleyes deſcend, to the place which thou haſt eſtabliſhed for them. Thou haſt ſet them a bounde which they ſhall not paſſe: they ſhall not returne to couer the earth. And Iob: 38. 10, 11. The Lord himſelfe ſaith, that hee hath eſtabliſhed his commandement concerning it, and hath ſet barres and doores. And ſaid, hetherto ſhalt thou come, and no further, and here ſhall (the bankes) ſtay thy prowd waues. Reade alſo Ier: 5. 22. Feare ye not mee? (ſaith the Lorde) and will ye not be afraied at my preſence? who haue placed the ſand for the bounds of the Sea, by a perpetual decree, that it cannot paſſe it, and though the waues thereof rage, yet they cannot prenaile, though they roare, yet can they not paſſe ouer it: that is, beyond the limit of Gods decree and appointment. So that the waters, which are naturallie aboue the earth: they are by an ouerruling power of God, made vnder the earth, as Exod: 20. 4. The waters vnder the earth. And for the ſtreatching out as it were, of the earth, by this remooving of the water: read further, Iſai. 42. 5. Where the Lord God, by his holie Prophet, deſcribeth himſelfe, to be that God, who beſide that he hath created the heauens, and ſpred them abroad, hath alſo ſtretched forth, the earth, and the buddes thereof (that is) all what ſoeuer ſpringeth out of it. And againe chap: 44. 24. The Lord that made all things, who alone ſpred out the heauens, and by himſelfe likewiſe ſtretched out the earth. And 2. Pet: 3. 5. The earth had the beeing of it from the water, and in the water, by the word of God. Wherefore, iuſtly is he celebrated, to be the God, that made not onely the heauens, but alſo the earth, and the Seas: Exod: 20. 11. Acts 4. 24. And Pſal: 95. 3. 4. 5. The Lorde is a great God, and a great King aboue all Gods. In whoſe hands are the deepe places of the Earth, and the heights of the Mountaines are his. To whom the Sea belongeth, belongeth : for hee made it, and his hands prepared the drie Lande. &c.

This worke of God, is worthily commended by the Lord himselfe, to be good and commodious; for so it is indeede, a very gratious worke, a fruite of his mercy, which indureth for euer: as was alldged before, from the 5. verse of the 136. Ps: It is also a very mightie work, in that the waters are thus against kinde, tumbled together as it were on a heape, and laid vp in the storehouse of the Lord. Ps: 33.7. And all this for our benefit. The turning of a little part of the red Sea, into drie land for a while, is iustlie recorded to be a great work of God, and a testimony of his fauour, toward his people, the children of Israell: but it was not so great, nor so generall, nor so durable a work, as this of the first creation was; for the constant benefit of the Churche, and of all mankinde, from the beginning to the end of the world. How can we therfore sufficientlie praise God, for the earth, and our so commodious and kindlie an habitation therein: the which (as it is in the 16. verse of the 115. Psalme) Hee hath giuen to the sonnes of men? Let vs therfore, more & more, blesse and praise the name of the Lord, who hath made the heauen, and the earth, the Sea, and all that is in them, from this time forth and for euermore. Amen. Consider also the greatnes of this worke, wrought in one day, by comparing it with the slowe abating of the waters, after the drowning of the world: Gen: ch: 8.1.2.3.4.5.

And furher, touching the fruites of the earth, the which our good God hath created in so infinite varietie, both hearbs, plants, and all kinde of trees, with their seuerall fruits, for present vse, at the very first beginning, and with their seuerall seedes, for future propagation and increase: O how can we possiblie magnifie the goodnes and bountie of the Lord, as wee ought to doe?

Verilie, this one and manifold worke, is euery way, verie gratious and admirable. For as touching the creation of all hearbs, plants, and trees, with their iust stature and ripe fruites: and that at one instant, or at the most in the space of one dayes groweth (wheras naturallie, it would as wee haue experience, haue required the space of many yeares, although all the best helps and furtherances, which God hath set in nature, bee graunted for the cherishing of trees: and manie daies and weekes, for the cherishing vp of the least hearbe to the naturall perfection therof) O how wonderfull a peece of work is this also? And the rather, because as yet, no raine, nor so much as a mist had fallen vpon the earth: neither was ther any man to till it, as it is expreslie noted. Genes: chapt: 2. verses 5. 6. Neither was ther any Sunne, or Sun-shine, to vegetate and warme them, &c.

Neuertheles, in one day, and as it were at one instant, was the Garden of Eden, (that is, the most pleasant and excellent garden, wherein ~~Adam~~ was placed, so soone as hee was created) from the verie beginning adorned with all trees and herbs, pleasant for sight, and wholsome for meat: in the which also, was the tree of life, &c: as it followeth in the same chapt, verses 8.9.10. &c: with goodly fresh-water springs, & riuers, &c. Ps: 104.10. and with the siluer vaines of the earth, Iob: 28. 1. 2. &c. All therfore doth wonderously preach the glorie of God. Yea, let vs but lay together, and consider a few of the least seeds of things, if euer wee haue marked them, with the interchangeable varietie of them, in forme, in colour, &c: but specially if we weigh in our mindes, the qualities and vertues of them: and of the fruites of trees, &c: yea, but in one nation; yea but of one kind in one litle countrey, yea but as they are now in the decayed withering estate of the world: who is able? and who hath the wisedome throughly to obserue the wonder of Gods creation in these things? And finally, (who duelie considering the power and goodnes of God, in this part of his creation) can otherwise choose, but he must needs acknowledge it to be an easie thing with the Lord, to turne the greatest dearth that can be, into the greatest plentie, &c: were it not, that our sinnes, (doe as it were) strengthen Gods iustice, to the weakening of his mercie towards vs, although in it selfe, ther is no weakenes. Read Psal: 107.33. 34. 35. Mal: chapt: 3. 10.

WHerfore, ſetting it downe with our ſelues, to indeuor more and more, to ponder the goodnes of God, in this third fruitefull dayes worke of the Lord: Let vs proceede to the conſideration of the fourth day, the which was that, which wee call the Wedenſday.

Queſtion. In what wordes doth the Prophet Moſes commende the workes thereof vnto vs?

Anſwere. It foloweth from the beginning of the 14. verſe, to the end of the 19. In theſe words:

14 Afterward God ſaid: Let there be lights in the Firmament of the heauen, (to wit, aboue the clowdes) to ſeperate the daye from the night: and let them bee for ſignes, both for the ſeaſons, (to wit, of the yeare) and alſo for dayes, and yeares themſelues.

15 Yea let them be for lights in the firmament of the heauen, to giue light vpon the earth: and it was ſo.

16 Thus (as Moſes ſaith) God made two great lights: the greater light to rule the day, and the leſſer light to rule the night: and (he made alſo) the Starres.

17 And God ſet them in the firmament of the heauen, to ſhine vpon the earth.

18 And to rule the Day and the Night, and to ſeperate betwixte the Light and the Darkenes: and God ſaw that it was good.

19 So the euening and the morning were the fourth day.

Explication and prooſe. The fourth dayes worke, is likewiſe a gratious and glorious work of God. For notwithſtanding God had ſhewed before; that hee ſtood in neede of no inſtruments to giue light, and to make the diſtinction, betwixt the day and the night: for he had done this alreadie, before ther was any Sunne or Moone, or any one Starre: yet for the beautifying of his work, and for a further help and comfort to man, for ſuch ſingular good vſes, as Moſes rehearſeth, both naturall and ciuill: to wit, that they might be, as it were a generall clocke or dyall of time, to determine the yeares and paſſages thereof, and euery ſeaſon of the yeare; Sommer and Winter, ſeede time and harueſt, yea and the dayes and nights of the yeare, eyther ſhorter or longer, as the Sunne ſhould come nearer, or goe further from the Equinoctiall point, &c: and for the hiſtoricall memoriall of things, in reſpect both of ciuill pollicie, and alſo of Religion: therefore it pleaſed the Lord to create this his excellent creature of the Sunne. The like vſe is of the Moone for the nights of the moneths. The Starres alſo, are both for ſingular ornament, and for light in the night, and for aſsiſtance to that gouernment which God hath honoured the Sunne and the Moone withall. Read Iob: chap: 9. verſe 9. God maketh (the Starres) Arcturus, Orion, and Pleiades, and thoſe alſo of the Climate of the South.

And chapt: 38. verſes 31. 32. 33. Canſt thou reſtraine the pleaſures of the Pleiades? that is, the pleaſant ſpring which cometh with them. Or canſt thou looſen the bandes of Orion? a ſtarre which vſeth to come with colde and tempeſt. Canſt thou bring forth Mazzaroth in their time? that is, the ſtarres of the South. Canſt thou guide Arcturus with his ſonnes? that is, the Northerne ſtarres. Knoweſt thou the courſe of the heauens &c? And Amos chapt: 5. verſe 8. God maketh Pleiades and Orion: that is, hee ordereth them, according as at the firſt hee made them, and appointed them their courſes. And Pſalme 147. 4. God alone counteth the number of the ſtarres, and calleth them all by their names. They are vnto vs innumerable. Geneſ: 15. 5. God hath placed them all in their ſeates, and hee continueth them as his ſeruants therein, according to the moſt holie and Diuine pleaſure of his owne will. Pſalm: 119. verſes. 89. 90. 91.

The Sunne and the Moone are iuſtly called the greater lights, becauſe they are ſo vnto vs, both to ſight, and alſo to vſe. And therfore let Aſtronomers curiouſlie diſpute of the greatnes of any ſtarre aboue theſe: wee will reſt in this holie Philoſophie, which Moſes teacheth vs, as moſt fit both to expreſſe vnto vs the great goodnes and mercie of God, and alſo to ſtirre vs vp, to be thankfull vnto him for the ſame.

Thus then, this fourth dayes worke is very glorious, and therefore iuſtly is the Lord to be glorified and praiſed of vs therin: according to the profeſsion and practise of the Church of God. Psalme 8. 3. 4. and Psalm: 19. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

The Ground and meaning.

LEt vs nowe proceede to the workes of the fifte daye, as the Lord created them.

Question Which are they?

Answere. The Prophet Moses sheweth which they were, from the beginning of the 20. verse, to the ende of the 23. as it followeth in our Text thus:

20 Afterward God said, Let the waters bring forth in aboundance, euery creeping thing, that hath life (or as we may reade, euery liuing creature that creepeth) and let the fowles flie aboue the earth, toward the face of the firmament of heauen. To wit, that parte of the firmament of heauen, which is vnder the clowdes next to vs.

21 Thus (saith Moses,) God created the great Whales, & all liuing creatures that creepe, the which the waters brought forth in aboundance according to their kindes, and all feathered fowles according to their kindes: and God saw that it was good.

Heb: Fowles that haue wings.

22 And God blessed them, saying. Bring forth fruite and multiplie, and fill yee the waters in the Seas, and let the fowles multiplie in the earth.

23 So the euening and the morning were the fifte day.

Explicatiõ & proofe. This fifte daye, was that which according to the custome among vs, is called Thursday. In it (as the Prophet Moses, by the Spirit of God, reporteth) were twoo verie mightie and gratious workes of Gods Creation perfected.

The first was the creation of the Fishes of the Sea, in their great and vnknowen varietie, from the huge Whale to the little minnome: that is, from the greatest to the least of them, in their seuerall kindes.

Of the which it is thus written, to the celebration of the gift of God in this respect: Psalm: 104. 24. 25. 26. O Lord, howe manifold are thy workes! in wisedome hast thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches, (or as the Hebrew worde Quinianécha signifieth, of that which is thy possession.) So is the Sea great and wide: for therein are thinges creeping innumerable, both small beasts and great. There goe the Shippes, yea the Leuiathan (that is, the great Whale-fishe or Balæna, so called in the Hebrew language,) whom thou hast made to playe therein. All these wayte vpon thee.

Of the stately description of the Whale-fishe, read (to the glorifying of the name of God,) how God himselfe hath set it downe in the 40. chapter of the booke of Iob, from the 20. verse: and in the 41. chapter from the beginning, to the ende of the same.

And as the salte water of the Sea, is replenished with an vnknowne varietie, (as was saide) the which, the strangenes of some fishes nowe and then taken, doth by experience confirme: so is the freshe water also, in euerie seuerall riuer, aswell as in Lakes and Ponds, &c: with such diuers sortes, according to the diuersities of Nations and Countries, that no one countrie fisher-men can knowe them all.

These are called creeping things, by a generall name: as differing from such creatures, as haue feete to mooue themselues withall.

This first parte of Gods creation, on this fifte day, beeing well considered of vs: ought to prouoke vs, to blesse and praise our most gratious God, so often as wee are partakers of these kindes of his creatures: which the Sea, and all other waters, doe very plentifully yeelde vs, for a great part of our food and nourishment.

And likewise it ought to stirre vs vp to praise the Lorde, for that hee did not onelie at the first, make them in their full perfection, according to their kindes, to declare his Almightie power: but also for that hee doth continue & multiplie them, by their naturall propagation and increase, to this day, according to the bountifulnes of his goodnes and mercie.

The seconde parte of Gods mightie and gratious Creation on this fifte day, were the Fowles of the ayre, in the like manifold, and exceeding great varietie of their kindes, aboue all that any man can knowe, or heare of, from euery parte of the worlde: whether wee looke to the wilde fowles, or to those that be of the more tame kinde. For these therefore, are wee likewise, and all mankinde, to be aboundantly thankfull to the Lord our God, as for a great part of our sustenance, not onely for necessitie, but also for delight. And also for that sweete melodie, that manie of them make vs, by their continuall praising of the Lorde in their kindes. Likewise when wee beholde the beautie of their goodly colours, besides their daintinesse for foode, &c. In which respectes, (as wee reade in the 104. Psalme, verse 12.) the sweet singing Psalmist praiseth the Lorde. And namelie for this, that (according to this parte of his creation) the fowles of the heauen, dwell by the cleare running springes of the valleyes, and sing among the branches of the trees: where also they make their nests and breede, &c.

Beleefe in God the Father maker of heauen & earth.

If anie shall aske, of what matter the Fishes, and the Fowles were made? Touching the fowles of heauen, Moses himselfe telleth vs expreslie, that God formed them of the earth, Genes: 2. 19. The Lord God formed of the earth euerie fowle of the heauen. The same may wee iustlie holde, concerning the creation of the fishes of the Sea, & of all in other waters. Neither doth any thing hinder, why we may not conceiue in our mindes, that they were made of the watrie slime, or mudde of the earth: as being more watrie and aierie creatures then the rest.

These two sorts of creatures, were made together, in one, and the same day; because they agree something in more neare proportion of nature, the one, liuing altogether in the water, the other, in a great parte vpon the water: and all of them delighting greatlie to be by the water. And besides, the ayre and the water, are in themselues of a very neare affinitie or kindred, as wee may say.

Finallie, so farre as it might best be so ordered, God in his Wisedome making the most heauenlie creatures first: to wit, the Regions of the heauens themselues, and their hostes, the Sunne, the Moone, and the Starres: he proceedeth to the making of the aierie and watrie creatures that haue life, before hee maketh the liuing creatures of the earth.

LEt this for the present suffice, concerning the fifte dayes worke. And let vs come to the good and gratious workes of God in the sixte day: which answereth to that which wee vsuallie terme by the name of Friday. The works of this sixt day, the last of the creation, were of two sorts. The former were all earthly liuing creatures, except mankinde. The latter, and the same also the very last of the creation, were mankinde themselues.

Question. First therfore, how doth the Prophet Moses reporte the creation of the former sorte of the liuing creatures: which are in some speciall respect, the most naturall, and as it were the domesticall, and houshold creatures of the earth?

Answere. This parte of Gods creation, is contained in the 24. and 25. verses, where Moses writeth thus:

24 Moreouer God said: Let the earth bring forth the liuing thing, according to the kinde thereof, cattell, and creeping things. And beastes of the earth, according to their kindes: and it was so.

25 For God made the beast of the earth according to his kinde, and the cattell according to his kinde, and euery creeping thing of the earth, according to his kinde: and God saw that it was good.

Explication and proofe. In this first parte of the last dayes creation, there are three sortes of Gods works rehearsed vnto vs. The first is of those liuing creatures, which are called Cattell (in the Hebrewe language Behemah) a worde which is applied, to note those kindes of brute beastes, which are commonlie the more tractable, and tame among other.

The Ground and meaning.

Of the which it is said in the 4. Commandement: Then and thy cattell shall rest. And in the holie Prouerb, A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast. chapt: 12. 10. The which word in a little differing forme, is by a certaine excellencie of speache, vsed to signifie the Elephant, or some other creature, of speciall bignesse, and stature, among earthly creatures: such as the Whale is among the watrie ones, as wee reade Iob: chapt: 40. verse 10. Beholde nowe Behemoth (saith the Lorde to Iob) whom I made with thee, which eateth grasse as an Oxe. Beholde now his strength is in his lanes, &c. Where, followeth likewise a statelie discription of him: as afterwardes another of the Whale-fishe, &c. But not onely the greater were created as on this day, but the lesser also, yea, euen the least of all: from the Elephant to the Ante, as a man may say.

The second sort of the liuing creatures, created in this first part of the creation of the sixt day, were all creeping things: that is, such as vpon the land do mooue without the naturall help of feete, gliding as it were vpon the ground, with their bodies lying along vpon the same. Of the which, are those that are called more properlie, by the name of Serpents in the Latine tongue, by reason of their creeping: and also all kindes of other such like wormes.

Concerning the least, and vilest, and euen the most hurtfull among them, (as they be nowe) it is specially to be obserued, that they were all good by creation: according to that honourable testimonie, which the Lorde our God giueth of them.

Neuertheles, such things as come of putrefaction, as maggates, &c. though they be the creatures of God, yet they come into the worlde through sinne, as punishments thereof: and are not of naturall and kindely creation. They are created for punishment, as a fruite of mans sinne, and corruption: and not for comfort or reliefe, as any fruite of Gods mercie, as all things were, before the fall.

The third sorte of liuing creatures, such as liue vpon the earth, and are the last sorte of the first parte of the creation of the sixte daye: they were those that are called the beasts of the earth, according to their kindes.

Whereby is meant all kinde of Beasts, which are more wilde and sauadge then the other be. Such as are Lions, Beares, Wolues, &c: the rauenous hurtfulnes wherof (specially against mankinde whom God made their ruler) it came in with mans own sin against God; wherby he hath bene most hurtfull to himselfe, as wee shall haue further occasion to obserue afterward.

For by creation they were all good, and easilie subiect to the gouernment of man, according to the appointment of God himselfe: as it followeth, concerning the second parte of the creation of this sixte dayes worke, the Historicall reporte wherof, wee are now to consider of.

Question. WHich are the wordes of the Prophet Moses, wherein hee reporteth the same?

Answere. They are these which followe, as they are written in the first Chapter of Genesis, from the 26. verse, to the end of the Chapter.

26 Furthermore (saith Moses) God said, Let us make man in our image, according to our likenes, and let them rule ouer the fishe of the Sea, and ouer the fowle of the heauen, and ouer the beasts, and ouer all the earth, and ouer euery creeping thing, that creepeth vpon the earth.

27 Thus God created the man in his image, euen in the image of God created hee him: male and female created hee them.

28 Moreouer God blessed them, and God said to them, Bring forth fruite, and multiplie, fill the earth, and subdue it: and rule ouer the fish of the Sea, and ouer the fowle of the heauen, and ouer euery beast that mooueth vpon the earth.

29 God saide also, beholde, I haue giuen vnto you euerie hearbe bearing seede, which is vppon all the earth, and euery tree wherein there is the fruite of a tree bearing seede: they shall be to you for foode.

Beléefe in God the Father maker of heauen & earth.

The groũd and meaning.

30 Likewise to euery beast of the earth, and to euery fowle of the heauen, and to euerie thing that mooueth vppon the earth, in the which is a liuing soule, I haue giuen euery greene herb for foode: and it was so.

31 Then God looked vppon euerie thing that hee had made, and loe all was very good. And the euening and the morning were the sixte daye.

In this latter parte, of this last dayes worke of the creation: there are sundrie things, worthie our speciall obseruation, as was somewhat at large declared in the opening of it. The same things are nowe to be called againe to our remembrance.

Question. Which are they?

Answere. First, the holie Prophet sheweth the manner of the Lordes proceeding to this last parte of his worke, in the creation of mankinde: to be much differing from the course which hee tooke in the creating of all other his workes before.

Secondly, he describeth the excellencie of the worke it selfe.

Thirdlie, the excellent estate and dignitie, whereunto the Lord aduanced the same his excellent worke.

Fourthlie, the reason is, as it were insinuated, why the Lord made mankinde, after that hee had made all the rest of his creatures.

Finallie, wee haue a generall commendation of all the workes of Gods creation: not onely from Moses, but euen from the most holie Testimonie also, and diuine approbation of Almightie God himselfe.

These are things worthie our speciall obseruation indeede: according as they are contained in our Texte. Let vs therefore, as briefely as wee can renewe the consideration of them againe.

Question. AND first, concerning the first point: What was the differing manner of Gods proceeding to the creation of mankinde, otherwise then hee created the rest?

Answere. God doth not heerein forthwith saye, Let the earth bring forth mankinde, as hee had said before, Let ther be a light, and so forth in the rest: but hee doth as it were take aduise and counsell with himselfe, before the action, saying: Let vs make Man. And so forth, as it followeth in our Texte.

Question. Seeing God is but one onely God: why doth hee speake thus? Let vs make Man.

Answere. GOD beeing one onely in Nature, is neuerthelesse three distinct Persons, the FATHER the SONNE, and the HOLYGHOST, (as was seene at large before) who consent all in one, in the workes of creation, and in all things else, as wee haue likewise seene rehearsed.

Question. But why should God, who knoweth all his workes, and his whole counsell and purpose most perfectlie from all eternitie: seeme to enter into any consultation at all about any of his workes?

Answere. The wordes of consultation, are figuratiuely applyed to God, in waye of a similitude or comparison onely, taken from the vse of men: who when they goe about anie speciall worke, doe first of all, enter into earnest deliberation about the same.

Explication and proofe. It is true, and wee haue the like kinde of consultation: though to a contrarie purpose, of a great confusion and destruction. As Genes: chapt: 11. 6. 7. Beholde (saith the Lord) the people is one, &c. Come let vs goe downe, and ther confound their language, &c. And chap: 18. 20 21. I will goe downe and see whether they haue done altogether according to that crie which is come vnto me: and if not that I may knowe. &c.

By this kinde of speeche therefore, the Lord doth most plainely and familiarly giue to vnderstand (as was obserued in the second place) that he would haue the making of mankinde, to be accounted a speciall worke of his creation.

Question. BVt why should this bee so accounted: insomuch as Man was made of the earth, as well as other earthlie creatures were?

It is

Beleefe in God the Father, maker of heauen & earth.

The Ground and meaning.

Answere.

It is so much the rather to be accounted an excellent worke of God: because he made man so excellent a creature, of so base and vile a matter.

Here therefore, for the clearing of this point; Let vs more particularly call to minde, after what sort God created mankind. How doth the Prophet Moses report that vnto vs?

Question.

Answere.

God made the bodie of man of the dust of the earth, moulding it (as it were moyst loame, or claie) into that outward forme and shape which wee all beare: God turning (or as we may say, transubstantiating) it into flesh, blood and bone. Whereupon, the first man, from the Hebrew word (Adamah, which signifieth a red kinde of earth) is called Adam. And after the bodie was thus framed and made, God breathed into it the breath of life: and so made man, of senselesse and dead flesh, a liuing and reasonable soule.

Hee made woman of the ribbe of man, and endued her also with a like liuing and reasonable soule like vnto him; yea as it were another (as neere as might be) the verie same, a helper euery way most meet and commodious for him. Whom, Adam called first Isha, of the Hebrew word (Ish) which signifieth man: like as we in our language, by a likenes of sound, may seeme to call her woman, as it were of man, or with man, because shee was taken out of man, and is one man with him. And afterward Adam called her (Heuah) comforting himselfe in hope, that notwithstanding his great and grieuous sinne, God would of his free grace and mercie, let her liue to be a mother of the liuing; answerable to the meaning of the same Hebrew word.

So indeed Moses reporteth the true Historie of the creation of man, Gen: chapter 2. verse 7. And of woman in the same chapter, verses 18, 21, 22, 23, where hee setteth downe, how the Lord tooke a rib from Adam, of the which hee made woman: namely, after that hee had caused an heauy sleepe to fall vpon him, and likewise after that he had closed vp the flesh in stead of the bone, which GOD tooke from him. Adam therefore, acknowledgeth her to be bone of his bone, and flesh of his flesh: and thereupon (as was answered) giueth her the first name Isha, of Ish, as we say woman of man; because as was said euen now, shee was taken out of man. And for the second name, reade Chapter 3. 20:

And thus, (as the Apostle Paul saith, from the faithfull testimonie of Moses) Adam was first formed, and then Eue. 1. Tim: 2. 13. Either part of which worke of God, must needs be wonderfull to all but prophane Infidels. As first, to see a lumpe of earth chaunged from the naturall substance, to be flesh, yea and blood and bone; framed together by ioynts, knit by sinewes, ouerspread with vaines and stringes as with net-worke, to carry the vitall blood to euery part of the bodie: to feele such a fire kindled in the stomacke, the liuer and lightes, and kidneies, to haue their seuerall offices assigned them; the heart to be made the seate of life and affection, the braine of vnderstanding and memorie, the eye to haue such an excellent facultie to see, the eare to heare, &c.

Who of any capacitie, and of the least good disposition, can consider these things; but hee must needs wonder at them, as being more then a world of the wisedome, and power, and goodnes of the Lorde, in the making of this his little admirable world, from a rude peece of earth: and afterward, to doe as much againe with a little bone? This verily doth infinitely surpasse all mans power and skill.

Our neglect of glorifying God for this his wonderfull wisedome & goodnes in our exquisite creation, is the iust cause why God sendeth so great distemper & so manifold diseases and disquietments in soule and bodie, in eyes, eares, hands, feete, heart and all: as he doth oftentimes. Yea, it is the cause of the decay of all at the last, touching this life: Eccles: ch. 12. 1. 2. 3. &c.

Question.

But why did the Lord proceed in this order to make man first, and afterwards to make the woman?

That he might thereby shewe it to be his pleasure, that man should haue authoritie aboue the woman: and yet so, as euery mans wife should be as a companion and not as a seruant or drudge to her husband. Answere.

So indeed it is euident, in that place of Tim: Reade also to this purpose, that which the same Apostle writeth, 1. Cor: 11. 7. 8. 9. where the authoritie of man ouer the woman, is notably qualified in the 11. & 12. verses of the same chapter. Reade also chap: 14. 34. 35. And here we come now to a fewe such other points, belonging to this historie of the creation of mankinde: hoping that we shall not herein be curious, or ouer inquisitiue: seeing that the knowledge thereof, serueth greatly to the glorifying of God in this behalfe. I do therefore aske further, Why did God make the bodie of man, of so base a matter as is the dust of the earth? Explicatiō and proofe. Question.

Hereby God would teach both the first man and woman, and vs, and all their posteritie: to humble our selues, vnder the mightie and glorious hand of our Creator. Answere.

This is euident, from that which followeth by and by after the fall. For the Lord looking herevnto, telleth Adam that he was dust: and that hee should return to dust againe. Gen: 3. 19. Read also Ps: 90. 3. Isai: 45. 9 & Ier. 18. 6. For vnto this ground of our creation out of the earth, hath the Lord a respect, in the similitude of the Potter, in those places. Many say, that the Peacock garnished with goodly feathers, and therewith aduancing himselfe; yet so soone as he looketh vpon his black feete, letteth downe all his brauerie againe. Howsouer it is with the Peacocke, it ought certainly to humble man, euen in his greatest excellencie, when hee duly considereth that his originall is from the earth: and that now by reason of his sinne, he must to the earth againe. And in this respect, the excellent vertue of humilitie seemeth (from the latin word humus, which signifieth the grounde or earth) to haue borrowed the name whereby it is named among vs. But that we may proceed; Why was the woman made of the ribbe of man? Explicatiō & proofe. Question.

To the end, that both they, and we, and all their posteritie, knowing our selues to be in a most neere coniunction of one and the same nature: might from time to time, liue together, in a most sweete and amiable fellowship and societie, euery one with his companion and neighbour. Answere.

This is that which the Apostle Paul doth plainly teach vs. Act: chap: 17. 26. 27. And further also, that which hee maketh a ground of the generall dutie of all mankind, euen truly to acknowledge and worship the Lord our God together, according as he hath made vs of one blood, &c. But specially this consideration bindeth man and wife, to a singular kinde of amitie and friendship betweene themselues, aboue any other: according to that we read, Ephe: 5. 22. 23. 24, 25. &c. Also, according as Moses writeth, that God built woman out of man: taking the ribbe of man, as being a most fit rafter to build withall; and so made them both one house, and a perfect building, as it were. Explicatiō & proofe.

But was it not painfull to Adam, to haue his ribbe taken from him? Question.

No, for (as was said before) God caused a verie heauie sleepe to fall vpon him, while he tooke it out of him. Answere.

So indeed Moses certifieth vs, in the 21. verse of the 2. chap: of Genesis. But why was this? Question.

Adam had yet no sinne: and therefore the Lord would laie no paine or griefe vpon him. For that is indeed a part of the stipend and wages of sinne. Answere.

It is true. For not only death is the wages of sinne, (specially eternall death, which is as the last pay; Rom: 6. 23.) but also all whatsoeuer is a forerunner and causer of the naturall death. And therfore this is reckoned to the man, a part of that curse which he brought into the world by his sinne, that hee should eate his bread in the sweate of his face: and to the woman, that shee should trauell and bring forth children in sorrow and paine. Explicatiō & proofe.

You answered a while since, that God in making man, created the bodie first, without all life or sense, and after that, inspired a liuing soule into it; but

Beliefe in God the Father maker of heaue and earth.

The Ground & meaning.

but that as touching all other liuing creatures, hee made them liuing from the first instant of their creation.

Question. Can you yeeld any reason, why the Lord should do thus?

Answere. There is no doubt but God would hereby declare, that the nature of the soules of mankinde, are greatly differing from the nature of their bodies: yea and also, euen from the naturall life of all other earthly creatures.

Question. How is that?

Answere. The soule of mankinde, is a spirituall and immortall substance, not hauing the originall from the earth, as the bodie hath: but more immediatly from the author of life, euen from the Lord God himselfe, whose glorious Image it beareth.

This is very euident from the Text it selfe, and it agreeth as well to woman, as to man: for the one, as well as the other, is said to be created in the Image of God. And herein especially, consisteth the excellency of this speciall worke of Gods creation, according to that which was said in the Answere: and for the same cause to be a thing worthie of our speciall obseruation.

LEt vs therefore in the third place, consider as diligently as we can, concerning this point.

Question. What was this Image or likenes of God, in the which man and woman were created? Was it in respect of their outward comelines, or bodily shape?

Answere. Nothing lesse. For as we haue already learned, God is an infinite and incomprehensible Spirit, and hath no bodily shape at all.

Question. Wherein doth it consist then?

Answere. It standeth in the spirituall nature and immortalitie of the soule, in the soundnes of the wil, eudome, and vnderstanding of the minde, in the pure loue of the will and affection of the heart: and in true righteousnes and holines of life conformable to the minde and will, and after the example of God himselfe, in the imitation of his diuine vertues.

Yea, it standeth in that honourable estate, wherein God created and set the whole humane nature: euen so farre aboue all other earthly creatures, that they are but a little inferiour to the holy Angels.

Explication and proofe. Reade for the proofe of this, Psal: 8. 5. Hebr: 2. 9. And Ephes: 4. 24. And Coloss: 3. 10. For God renueth vs being corrupted, to that integritie wherein hee had at the first created vs.

Wherefore concerning the Image of God, which man beareth, let it be obserued: that as God is a Spirit, so is the soule, though finite. As God is immortall, so is the soule: but not as hauing the fountaine of life in it selfe, as God hath. The soule is wise, &c. but not infinite in wisedome, &c. as God is. This likenes therfore, though it be a true likenes to God in many things, as touching the nature or kinde of them; yet it admitteth an infinite dissimilitude in the degree and measure of all things.

And touching the soule, let it be further noted, that it is of so excellent a creation, that it (subsisting in it selfe, by the gift of God) so giueth life, moouing and sense to the bodie; that though the bodie die, yet cannot the soule die: but in it selfe (howsoeuer by the naturall death seperated from the bodie) yet liueth, vnderstandeth, and reteineth affection, either of ioy and desire in the godly, or of griefe and feare in the wicked, though without the bodie: euen vntill the reuniting of soule and bodie againe, thenceforth so to continue for euer and euer; although we cannot now conceiue the manner how. So wonderfull is the creation of God in this his creature.

Now verily (touching this first creation of mankinde) if God had made vs onely a little superiour in dignitie to the other creatures of the earth, wee could not but haue acknowledged it for a great mercie: but in that hee hath made vs by creation, onely a little inferiour to the heauenly Angels: the bountie of his goodnes, is euen herein infinitely aboue all that we can conceiue.

Beleefe in God the Father, maker of heauen & earth.

The ground and meaning.

Here therefore, without any further discourse, we may see (according to the third thing worthie to be obserued in the creation of mankind) that God did aduance them to a verie high and excellent estate of honour and dignitie. And it is particularly euident in this, that the Lord placed them in the most fruitfull and pleasant place of the whole earth, as it were in a most fine and delicate Orchyard and Garden: and gaue them also therewithall, the soueraignetie ouer all the foules of the heauen, ouer the fishes of the Sea, and ouer the beasts of the Earth; as we reade, how God from the beginning both purposed and also performed to authorise them therevnto, not onely in the Text of the 1. chap: of Genesis, alreadie rehearsed: but also in the 2. cha: verse 8. &c. A portion of the which authoritie, hee hath continued to mankinde for Christes sake, euen after the fall: and reuiued it againe after Noahs flood; as we reade, Gen: 8. 20. &c. and chap: 9. 1. 2. &c. And as we haue experience euen to this day.

Yet note, that all that is said of the excellencie of mans creation, is to be referred onely to the glorifying of God: and in no wise to puffe vp man in any proud conceit of himselfe. For alas, he did through his pride, loose all his dignitie by and by.

Question.

To conclude this third obseruation, concerning the excellent estate & dignitie whereunto God aduanced mankinde: Why did he at the first, create only one man out of the earth, and one woman out of his side?

Answere

He did it, to the end he might institute and giue a lively example, of that matrimoniall estate, whereby onely, the Lord required a holy propagation of mankinde, in a more honourable manner, then any other creatures are multiplied and increased.

So indeed it is declared to vs, by the Prophet Malachie, chap: 2. 15. and by our Sauiour Christ, Matth: 19. 4. 5. 6.

Question.

NOw let vs come to the fourth obseruation, touching the creation of the first man and woman, in that they were created the last of the creatures of God: What may be the reason of that?

Answere.

Herein, God doth really vtter and declare, his most bountifull fauour and good will toward mankinde: in that he would not create them, vntill he had made all other his creatures, and so had prepared as it were a princely palace, most stately and delightfully furnished for them.

Explication and proofe.

It is verie true. For in so much as we account it a testimonie of singular loue among our selues: when a naturall father shall build his sonne a house, and furnish it with all things before hand, for his vse and comfort, against the time that hee is to keepe house. Infinitely much more great was the bountie of God, toward mankind, in the first creation.

This (as was answered) is as it were insinuated; yea more then insinuated: in that God telleth Adam, that hee had prouided him all meete foode before hee had made him. Yea, and for all other creatures also: so that Adam might well be without care, either for himselfe, or for them. Gen: 1. 29. 30. as was rehearsed before. And specially, the loue of God appeared, in that hee had appointed one tree aboue all the rest, to be a Sacrament and assurance of euerlasting life, and happines to mankind, if they would continue in faithfull obedience vnto him. Gen: chap. 2. 9.

THe last obseruation onely, is now behind: the which concerneth not only the commendation of Gods worke in the making of mankind: but also a generall commendation, (and as it were a ratification) of all the workes of God; from the greatest to the least, and from the last, to the first of them. To wit, that all were in their kindes created verie good, euery one in themselues of sound constitution, and most apt to their severall endes and vses appointed of God; and all of them in a perfect sympathie and consent, for the vniforme conseruation of the whole world.

Why

The Grand and meaning,

Beliefe in God the Father maker of heauen and earth.

Why is this generall commendation, or ratification, thus set downe: yea, why is it so often and so particularly set downe, euen sixe times before: that God saw that euery part of his creation was good?

Question. This is set downe to diuers very notable ends and purposes.

Answere. Which are they?

First, that the diuine nature of GOD himselfe, might bee discerned, euen by the nature and qualitie of his workes: to witte, that it is infinitely and moste perfectly good; in that no euill thing, but all onely goodnesse, proceedeth from the same.

Secondly, that mankinde might from the beginning, be aduertised, how infinitely they were bound vnto God, not onely for their owne creation in a speciall degree of goodnesse and honour: but also; for that all other creatures were not onely created good in their owne nature, but likewise very good, commodious, and comfortable for mans vse; and the same also in so great varietie, as nothing might be desired or wished more.

Thirdly, that it might for euer bee knowne to all posteritie, that man may iustly thanke himselfe (as wee vse to speake) for all want of goodnesse, and for euery euill excesse: and for whatsoeuer troublesome distemper, or disorder, which is come into the world, or vpon himselfe. That is to say, he is to thanke himselfe onely for euery euill of punishment; euen because he himselfe, of all the creatures of this world, had first made himselfe most euill and wicked, through the most contagious euill of his transgression and sinne.

Finally, the commendation of the goodnes of the workes of Gods most mightie and gracious creation, being often repeated (that is sixe times more particularly, and last of all generally) it ought to bee vnto vs, as a strong threefold cord, yea euen of triple twine, to holde vs from all thinking or speaking any euill of the least of them: and from all murmuring against God, what want, discommoditie or annoyance soeuer wee either see or feele, or may at any time expect and feare. And on the contrarie, to take and fasten the whole blame thereof vpon our selues alone.

Explicatio and proofe. These indeede are notable good endes and purposes, why the commendation of the workes of God, should be so often repeated, and the rather euer since the fal of mankind: by meanes wherof, all men grew to be ouer light and forgetfull, yea very malignant esteemers both of the Lord God himselfe, and also of all his blessed workes.

But now, that we may induce our selues to be of better mindes; let vs consider first, of that which our Sauiour Christ testifieth in the Gospell, as we haue seene before, that God onely is good. And of that we read in the Ep: of Iames chap: 1. verse 13. Let no man say when he is tempted (that is, when he is moued and prouoked to any wickednes) I am tempted of of God: for God cannot be tempted with euill, neither doth he tempt any man. But contrariwise, as it followeth, verse 17. Euery good giuing, and euery perfit gift is from aboue, and commeth downe from the Father of lights, with whom is no variablenesse, neither shadowing by turning. And Psal: 52. 1. The louing kindnes of God indureth daily.

Secondly, it must needes be confessed, that although God had created and set mankinde downe a great deale lower: and though, hee (hauing giuen them reason to shift for themselues) had thought good to exercise them with the feare of many dangers, as our condition is now; yet had hee dealt verie graciously. But seeing God vouchsafed mankinde not onely a chiefe dignitie aboue other creatures, but also made them very cōmodious, and willingly seruiceable vnto them: ô how greatly doth this amplifie the largenesse of his goodnesse and mercy! So that iustly may wee wonder at his goodnesse, according to that wee reade, Psalm: 8. and Psalm: 104. How manifolde are thy workes! &c. According also to that wee reade, Psalm: 31. 19. and Zach: 9. 17. O how great is thy goodnesse!

Beliefe in God the Father maker of heauen and earth.

The Ground & meaning

Thirdly, for the clearing of God from all euill, or cause of euill in any of his creatures, specially to the hurt and annoyance of mankinde; let vs consider the gracious warning, which the Lord himselfe gaue to Adam, euen from the very beginning; to the ende hee might preuent the danger of all euill: Gen:2.17. It is manifest therefore, that man not obseruing duly that gracious warning which God gaue him; pulled all euill vpon himselfe, and all his posteritie, by his transgression: and had them not imposed vpon him by creation. For as touching sickneſſe, death, and Hell, &c. they come in all by mans sinne, and are not (to speake properly and originally) creatures of Gods making. They are rather the decay, defacing, and destruction of his creation, so farre as the creature it selfe could weaken, deface, and destroy the worke of God.

Hell indeede, the place now appointed for the torment of the wicked, may be said truly to haue beene created of God, when he created and distinguished all places: but it was not by creation Hell, that is a place of present torment. The Diuels sinne, and mans sinne, caused that name and vse vnto it. And concerning sicknes, and death, and the rest: that they came in all by sinne, reade Rom:5.12. and chap:6.23. Let vs consider it also from that we read, Hos.2.21.22. and Iob:5.23. So then, this is to be held alwaies for a firme principle: God made man righteous, but they haue sought to themselues many inuentions. Eccles. chap:7.31. All euill is come vpon man, from man himselfe. Let no man therefore, be so wickedly bould, as to frame any the least cauill against any of the workes of Gods creation. Nay on the contrarie, let vs (for a most iust and well beseeming conclusion) take the whole blame of all euill to our selues: and groane vnder the burthen of our sinnes, as the true and proper cause thereof, according to the last branch of the answere.

And thus, through the goodnes of God, wee haue renewed the remembrance of the holy doctrine, concerning the workes of Gods most wise, mightie, and gracious creation. The excellent perfection whereof, God hath most solemnly confirmed, by his sanctifying of the seuenth day: wherein he ceased from any further worke of creation, to the end that mankinde might worship God their Creator, in the celebration of the same his diuine wisedome, power and goodnes, which are most perfectly manifested thereby.

The which holy doctrine (according to the most faithfull and true historie thereof) euery Christian must beleeue: or else, hee cannot rightly beleeue in God the Father almightie, maker of heauen and earth, as the Articles of our beliefe teach vs to doe.

And now touching the manifestation of the wisedome, and power, and goodnes of God in them; it is euident to the faith of euery true beleeuer: while, according to the instruction of the holy Scriptures, he pondreth in his minde, both the manner, and also the order, which God tooke, in performing the workes of his Creation.

And first, concerning the manner: if wee consider, how the Lord (beginning in darkenes, deformitie, and confusion, as touching the great world: and in basenes, and deadnes, when he created man the little world) doth neuertheles, perfectly and at an instant cause light to shine out of darkenes, and in a short space of time turneth deformitie to beautie, vacancie and voidenes to all sufficient furniture and plentie, deadnes to life, discomfort to comfort, and basenes to glorie (so that according to this begtnning of the works of God, the cõmon prouerbe might well take beginning, in that wee commonly say: A hard or vncomfortable beginning, maketh a good ending) thus I say, the manner of the creation manifesteth the wisedome, power, and goodnes of God.

The like will be euident, if we shall well obserue the order which God taketh in the disposing of his workes. For he createth his spirituall and inuisible creatures in heauen, before the visible and bodily vpon the earth: the simple elements, before compounded bodies: the fierie region, before the aierie: he

Beliefe in God the Father, maker of heauen & earth.

The Ground and meaning.

cleareth the lower region of the aier, before hee emptieth and cleareth the earth from the waters thereof: he maketh grasse for cattel, before he maketh cattell themselues: the foules of the aier and fishes of the Sea, before the beasts of the earth: finally all other creatures before he made mankind, insomuch as it pleased God to make all things for the comfort of man, that so by him, they might be to the glorie of his owne most holy name.

And yet againe, he doth so breake that which we would thinke should haue beene the best order, that he doth in most excellent wisedome, take all glorie from the creatures themselues: and maketh it so much the more cleare, and plaine, (as it is meete) that all the praise both of wisedome and power, and goodnes, doth belong onely to him. For therefore it is, that God made light, before he made the Sunne. Caused trees to bring forth ripe fruite, before any shower or dewe had fallen vpon the earth. And also made all earthly creatures, and gouerned them in perfect order, before he appointed man, to be the ruler and orderer of them.

Who therefore among all men; yea how could all mankinde (though they were as dutifully affected to God as might be) how I say, could they for al that, sufficiently praise his most glorious name, for his so great, wise, mightie, gracious and glorious workes? Yea if it were but for our owne creation alone, for our outward senses, and the excellent gift of speech, &c. and for our inward vnderstanding and memorie, &c. Let euery one of vs therefore, conclude with the holy Prophet. Thou (ô Lord) possessest my reines (that is, I am by good right altogether and entirely thine) thou diadest couer mee in my mothers wombe. I will praise thee, for I am drawne into admiration (by considering) thy reuerend workes: yea I will praise thy wonderfull workes, as much as my soule can attaine vnto. My bones (or strength) it is not hidden from thee, from the time that I was made in a secret place, and skilfully fashioned as in the lower parts of the earth. Thine eyes did see me when I was without forme: for in thy booke were all things written euen from the time that they were first fashioned, yea while as yet there was none of them at all. O how deare therefore (or precious) are thy thoughts to mee ô mightie God! ô how great are the Summes of them! I would count them, but they are more then the sand: I will awake, (that is, I will stand diligently vpon my watch) that I may still abide with thee. Psal: 139. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. Trem: & Iunio Interp.

But of the duties, whereby we stand bound vnto God, for his mercie toward vs in our creation; more afterward.

HEtherto, our purpose hath beene, to gather together, and interprete the holy doctrine of Creation: according to the historical narration and report of it, from the holy Scriptures of God, the onely faithfull and incorrupt witnesses thereof. The which also (as you know) hath beene set down to your hand, in a fewe verses: to the ende it might happily bee thereby, made so much the more familiar, and if it might be also, the more easie to be remembred of you. It shall not be amisse therefore, as I thinke, here to make rehearsall of them.

Question. Which are those verses?

Answere. They are these which followe.

Gen. ch. 1. The world sixe daies in making was,
As Moses truly saith:
God would not onely shewe his power,
But likewise helpe our faith.

Verses.

1. In first of sixe, both heauen and earth,
A Substance they receiu'de:
2. Though formeles and vnfurnished,
Th'earth with waters couer'd.
And darknes was vpon the deepe,
As high as heauen did reach:
The holy Ghost these depths vpheld;
3. The Father by his speech:
Not sound of voice, but mightie power;
With wisedome, euen his Sonne:
Commanded light, so light brake forth,
*And whole * twelue howers shone.*

* Either because the world began at the equinctiall: or to speake according to the vsect the Iewes who alwaies accounted twelue howers for the day, according to that of our Saiour Christ: Iohn. ch. 11. 9. Are there not twelue howers in the day?

4. Yet

4. Yet darknes was not quite cut off,
But sundred from the light:
It tooke his turne, the light gaue place,
So ganne the second night.

Thus, first daies mightie worke we see,
How day it selfe was made:
5. Yea day and night of better part,
First day so calde of God.

Isai: 45.7. And though the darkenes was not ill,
A thing which God had made:
Yet light by name God called good,
More ioious farre then shade.

6. God said againe, let spreading out,
The waters goe betweene:
And part iowe deepe from loftie clowdes,
Whence fall downe shall the raine.

7. And euery vpper region,
So high as may be seene:
With sundrie lofts, which God prepard,
For all the Hostes of heauen.

8. This space so high, so wide spread forth,
And chambred in such sort,
God called heauen: so second day,
To ende was fully brought.

9. In third day cleared was the earth,
And cleane from waters ridde:
Both Ilands small, and countries great;
which deepes before had hidde.

10. For waters huge at Gods command,
Did gather to their place:
So hilles and dales with champion fieldes,
Gaue earth a goodly face.

Gen: 2. 10, &c. and 104 10. 11. 12. All springs and channells were likewise,
11. Disposed on third day:
12. Yea trees & herbs, all good with fruits,
13. God made without delay.

14. The fourth was spent in making lights.
Though light was made before:
It pleased God that Sunne and Moone,
With Starres of endles skore,

15. Should order day & night thencefoorth,
16. Yea moneths and yeares define:
17. And to all workes wrought vnder hea-
18. Fit seasons to assigne. (uen,
19.
20. The fift daies worke was water worke,
21. In it the seas were sterde,
22. With fishes great, with fishes small,
23. All sorts made very good.

Fift day likewise, was aierie worke,
For fowles therein were made:
All sorts were made in sky to fly,
As fish in Seas to wade.

24. Whē sixt day came, the Lord did make,
All creatures, earth to fill:
25 Beastes wilde and tame, with creeping
All good of Gods good will. (things,

26. But man was last of all the rest,
Though chiefe by Gods intent:
As God himselfe doth plainely shewe,
That so at first be meant.

For making man by chiefe aduise,
Most like vnto himselfe:
He gaue him rule of all belowe,
With store of heauenly wealth.

H'inricht his soule with gifts diuine,
In knowledge and in will:
Not man alone but mans fit helpe,
Made fit by heauenly skill.

This is in briefe, whole sixe daies worke,
All wondrous workes of God:
Thinke on them well, yeeld him all praise,
He made all perfit good.

God our Lord, euen for Iesus Christs sake, giue vs all grace so to doe. For there is exceeding great cause thereof in respect of God himselfe, who is most worthy all honour and glory. And it is also very good and comfortable euen to our owne soules, that we should so doe: as we are hereafter in the collection of the duties further to obserue.

BVt before we come to the duties, we are to consider the promise, and then also the comforts, which belong to that faith or beliefe, which wee haue concerning the almightie creation of God our heauenly Father, and the seuerall workes thereof.

First therefore, what say you of the promise?

Question. Is there any promise at all, concerning the creation, & the seueral works thereof: whereunto our faith should looke for the stay and comfort of it? Con-

Beliefe in God the Father maker of heaue and earth.

Concerning the creation, considered in it selfe, from the beginning of it, it cannot be saide that there was any promise made of it. For there was no creature to whom the performance of it should be promised. And therefore it must needes rest altogether in the hidden secret of Gods owne most fatherly and diuine purpose and counsell.

Answere. But so soone as God had once created all his workes, forthwith it pleased him to make knowne to mankinde, the last of his creatures, that hee had made all his creatures of this visible world, for their benefit, comfort, and seruice: vpon condition, that they would faithfully serue, and honour his diuine Maiestie, first in themselues, and then in the right vse of the rest of his creatures.

And this most gracious manifestation of Gods purpose herein, was as speedie a promise and assurance as might be: that the creation of God, and the seuerall workes thereof, were at the least in a very great part, euen for them; and consequently, for all the posteritie that should come of them.

Explication and proofe. It is very true. For so doe the wordes of God himselfe, immediately after the Creation was finished, giue plainely to vnderstand, Gen: 1.26.27.28.29. where wee see both the diuine purpose, and also the performance of God, in this behalfe. Yea Gen: chap: 2. uerses 19.20. we may perceiue the purpose and will of God to be such, so soone as Adam was created, euen before woman was yet taken out of his side.

The same promise of God, thus intended and reuealed from the beginning, is afterward, more plainly repeated and expressed, after the deluge or drowning of the world, as wee reade, Gen: 8.21.22. The Lord (as the prophet Moses writeth) smelled a sauour of rest, and the Lord saide in his heart, I will henceforth curse the ground no more for mans cause, &c. Hereafter seede-time and harueste, and cold and heate, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease, so long as the earth remaineth. And yet further, chap: 9. 1. 2. 3. it followeth thus: And God blessed Noah and his Sonnes, and saide to them: Bring yee forth fruite and multiplie, and replenish the earth. Also the feare of you and the dread of you shall be vpon euery beast of the earth, and vpon euery foule of the heauen, vpon all that moueth on the earth, and vppon all the fishes of the Sea: into your hand are they deliuered. Euery thing that moueth and liueth shall bee meate for you: as the greene herbe so haue I giuen them all to you. And this verily, is a very princely and comfortable prerogatiue: that God hath giuen man authoritie, to kill and destroy those creatures, which either proue hurtfull while they liue, or may be profitable to them by their death. Moreouer, Iob: chap: 5.23. It is affirmed from this promise and charter of the Lord, that the stones of the field shall be in league, and the beasts of the field at peace, &c. with the seruants of God. Likewise Hosh: 2.21.22. thus we read. And in that day I will heare (saith the Lord) I will euen heare the heauens, and they shall heare the earth. And the earth shall heare the corne, and the wine, and the oyle, &c.

Neuertheles, because these and such like promises, doe rather pertaine to the prouidence of God, in the gouernment of his creatures, then to the creation of them: therefore it shall bee sufficient, thus farre forth to haue touched this point, reseruing the more full handeling thereof, till wee come to the promise belonging to the prouidence of God.

NOw in the next place, let vs proceede to the comforts arysing from beliefe in God the Father, in respect of his almightie creation.

Question. Which may be the comforts hereof?

Answere. The comforts hereof may be considered, either as they are more generall: or else more speciall.

Question. Let it be so. In the first place therefore, which are the more generall?

Answere. First, this is generally very comfortable, that we knowe that the most wise and gracious prouidence and gouernment of God ouer all his creatures: is most nearely and indissolubly linked to the most wise and mightie creation of them.

Secondly, there is an other great comfort issuing from the faith of the creation, insomuch as the creation being beleeued, wee are from thence more easily induced, to beleeue beleeue all the like wonderfull workes of Gods moſt holy prouidence and gouernment; yea, euen thoſe which are in themſelues more hard to be beleeued: namely our eternal redemption, and by the grace thereof, our reſtoring, and the reſtoring of all creatures, to a more happie and glorious eſtate, then Adam was ſet in at the beginning, by the benefit of his creation.

Beliefe in God the Father, maker of heauen & earth.

The Comforts.

Expłcatiō & proofe.

Theſe are generally, very great comforts indeed. And they haue very good warrant from the holy Scriptures.

For in reſpect of the firſt generall comfort, the Apoſtle Peter 1. Epiſtich: 4. 19. verſe, aſſureth vs that God is a faithful Creator. From whence he proueth, that his faithfull children, may iuſtly (and that alſo in ſpeciall manner) betruſt him with themſelues, and their whole eſtate: nothing doubting, but hee will haue a very vigilant and tender care ouer them. Likewiſe, in the booke of Iob: chap: 10. verſes 8, 9. &c. Iob vſeth a ſpeech taken from a familiar ſimilitude of the dairie woman, who when ſhe hath taken all her paines in milking, in ſetting of her milke, in breaking her curde, in preſsing her cheeſe, &c. ſhe will in no wiſe throwe it aſide, that the hogges or dogges ſhould ſpoile it; but ſhee laieth it vp carefully, and reſerueth it to the beſt vſe that may be. Much more therefore doth Iob comfort himſelfe, that ſeeing God had made him, as it were the cheeſe, out of the milke; that hee would not deſtroy him. Thine handes (ſaith hee) haue made mee, and faſhioned me wholy round about: and wilt thou deſtroy me? Remember I pray thee, that thou haſt made mee as the clay, and wilt thou bring me into duſt againe? haſt thou not powred me out as milke? and turned me to curdes like cheeſe? Thou haſt clothed me with skinne and fleſh, and ioyned me together with bones and ſinewes. This therefore gaue the ſeruant of God, good and comfortable truſt, in hope of preſeruation, from vntimely and miſerable death. Read alſo, Pſal: 89. 47.

But for the generall care of God ouer all his workes, which is the ground of our generall comfort, and that which wee doe preſently inquire after; read Pſ. 33. 4. &c. All the workes of God are faithfull. Where alſo the holy Pſalmiſt lincketh the prouidence of God with his creation. And Pſal: 146. 6. He hath made heauen and earth: and all that therein is, he keepeth his fidelitie for euer.

Hence therefore (as was anſwered in the ſecond place) verie comfortably, may we iuſtly be induced to beleeue, that more ſpeciall goodnes and mercy of God concerning our redemption, and the reſtoring of all the creatures, which loſt the dignitie of their creation, through the ſinne of man. For the proofe whereof, reade Iſai: chap: 40. verſes 26. 27. &c. to the ende of the chap: Lift vp your eyes on high, and behold who hath created theſe things, and bringeth out their armies by number, and calleth them all by names? By the greatnes of his power, and mightie ſtrength, nothing faileth. Why ſaieſt thou o Iaakob, and ſpeakeſt o Iſrael, My way is hidden from the Lord and my iudgement is paſſed ouer of my God? Knoweſt thou not? or haſt thou not heard that the euerlaſting God the Lord hath created the endes of the earth? Hee neither fainteth nor is wearie, &c. But hee giueth ſtrength to him that fainteth, and vnto him that hath no ſtrength, hee increaſeth power, &c. And they that waite vppon the Lord ſhall renewe their ſtrength, &c. Reade alſo, chap: 43. verſes 1. 7. 15. 16. And chap: 44. 24. and 45. 8. and 50 1. 2. &c. and 51. 12. 13. Likewiſe, Iere: 31, verſes 31, 32, 33, 34, 35. &c. And againe, chap: 33. 19. &c. Thus ſaith the Lord, if you can breake my couenant of the day and my couenant of the night that there ſhould not bee day and night in their ſeaſon. Then may my couenant be broken with Dauid my ſeruant. And Pſ. 89. v. 36. 37. Read alſo Pſ. 119. v. 89, 90, 91, 92. O Lord thy word indureth for euer in heauen. Thy truth is from generation to generation thou haſt laid the foundatiō of the earth, & it abideth, &c.

Finally, touching the laſt point of this ſecond branch: to wit, that from faith in reſpect of the creation of God, we doe the more eaſily proceed to beleeue the reſtoring of all things: it ſtandeth with good reaſon, inſomuch as they doe both belong to one and the ſame almightie power.

And becauſe, if wee beleeue not the leſſer: howe ſhoulde wee beleeue the Beleefe in God the Father, maker of heauen & earth. the greater. If not this (which ſtandeth more with the light of naturall reaſon) how then ſhould we beleeue that, which is aboue all humane conceite or vnderſtanding? Thus much for the more generall comforts of faith, touching the Creation.

Queſtion. THe more ſpeciall, or particular, doe follow. In what order, haue you learned, that we may commodiouſly inquire of them?

Anſwere They are either ſuch, as ariſe in reſpect of other creatures: or elſe, from the conſideration of our owne creation.

It ſhall be profitable for vs therefore, in this order to inquire of them. And inſomuch as of creatures beſide our ſelues (as we haue ſeene before) ſome are inuiſible, and other viſible, like to our ſelues: let vs inquire of the inuiſible firſt, namely of the inuiſible heauens, and of the holy and elect Angeles.

Queſtion. What therefore, may our comfort be from this, that the Lord hath made a heauen, infinitely more excellent and glorious, then theſe heauens are, which we ſee with our eyes?

Anſwere. The comfort hereof, may iuſtly be exceeding great, to euerie true beleeuer; inſomuch as God hath not onely made the heauens, which are yet inuiſible vnto vs, that they might bee as the Throne of his diuine Maieſtie, to repreſent his glorie in them, and that they ſhould bee an habitation and dwelling place to the elect Angels, from the beginning and for euer: but alſo, that wee our ſelues might in the time appointed of God (that is, the naturall life once ended) haue our moſt ſweete and comfortable abiding place there; to behold the glory of God, and to enioy an eſtate like to the glorious eſtate of the holy Angels, euen for euer and euer.

Explication and proofe. This may iuſtly be exceedingly comfortable indeede: according to that of our Sauiour Chriſt: Iohn chap: 14. verſes 1. 2. 3. Let not your heart be troubled: ye beleeue in God, beleeue alſo in me. In my Fathers houſe are many dwelling places, &c. According alſo, as the ſame our Sauiour praieth to God his heauenly Father, on the Churches behalfe. Iohn. 17. 24. Father, I will that they which thou haſt giuen me, be with me euen where I am, that they may behold my glory, which thou haſt giuen me: for thou louedſt me before the foundation of the world, &c. This indeede, may iuſtly bee comfortable to euery true beleeuer; yea ſo comfortable, that well may it aboundantly mitigate the greateſt diſcomforts that may at any time aſſaile vs. Yea alſo it may iuſtly hearten, & harden vs, with a ſpiritual fortitude, and boldnes of heart, againſt death it ſelfe: yea, euen to make death welcome vnto vs, according to that 2. Cor: 4. 16, &c. We faint not, &c. (ſaith the Apoſtle) while we looke not on the things which are ſeene, but on the things which are not ſeene: for the things which are ſeene are temporall: but the things which are not ſeene, are eternall. And then it followeth, chap: 5. verſes 1. 2. For we knowe that if the earthly houſe of this tabernacle be deſtroied, we haue a building giuen of God: that is, an houſe not made with handes, but eternall in the heauens. For therefore wee ſigh, deſiring to be clothed with our houſe, which is from heauen, &c. And verſe 5. He that hath created vs for this thing is God, who alſo hath giuen vnto vs the earneſt of the Spirit. Read alſo, Heb: 11. 13. 14. 15. 16.

The comfort hereof (to ſpeake familiarly) may be conceiued, by a ſimilitude from the vſuall affection, and practiſe; euen of the pooreſt ſort of men. For as experience ſheweth, euery one is the better cõtented with a meane Hal or Kitchin, a roome of common abode: ſo as hee haue a commodious, and well trimmed Parlor, or Chamber, whereunto hee may reſort when hee will, to his good liking and delight. And ſhall wee not then, bee infinitely much more comforted, from this ſo great a ground of comfort: that God our heauenly Father, hath prepared, not onely one withdrawing roome (as it were handſome and neate in heauen) to ſolace our ſelues in now and then; but euen a roiall Palace, for our continuall abiding in his preſence? And that alſo ſuch a one, as in compariſon whereof, the moſt ſumptuous buildings of this world, are but as the Hall or Kitchin of the moſt baſe cottage that may be?

Queſtion. Nowe from the inuiſible heauens, let vs come to the inuiſible Angelles;

The Coforts.

Beliefe in God the Father maker of heauen and earth.

The Comforts.

(we speak now onely of the holy and elect Angels) What is the comfort of our faith, concerning their most holy and happie creation?

Answere. This also, may in like manner, be exceedingly comfortable to our faith, while wee consider, that albeit God our heauenly Father, is of himselfe alone al-sufficient, for our defence and preseruation: yet it hath pleased him; euen for the further comfort of our weake faith, to let vs vnderstand, that hee hath created millions of Angels, to bee our faithfull and trustie assistantes and friendes; against all the legions of Diuels, who are our most malicious aduersaries: as also against all their wicked Instruments.

Explicatiõ & proofe. That this is so; as it is euident from many testimonies of holy Scriptures, heretofore alledged, when wee spake of the Creation of the Angels: so the comfortable speech of Elisha the Prophet to his seruant, may at this time, bee to speciall purpose called againe to minde of vs; in that from thence we may euidently perceiue, that there are more on our side, then be against vs, &c. 2. King chap: 6. verses. 16. 17. And the greater will the comfort be, if wee doe herewithall, call likewise to minde, that which hath beene declared, concerning the excellent nature of the holy Angels, both for wisdome, and also for power, &c.

Neither may we (speaking of inuisible creatures) neglect that sensible comfort, which God of his goodnes giueth vnto vs continually, from those purging windes of the aier, and from the sweete aier it selfe, wherein we liue and drawe our breath.

But of these things, wee shall haue the occasion renewed, to consider more fully, when we shall come to the comforts of the fatherly prouidence of God: and therefore we will not now, stay any longer vpon them.

Wherefore, leauing thus, the inuisible creatures for a while: we come to those that are visible.

Question. What is the comfort, which our faith reapeth from the creation of them?

Answere. The comfort of all the visible creatures, in their seuerall kindes; it is sensible, like to themselues. For the goodly and beautifull formes, and colours of things, as also the light it selfe by the which they are represented vnto vs: together with the instrumẽts of light, the Sunne the Moone, and the Starres; they are all of them, very pleasant to our eyes. All the sweete voices, and sounds which we heare, from the sweet singing birds, and such like, they are very delightfull to our eares. The excellent varietie of flowers, by their manifold sweet smels, and sauours which they cast forth: they likewise are very comfortable to our nostrils. The plentifull fruits of the earth, which God hath sent for our foode; they are delicate, and daintie to our taste. Neither may we passe by the great goodnes of God toward vs in this, that for the more full measure of our comfort in his sensible creatures: whereas euery creature hath but his short season, he hath appointed one sort to succeede another. And whereas winter putteth an end to all summer fruits, till the Spring of the yeare returne againe: God hath giuen men wisedome, to preserue his creatures, by distillations, by syrrups and many other waies, so that they retaine them for their comfort till newe come againe.

Neuertheles, this we may herewithall truly affirme, that no one of these outward visible and sensible creatures, can be truly comfortable, either to the soule, or body of any man: but through the spirituall grace, and comfort, of a true and liuely faith.

Question. It is true that you say, But what reason can you render thereof?

Answere. By the fall of our first parents, and through our owne originall guiltines, sinne, and corruptiõ: we haue lost al our interest, & right title, to the least cõfort of any of the creatures.

Neither can wee otherwise be restored againe thereunto, but through faith; and that onely by the free grace of God, our heauenly Father: who hath adopted vs in his beloued Son our Lord Iesus Christ, to be his children, and heires of all things, euen heires annexed with him.

Explication and proofe. This is indeede a sufficient reason, that without faith, no man can take any sound comfort, or pure delight in the creatures, because we are in our selues corrupt & carnally affected: and without Christ no better, then vsurpers of them. And that we are altogether without interest in the creatures, vntill we be restored stored to the rightfull possession of them, by faith in Christ: it may plainly be gathered, by the expulsion of Adam out of the garden of Eden, so soone as hee had fallen away from his faith and allegiance to God, Genesis 3. 23, 24. But by faith in Christ, all things are made ours: in so much as we our selues are thereby made the children of God, according to that we reade, Gal: 3. 26. and chap: 4. verses 6, 7. and Rom: 8. 15, 16, 16. and 1. Cor: 3. 21, 22, 23. Let no man reioyce in men; for all things are yours. Whether it be Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death: whether they be things present, or things to come, all are yours. And ye Christes, and Christ Gods.

The Comfort.

HItherto therfore, of the comfort which we haue from all other creatures, through faith in God, and in our Lord Iesus Christ. Now concerning our selues: what may be the comfort of our owne creation, while we beleeue in God our heauenly Father, as in the Creator and maker of our owne selues?

Question.

Answere. The comfort hereof is manifold.

So indeed we haue learned out of the holie Scriptures: whether we consider the creation of our bodies, or of our soules: or of the condition of our whole Person and estate, wherein God hath created, and set vs in the beginning.

Question. First therefore, what is our comfort in respect of the creation of our bodies?

Answere. Not so much, for that it hath pleased God to giue them a speciall dignitie in outward forme, in that both face and hands, are made apt and fit aboue all other creatures, to looke and lift themselues vpward to his Maiestie, toward heauen: as it may be obserued, from the practise thereof. Psal: 123. and Lamentations of Ier: chap: 3. 41. But much rather, because he hath made euen our bodies, to be the temples of the holy Ghost, here in this life. 1. Cor: 6. 19. and to be partakers of the resurrection of the righteous to euerlasting life, at the last day, Iob. 5. 28, 29.

These comforts, cannot but be very comfortable, to all such as haue faith, in any measure of truth, to beleeue that they doe belong vnto them; according to the Scriptures by you alledged, and many other of like sort,

Answere.

Shewe now likewise, the comfort which faith findeth, in the work of Gods creation, concerning our soules.

Question. What is that?

Answere. The comfort hereof is singular, in that mankinde, (in respect of their soules especially) were created in the Image of God. The which, though we haue lost in our selues, yet by faith in Christ is is already in part, and shall for euer be wholie and perfectly restored againe.

So indeed we may perceiue, by the doctrine of the Apostle Paul: Colos: 3. 9, 10. and by his exhortation concerning the same Ephes: 4. 23, 24. For it can not be that either the doctrine, or the exhortation of the holy Ghost, should be without certaine and infallible grounds. Reade also for this, 1. Cor: 15. 49. As we haue borne the Image of the earthly, so shall we beare the Image of the heauenly, &c.

Question. To conclude this part of our inquirie: What is the comfort of our creation, in respect of that state and condition, wherein God had created, and set vs, at the beginning?

Answere. The societie of mankinde betwixt themselues, was, by Gods creation, exceeding comfortable: as may appeare, euen by the reliques thereof, which remaine still. Yea their whole estate and condition, was in dignitie and comfort, little inferiour to the Angels. The which also, though we haue wholie lost in our selues: yet by faith in Iesus Christ, we haue it restored againe, and shall be partakers of it through the rich mercies of God our heauenly Father.

Explication & proofe. So indeed we may perceiue, by comparing the 5. verse of the 8. Psalme: with Heb: chap: 2. verse 6. &c. As also, because we are in respect of our whole person, both bodies and soules, the temples of the holy Ghost: 1. Cor: 3. 16.

Beliefe in God the Father, maker of heauen & earth.

and 2. Cor: 6, 16. and Ephes. 2, 22.

But in this rehearsall of the comforts of the creation of God, in all his creatures toward vs: we must at no hand forget, that our God himselfe, (who is the God of all consolation and comfort) is infinitely more comfortable, pleasant, sweete, and delightfull, then any, or all his creatures, can be to the least of his children.

Such therefore are the comforts arising from the faith of the creation of all sorts of the creatures of God; whether visible, or inuisible: and as well of man to himselfe, in respect of his owne creation; as in regard of all other visible creatures, in that behalfe like to himselfe.

The which comforts, albeit they are not so much comfortable to vs, by the creation it selfe, as in respect of the fatherly purpose, and prouidence of God toward vs: seeing man himselfe (as was before obserued) had forfetted all: yet (because as was likewise further noted) the creation and prouidence of God, are most neerly lincked together; and whatsoeuer man hath lost in himselfe, is recouered and restored againe to all that truly beleeue in the name of God, through our Lord Iesus Christ: therefore we might not altogether suppresse, and conceale, the comforts of this part of our faith; howsoeuer we doe reserue the more full declaration and proofe of some of these things, till wee come to gather the comforts of the fatherly prouidence of God. Thus therefore, we (for the present) leauing the comforts, both of the Creation, and also of the Prouidence of God (they being mutually respective each to other, these looking forward to them, and they looking backward to these) let vs in the meane season, hast to the Duties: and that also vpon like equall & indifferent condition, as the matter it selfe, prepared of God, may most fitly, by his good prouidence, offer it selfe.

Question. BVt in what order may wee proceede in this part of our inquirie touching the Duties belonging to God, in that he is the Creator of all things?

Answere. I heard you say, that it shall bee best for vs, to obserue the same order, in seeking out the Duties, which you haue already obserued, concerning the Comforts.

It may well be so indeed: if for no other cause, yet for some helpe of memorie; the which we ought to haue great respect vnto, because of the weaknes of it.

Well therefore, let vs trusting in the grace and blessing of God our heauenly Father, proceed and goe on forward.

Question. What Duties, do belong first of all, to the comfort of faith, concerning the workes of Gods creation, more generally?

Answere. It is our dutie first of all, to esteeme of them all very reuerendly, yea euen of the least and basest of them, in regard that they are the creatures of our most wise, and reuerend God: acknowledging from our very hearts, that they are all, and euery of them (in their kindes, and to their seuerall ends and purposes) created in most perfect and diuine wisedome.

Secondly, it is our dutie, to glorifie and praise the Lord in them all: and to be hartily thankefull for them.

Thirdly, it is our dutie, to vphold and maintaine the due credit, and estimation of all the workes of Gods creation: against all such as speake euil of any one of them, to any the least reproch and dishonour of his most holy and reuerend name.

Finally, Faith concerning the workes of Creation, and the comfort of them: teacheth all true beleeuers, to humble themselues vnfainedly before God, the most gracious, and almightie Creator of them.

Explicatio and proofe. Here againe, let vs call to mind; that of duties belonging to God in respect of his workes of Creation. Some pertaine to iudgement, other to affection: some to speach, and some to the actions of life.

Now, that it is our dutie, first of all, to esteeme of all the workes of Gods creation, creation, very reuerendly: yea euen of those that bee the least and baseſt of them, in compariſon of other: it ſtandeth with verie good reaſon, in ſo much as the ſame God, who made thee one, hee made the other alſo. Hee that created the greateſt, created alſo the leaſt: the baſeſt, as well as the moſt noble: the moſt deformed (as wee account deformitie) as well as the moſt comely and beautifull, as wee eſteeme of beautie: they haue all one and the ſame Author and Maker. And therefore well may wee reaſon for the honour of the workes of Gods creation, as the Apoſtle Iames doth for the authoritie of euerie commandement of the lawe: becauſe one God and Law-giuer, gaue them all. Chap: 2. 11. Reade Pſalme. 104. 24. and 139. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. Read alſo Prou. 6. ver. 6. 7. &c. and chap. 30. 24. &c.

Beliefe in God the Father, maker of heauē and earth.

Yea and the Lord hath of purpoſe put a difference betwixt creature and creature: that the excellencie and beautie of the one, might the rather appeare, by comparing it with the other; the leſſer, with the greater: the weaker, with the ſtronger; the ſlower, with the ſwifter: the lighter, with the heauier: the colder, with the hoter: &c. And all this the Lord would haue ſo, for a more perfect declaration of his manifold diuine wiſedome, according to that. Pſalme. 104. 24. O Lord how manifold are thy workes! In wiſedome haſt thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches, &c. Reade alſo Romanes. 1. 19. 20. &c. Acts. 17. 24. &c. For euen to this end, God made the world, and all thinges therein: that by the creation thereof, his eternall power and Godhead, being conſidered in his workes, might be made manifeſt to all men: that they might ſeeke him, yea and (ſo ſhee) finde him. &c.

And thus alſo, it is plaine, that it is our dutie to glorifie and praiſe God in all his workes: according to that notable admonition, which wee reade Iob: chap. 36. 24. 25. 26. Remember that thou magnifie his worke, which men behold. All men ſee it, and men behold it afarre off. Behold God is excellent, &c. And according to the generall exhortation of the 148. Pſalme, wherein, all creatures are ſtirred vp to praiſe God, euen in this reſpect, that they are his creatures. Reade alſo Reuelation, chap. 14. 7. the exhortation of the holy Angell there.

And the rather are wee thus to glorifie God in his creatures, becauſe they being the workes of his hands, doe make the difference betwixt him, and all falſe Gods. Ier. 10. 16. and Acts: 17. 23. 24. &c.

Wherefore (according to the third branch of the anſwere) it is further manifeſt, that as we muſt for our owne parts, eſteeme reuerendly of all the works of God, and accordingly glorifie his name therein (yea in ſuch manner that euen thoſe that are pudenda, and a cauſe of ſhamefulnes and bluſhing to vs by reaſon of our ſinnes, ought to be accounted honourable as they proceede from the moſt wiſe and iuſt God;) ſo muſt we haue care to cauſe others (as much as lieth in vs) to doe the like. For who looking vpon the Frogge, or Caterpiller, or little Flie, or poore diſdained Lowſe: but ſo ſoone as he remembreth, that God did euen by theſe his creatures, confound one of the proudeſt and cruelleſt Kings and people of the world; euen the Egiptians: Who (I ſay conſidering this) can but praiſe God in this reſpect, that God ſhould, by ſuch baſe and contemptible creatures, worke ſo glorious a worke? According to that Pſalme. 78. 45. 46. &c. 105. 29. 30. 34. 35. And as wee muſt of dutie, ſpeake honourably of God, for them: ſo may wee not indure, to heare any thing ſpoken, to the contrarie diſhonour of his moſt bleſſed name.

Well haue the Miniſters of Gods word, (as wee reade in ancient record) zealouſly reproued, and condemned thoſe blaſphemous heretikes; who haue aſcribed any part of the worke of Gods creation to the Diuell? Such as the heretickes called Patarenes, Eutychiani, and Ethicopraxopa, are reported to haue beene, who feared not to affirme that the inferiour parts of the bodies of men and women are the worke of the Diuell.

Beliefe in God the Father maker of heauen and earth.

Likewise, well haue they reproued and condemned the Heretikes called Seuerani, who condemned wine, as not being a creature of God. And with them, well also haue they condemned the Marcionites, who accounted this whole world, to be a worke vnworthie to be ascribed vnto God.

The like reproofe, and zealous condemnation, is to be continued, and maintained, of all faithfull Ministers of the holie word of God, and of all faithfull Christians: against the same, and all other the like blasphemous maligners and railers against any of the workes of our God. God himselfe no doubt, will take our parts heerein: and iustifie himselfe, against all their blasphemous derogations, whatsoeuer they may bee. And verie worthily also haue other the good seruants of God, to the same ende, recorded the iust iudgements of God, against such lewde and wicked persons from time to time. Against some for reproching his thunder, and against other, for other their diuelliſh and licentious calumniations and contempts.

Theater of Gods iudgements, chap. 31 Concerning Blaſphemers. M. Perkins Expoſit. Symb. ſpeaking of Gods Omnipotency Mornæus, cap: 11. de Verit: Religionis. Act: & Mon. in his collection of Gods ſeuere iudgements againſt Blaſphemers, a little before the end of the Booke.

And namely, right worthily is it recorded against a King of Spaine, Alphonſus the ninth, that hee bare his punishment from the iust hand of God: because hee presumed to say, that if hee had bene at the creation, hee could haue disposed of the worlde in a better manner then now it is.

Reade the notable admonition of M. Foxe, to beware of blaſpheming of Gods wisedome, or workes any way: from an example of a fearfull iudgement of God, vpon a Girle about 12. yeeres olde. The graue Father, vpon a speciall occasion, maketh a verie notable and large admonition worthie to be diligently read, attended, and obeyed, of all that shall reade the same. The which, for their sakes who haue not that booke: yea, and to the ende that such as haue the booke, may yet haue so necessary and worthie an admonition, more neere hand, and in their present view; I will not thinke it tedious to copie out at large, both it, and the occasion of it, as the godlie Father himselfe hath set it downe.

The wife of one William Maulden, (as hee writeth) dwelling at a Towne sixe miles from London, called Waltam-Stow, taught young children to reade: which was about the yeare of our Lord, 1563. and the fourth yeere of Queene Elizabeths reigne. Vnto this Schoole, among other children, came one Benefields daughter, named Dennis, about the age of twelue yeeres.

As these children sat talking together, they happened, among other talke, (as the nature of children is to be busie with many things) to fall into communication of God: and to reason among themselues, after their childish discretion, what hee should be. Wherevnto, some answered one thing, some another. Among whom, when one of the children had said, that he was a good olde Father: the foresaid Dennis Bennifield casting out impious words of horrible blaſphemie: what he (said she) he is an old doting foole.

What wretched and blaſphemous words were these, ye heare. Now marke what followed.

When William Maulden heard of these abominable wordes of the Girle; he willed his wife to correct her for the same. Which was appointed the next day to be done. But when the next morning came, her mother would needs send her to the market to London; the wench greatly intreating her mother she might not goe, being marueilously vnwilling thervnto. Howbeit, through her mothers compulsion, she was forced to goe: and went. And what happened? Her busines being done at London, as she was returning againe homeward, and being a little past Hackney; suddenly the Girle was so striken, that all the one side of her was blacke. Wherevpon, immediately she was carried backe to Hackney: and there the same night was buried.

Witnesse of the same Storie, William Maulden and his wife: also Bennifield her Father, and her mother.

The Duties.

A terrible example (no doubte) both to olde and yonge: what it is for children to blaſpheme the Lorde their God. And what it is for parents to ſuffer their yong ones to grow vp in ſuch blaſphemous blindenes: and not to nourture them betimes, in the rudiments of the Chriſtian Cathechiſme: to know firſt their creation, and then their redemption in Chriſt Ieſus our Lord and Sauiour, to feare the moſt holy name of God, and to reuerence his Maieſtie. For els, what do they deſerue, but to be taken away by death; which contemptuouſlie deſpiſe him, of whom they take the benefit of life?

And therefore let all yong maides, boyes, and yong men, take example by this wretched fillie wench: not onelie not to blaſpheme the moſt Sacred Maieſtie of the omnipotent God their Creator, but alſo not once to take his name in vaine, according as they are taught in his commandements.

Secondlie, let all Fathers, Godfathers, and Godmothers, take this for a warning, to ſee to the inſtruction and Catechiſing of their children, for whom they haue bound themſelues in promiſe both to God and his Church. Which if the Father, and Godfather, the Mother, and Godmothers, had done to this yong Gyrle: verilie, it may be thought, that this deſtruction had not fallen vppon her.

Thirdlie, let all blinde Atheiſts, Epicures, Mammoniſts, Belly-Gods of this world, and ſonnes of Belial, hypocrites, infidells, & mockers of religion, which ſay in their hearts, Ther is no God: learne alſo hereby, not onely what God is, & what he is able to doe, but alſo in this miſerable creature here puniſhed in the worlde, to behold what ſhall likewiſe fall vpon them in the world to come; vnleſſe they will be warned betimes, by ſuch examples as the Lorde God doth giue them.

Fourthlie and laſtly, here may alſo be a ſpectacle, for all them which be blaſphemous and abominable ſwearers, or rather tearers of God: abuſing his glorious name, in ſuch contemptuous & deſpitefull ſort, as they vſe to do. Whom, if neither the word, & cõmandement of God, nor the calling of the Preachers, nor remorſe of conſcience, nor rule of reaſon, nor their withering age, nor hoarie haires, will admoniſh: yet let theſe terrible exãples of Gods diſtrict iudgement, ſomewhat moue them to take heed to thẽ ſelues. For if this yong maiden, who was not fully 12. yeres old, for her vnreuerend ſpeaking of God (& that but at one time) did not eſcape the ſtroake of Gods terrible hand: what then haue they to looke for, which being men growen in yeares, & ſtricken in age, being ſo often warned and preached vnto, yet ceaſe not continuallie with their blaſphemous oaths, not onely to abuſe his name, but alſo moſt contumelioufſlie, & deſpitefully to teare him (as it were) and all his partes in peeces? Thus farre M. Foxe admoniſheth all ſortes, both yong and olde, to beware of all blaſphemie againſt the Lord our God. Now let vs proceede.

Finallie, that faith in the creation of God, may iuſtly teach vs true humilitie: Read Iob chapt: 38. And chapt: 39. &c. It is the argument whereby God himſelfe teacheth Iob to humble himſelfe. Read alſo, Ier: 5, 21, 22.

HEtherto of the Duties more generallie,
Wee come nowe to the particulars.

Wherefore, touching the more particular Duties. Firſt and foremoſt, which are they that belong to this comfort of Faith, that God our heauenlie Father hath created the moſt glorious and inuiſible heauens: to the ende they may be our euerlaſting habitation, with the reſt of his faithfull ſeruants, together with his holie and elect Angels, after this tranſitorie life once paſt and ended.

Queſtion. Which, I ſay, are the Duties which ought to ariſe from this comfort?

Anſwere. In that, the Lord God our heauenlie Father, hath created inuiſible creatures, not onely the heauens, which wee ſee not: but alſo the holie Angels farre more glorious and excellent then anie of the viſible are, which our eyes doe ſee.

Beliefe in God the Father, maker of heauen & earth. Answere.

First it is our duetie, to conceiue more highly and glorianslie of the most high and excellent Maiestie of God, then all outward creatures can throughlie expresse vnto vs.

Secondlie, insomuch as it hath pleased God our heauenly Father to create the most glorious heauens to be our euerlasting home, and most blessed and comfortable dwelling place: wee are admonished thereby, to take heede, that wee doe not addict our minder to these earthlie creatures, and present vaine and transitorie worlde; but that wee doe wholly set our hearts, to seeke after heauen and heauenly things, and in comparison therof, to esteeme lightly of the greatest riches and pleasures, or of the highest preferments and honours of this life. But most of all wee are hereby admonished, to take heede that wee continue not in the filthe of our sinnes, which would vtterly barre vs from the kingdome of heauen.

Explication and proofe.

Touching the first part of this answere, let vs first of all consider, that the Angels themselues cannot comprehend, nor behold the full brightnes of the excellent glory and Maiestie of God, in which respect they are described with wings couering their faces: Isai: chapter 6. verse 2. And therfore much lesse are wee able to conceiue how these creatures which wee see, should fullie represent the same vnto vs. Let vs consider also, that the children of Israell could not look vpon the glory of Moses his face, after he came from the Lord, out of the mount. Neither could Moses himselfe see any more, but as it were the back partes of the Lord, and that through a crannie of the rocke. Exod: 33. 18. &c. and chapter 34. 33. &c. and 2. Corinth: 3. 7. Read also Ier: 10. 6. Isai: 40. 12. &c. Rom: 11. 33. &c.

And as touching those things, which apperteine to the kingdome of heauen: they are farre aboue those which the eye hath seene, or eare heard, or euer came into mans heart. 1 Corinth: 2. 7. 8. 9.

It foloweth therefore, according to the second parte of the answere, that these things, and this euerlasting mansion place, is by all good reason to bee principallie sought after, and affected: according to that of our Sau: Christ, First seeke the kingdome of God, &c: Hereunto also, doth the example of the holie Patriarches call vs, according to that which wee read, Hebr: chapt: 11. verses. 13. 14. 15. 16. Neither may wee in any wise, neglect the holie exhortation of the Apostle Paul: Colos: 3. 2. &c. Set your affection on things which are aboue, and not on things which are on the earth, &c. And verse 5. Mortifie therefore your members, which are on the earth, fornication, vncleannes, &c. For as wee read Reuelat: 21. verse 27. There shall enter into the heauenly Ierusalem, no vncleane thing, neither whatsoeuer worketh abomination and lies, but they which are written in the Lambes booke of life.

O therfore, how vaine! yea how absurd and madde a choise is this, of the children of this world! who for earthlie things which are but smoke and dust; yea for the pleasure of sinne, which is abominable skum and filthy dish-washe doe lose the most durable, pure, and pleasant ioyes of the kingdom of heauen. And for the loue of houses of clay, whose foundation (as Eliphaz saith truely in the book of Iob 4. 19.) is in the dust, and shall be destroyed before the mothe, (that is, most sodeinlie, as a flying mothe may be crushed to nothing, with a mans finger) to loose the glorious and eternall Palace of heauen.

This verilie is intollerable madnesse and follie. But let vs, who minde the kingdome of heauen, proceede to consider the waies which guide vs thervnto.

Question. In the next place therefore, which are the Duties that belong to the comfort of this, that God our heauenly Father, hath created the holie Angels, to be his ministring Spirits, for our manifolde benefit; both in bodie and soule, in this life, and concerning the life to come: as wee are hereafter in the Prouidence of God, more fullie to consider?

Answere. As wee ought from Gods creating of the holie Angells for our comforte, to prouoke our hearts to most dutifull thankefulnes to God our heauenly Father, who thereby doth exceedingly commend his loue and regarde of vs, though most vnworthie: so ought wee from the example of the holie Angels themselues, (who at the commandement of God, doe

Beleefe in God the Father, maker of heauen & earth.

The Duties.

doe willinglie attend vppon vs their inferiours (yea euen vpon vs most vnworthy and miserable sinners) to learne to be so humble and lowlie, euerie one of vs for our parts: that wee bee not onelie dutifullie subiect to all higher powers, according to the ordinance of God: but euen to the lowest also. Yea, and that euen the chiefest themselues, should likewise willinglie be the seruants of God, for the benefit and comforte, of the poorest and lowest of the whole Church and people of God.

Explicatio and proofe.

The reason is plaine, and lightsome of it self: and hath great force in it, to perswade euery faithfull magistrate of Iustice, and euery faithfull and beleeuing minister of the Word, euen with their best gifts, and with their most royall power, which they haue receiued of God: to be therewithall willing seruants to the lowest of the Church; and therein also, to thinke themselues nothing abased, but greatly honoured of God.

Moreouer, the wicked may by this ministerie of the holie and mightie Angels (if they had grace to consider it) be feared from all wicked attempts against the Church, or any the least members thereof. Numb: chapt: 22. verse 22. &c. Math: 18. 10. And wee our selues, that wee doe nothing vnbeseeming the presence of so holie ministers, and glorious seruants of God: who (though inuisiblie) are yet oftener present with vs, and among vs, then wee are ware of. 1. Corinth: 11. 10. According also to that Exod: 23. 21. 22. 23. For notwithstanding that is spoken of our Lord IESVS the Prince of Angels: yet such as the Lord and Maister-Angell is, such also are the seruants on their Lords behalfe, according to that Commission which he giueth vnto them.

Thus much for the Duties from the comfort of Faith, concerning the inuisible creatures of God. Let vs make speede to the Duties, concerning those that are called visible.

Question.

AND first, concerning the creation of other Creatures besides our selues. What are the Duties belonging to the comfort of Faith, in that God hath giuen vs assurance, that hee hath created them for vs, and giuen vs the free vse of them: to wit, of the light of the Sunne, and of the Moone, &c. of foode, and of apparell, of flowers, of all sweete smells, of all pleasant and Musicall soundes, &c.

What I say, are the Duties belonging to the bountifull and Fatherly goodnes of God herein?

Answere.

It is our bounden Dutie, to vse euerie of them, with all wise and holie discretion; and in all good and sober moderation, as becommeth those that are called the children of the light: euen to those blessed ends onely, wherevnto God himselfe hath appointed them.

And furthermore, to the ende we may in all holie, wise, and sober manner, vse these kindes of creatures: it is likewise our bounden dutie, to blesse God in all, and for euerie of his blessings, which wee beholde with our eyes, which wee heare with our eares, wherewith we cloth our bodies. &c. And according to the approoued examples of the holie seruants of God; it is our dutie in speciall manner, and with open profession of thankfulnes: to blesse God for the continuall renewing of our food, which is the most sensible and necessarie meanes, for the ordinarie maintenance of our life.

Explicatio and proofe.

Such is our bounden Dutie indeede: according to that ancient preceptorie admonition of the Lord by the Prophet Moses Deut: 8. 10. When thou hast eaten and filled thy selfe, thou shalt blesse the Lord thy God, for the good land which hee hath giuen thee. Beware that thou forget not the Lord thy God. &c. This holie commandement, hath bene regarded of the faithfull in the Church of God, from time to time, no doubt. And it is approued euen by the practise of our Sauiour Christ himselfe. Of whom it is recorded in the Gospell, that hee blessed God for the bodilie foode wherwith he fed the people. Matth: 14. 19. Yea after his Resurrection, his disciples knew him by his breaking of bread, in that (as it is most likely) hee vsed a forme of thanksgiuing, which he had before acquainted them withall: Luke 24. 30. 35.

Moreouer

Belief in God the Father, maker of heauen & earth.

The Duetie.

Moreouer, that we are to blesse God in the beholding of the Sunne, &c: the 8. Psalme, may teach all that account themselues schollers in the Schoole-house of the holie Ghost. And for the renewing of the creatures, when we behold them: what our duetie is, wee may learne from the ordinance of God, in the children of Israell their offering of the first fruites to God. Read Deut: 26. 1. 2. &c. And by the practise of the Church, in the song of thankesgiuing, for the renewing of the pastures, and of the sheepe, and of corne, by the seasonable showers of heauen: while yet they grewe in the fieldes Psalm: 65. 9. &c. And by the example of Hezekiah, and his Princes: who blessed God for the heapes, which they sawe chambred for the maintenance of Gods worship, and for the ministers therof. 2. Chron: 31. 8.

Finallie, that we may ende with the proofe of the beginning of the answer: Read Rom: chapt: 15. verses 12, 13, 14. and 1. Corin: 6. 12. 13. and chap: 7. 29. 30. 31. and Ephes: 5. 17. &c. Be yee not vnwise, but vnderstand what the will of the Lord is. And be not drunken with wine, wherin is excesse, but be fulfilled with the Spirit, speaking to your seines in Psalmes and hymnes, &c.

Thus then, all the creatures and ordinances of God, mariage, and whatsoeuer doth most affect the senses, and the naturall man: they must all and euerie of them be so vsed, and in the vse so moderated; that wee take heede, that by the vse of them, wee be furthered, and not hindered in the holie worship and seruice of God, our heauenly Father. For otherwise, as we haue learned before, out of the 1. Epist. chap: 2. of the Apostle Iohn: the loue of the Father cannot remaine with vs.

Let this suffice for the duties of faith, concerning the comfort of other the visible creatures of God.

Question. LEt vs come to ourselues, and see what our Duties are, in respect of our owne creation. And in the first place, what Duties are belonging to the comfort of this, that God hath created our bodies, to be the Temples of the holie Ghost, here in this life: and to be partakers of the resurrection of the iust, at the last day, to euerlasting happines and glorie.

Answere. Insomuch as our bodies (beeing in themselues no better then dust, from the dust of the earth) are neuerthelet, by the Fathertie goodnes of God, thus highly aduanced: it is our most bounden dutie. so much the rather to yeelde them wholie, and euerie member therof, to the seruice of his heauenlie Maiestie. And to this end, to pray earnestly to God for holie wisedome and vnderstanding: according to that wee read Psalme 119. verse 73. Thine hands haue made me, and facioned mee, giue me vnderstanding therfore, that I may learne thy commandements.

In this respect also, are wee verie timely and sensiblie admonished, to consider and acknowledge our owne humane frailtie; and for euer to humble our selues, vnder the mightie hand of God: by whose power alone, we liue, moone, and haue our beeing, as the Apostle Paul teacheth vs. Acts 17. 28.

Expetation and proofe. It is very true (poore soules that wee are) the pot-sheard with the pot-sheardes of the earth, saith the Prophet Isai: ch: 45. 9. That is, one in this respect is no better then another: the King is euen as the poore man, the strong, as the weak, &c: according to that Psal: 62. 9. The children of men are vanitie, yea euen in their best estate. Plalm: 39. 5. And againe Isai: chap: 40. 6. All flesh is grasse. For so great is our humane frailtie, euen in our best and most healthfull estate; that euerie sixt hower, wee are faine to seeke reliefe from other, the pore and fraile creatures of God; euen such as the earth, from whence wee our selues are taken, sendeth forth and cherisheth: to wit, corne, flesh, fruites of the trees, butter from the kine. &c.

Wee cannot one hower, forbeare apparell in the colder season of the yeare. And this wee borow from the fleece of the sillie sheep, or from the poore sillie worme. &c. How little a distemper will put vs into a fitte of an ague? howe little a thing will offend our queisie stomack? who can make his owne heart so much much as to pant in his bodie? or his pulse to beate in the wrest of his arme? Halfe our life time wee passe away in sleeping. And if wee want but a little of our ordinarie sleepe, our senses are greatly dulled. Wee are euer and anone out of tune, in one part or other. Wee are like the instrument of Musicke, which though it be exquisitelie and finelie made: yet it must be often newe set. &c.

And within a short time, all will be out of frame, and hasten to an vtter dissolution, till the time of restoring do come: according to that excellent description of our bodilie and earthlie frailtie: Eccles: chapt: 12. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. &c. ch: 3. 20. and Iob: 34. 15. Ps: 146. 3. 4.

Fraile creatures are wee therefore, as was said: and so let vs acknowledge our selues: and humble our selues vnto the Lord, by whose power wee liue, &c. Hereof we haue Abraham for a notable example, Gen: 18. 27. Read also Iob. 4 19. and 10. 9. Psal: 103. 14. and 2. Corin: 5. 1. Hence cometh this phrase, God raiseth out of the dust. 1. Sam: 2. 8. 1. King: 16. 2. Psalm: 113. 7. Hence also was the ancient ceremonie of sprinkling dust vpon the head: Iob. chapt: 2. 12. Lament: ch: 2. verse 10. & ch: 3. 29. The afflicted putteth his mouth in the dust, if there may be hope. Read also, Ezek, 27. 30. And Micah: 1. 10. Roule thy selfe in the dust.

Now therfore to the end we may finde fauour with God, and be supported by his good hand, for that short time which wee haue here to liue: Let vs vse our members as weapons and seruants to righteousnes, according to the excellent instruction of the Apostle Paul: Rom: 6, 13. &c. Read also Psalm: 24. 8. 9. 10.

Singular preparation is to be made, to giue intertainment to the Maiestie of so glorious a King. And Luk: chapter 3, 4, 5, 6. But who is hee that hath not great cause to lament the abuse of his body, and of the members thereof? so that hee may iustly say, I haue looked vppon that with mine eyes, which I ought not to haue seene. I haue hearkened with mine eares, to heare that which I should not haue heard. I haue spoken with my mouth, such words as I should not haue spoken. I haue put forth mine hands, to that which I should not haue medled with, &c.

Verilie, the more wee boast our selues of the creatures, as of apparell, &c. the more doe wee abase our selues, and our owne bodies. The more we seeke to delight our selues with delicate fare: the more costly medecines and preseruatiues wee vse, &c: by so much the more wee preach our owne frailtie. But with no good vse or profit, till wee learne thereby to humble our selues, and our bodies; to the good pleasure and will of our Lord God: &c. But from the bodie, let vs come to the soule.

Question. What Duties doe belong to the comforte of this, that God hath created our soules immortall, and in his owne image and likenes, from the beginning of the creation?

Answere. This doth teach vs, that wee owe to be more carefull for the euerlasting welfare of our soules: then for our outward and bodilie estate here in this worlde, for a short and vncertaine time.

And seeing wee haue lost the beautie & dignitie of that holie image of God, wherein at the first mankinde was created: it may iustlie teach vs also, to be singularlie carefull & diligent, in vsing all meanes, for the recouering of it againe.

Explicatiõ & proofe. This is the true beautie and dignitie indeed, which wee ought most carefully to labour after. It is more then to seeke after the lost groat. It is the seeking after a Iewell of the highest price: yea after the ground and title of a mans whole state. For as our Sauiour Christ telleth vs: What should it profit a man to winne the whole worlde, and to loose his owne soule?

The Duties belonging to the comfort of our whole person and estate, wherein it pleased God at the beginning to set and place vs: to wit, aboue all other of his visible Creatures; they are yet behinde. For albeeit our first parentes Adam and Eue, lost this dignitie: yet the gifte of God to them must not be vnthankfully neglected of vs. And the rather, because it is the good pleasure of God, to restore vs: yea to establish vs more firmely, in a more excellent estate, through our Lord Iesus Christ.

Beleefe in God the Father, maker of heauen & earth.

Question. Which therefore are the Duties, wherevnto this comfort of Faith ought to prompt and prouoke vs?

Answere. Wee are taught hereby, that it is our most bounden Dutie, to glorifie God for this his most bounteous goodnes toward vs: and to take the whole blame of our miserie, altogether vppon our selues.

Wee are hereby admonished also, most carefullie to auoid all those wayes and meanes, whereby our good and happie estate was at the first lost.

To the which ende and purpose, wee are furthermore to beleeue the worde of God, to be most certaine and true, both in euery promise, and also in euery threatning therof: and that without all wauering and doubting.

And moreouer, wee are to beware of all pride and ambition: and on the contrarie, to be alwaies well content with that estate, which our heauenly Father seeth to be best for vs; and therein continually to acknowledge his gratious dealing with vs.

Finallie, wee are to the same ende and purpose: to resist the Diuel in all his wicked tentations, with an irreconcileable, and inuincible resistance.

Explicatiõ and proofe. It is verie true. The wofull example of our first parentes, may be our full instruction in all these points. For in so much as they failed in these duties, as it is plaine in the text Gen: 3. 1. &c. therefore were they vanquished by the Diuels wicked and subtile tentation: as may appeare by the particulars following.

Touching the first, Eue her selfe, can not but acknowledge, the bountifull goodnes of God toward them: verse 2. of that 3. chapter.

But shee doth neither holde her heart firme in faith, to beleeue and feare the threatning of God, which the Diuel in her hearing; depraued and eluded: verses, 3. 4. 5. Neither was shee content with her present estate: nor constant in resisting the Diuel, as it foloweth verse 6.

And as touching Adam, hee was altogether negligent in examining and auoiding the euill: nay rather he willinglie suffered himselfe to be misled by the suggestion of his wife, whom hee should haue reproued or warned hereof: they fell both of them most pitifullie, and lost their naturall, and (as wee may say) natiue dignitie: not onely from themselues, but also from all their succeeding posteritie.

Iustlie therefore, are wee from the example of their fall, to admonish our selues; lest after our restitution through the Fatherlie grace and mercie of our gratious good God: we should at any time fall away, by the like negligence, and vnfaithfulnesse of our owne partes; and by the like malitious and craftie practise of that olde Serpent the Diuel against vs.

Nay rather, according to the first point of the answere, and according to the ende of our excellent creation, and of God his placing of vs in so excellent an estate; it is our bounden dutie, to be in speciall manner, most earnestlie and constantlie zealous of Gods glorie, as God himselfe hath giuen plainlie to vnderstand; in that he sanctified his Sabbath, immediatelie after he had created and made mankinde.

Reade also Isai: 43. 7. I created him for my glorie (saith the Lorde God) formed and made him.

And worthilie also, is the exhortation made vnto vs, Psalme 95. verse 6. Let vs worship and fall downe before the Lorde our Maker, &c. And Psalme 100. verse, 1. &c. For hee hath made vs, and not wee our selues. &c. Likewise Psalme. 149. 1. 2. And Psal: 139, 14. &c. I will praise thee, for I am fearefullie and wonderouslie made. &c.

This our speciall care, of glorifying Almightie God our heauenly Father, it is due vnto him, euen from our first yeares, as wee are admonished and exhorted, Beleeue in God the Father maker of heauen & earth.

The Danger of not beleeuing.

exhorted Eccleſiaſt: chapt: 12. 1. euen to the laſt of our daies. Pſalm: 146. 2. The want of which chiefe and principall care, is iuſtly reproued Iob: 35. 10. 11. None ſaith, where is God that made mee, who giueth ſonges in the night? who teacheth vs more then the beaſtes of the earth, and giueth vs more wiſedome then the foules of heauen.

But much more is condemned, all vndutifull cauilling againſt Almightie God: according to that Iſai: 45. 9. Woe to him that ſtriueth with his Maker, &c. Furthermore, wee ought to be ſo farre off from cloking of any ſinne, by the abuſe of this, that God hath created vs all (as the wicked Iewes went about, from hence to countenance their vnlawfull mariages, Malac: chapt: 2. 10. as Trem: and Iun: doe well interpret that place) that it ſhould on the contrarie, be alwaies a ſtrong reaſon, to mooue vs to all good dutie; as ſome other haue in another godly ſenſe, vnderſtoode the ſame wordes of the Propher.

According alſo to that of the Apoſtle Paul, Acts: 17. verſes 24. 25. 26. 27. GOD that made the worlde, &c. hath made of one blood all mankinde, to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath aſſigned the times which were ordained before, and the boundes of their habitation. That they ſhould ſeeke the Lord, if ſo bee they might haue gropea afterhim, and found him, though doubtleſſe hee is not farre from euery one of vs. For in him, wee liue, and mooue, and haue our beeing. &c.

Finallie, ſeeing God hath created vs in his owne image: who ſhall dare attempt to deface this image of God? yea who ſhall dare to offer any violence, to the outward hurting or diſmembring of any part of this his creature: either eye, hand or foot, ſpeciallie to the taking away of life, without ſpeciall commiſſion and commandement from God himſelfe? Certainlie they ſhall beare thei puniſhment, whoſoeuer they be. Gen: ch: 9. 6.

Queſtion. NOwe therfore, for the concluſion of out inquirie, concerning this Article, of the creation of all things: What is the danger of not beleeuing in God the Father, as in the Creator and maker of heauen & earth, of the Sea, and all that is in them: and that alſo, euen according to the holie hiſtorie thereof, as it is recorded and written in the firſt and ſecond chapters of Geneſis, by the Prophet Moſes; and not otherwiſe?

What I ſay is the danger of this?

Anſwere They that beleeue not in God the Father as in the Creator: and that alſo euen according to the holie hiſtorie of the Creation, wherein God himſelfe, hath by his faithfull Prophet reuealed the ſame vnto vs & to his whole Church: it is vnpoſſible, that they ſhould truely beleeue in him, as in the Almightie, moſt wiſe, righteous and gratious Lorde God; but that with one heretike or other, they ſhould falſifie this holie Article of our Chriſtian beliefe.

Explica'io & proofe. It muſt needes be ſo indeed. For from whence ſhall any truely vnderſtand the Almightie power of God, his diuine goodnes, &c. if they do not learne it from the introduction as it were, of his owne works: yea euen from theſe his moſt mightie, moſt wiſe, and gratious workes of his Creation? And who could haue bene able ſo faithfully to report them, as we ſhould finde our ſelues ſufficiently warranted to giue our vndoubted credit therevnto: but euen God himſelfe, by the holie miniſterie of his owne approoued and faithfull Secretaries and ſeruants?

And touching the diſcouery of that danger of error, which euery one is readie to fall into, whoſoeuer turneth his eyes and his heart from the holy worde and faithfull Scriptures of God: it ſhall not be amiſſe for vs, to take our admonition, from the manifolde examples of ſuch, as turning aſide from the word; haue heretofore fallen into many fowle and abſurde hereſies.

For ſome (I ſpeake not of heathen and prophane Ariſtotle, or of anie of his philoſophicall Sectaries, but euen of ſuch as haue taken vppon them, the profeſsion of the true Chriſtian religion in the Church of God) they haue denied the worlde (as touching the first matter of it) to haue bene euer created, but to haue beene without beginning coeternall with God himselfe. Of the which sorte, were the heretikes called Seleuciani, Hermiani, and such like.

Others also of the like sorte, haue helde that these three beginnings, the water, fire, and darkenesse are vncreated. Such were the heretikes called Audiani.

Some haue more particularlie insisted in the element of the water: affirming that to be coeternall with God, and therevpon, (as it seemeth,) are called Aquei.

But leauing these: and to come vnto those that haue in some sorte yeelded that the world hath bene created. They haue neuertheles accounted it a work vnworthie the good God: such as were the wicked and blasphemous Marcionites: and also the Cerdonians, and the Apellites.

The heretikes called Caiani, denied that the God of Abraham was the creator of the worlde.

The Symoniani, Nicolaita, and others: taught that the worlde was created by the Angels, and not by God himselfe.

The Saturninians, and the Basilidian heretikes, are saide to haue attributed the creation to seauen Angels.

The Cerinthians, and diuers others of like leaden and drosie stampe, feared not to say, that the worlde was made by an inferiour sorte of Angels, and the Diuell.

Thus, and manie waies beside: manie haue hereticallie erred, about the creation of the world.

So haue manie done also, concerning the creation of the Angels and mankinde.

Some haue bene missled, to imagine and holde, that the good Angels were propagated of the essentiall wisedome of God. Such are the Basilidians recorded to haue beene, and likewise the Gnostici and Archontici.

Other haue taught, that the Deuill is a bodilie substance: as did the Messalians.

And as touching mankinde, the Manichei, helde that Adam and Eue were not created by God.

The Patricians, that the flesh of man was not the creature of God. The Paternians, Eunomians and some other: that the lower partes of the bodies of mankinde, were the worke of the Deuill.

The Melitonij and the Anthropomorphites: that the image of God is in the bodie of man, and not in the soule.

The Seleuciani, and others, that the soule of man was not created by God, but by the Angels.

The Gnostici, Manichei, and Prisciliamists, that the soule is of the same essence that God is.

The Nazarei, on the other side: that the soules of men, are of the same nature, with the soules of the brute beastes.

The Arabici, that the soule of man is mortall, and that it perisheth with the bodie.

Thus, and sondrie other wayes, most fowllie and contrarie to the doctrine of the true Christian faith, haue very manie sortes of men erred, for want of sincere and humble attendance vpon the holie word of God: and namely, for neglecting this parte of the word, concerning the holie historie of the Creation. All which examples, ought mightilie to schoole and admonishe vs, to looke religiously thervnto, to the end we may be sounde in this Article of our Christian faith: and so auoide all the rocks, boggs, and quake-mires of mans wicked & corrupt imaginations, & euery erroneous suggestion of the Diuell.

Thus much, concerning the doctrine of faith, in the Almightie power of God our heauenly Father, manifested by the manifold works of his Creation.

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly prouidence. The grõd and meaning of it.

Beliefe in the Fatherly Prouidence of God.

LEt vs now henceforth, proceede to inquire into the doctrine of the diuine prouidence of the same our God and heauenly Father: the which he doth continually exercise ouer all his workes which hee hath once made. For (as was trulie answered) hee doth at no hand, leaue any one of them so to themselues, that they should be, as one would say, at vncertaine to him.

Question. First therefore, what doe you vnderstand by the Prouidence of God?

Answere. The Prouidence of God, is his most mighty vpholding and continuing, as also his most wise and watchfull, most righteous and mercifull, most constant and soueraigne, ruling and gouerning of all his creatures once made: in that hee effectually worketh all good things in them and by them; but restraineth, correcteth, and turneth all euill things, both counsels, wordes, enterprises, and actions: as may best serue, to those most holy vses and endes, which he himselfe, hath most holily propounded to himselfe, in his owne eternall counsell and decree; according to the pleasure of his most free and blessed good will.

Explicatiõ and proofe. It is so in deede as you say. For to speake in fewe wordes, that which for plainenes sake, you haue vttered in more. The prouidence of God, is the execution of the decree of God, concerning the disposing and ordering of all his creatures; and of all their qualities and operations whatsoeuer, to their proper vses and endes: euen as his creating of them, was the execution of his purpose and decree, to giue them their seuerall qualities, natures, and beeings themselues.

So then, wee must vnderstand the Prouidence of God, to bee as large as his creation: that is to say, that it doth vniuersally extend itselfe, to the continuall ruling, ordering, and gouerning, of euery creature which hee hath once made: and that euen by the same almightie power, wisedome, iustice, and mercie; by the which, hee at the first made them. As Nehem. cha. 9. ver. 6. Thou Lord preseruest them all.

But that wee may vnderstand the better, what is meant by the Prouidence of God: there are certaine thinges to bee inquired into, for the more full opening of that which you haue already answered.

And first concerning the word Prouidence; wee are to inquire, how it may be saide to containe all that you haue set downe in your answere, for the description of it: in so much as in the literall or strict signification of it as a man may saye, Prouidence is no more then a fore-seeing of thinges to come.

Question. First of all therefore, what is to be said to this?

Answere. The fore-seeing of God, is no idle, or impotent and weake fore-sight: but as it is essentiallie ioyned with preordination and fore-appointment and decree; so it cannot be but it must needes take due effect, with euery ordinance and decree thereof, in the proper times and seasons of the same.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is very true. And therefore it is, that in the holy Scriptures, the fore-appointment or predestination of God is ioyned most nearely with his fore-knowledge or fore-sight: as Acts: 2. 23. deliuered by the determinate counsell, and fore-knowledge, and prouidence of God. And Rom: 8: 29. Those whom hee knew before, hee also predestinated, &c. And 1, Peter. 1. 2. Elect according to fore-knowledge.

Prognosis & Pronoia, ioined with Proorismos.

And that the effectuall gouernement of God is noted by his fore-sight: read Gen: 22. 14. In the mount the Lord will see (or prouide). And Psalm. 34. 15. The eyes of the Lord are vpon the righteous. And Zech, cha: 3, 9. and cha: 4. 10. The seuen eyes of the Lord goe throughout the world.

Beliefe in Gods fatherly Prouidence.

The ground and meaning of it.

It is true that the Lord fore-seeth and fore-knoweth more then commeth to passe: for he doth of purpose frustrate many counsels and purposes which hee knoweth to bee intended of the wicked, so that they cannot take effect. But as touching all his owne most holy counsels and purposes for all time to come: hee doth so knowe them before hand, that according to his fore-knowledge; hee doth alwaies most certainely guide them to take their full effect, so as nothing is able to hinder the same. To this purpose, read Psalm. 94. 11. And 1. Corinth. 3. 20. The Lord knoweth that the thoughts of the wise bee vaine. And 2. Kings. 19. 27. 28. I know thy dwelling, &c. I will put my hooke in thy nostrils, &c. Reade also Psalme. 1. 6. The Lord knoweth, (that is, he alloweth & blesseth) the way of the righteous, and the way of the wicked shall perish. Likewise Psalm. 37. 18. Deut. 2. 7. and Amos 3. 2.

Thus we see that the actuall gouernement of God is noted by his seeing or fore-seeing, by his knowledge or fore-knowledge of all things: the effect being implied by the cause or rule and ground of it.

Now a second thing, to be likewise considered, concerning your former description of Gods holy Prouidence; is the reason, why you make mention of the restraining, and correcting of euill things, &c: in so much as wee haue seene in the former doctrine of the Creation, that the Lord made all thinges very good.

Question. What therefore is the reason of this?

Answere. Because shortly after the creation, a great multitude of the Angels fell away from God: and of themselues, most wickedlie peruerted themselues. Mankinde also (both Adam and Eue) were verie soone drawne away from God, by the wicked suggestion of the Diuel; whence hath followed, a wonderfull disorder and corruption of all things, through the continuall rebellion of the wicked Angels, and of all wicked men against the Lord our God.

This is indeede, a sufficient reason of it: the ground and proofe whereof, we shall see anone.

In the meane while, there is yet a third thing remaining, for the further clearing of the former description of the holy Prouidence of God: to wit, concerning those most holy vses and endes, the which God hath in his owne eternall counsell and decree propounded to himselfe; in his prouident supporting, ruling, and gouerning of all his creatures.

Question. Which are they?

Answere. The most holy endes of Gods vniuersall prouidence, are the eternall happinesse of all his elect Angels: and the like eternall happinesse and saluation of all his elect children, from among the rest of the lost posteritie of mankinde.

And on the contrarie; the frustrating of all the wicked and rebellious counsels and enterprises of all the reprobate, both Angels and men: to their euerlasting confusion, and condemnation. All to the glorie of God, in the declaration both of the bountifulnes of his most free grace and mercie: and also of the deserued seueritie, of his most holy and perfit iustice.

Explicatiõ and proofe. These are in deede, the principall endes of the most holy prouidence of God. In respect whereof, it is saide Prouerb. chapter. 19. 21. Many deuises are in mans heart; but the counsell of the Lord shall stand. And Psalme, 33. 10. 11. The Lord breaketh the counsell of the heathen, and bringeth to nought the deuises of the people. The counsell of the Lord shall stand for euer, and the thoughts of his heart throughout all ages.

And Isai. chapter, 46. 9. 10. Remember the former thinges of olde, for I am God and there is no other God, &c. My counsell shall stand, and I will doe whatsoeuer I will.

And therefore iustly doth the Lord, by the same his holy Prophet, in the beginning of the 30. chapter, pronounce a woe against them that take counsell but not of him.

And

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

The ground and meaning of it.

And thus farre alſo, well ſaith Gamaliel: Act: 5. 38. 39. If this counſell, or this worke, be of men, it will come to nought. But if it be of God, ye cannot deſtroy it, leſt ye be found euen fighters againſt God.

The like is to be ſaide, concerning all the craftie counſels, and enterpriſes of the Diuel, in that hee inciteth the wicked to rebell againſt the Lord God, and practiſeth the ſame himſelfe. For they ſhall not preuaile, as will further appeare afterward.

But whereas wee aſcribe counſell to the Lord, the which is (as one may ſay) the maturitie and ripeneſſe of former thoughts, or as it were the choiſe flower, flote, or diſtillation of them: wee are to vnderſtand this aſcription of counſell to GOD, as ſpoken to our capacitie, after the manner of men. For if we ſhall conſider exactly of the nature of God, whoſe wiſedome is infinite, and moſt perfectly preſent at euery inſtant, and ſo abideth for euer, and hath beene moſt perfect from all eternitie: there are neither former, nor latter conſultations with him.

THeſe thinges thus cleared, let vs now goe forward. Wherein, that wee may proceede in ſome order: howſoeuer the holy Prouidence of God is one onely entier in it ſelfe, let vs (for our inſtruction, and for the helpe of our infirmitie) conſider of it, as beeing either more generall ouer all creatures, or more ſpeciall concerning ſome aboue the reſt. And that alſo, either before the fall of mankinde: or concerning the fall it ſelfe; or elſe, euer ſince the fall.

And touching the more ſpeciall prouidence of God, let vs conſider of the grounds and declaration of it, according to the order of the creation it ſelfe: that is, according to the workes of God, in euery ſeuerall daies creation as hath beene, from the hiſtorie thereof, ſet downe before.

Queſtion. Firſt therefore, what ground of holy Scripture haue you, for the proofe and declaration of GODS more generall prouidence, before the fall of mankinde?

Anſwere. For the prouidence of God in the generall vpholding of his creatures, this may be a ſufficient proofe and declaration: in that ſo ſoone as mention is made of the bringing forth of the creatures, it is ſaide forthwith, that the Spirit of GOD ſuſtained and vpheld them.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is true. For that is the true ſence and meaning of thoſe wordes, in the beginning of Geneſis, That the Spirit of God moued vpon the waters: as they haue beene more fully opened, and interpreted before. From whence, it is well worthie to be marked: that the prouidence of God, in the ſupporting of his creatures, is as ancient as the creation it ſelfe. The which, as it had the beginning with it, (I meane as touching the actuall operation) ſo it both had, and hath ſtill, the perpetuall continuance, with the continuance of the creature it ſelfe, to the vpholding of it. For the creature can no more conſiſt, and continue by the owne power: then it could poſſibly conſiſt, and take the beeing, and beginning, of it ſelfe.

THus much therefore may briefely ſuffice, for the proofe of the generall prouidence of God; in the continuing & vpholding of his creatures, from the firſt moment of the creation, and ſo forth.

Queſtion. And nowe, that wee may proceede: what ground haue you for the prouidence of God, in the ruling and gouerning of his creatures, before the fall of mankinde.

Anſwere. The ground of this, is determined with the hiſtorie of the creation, contained (as wee haue ſeene before) in the two firſt chapters of Geneſis: ſo much as concerneth all viſible and earthly creatures, by expreſſe mention of them.

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

The ground and meaning of it.

And touching the inuisible Angels, though Moses writeth nothing expresly of them by name, before the fall of mankinde: yet from other holy Scriptures, we learne for certaine thus much, that the Lord vpholding and continuing his elect Angels, in their holy and pure estate, as they were created; hee left the rest to themselues, who of their owne accord fell soone away from their holy originall, and so deprined themselues of the fauour and grace of GOD, and became lyars and murtherers from the beginning.

Wherefore euen thenceforth: that is, from the very beginning of their fall from their obedience; God hath begun to reserue them in euerlasting chaines, vnder darknes, vnto the iudgement of the great day.

Explication and proofe. So indeede we reade expresly in the 6. verse of the Epistle of Iude. And Iohn chap: 8.44. And this is briefely, the summe of all that, which God hath iudged meete to teach vs, concerning his gouernment ouer his Angels, before the fall of mankinde. Let vs therefore, leauing them for a while, come to his gouernment ouer the rest of his creatures. the which the Prophet Moses doth expresly describe vnto vs.

Question. Wherein is this part of GODS gouernment, most generally to be discerned?

Answere. It appeareth in this, that he appointed such foode and nourishment, as was meete to support and mainteine euery liuing creature in life: and that, euen as well in the vegetatiue life, more proper to trees and plants, as in the sensitiue life of men and bruit beastes, and also of the foules of the aier, and fishes of the Sea, and whatsoeuer else.

And in that hee blessed them all, with the power of generation, conception, and bringing forth increase and multiplication, according to their seuerall kindes.

Explication and proofe. So indeede we read Gen: ch: 1. verses 12. 22. 28. 29, 30. And in this respect also, the Apostle Paule speaking of the continuall prouidence of God, in his vpholding and gouerning of his creatures, saith thus. Act: 17, 25. Hee giueth to all life, and breath, and all thinges else. And againe verse 28. In him wee liue, and moone, and haue our beeing.

This is therefore the more generall prouidence of God, in his gouerning of his creatures, Question. What was his more particular or speciall gouernment?

Answere. God continued the orderly succession of the night and day, according to the ordination of it in the first daies worke. And to the same purpose, hee likewise confirmed the instrumental gouernment and ordering thereof: as it were in the hand and ministerie of the Sunne, and the Moone, according to the creation of the fourth day.

God also, according to the creation of the third day, continued the limitation and boundes of the Seas within their compasse: so that they could not returne to ouerwhelme the dry land againe, as of their owne nature they would.

Moreouer, albeit God continued his owne soueraigne and imperiall gouernment, ouer all his creatures, as well earthly, as heauenly: yet hee honoured Adam (the first man whom he had created) with a ministerial gouernment ouer all earthly creatures, to rule and order them, so farre as should bee to his best commoditie and comfort.

Finally, God did in this his more particular prouidence: make a more speciall prouiso (as we vse to speake) for the propagation and increase of mankinde, aboue all other creatures.

Explication and proofe. That these things are so, we may easily perceiue by that which we read, Gen: chap: 1. 16. 17. 18.

Secondly, reade againe, Psalm: 104. 6. 7. 8. 9. Thou coueredst the earth with the deepe as with a garment: the waters would stand aboue the mountaines. But at thy rebuke they flee away, &c.

Thirdly,

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly prouidence.

The ground and meaning of it.

Thirdly, read, Gen: 1.28. and chap: 2.15, 16. 19. 20. For God allowed man a more liberall ordinarie and dieate, then to any other creature. And for the authorizing of him aboue the rest: he warned as it were, and gathered together all creatures before Adam, to take their names as hee should thinke good to call them. For that was a special token of subiection, like as when one man is content to weare the liuerie which annother bestoweth vpon him.

For the last point of the answere, read Gen: chap: 2. verse 22. the last part of the verse, and verses 23. 24. And let it be considered to the illustration of Gods holy prouidence in this behalfe: that God did not onely (as was obserued before) create onely one woman for one man, according to that which we read, Mal: 2. 15. (When he could haue made many weemen for one man) but also hee made the woman out of man: the like wereof he did not, in the making and producing of any other creature.

But I desire, that you should expresse, and declare, by your answere: the special prouidence of God, touching that special manner of the propagation of mankind, which he himselfe hath appointed.

Question. How haue you learned to answere to this point?

Answere. God gaue plainely to vnderstand, that he would not hold it lawfull, that man and woman should come together wanderingly, to satisfie their naturall lust, after the manner of the brute and vnreasonable creatures.

And therefore it pleased God, euen from the beginning, to ordaine and sanctifie the holy estate of mariage; to the ende hee might haue a blessed and holy posteritie, propagated and borne of them.

Explicatiõ and proofe.

This is that which our most blessed Sauiour hath respect vnto, Mat: chap: 19. 4. yea which he doth (verbatim) euen word for word repeate; and openeth the holy will and pleasure of God to haue beene alwaies constant therein: as it followeth in the same, 19. chap: verses 5. and 6. Haue yee not read (saith our Sauiour) that he which made them at the beginning, made them male and female. And said, For this cause shall a man leaue Father and Mother and cleaue vnto his wife, and they twaine shall be one flesh. Wherefore they are no more twaine but one flesh. Let not man therefore put a sunder that which God hath coupled together.

Mal. 2. 14. 15.

Thus then, we haue sufficient ground for the holy prouidence of God: both in the vpholding, and for the continuing; as also for the ordering and gouerning of his creatures: as well more generally, as also more particularly.

NOw last of all, what ground haue you, for the proofe of those ends, which God in his diuine prouidence hath likewise propounded to himselfe, in the same workes of his creation: both generally toward all visible and earthly creatures, and more particularly, toward mankind? For as touching the Angels we haue already considered, so much as we haue any ground for before.

Question. What ground, I say, therefore, haue you for those endes, which God hath propounded to himselfe, euen from the beginning of the creation: yea rather before the world was, euen from all eternitie?

Answere. The ground of the endes of Gods diuine prouidence in all the visible workes of his Creation: it is comprehended in that most memorable narration, which is set downe, Gen: ch. 2. from the 8. verse to the 18. as hath beene once mentioned, not long before.

I remember it well. Neuerthelesse, to the ende that we, resuming the worke in the due place thereof, may carie all so much the more commodiously before vs: let vs repeate the same here againe; so farre as may serue to our present purpose; and namely concerning the speciall prouidence of God toward mankinde. Wh at was that?

Question.

Answere. God created all things for his owne glorie, and mankind especially, aboue al earthly creatures, for the declaration of the most bountifull riches of his goodnes and mercy vpon them to their euerlasting happines and glory: vpon condition, they would continue constant in their holy faith, and obedience vnto him.

Question. Be it so. But what if (as it fell out indeede, and that not long after) mankinde should fall away from their good and gracious God, their Creator and maker?

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

The ground and meaning.

He further purposed, vpon that occasion, to magnifie the seueritie of his most holy and high iustice, euen to the euerlasting condemnation, and torment of all such, as should continue without repentance, in their rebellion against his most soueresigne and diuine Maiestie, and refuse to seeke their deliuerance, by that meanes onely which he minded to tender and offer vnto them.

Question. How may it appeare, from the text which you alledged: that the purpose of Gods diuine prouidence toward mankinde, was from the beginning, such as you haue in your answere affirmed?

Answere. By that tree of life, which God had planted in the middest of the garden, or orchyard, of Heden, a most pleasant plot of ground for the exceeding fruitfulnes and delicacie of it, according to the signification of the name of the countrie Heden, where it was situated: the Lord, of his most gracious goodnes, gaue Adam and Eue assurance, both for themselues and their posteritie, of euerlasting happines and glorie, if they would faithfully and constantly serue and obey him.

But on the contrarie, if they should disloially breake the commandement of their soueresigne (namely by eating of the fruite of that tree of the knowledge of good and euill, which was likewise planted in the middest of the same garden, and was the onely tree which was forbidden vnto them) God did as certainely threaten the euerlasting curse, both of bodie and soule, against them and all their posteritie: and that also, without any hope of recouerie for euer for any thing, that he did for the present, let them vnderstand or haue any the least inckling to the contrarie.

Explication and proofe. All that you haue answered is very true, as the text doth plainely giue euerie attentiue reader, to vnderstand. And it is further confirmed most euidently, by the effect it selfe which followed: according to that which the Prophet Moses hath recorded, Gen: 3. the two last verses of the chapter. For so soone as Adam and Eue, had eaten of the same forbidden fruite: they were for euer cast out of the garden of Heden, and might not be suffered thenceforth, once to eate of the tree of life. And thus bereauing themselues of all former solace and comforts; they did also make themselues, through their owne sinne, altogether naked, destitute, and forlorne. In the which estate also, should they haue continued for euer, yea increased more and more, according to the further increase of their sinne: had not God of his infinite mercy, giuen them the promise of such a remedie and reliefe, as they themselues could neuer haue thought vpon.

And thus haue we also, together with the conclusion of that which we haue to obserue, concerning the prouidence of God before the fall of mankind: we haue I say, herewithall, made an entrance vpon the other part, or proceeding of Gods holy prouidence, which we are now in the next place to consider of, touching the fall of mankind.

Question. LEt vs therefore proceed vnto it. And herein first, what are we to vnderstand by the fall of mankinde?

Answere. We are to vnderstand by this word fall.

First their vnfaithfulnes and disloialtie to God, in breaking his most holy and gracious commandement,

Secondly, the losse of that good and blessed estate; wherein they were by the goodnes of God, created and set.

Thirdly, all the miserie and confusion, both of soule and body, which they pulled vpon themselues, and their posteritie. Yea all that they pulled downe vppon the very earth, the which God did iustly accurse for their sake.

Explicatiõ & proofe. That Adam and Eue, did transgresse the commandement of God: loose their blessed estate: pull vpon themselues and their posteritie, yea vpon the earth, all curse and miserie: it is euident, Gen: chap: 3, verses 6.7.17.18.19.23.24. And all this, according to the threatening, or warning of God, Gen: chap: 2. 17. Of the tree of the knowledge of good and euill, thou shalt not eate of it (saith the Lord) for in the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt dye the death.

That

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

The groũd and meaning.

That is to say: death shall bee as it were the last pay and wages of sinne here in this world, beside many fore-runners and punishmẽts, making way vnto it: and then also, an enterance into a worse death, if it be not preuented. For vnder the the name of death, God threateneth all the punishments of sinne: both in this world, and after in Hell. The fore-running punishments, making way to this death; they did speedily take holde, and as it were arrest both Adam and his wife, so soone as they had consented in sinne against their God.

And that the punishment of their sinne, as well as the guiltines and contagion of it, hath spread it selfe vpon their posteritie: we read Rom: 5. 12. 13. 14. As by one man sinne entred into the world, and death by sinne, and so death went ouer all men, &c. And in many other places, as they haue beene elsewhere gathered together, and set downe by vs.

Now further, that the word (fall) is of so large a signification, as was obserued, it may be perceiued from the vse of it, in diuerse places of the holy Scriptures: as we read, Ier: 8. 4. Shall they fall and not arise? shall he turne away and not turne againe? The holy Prophet speaketh thus, to note the sinne, yea the obstinacie of the people, in their sinne. And Prou: 11. 5. The same word noteth the punishment of sinne. The wicked shall fall in his owne wickednes. Likewise Rom: 11. verses 11, 12. and 1. Cor: 10. 12. Let him that thinketh he standeth take heede, lest he fall. And Heb: 4. 11. Let vs studie therefore to enter into that rest (to wit, the rest of God) lest any man fall after the same ensample of disobedience. And againe, chap: 6. 6. And Reuel: 18. 2. The Angel cryed out mightily with a loud voice, saying, It is fallen it is fallen, Babilon the great Citie &c.

Question. But I pray you, was the eating of the forbidden tree, so great a sinne, that it should deserue to be punished so grieuously?

Answere. No doubt it was. And so much the rather, because the commandement of God, whereby he tried their faithfulnes, and obedience to him, was so gentle and easie a cõmandement. And also, because in this one sinne of theirs; many, yea in effect, all sinnes concurre and meete together.

Explicatiõ & proofe. The commandement of God was indeede very fauourable and easie; in that hee restrained them onely from one tree, and gaue them the free vse of aboundant varietie; yea and also in that he placed the tree of life, so as it might well haue beene in their eye continually: to admonish them, from the middest of the garden, of the singular loue & fauour of God toward them; Gen: 2. 9. 16. Read also, chap: 3. 2. where Eue her selfe acknowledgeth this bountie of God; and so is, from her owne knowledge and conscience, a witnes against her selfe. Thus the sinne may easily appeare to be very hainous.

Question. But how can you shewe, that this one sinne, containeth in effect al sinnes; both against God and themselues, and also against all that were to come of them?

Answere. First, they trod vnder foote the gracious commandement of God, together with the earnest warning and threatening, which he gaue them; as if there had beene neither equitie, nor truth therein.

Secondly, they did most vnthankefully neglect the exceeding great benefit of their creation: with all the bountifull mercies and dignities belonging thereunto, which God had most graciously bestowed vpon them.

Thirdly, they did most proudly and ambitiously aspire to be equall with God.

Finally, they did vnnaturally, and securely passe by, the consideration of that most woefull miserie, which they might well knowe, they should by their sinne, bring not onely vpon themselues, but also vpon their whole posteritie.

All these things are very plaine and euident against them: as euery one of any vnderstanding may easily see.

Question. But did they sinne thus grieuously against God, of their owne first and selfe motion?

Answere. The first motion, was not of themselues, but of the Diuel: who (as was noted before) beeing at the beginning created a good Angel, did soone after, of his owne accord, accord fall away from the Lord; and then alſo, ſpeedily by his malice and craft, brought mankinde to the like defection, through his moſt wicked and ſubtile temptation.

The grõs and meaning.

Queſtion. So it was indeed. What therefore, was that his moſt wicked and ſubtile tentation, whereby he deceiued them?

Anſwere. He perſwaded them, that if they would eate of the fruite of that tree, whereof God had forbidden them to eate: they ſhould then forthwith, be in a farre more excellent eſtate, then that was, wherein God had created and ſet them. And that God forbad them to eate of the fruite of it; becauſe he would kinder them, from that more high aduancement, which hee knewe, that they might, by this meanes, eaſily attaine vnto.

That indeede was his ſubtile temptation. Ye ſhall not certainely dye (ſaith the Diuel) but God doth knowe, that when yee ſhall eate thereof, your eyes ſhall be opened, and yee ſhall be as Gods knowing good and euill, Gen: 3. verſes 4. 5.

Queſtion. What meanes did the Diuel vſe, to ſuggeſt this moſt wicked and ſubtile temptation, to mankinde, at the beginning: for likely hee could not immediately and internally corrupt their minds, while they were yet in their vprightnes and integritie. What meanes therefore did the Diuel vſe?

Anſwere. The Diuel vſed the Serpent, which of all other creatures, hee knewe to be moſt fit for him to deceiue by. So by the Serpent, he aſſaulted woman firſt, whom he knewe alſo to be the weaker veſſell: and then hauing deceiued her, he did by her, induce man likewiſe to conſent and ioine in the ſame tranſgreſſion with her.

Explication and proofe. This alſo is plaine, Gene: 3. verſes 1. 2. 3. &c. Newe the Serpent was more ſubtile then any beaſt of the field, &c. Wherein, that the Diuel had his hand: wee may euidently perceiue by that which we read, Iohn: 8. 44. Where our Sauiour Chriſt affirmeth that of the Diuel which is here aſcribed to the Serpent. And it is euident alſo, in that other where in the holy Scriptures, euen from the ground of this hiſtorie: the Diuell is called by the name of the Serpent, euen that old Serpent the Diuel, &c. as Reuel: chap: 12. 9.

Queſtion. But doth not this, ſomewhat leſſen the ſinne of Adam and Eue: in that it was not originally of themſelues, but from the ſuggeſtion of the Diuel?

Anſwere. It doth not ſo leſſen it, that they ſhould not fully deſerue that puniſhment, which is moſt iuſtly fallen vpon them for it.

Nay rather, herein the ſinne of Eue was the greater, becauſe ſhe ſuffered ſo baſe a creature, as the Serpent was, to blaſpheme God as it did: and did not rather forthwith euen at the mention of the firſt word abhorre it, yea becauſe ſhe did not rather put it to preſent death then to haue conſented.

Explication and proofe. This indeed, would haue beene a worthy ſacrifice as it were, vnto God, if ſhe had had the grace ſo to haue done: or at the leaſt, to haue moſt vehemently rebuked it, and to haue taken aduiſe with her husband, what had beene beſt to be done, in ſo great and blaſphemous an indignitie, offered principally to God, and then alſo to themſelues.

And the ſinne of Adam alſo was the greater, becauſe he did giue place to the perſwaſion of his wife: whom, he as her head and guid appointed by God, ſhould haue reproued, and diſſwaded from ſo hainous a ſinne.

Hether to we ſee what is meant by the fall of mankinde.

NOw therefore, that we may proceed to conſider of the holy prouidence of God herein. Firſt, how can you ſhew, that it may ſtand wel with the good prouidence of God, that ſo many of his chiefe creatures, created very good, (to wit, all mankind beſide many of the Angels) ſhould be ſo left of God, that they ſhould thus wofully fall away from him, and plunge themſelues for euer into ſo grieuous miſerie: when as hee could by his holy prouidence (as wee would thinke) moſt graciouſly haue preſerued them from the ſame.

Queſtion. How therefore, I ſay, may we iuſtifie this, to ſtand well with the gracious prouidence of God, yea with that which we call the more ſpeciall prouidence of God, concerning his ſpeciall creatures?

Anſwere. The wiſedome and iuſtice of God is ſo high aboue all that we can conceiue: that wee needs not doubt, but he knoweth a perfect reaſon, and is able throughly to iuſtifie himſelfe, though we ſhould plead nothing on his behalfe.

It

Explicatiõ & proofe.

The Ground and meaning.

It is very true that you say, according to that which we read, Psal. 51. 4. God will approue himselfe to be righteous when he speaketh, and pure when he iudgeth.

Neuertheless, it will not stand with our dutie, so to leaue the defence of GOD, against those which cauill at his most holy iustice. If the cause of a false God came into question, we might well say with Ioash, the father of Gideon, Let Baal pleade for himselfe, Iudges: 6. 31. But seeing it is the most holy and iust cause of the onely true God, euen the Lord our God and heauenlie Father: howsoeuer, hee is able indeede, most sufficiently to pleade his owne cause without vs; yet (as was said) it standeth not with the dutie of the least of his seruants, to neglect to alledge what they can, for the maintaining of his righteousnes, against euery aduersarie, that feareth not to speake euill of the Lime. I doe therefore very earnestly desire, that you should, for the discharge of your most bounden duty, and therein, for the glory of God, and peace of your owne conscience, say something to this point. How may it stand with the good prouidence of God? How may we cleare the Lord from all fault or iust blame herein?

Question.

Answere. God of his goodnes, gaue both the Angels which fell, and also mankinde in the beginning of their creation: a pure and holy freedome of will, yea and power also to haue continued therein, if they would haue earnestly setled themselues, to haue abode in obedience to that most holy commandement, which hee had made knowne vnto them. But they of their owne accord, contrarie to his reuealed will, forsaking his commandement, lost their freedome: and so haue lost the fauour of God, & made themselues both vassalls to sinne, and also subiect to Gods wrath, as a iust punishment of the same.

And beside this, it must needes (in all good reason) bee iudged most equall and meete, that the Creator should in such sort create his creatures: and also set them in such an estate, and condition, as they might knowe and finde in themselues, that they are but creatures.

This could not haue beene, vnlesse they had beene created so, as they must finde it necessarie for them, to depend continually vpon the fauour and supportance of their Creator: and that for the same cause they should see themselues to stand most bound to humble themselues, and to yeeld all faithfull and constant seruice and duty vnto him.

Yea moreouer, this could not haue beene, vnlesse also, they had beene set in such an estate, as it might be possible for them, by vndutifulnes to fall from the same fauour and supportance of their most gratious Creator.

Finally, it could not haue beene, vnlesse through their owne default, God himselfe iustly permitting the same, they might haue sinned against him.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is very true. For nothing could seperate the good creature of God, from the most good & gratious Creator, but the wicked disobedience & vnfaithfull departure of the creature frõ him. And is it not very equall & meet, that when the creature will not retaine his liberty: that God should leaue him to himselfe, and so to find the inconuenience & euill of his owne losse? Verily it is wonder (saue that many haue lost all true light of reason) that any should be found so tooliſh, & void of vnderstanding; that they should not perceiue, that the most wise & iust God, knoweth well how to permit, yea to giue ouer his creature to the owne sinne, and not to stay him, when he seeth that he will wilfully runne into it: and yet to keepe his owne most holy Maiestie, most perfectly free, from the least iust and deserued blame.

Yea, be it further granted (as the truth it selfe requireth) that God should purpose & decree in himselfe, before the world was; that both many of the Angels, & also whole mankind, should through their owne default, depart from him, & sin against him, and so iustly depriue thẽselues of his grace & fauour, & therwithall procure his wrath & heauy punishments to fall vpon thẽselues: it is wonder, that any (specially of those who haue the instructions of the word of God before thẽ) should shew themselues more wicked in this behalfe, then the Apostatate Angels, & Adam & Eue thẽselues. Who knowing best, in what condition & manner God had created thẽ: durst not, neither could find any iust ground in their owne knowledge, or conscience, wherfore they should lay Benefe in Gods fatherly Prouidece.

The ground and meaning of it.

any the least blame vpon the Lord. Adam indeed pretendeth, as if he had some colour of defence for himselfe, in that he saith to God: The woman which thou gauest me, she gaue me of the tree, and I did eate. Wherin he layeth blame vpon his wife; but he durst not lay any blame vpon the Lord, neither had he any cause. And no doubt, the Angells that fell, were, and are still, & so shall remaine for euer, no lesse conuicted in themselues, but rather much more: according to the greater excellency and dignitie of their creation.

Wherfore, whosoeuer (not content with this) shall proceede malapertly to expostulate with God, why he wold not giue his creatures an absolute power to abide firme and sure, in that happy estate and condition wherein he had set them: let thē all iustly feare some singular punishment to approach against them, for so bold and notorious a presumption; vnlesse they shall speedily repent, and so preuent the same, through the tender mercy of our God. For shall God be subiect to mans inquisition, controulement, & censure? Shall he be vrged to giue a reason of all his secret counsells, and to satisfie euery mans malignant cauilling and clamorus interrogatories? Farre be it from any of the children of God to thinke so: but much further, that they should at any time presume to doe so. What answer might we then rather looke for, then such a one as King Salomon gaue to his mother Bath-sheba, concerning the vnlawfull desire of his brother Adonijah, that hee might haue Abishag to wife? Doest thou aske this? (saith King Salomon) Ask the Kingdome also. Adonijah hath spoken this word against his own life.

Verily to inquire of God any other reason of his secret counsells, then hee himselfe pleaseth to render, and not to rest in the good pleasure of his diuine and most holy and soueraigne will, rather then to feede the humerous conceit of our owne corrupt and presumptuous braine: it is most traiterously to aspire and to goe about to take the Crowne, as it were from the head of the Lorde. Wherevpon, what may iustly follow: euery one, not blinded and peruerted in himselfe, may easily deeme.

Let this therefore suffice, to shew that the whole blame of the fall of Adam and Eue, (and therewithall of the Angells also) lieth altogether vpon themselues, & nothing at all vpon the Lord: who is in all things, most worthy to be blessed and praised for euer. Amen.

Question. But may the same reasons proue, that the blame of Adam and Eue their fall, doth iustly extend it selfe to their posterity, as well as to themselues: that it should iustly be cast off as well as they?

Answere. The strength of the reasons, doth indeede reach so farre. For euen as through the goodnesse of God, the blessing of righteousnesse and life, was not onely bestowed vpon Adam and Eue themselues; but so as it should descend vpon their posterity, vnder this most equall condition; That they should faithfully and constantly, serue and obey the Lord their God, as was answered before: So now, by reason of their fall, not onely they, but also all their posteritie, are through the iustice of God, depriued of the glory of God, and made subiect to his most heauie displeasure and curse.

Explicatiō and proofe. The reason indeede is very good. For (as hath elsewhere beene obserued) seeing, euen among men, in course of humane iustice; the traitor against his earthly Prince, tainteth his blood for euer, if the Prince doe not of his clemencie restore it: much rather is it iust with God, to account all Adams posterity attainted, and vtterly debased in him. And so much the rather, because wee are naturally borne, not onely guilty of his offence, but also in our selues traiterously inclined against the Lord; as experience sheweth plainely and commonly, so soone, and so often, as the time of triall doth come: vnlesse God himselfe doe giue vs better hearts, then we bring with vs from the wombe. Thus much of the holy prouidence of God, touching the fall.

It followeth now, that we do consider of the prouidence of God after the fall. In which respect, first of all, what ground and testimony haue you in the holy Scriptures: for the more generall prouidence of God ouer all his creatures, since the fall of Adam.

In

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

The Ground and meaning.

In the fourth verse of the 16. chap: of the holy Prouerbs, King Salomon setteth down this notable wise sentence. The Lord hath made all things for his owne sake: yea euen the wicked for the day of euill.

Answere. And Amos chap: 3. 6. Shall there be euill in a citie (that is, any punishment for the sinne of the people) and the Lord hath not done it?

My Father (saith our Sauiour Christ) worketh hetherto, and I worke. Iohn. ch: 5. 17.

Likewise Act. 1. 7. The Father hath put the times and seasons in his owne power. And chap: 15. 18. God (saith the Apostle Iames) knoweth all his workes from the beginning of the world.

Explicatiõ & proofe. These indeede, are fit proofes and testimonies, that the prouidence of God, is generally ouer all, and in all things: whether it be for mercy, or for punishment: what way soeuer, or at what time soeuer, mercy is shewed, or punishment is executed, &c. And there are many other such like testimonies to be found. As Psal. 115. 3. Our God is in heauen: he doth whatsoeuer he will. And Psal: 135. 6. Whatsoeuer pleased the Lord, that did he in heauen and in earth, in the Sea, and in all the depthes. And Exod: 4. 11. Who hath giuen the mouth to man? or who hath made the dumbe, or the deafe, or him that seeth, or the blinde? haue not I the Lord? Likewise Deut: 32. 39. Behold now, for I, euen I am he, and there is no Gods with me: I kill, and giue life: I wound, and I make whole: neither is there any that can deliuer out of my hand, &c. Read also, Eccles. 3. 11. God hath made euery thing beautifull in his time, &c. Yet can no man finde out the worke, which God hath wrought from the beginning euen to the end. And ch: 7. 15. Behold the worke of God: for who can make straight that which he hath made crooked? And in the next ver. In the day of wealth, be of good comfort, and in the day of affliction consider: God also hath made this contrary to that, (or as one may say such ouerthwart neighbours, as it is an easie thing for the one to crosse ouer the way quickly to the other) to the intent, that man should knowe nothing of that which should for afterward betide him.

Moreouer, the generall prouidence of God ouer all his creatures, doth liuely appeare, and shew forth it selfe in this; that altho ugh for the sinnes of men, he drowned the world, in the daies of Noah: yet he preserued Noah himselfe, and his family. Yea, and of all kinds of other creatures of the earth also, some from perishing in the waters: to the end they might increase, and replenish the earth againe, according to their kinds, Gen: ch: 7. v. 1. 2. 3. 7. 8. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19.

And doth not our own daily experience teach vs, that God doth, euen to this day, ordinarily gouerne all his creatures, according to the naturall law (as one may say) of their first creation: though not so comfortably, and constantly, for the vse of mankinde; because of our own daily and continuall sins? Wherefore, worthily doth the Apostle Paul conclud, Rom: 11. 36. Of him and through him, and for him are all things, to him be glory for euer, Amen.

Thus much for the proofes of the prouidence of God more generally.

LEt vs come now to the proofes of the more particular, or more speciall prouidence of God. Concerning the which, wee promised to inquire, according to the order of the works of Gods creation, in the seueral daies therof.

Question. First therefore, what proofe haue you, for the prouidence of God, in the gouerning and disposing of the inuisible heauens?

Answere. The third petition, of that holy praier, which our Lord Iesus Christ taught his Disciples, is a plaine proofe of it: in that according to his warrant, wee pray, Thy will bee done in earth as it is in heauen.

Explicatiõ & proofe. This verily is one euident proofe. And the same, is confirmed againe, by the Lords own most holy and diuine praier, which is recorded in the 17. ch: of the Euangelist, Iohn, v. 24. Father I will (that is, it is my earnest desire) that they which thou hast giuen me, bee with me, euen where I am, that they may behold my glory, &c. Read also. Act: 6. 18. & 1. Cor: 6. 9. Eph: 5. 5. & Luk: ch: 13. v. 23. &c. where it is manifest, that the inheritance of heauen, is the gift of God: and that none shall be partakers of it, but they to whom God will giue it.

Now secondly: what proofe haue you, concerning the prouidence and holy gouernment of God, ouer the Angels: The which, because they are either good (to wit, such as retaine still the puritie and honor of their first creation, through the goodnes of God) or euill, in that, of themselues, they most wickedly lost their vprightnes and dignitie.

Question. In the first place, what ground and warrant haue you, for the holy prouidence and gouernment of God ouer the good Angels?

Answere. In the 4. verse of the 104. Psal: and Heb: 1.7. thus we reade He maketh the spirits his messengers, and his ministers a flame of fire. And ver. 14. Are they not all ministring spirits, sent forth to minister, for their sakes that shall be heiers of salvation?

These indeede are plaine proofes, concerning the good and holy Angels. Shew likewise, some proofe of the prouidence and gouernment of God, ouer the wicked Angels, which (as was saide) are of themselues, become vncleane spirits and Diuels.

Question. What proofe haue you for the prouident gouernment of God ouer them?

Answere. It is euident from hence, in that notwithstanding they be exceeding subtile and craftie, yet they cannot deceiue: and though they be of great power, and either way most willing and ready to doe all mischiefe, yet they cannot doe the least hurt or anoiance, without the permission and leaue of God. According to that which we read in the Storie concerning King Ahab: 1 King. 22. v. 21. 22. 23. And in the first and second chapters of the booke of Iob. And in the Gospell of Mat: chap: 8. 31.

Explicatiõ & proofe. These places are also euident & plaine, to the end you haue alledged them. And it is as easie with the Lord, to hinder the Diuel (yea all the Diuels as well as one) frõ working the greater mischiefes, as the smaller. The which also, if he should not of his infinite mercy worke for vs: how possibly should we be so graciously preserued, against their extreame craft & malice, as we are euery one of vs euery day? And otherwise, how might the holy Apostle, so cõfortably assure the Church of God, as he doth, Rom: 16. 20. That the God of peace shal tread Satan vnder our feete shortly?

BVt leauing this point, let vs now descend to the visible world, and the creatures thereof. In the gouernment whereof, insomuch as God doth so order all things (as was generally obserued) that by some disorder, and failing of the creatures, he might, from time to time, admonish mankind of their wicked disorders, and of their most vnworthy failings in all good dutie to God, euer since the time of our first wofull fall: and yet so, as it pleaseth him, alwaies in iudgement to remember mercy, concerning all that repent and turne vnto him, as we shall hereafter more fully declare: therefore in these respects, let vs consider of the prouidence of God, in the more particular gouernment of these his visible creatures.

Question. And first of all, what proofe haue you, that God doth in this wise gouerne his creatures of the first daies creation?

Answere. Touching the earth; the Lord accursed it, immediately, after the fall and defection of mankind from him: so that the good fruitfulnes of it, is euer since greatly diminished and impaired. Yea euer since that time, it hath bin inclined, to bring forth thorns & thistles, and all kind of weedes in great aboundance: as we read, Gen: chap: 3. verses 17, 18.

Explication and proofe. It is true. And so againe, Ps. 107. 34. The Lord turneth a fruitfull land into barrennes for the wickednes of them that dwel therein. But of this, more in the prouidence of the third daies work. Moreouer, how soeuer the Lord hath so laid the foundation of the earth, that it cãnot be moued by any creature: yet he himself hath, for the declaration of his power & iustice, shaken it by many earth-quakes, and thereby executed many of his iudgements. Whereof some are recorded in the holy Scriptures: as Amos ch: 1. 1. & Zech: 14. 5. Exod: 19. 18, & Mat: 27. 51, 54. And of other, we our selues haue had experiẽce not many yeares since (would God to the furthering of our feare, and repentance before God) and nowe verie lately againe, euen in the end of the yeare 1601. the 24. of December, if happily yet at the last, it might awaken vs out of our grosse & general securitie. The Lord hath also diuers times heretofore, and likewise very lately, darkened the the heauens vpon vs, couering and hiding the beautie of them from vs, as it were with a haire-cloth, by many blacke tempests and dark eclipses, &c. But of this also, more in the prouidence of God, concerning the instruments of light, which were the worke of the 4. day.

The ground and meaning of it.

Question. IN the meane while, we come to the workes of the second day.
What proofe haue you, from whence wee may perceiue, that God hath his prouidence in the ordering and gouerning of them?

Answere. This is euident, from the vehement tempestes of windes, and raine, with very grieuous thunders, and lightenings: in that, notwithstanding (as experience it selfe confirmeth oftentimes, that they might easily growe so forcible and strong, that they should blow downe our houses ouer our heads, or drowne, or burne vs vp, as the old world was drowned in the daies of Noah when he onely and his family were saued, and as Sodom and other cities, were burnt with fire from heauen when Lot was deliuered, and as the houses of Iobs children were sodainely blowne downe vpon them) Yet the Lord partly performing his speciall promise, that he would not againe drown the world, and generally, euen of his accustomed goodnes and mercy, he doth so moderate and restraine these his creatures, that seldome (in comparison) doe they greatly hurt and annoy vs.

Explicatiō and proofe. These indeed, are familiar confirmations of Gods holy gracious & fatherly prouidence. For without such his fauourable moderation & restraint, we may learne further, of what exceeding great force tempestes might be vsually, as sometimes they haue beene and stil are: according to that which we read, Psal: 29.3, &c. And Iosh. ch: 10. v. 11. At what time, the Lord destroied more of the enemies of his people, with hailestones from heauen, then they themselues slewe with the sword. Read also, Exod: 9. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. where it is recorded, that the Lord did exceedingly punish the Egyptians by haile, with lightenings and thunder. And is it not a plaine demonstration, that God ruleth the heauens; seeing it is in his power to make them as it were brasse ouer our heades as he did in the daies of the wicked K: Ahab, so that it rained not for the space of three yeares and sixe moneths together? 1. King: 17, 1. 2. & ch: 18, 1. 41. &c. Iames 5. 17. 18. And seeing he can cause it (of his mercie) to raine in one citie, and (because of his displeasure) not to raine in the citie next vnto it? yea seeing he can & doth at his pleasure send raine vpon one field, & not vpon the next? as Amos. ch: 4. 7. And is it not plaine in that it is written, Ps. 65. 9. 10. that it is God, who visiteth the earth, and watereth it at his pleasure? And Psal: 68. 9. He sendeth his gracious raine to refresh the earth; hee refresheth it when it is wearie. &c. And Mat: 5. 45. It is God that sendeth raine. And moreouer, is not the same manifest in that (as touching the windes) he is said to drawe them out of his treasures? Psal: 135. 7. And in that he vseth them to singular mercy, when so it seemeth good vnto him? as Gen: ch: 8. 1. and Exod: 14. 21. and 1. King. 18. 45. And also for great iudgement and punishment against the wicked? as in the former place of Exod: and chap. 15. 8. 10. Read also Ionah: ch: 1. 4. and ch: 4. 8. Are not al these (I pray you) euident proofes, and demonstrations of Gods holy prouidence, in the ruling and gouerning of these his creatures? No doubt they are. And therefore worthily is the prouidence of God, celebrated in the Church of God, in this behalfe. Psal: 147. v. 15. 16. 17. 18. Finally, to this purpose read that notable Scripture in the booke of Iob: chap: 37, from the beginning of the chapter to the 19. verse. Thus much concerning the workes of the second day.

Question. NOw let vs come to the prouidence of God in gouerning the works of the third day: what proofe can you shewe for this?

Answere. The drowning of the world before mentioned, in that all the fountaines of the great deepe did then breake vp at the commandement of God: as wee read Gen: chap: 7. 11. And likewise, the clearing or emptying of the earth againe, within a few daies after: they are very plaine, sinsible, and famous demonstrations of it for euer. The breaches also, which the Seas doe sundry times attempt and make: doe easily shew, what they would doe,

Tobe se in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

Explicatiō & proofe.

if they were not restrained and holdin, by the almightie, and most gracious ouer-ruling power of God.

These are so plaine proofes indeede, as all but they that will not see, must needes acknowledge the euidence of them.

We may read the same also testified, Psal. 89.9. Thou rulest the raging of the Sea: when the wawes thereof arise, thou stillest them. And Ps. 93.3.4. & 107.23.24.25.26.27.28.29. Thus therfore, the prouidence of our God, euidēty appeareth in the ordering of the Seas, and of the dry land: so farre as concerneth the first part of the workes of the third daies creation.

Shewe likewise, some proofe of the same prouident gouernment of God, concerning the fruites of the earth, the which also God created the same day.

Question. What proofe haue you hereof?

Answere. In this respect, thus we read, Psal: 74.17. The Lord hath made Summer and winter. And Psal: 104. verses 13, 14, 15. God watereth the mountaines from his chambers, and the earth is filled with the fruite of his workes. He causeth grasse to growe for cattell, and herbes for the vse of man, that he may bring forth bread out of the earth. And wine that maketh glad the heart of man, & oile to make the face to shine, and bread that strengtheneth mans heart.

Explication and proofe.

This one testimonie, is so plaine and plentiful, that it may well stand in stead of many: to testifie the fatherly goodnes and bountie of God, in this behalfe. Read also, 2. King: 19.29. And on the contrarie, it is as clear, that God, for the punishment of the sins of the people, maketh the earth barren and vnfruitfull, sendeth dearth and famine, &c. as we read, Ioel: ch: first and second. Likewise, Amos. 4.6.7.8.9. Yea so, that God doth euen turne aboundance into want, & curseth the very plentie of those, that doe abuse it: according to the threatening of God. Deut: 28.17.22, 23.38.39.40.41.42. Let this sutfice concerning the prouidence of God, in gouerning the creatures, created in the third day.

Question. WHat proofe can you now alledge, concerning the workes created in the fourth day: to shew that God doth likewise rule & gouerne them?

Answere. This also may be made manifest, from record of ancient experience, in that at the praier of Ioshua, God staied the ordinarie course of the Sunne and the Moone by the space of a whole day: yea so, that the day of this staying of the Sunne was as long as two daies ordinarily.

Explication and proofe.

This did the Lord, to the end his people might auenge themselues: or rather that they might execute the vengeance of the Lord vpon his enemies, the more effectually. So we read Iosh: chap 10. verse 12.13.14.

Fiue howers in going backe, and tiue in going forward againe: the choise of the signe being offered to the King about the mid-time of the day.

And in the daies of the raigne of good K. Hezekiah, the Lord caused the Sun to goe backe tenne degrees: 2. King: chap: 20, 11. and Isai: 38, 8. So that the day of this going backe of the Sun, was lengthened the space of ten houres, so that it was two and twentie houres long as some doe probably esteeme the degrees of the dyall to be euery halfe hower, foure and twentie in all.

The same prouidence of God, is manifested also, by a like vnwonted course, concerning the darkenes, the which God continued vpon the land of Egipt, by the space of three daies together: and that also in so palpable a manner, that the Egiptians sawe no glimse of light, either from Sunne, or Moone, or any Starre, for all that while. Exod: 10, 22.23.

The like is to be said concerning the darkenes which was at the crucifying of our Sauiour Christ: as we read, Mat: chap: 27, 45.

So that, it cannot bee denied, but must needes bee granted, that the Lord hath openly auouched his prouidence and gouernment, ouer his heauenly creatures: as well as ouer the heauens themselues, and as ouer the earth, and the waters, as we sawe before.

And in this respect, doth the Lord by his holy Prophet, animate and imbolden his people, against all superstitious feare of the signes of heauen after the manner of the heathen: Ierem: chap: 10, 1.2.

This

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence. This therefore shall suffice for this present, to proue the gouernment and prouidence of God, concerning the works of his creation in the fourth daye.

The Creed & meaning.

THe workes of the fifte daies Creation, are nowe to be considered.

Question. By what proofes, may we be confirmed to beleeue, that God by his most holie prouidence, ruleth and gouerneth ouer them: to wit, ouer the fishes of the Sea, and ouer the fowles of heauen?

Answere. Touching the fishes of the Sea, wee haue an euident instance, or example, to shewe the prouident hand of God; in that hee prepared the great Whale-fishe, to receiue the Prophet Ionah, at the same instant, when he was throwne out of the shippe into the Sea: and in that according to the time appointed of God, the same fishe cast vp Ionah, vppon the drie lande againe. Ionah: chapter 1. 17. and chap: 2. 10.

Likewise, wee haue other notable instances: namelie, in that when our Sauiour Christ was to pay tribute mony: a fish came to Peters angle, that had a piece of twentie pence in the mouth of it, for the discharge of the tribute: according as our Sauiour Christ tolde Peter that it should so come to passe. Matth: 17. 27. And againe, in that at another time, at the commandement and direction of our Sauiour Christ his disciples had forthwith, an extraordinarie draught of fishes, after they had wearied themselues with fishing, and could take no fishe, all the night before. Luke Chapter 5. verse 4. &c. And againe Iohn: 21. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Explicatiõ and proofe These indeede are very euident instances, concerning the fishes of the Seas. For these things came not thus to passe, according to a bare foreknowledge, that such a fish, or such and such a companie, or skole of fishes, should at that time be in such or such places. But our Sauiour Christ knewe, that God had by his Diuine prouidence appointed, that these fishes, must for such purposes, come to those very places, & there to attend the pleasure of God, to do his will, in the appointed times & seasons therof, euen at his souereigne cõmandement.

But you haue not yet shewed any grounde, for the proofe of Gods prouidence and gouernment, ouer the Foules of the aier, which were a parte of the fifte dayes creation.

Question. What further proofe haue you therfore, for this pointe?

Answere In the 9. verse of the 147. Psalme, the holie Psalmist saieth thus. Our God giueth foode to the yong rauens that crie. The same doth the Lord himselfe affirme also, in the booke of Iob: chap: 39 verse 3. Who (saith God) prepareth for the rauens his meat, when his birds crye vnto God, wandering for lacke of meat? As though he should say. It is I the Lord onlie, that by my prouidence doe make prouision for them. And 1. Kings, 17. 4 5. 6. Wee read it testified, that God vsed the rauens for his instruments, to feede Eliah his Prophet. And Matth: chapt: 6. 26. Our Sauiour Christ affirmeth, that it is our heauenly Father, that feedeth the foules of heauen. And againe, chapter 10. 29. A sparrowe, (saith hee) falleth not to the grounde, without your heauenly Father.

Explicatiõ and proofe. That is to say, it doth not miscarie, or come to the death of it, by falling into the net of the fowler, neither is killed by him that shoteth with the stone-bow, or is taken of the rauenous fowle; or any other waye: but euen as it pleaseth God by his diuine prouidence to dispose therof. For such is the signification of the phrase, to fall to the earth; according to that 2. King: ch: 10. vers. 10. Ther shall fall vnto the earth, nothing of the word which the Lord at any time speaketh.

Moreouer Iob: chapt: 39. 20. God is said to watch ouer the egges of the Estrich, so that they are hatched in due time: though this fowle, laying them in the sande, be negligent in looking to the hatching of them.

And in the same chapter, God denying vnto man, the gouernment of other wilde fowles, he doth iustly challenge it as proper to himselfe: and giueth the instance in the wild hawke, & the Eagle, which without the help of man, prouide for themselues, but not without the gift of God: who maketh them (as the Scriptures speake) Lord of the wing; and directeth them also, whether they shall flie to finde their foode. These shall suffice, to shewe the prouidence of God, ouer the workes of the fifte daye.

The ground and meaning.

Reliefe in Gods Fatherly prouidence.

Let vs nowe goe forward, to the workes of the sixt day. And first of all, concerning the cattell, which are more tame: euen such as God created and made by nature more gentle and seruiceable, for the speciall and common vse of man; such as are the horse, the oxe, and the asse, &c.

Question.

What proofe of holie Scripture haue you to confirme you to beleeue, that God hath a prouident care and gouernment ouer them?

Answere.

In the 104. Psal, verse 14. The Lorde our God (saith the Prophet) causeth grasse to growe for the cattell. And Psalme 147. 9. Hee giueth to beastes their foode. And Psal. 36. 6. The Lord preserueth both man and beast.

Explication and proofe.

These are plaine testimonies. And it may yet further appeare, by that commandement, which God giueth to man: that hee deale well with his oxe, which treadeth out: that is, which by treading thresheth out his corne, &c. And in that hee putteth into the heart of euery man, that hath regarde of iust and equall dealing, to regard the life of his beast. Prouer: chapt: 12. 10. and Deuteron: 25. 4.

Furthermore, that the prouidence of God ruleth such brute beasts, we haue a verie speciall instance. 1. Sam: chapt: 6. verse. 12. where wee reade, that the milch kine, new taken away from their sucking calues, and neuer acquainted to the yoake: yet by the appointement of God, they doe of their willing accord, draw the Ark of the Lord, out of the countrie of the Philistimes, home to the Israelites, to whom it did by right belong, and not vnto them.

But leauing these, let vs come to the wilde beasts.

Question.

What proofe haue you, to shew the prouident gouernment of the Lord God ouer them?

Answere.

In the 21. verse of the 104. Psalme before alledged. The Lions (saith the Psalmist) roare after their praye, and seeke their meat at God.

Explication and proofe.

The same is likewise giuen to vnderstand, in the two first verses of the 39. book of Iob: Wilt thou hunt the praye for the Lion (saith the spirit of God?) & fill the appetite of the Lions whelpes, when they couch in their places, and remaine in the couert, to lye in waite. As though the Lord should say: this were too hard & dangerous a prouince (as we may say) for man to vndertake. And againe, in the same chapter, from the 4. verse, the same is giuen to be considered of vs, concerning the wilde goate, the wilde asse, the hinde, and the vnicorne.

In the first book of the Kings chapter 13. 26. God deliuered a certaine Prophet, to be slaine of a Lion, which met him by the appointment of God to the same ende: because hee had disobeyed his commandement.

Neuertheless, God so limited and restrained the Lion, that hee did not deuoure anie part of him: verses 24. 25. And Dan: chapt: 6. 22. it is recorded that God did, by the ministerie of his holie Angel, so shut the hungrie Lions mouthes, to whom the Prophet Daniel was throwne, that they could doe him no hurt at all, because he beleeued in God, that he was able to deliuer him.

But 2. King: ch: 2. verse 24. God sent two Beares out of a wood, and gaue them power, to destroye and tare in pieces, two and fourtie of those wicked children, that mocked the holie Prophet of God Elisha. And thus the Prouidence of God reacheth to the gouernment of euerie wilde beast.

Question.

Nowe of the brute beastes of the earth, that kinde onelie is behinde, which creepe vpon the earth. What proofe haue you, that they also, are ruled and gouerned by the prouidence of God?

Answere.

Wee reade in the 21. Chapter of the booke of Numbers, verse 6. that God sent fierie Serpents, among the people of Israel which stong them so that many of them dyed of the inflammation of the poison, because of their murmuring against God, and his faithfull seruant Moses.

Explication and proofe.

The prouidence of God, and his gouernment ouer this kinde of creatures, euen to the least of them: may euidently be argued from hence, that it pleased him to preserue a remnant of them, that they should not be drowned in the generall deluge or floode: as wee reade Gen: 7. verses 8. 14. 17.

We

Beleefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

The Ground & meaning

Wee may likewise perceiue it euidentlie, from those punishments which God layed vpon the Egiptians, by sending frogges, and lice, and grashoppers, which wee may well enough reckon among the creeping things, as beeing neere of kinde vnto them. Moreouer, we may vnderstand it to be so, by this: that as hee threatneth, so hee sendeth many times, the caterpillers, and other wormes, for the punishment of the sinnes of his people, Ioel. chapter 1. 4. As also in that vpon their repentance, hee taketh them away againe; as chapt: 2. 25. and Malac: chapt: 3. 11. This parte of Gods prouidence, is not to be neglected of vs. For it is so farre from derogating from the honour of it, as wee shall haue occasion hereafter to obserue further: that it doth on the contrary, most liuely set out the absolute perfection of it; in so much as it extendeth it selfe, euen to the most wise, iust, and exact ordering of the least and baseste worme, that creepeth vpon the face of the earth.

AND nowe wee come to the last, and greatest worke, of the creation of the sixth day: to wit: the making of mankinde. Whom, as God created by his speciall wisedome: so he gouerneth them with their whole posterity, with a principall, and most prouident care and regarde, aboue all other of the earthlie creatures, from time to time. Not onely before the fall (as wee haue alreadie seene) but also euer since the fall, as wee are henceforth to inquire.

The which, that wee may doe in some commodious course: wee must necessarilie proceed by some diuision, or distribution of parts, or members, such as are to be distinguished in this argument. For by reason of the fall of mankinde, some (as reprobates) are iustly left in their sinnes: wherein also they doe willinglie continue, yea and harden their heartes, against all holie meanes tending to the contrary. Other (being elected according to the free grace and mercie of God) they hearken to God, repent of their sinnes, and dutifullie imbrace all meanes and helpes, which God vouchsafeth them for their furtherance to euerlasting happines and saluation.

Wherfore, let vs accordingly, inquire of these partes of Gods most prouident gouernment: as well concerning the one, as the other.

And herein also, not onely concerning the bodies, and outward estate: but principallie, concerning the gouernment of the soules and spirits of men. Neither yet let vs inquire of particular persons alone: but also of Families, and whole States, Cities, Nations, and Kingdomes. For all are most wiselie, and exactly, ruled and gouerned: not by a generall and confused prouidence, but euen by a particular and vigilant care, euery way.

FIrst therefore, concerning the wicked; what Ground haue you, that God by his diuine prouidence, gouerneth and ruleth, or rather ouer-ruleth and bridleth them? Wherein also, seeing wee are to begin with particular persons, concerning their outward and priuate estate.

Question. What Ground haue you for the proofe of the prouidence of the Lord God herein?

Answere. Wicked Caine, the first man after the fall, may be a notable example hereof, in that the Lorde God minding to make him, to bee in the sight of all men, a visible, (and as it were a branded) example of his temporall punishment, heere in this worlde, for his vnnaturall and cruell fratricide, or murthering of his godly Brother: hee graunted him therefore, the protection of his life, so that none should take it away from him. Though indeede, God did this in such sorte, that his life had in the bosome of it, the continuall discomfort, and feare of death; yea and therewithall, through the guiltines of a most euill conscience: an expectation of a most wofull iudgement, to fall vppon him afterward.

Explication and proofe. So indeede, the holie historie it selfe, giueth plainely to euerie aduised and attentiue Reader to vnderstand: Genes: chapter 4. 11. 12. &c. From the which decree of God, concerning the safegarde of this wicked mans life; so long as it was his pleasure, for examples sake to continue the same: wee may iustly affirme, that the liues of all the wicked, are so in the hand of God, that none can take life away from them, till the time appointed of God be come. But when that time is once come; God himselfe will roote them out, according to their desert: and prosper euerie meanes, which hee himselfe hath prepared to that ende.

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

The Groũd & meaning

Moreouer, as God maintaineth the life of euerie wicked man, so long as he thinketh good to let them liue; so he alloweth vnto them, the outward meanes, and naturall comfortes of this naturall life: Matth. 5. 45. and Psal: 17. 14. The which their allowance from God, the godlie are warned, that they doe not enuie or repine against them for it: as wee read, Psalm: 37. 1. and in diuers other places.

The wicked are partakers also of bodilie health, which is a good gifte of God: yet so, as when they haue abused this gifte, to the full measure of their sinne, God taketh away both health & life, as Iob: 21. 7. &c. and Ps: 73. 3. 4. &c. Read also, 1. Sam: 5. 6. and 2. Chron: 21. 12. 14. 15. Actes 12. 23. Isai: chapt: 37. verses 36. 37. 38.

Neuertheless, let vs herewithall obserue, that the Lord doth not seldome giue vnto the wicked (whose portion is in this life onelie) more speedie, and also longer continued outward prosperitie, then hee doth to his owne children: as in this point euen Caine, and his posteritie, may from the beginning be examples or instances, in that they flourished and ruffled in the worlde, while Adam and Eue, were without posteritie, from any other childe: and no doubt grieued to behold the wickednes of Caine, vnto the hundred and thirtith yeere of their age, before God gaue them Sheth, to succeede in stead of godly Abell. And the same is euident from the examples of Ishmael and Esau, who had eyther of them, a long starte before Iaakob, as touching the wealth and glorie of this present euill world. Gen: chapt: 36, 31.

And herewithall also, for expeditions sake, let vs take the same for examples, how God giueth this outward prosperitie and aduancement, not onely to particular persones in their priuate estate, but also to whole publike states and kingdomes, though they be wicked and vngodly: as it is further euident, by the rising of all the chiefest Monarchies of the worlde, among the Assyrians, Babilonians, Medes, and Persians, and among the Romans. Yet so as their falling and dissolution, is likewise determined, and ordered by the Sacred prouidence of God, as well as their rising: according as the holy Prophesies giuen forth therof, by holie inspiration from God, doe plainly euict. Of the which, read a speciall instance, Dan: chap: 5. 25. God hath numbred thy kingdome, and hath finished it: saith the Prophet to king Belshazzar. And generally, it is most certainly determined by the Lord: that not onely particular persons, but also that whole Families, States, and Kingdoms, that will not serue the Lord, shall perish at the last, through the iust displeasure and iudgement of God; when once their day is come, and the measure of their sinne is at the full. As Prou: 2. 22. And 3. 33. and 14. 11. Isai: 54. 15 &c. Ier: 25. 15. Zech: 14. 17. &c. Psalme 75. 4. 5. 6. &c.

God manifesteth his prouidence, by his iudgements vpon the wicked from day to day, in all places, as we might see, if we would diligently mark them. He bringeth secrete sinnes, many times to light, verie strangelie, euen before men: and how much more then, may wee iustlie perswade our selues, that all things are naked and manifest before himselfe?

Thus the prouidence of God ruleth all the wicked of the earth, as touching their persons and outward estate: both particularlie and generallie, and also priuatelie, and publikelie.

Question. But may the same also, be truely affirmed, concerning their soules, wherein is seated the fountaine of their wickednes: that they are likewise gouerned, by the holie prouidence of the Lord?

Yea

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

The ground and meaning of it.

Yea, there is no doubt, but it may be truly affirmed: and accordingly, it ought to be so acknowledged and beleeued, of euery true beleeuer.

Question. In what sense may it be truly affirmed, and ought also to be beleeued that it is so?

Answere. Whereas the wicked, through selfe-loue and pride in themselues, and of wilfull malice and despite against others, (they following therein the suggestion of the diuell) doe endeuour by all meanes, to abuse that wit and strength which they haue naturally: howsoeuer God doth not vsually take away from them their wit and strength, neither doth bereaue them of all meanes, in such sort that they cannot neither deuise nor practise, great and mischieuous enterprises: yet, by his ouer-reaching wisedome, together with his most holie and ouer-ruling power, he turneth their deepest deuises, and mightiest designements whatsoeuer, to serue his owne most soueraigne counsell and purpose, to the glorie of his owne name, and the finall benefit and comfort of his Church and people.

Explicatio & proofe. This is notably to be seene, in the violent practise of the Sabeans and Caldeans against Iob, if wee compare the first and the last chapters of that booke together. Likewise, in the subtile practise of the wicked Iewes, against our Sauiour Christ, according to that. Act 2.23. And in the practise of the brethren of Ioseph against him. Gene. 37. 27. &c. For (as Ioseph saith, vpon comfortable experience: chap: 45. 5.) God sent me before ye, for your preseruation. And chapter 50. 21. When yee thought euill against me, God disposed it to good, &c. Reade also Isai: chap: 10 5, 6, 7, &c. O Ashur, the rod of my wrath, &c. But hee thinketh not so, neither doth his heart esteeme it so: but he imagineth to destroy and cut off not a few nations, &c. But when the Lord hath accomplished all his worke vppon Mount Sion and Ierusalem, I will visite the fruit of the prowd heart of the King of Ashur, and his glorious and prowd lookes. And chap. 37. 8, 29. Because thou ragest against me (saith the Lord) and thy tumult is come vp into mine eares; therefore will I put my hooke into thy nostrills, and my bridle in thy lippes, &c. And verses 36, 37, 38. The Angell of the Lord went out, and smote in the Campe of Ashur, an hundred fourescore, and fiue thousand, &c.

Yea, so doth the Lord ouer-rule the counsells, purposes, and enterprises of the wicked; that whereas they in their wilfulnesse, say in themselues, and of themselues, that they will doe this, or that euill and mischiefe: God also saith in his iustice (euen so often as he seeth it meete to permit and leaue them to their owne will) that they shall doe it. Yea, God himselfe doth it by them; we meane the action or thing that is done, as it is a iust punishment any way, eyther vpon themselues, or vpon any other by them: but not in respect of the euill quality, nor according to the euill ends, which the wicked propound to themselues, in their vngodly enterprises. And thus God, aboue that which the wicked intend, (seruing his one holy counsell by them) he doth neuertheless, by that light of nature which is in them, and by the rebukes of his owne spirit, in such sort conuince their consciences of their wickednesse, euen before they doe commit it: that they stand iustly condemned in themselues, for euery wicked thing, which at any time they eyther minde or doe. This is manifest by the examples before alledged, as also by that which the Lord saith, concerning the hardening of Pharaohs heart, *Ex.*7.3. and ch. 9.12, 16. and ch. 10.1, 20. and ch. 14.4. And likewise, concerning the open defiling of King Dauids wiues. 2.*Sa.*12.10, 11, 12. And according to that which the same King saith of railing Shimei; that the Lord had bidden him curse Dauid. ch. 16.10. According also, as the Lord is said, to put a lying spirit in the mouth of Ahabs false Prophets, to the end he might, by their euill counsell, bring euill vpon the wicked King, as the Prophet Michaiah told him: as we reade 1. King. 22.23.

Neuertheless, GOD doth many times, as pleaseth him, take the wise, and snarle them so in their owne crafts, that he doth not onely ouerthrow their enterprises, when they haue made some entrance into the execution of them,

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

The Ground & meaning

them, but alſo otherwhile, hee doth euen fruſtrate and defeate them ſo, that they cannot finde the opportunitie, or any meanes, to their liking and deſire, once to ſet them on foote: as we read, Iob: 5. 12. 13. 1. Corinth: 3. 19. 20. Luke chapt: 1. 51. Wherof alſo we haue a notable example, in the ouerthrow of Ahitophels counſell: 2. Sam: 17. 14. And in the ouerthrowe of Hamans intended crueltie, as we read in the booke of Eſter.

Finallie, God doth often times alter and change, the purpoſes and reſolutions of the wicked, by altering and changing their owne affections. As the memorable example of Eſau plainely ſheweth, in that, albeeit he came againſt his brother Iaakob with an hoſtile mind: yet before he came at him, his heart was ſo changed, that he dealeth kindely and brotherlie; aboue all that might be expected, from ſuch a prophane ruffian, as hee was. Geneſ: chap: 33. And before this, in the 31. chapt: of the ſame booke of holie Scripture, wee reade of ſome thing a like change, in the heart and purpoſe of Laban: in his wrathfull purſuit after the ſame good ſeruant of God. And after this, Exod: chapt: 12. 35. &c. wee read, that at the departure of the Iſraelites out of Egipt, God gaue them ſuch fauour in the eyes of their moſt hatefull aduerſaries: that they gaue them their iewels of Gold, and iewels of ſiluer, and raiment.

Thus then, whereas the preparations of the heart are in man: we may ſee (according to the holie Prouerb,) the anſwere of the tongue is of the Lorde. Prou: 16. 1. And againe in the 9. verſe of the ſame chapter. The heart of man purpoſeth his way: but the Lord doth direct his ſteppes. And verſe 7. When the waies of a man pleaſe the Lord, hee will make euen his enemies at peace with him. And chapt: 21: 1. Euen the Kings heart is in the hand of the Lorde, as the riuers of waters: hee turneth it whether ſo euer it pleaſeth him. According to that wee read Pſal: 106. 46. God gaue his people fauour, in the ſight of all them that led them captiues. And Ier: 10. 23. O Lord (ſaith the Prophet) I know that the way of man is not in himſelfe, neither is it in man to walke, and to direct his ſteppes.

Such doubtles, is the effectuall prouidence and gouernment of God, ouer the moſt wicked and vngodlie, their thoughts, purpoſes, and actions; hee himſelfe abiding perfectlie righteous, without any the leaſt participating with them in their ſinne: no more then the Sunne is defiled by the carrion, or is the proper cauſe of the ſtinche and putrefaction of it, by caſting the pure beames therof vpon it. For this the carion hath properly of it ſelfe, &c.

BVt leauing the wicked: let vs nowe come to the moſt choiſe and Fatherlie Prouidence of God, in the gouernment of his owne deare children. The which part (as one may ſay) of his diuine Prouidence, is of all other moſt gratious and admirable: ſpeciallie concerning their ſoules, which are moſt deare, and precious before him.

Queſtion. Yet before wee come to this pointe: what proofe of holie Scripture haue you, concerning the perſons, and outward eſtate of euerie one of Gods children, more priuatelie and particularlie; that God doth in ſpeciall and tender manner watch ouer them, and rule and gouerne them?

Anſwere. In the 34. Pſalme, verſes 18. 19. Many (yea & the ſame alſo great) are the troubles of the righteous man (ſaith the holie Pſalmiſt) but the Lorde deliuereth him out of them all. Hee keepeth all his bones, not one of them is broken. And in this holie confidence, he ſaith further. Thou art my God My times are in thy hand, &c. Pſalm: 31. 14. 15. And Pſal: 71. verſes 5. 6. Thou art my hope ô Lord God, euen my truſt from my youth. Vpon thee haue I bene ſtayed from the wombe: thou art hee that tooke me out of my mothers bowels, &c. And Pſalme 116. 15. Precious in the ſight of the Lord is the death of his Saints. Finallie, Pſalm: 16. 9. My fleſh alſo doth reſt in hope.

Explication and proofe. Here we may ſee plainelie, that the prouidence of God, is verie gratious toward the outward eſtate and perſones of his children; in ſo much as hee will proſecute them with his fauour, euen to the death, to the graue, and afterward: vntill hee ſhall raiſe them out of the duſt againe.

And

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly prouidence.

The Grõũd and meaning.

And concerning his tender care ouer vs, in this life: read more Pſalme 3. Hee will preſerue his ſeruants againſt thouſands that riſe vp againſt them. And Pſalme 91. Hee doth defend them from manie contagious diſeaſes, euen from the noiſome plague and peſtilence. Or it hee doe afflict them this waye, for their triall, he doth neuertheles tender them with a fatherlie pittie and compaſsion: wherein hee neuer faileth ſuch as put their truſt in him. As Heb: 12. 5. &c. And as the example of king Hezekiah Iſai: chapter 38. whom the Lorde God did moſt gratiouſlie cure of his grieuous diſeaſe, confirmeth the ſame.

And yet further, touching the ſpeciall care of God, ouer the outward eſtate of his children: let vs conſider of the reaſon which our Sauiour Chriſt vſeth, Math: 6. 26. God your heauenlie Father prouideth for the fowles of heauen. Are not yee much better then they? To witte, better in Gods gracious account, and eſtimation for Chriſtes ſake: howſoeuer in our ſelues, wee are moſt vnworthie, by reaſon of our ſinnes. Whervnto accordeth that which we read chap: 10. 31. where our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith thus, Feare ye not, yee are of more value then many ſparrowes. Yea and all the haires of your head are numbred. This alſo God hath of olde moſt famouſlie teſtified, by his feeding of the Iſraelites with Manna from heauen: and by giuing them water out of the rock, by the ſpace of fourtie yeares together.

And likewiſe, by many other gracious effectes of his fatherlie prouidence, in feeding manie, in the times of dearth and famine: as the Prophet Eliah, and the widdowe of Zarephath, &c. Read alſo Pſalme 34. 10. Iſai: 65. 13. and Pſal: 113. 7. 8. 9. And Gen: 24. 1. It was the Lord who bleſſed Abraham with all outward bleſſings.

It is euident therfore, that the Lord our God, hath a ſpeciall care, and Fatherly prouidence, euen ouer the bodies, and outward eſtate of his faithfull ſeruants, and deare children.

Queſtion. NOw what ground and proofe haue you, concerning his like gratious prouidence and gouernment, ouer their ſoules: the which (as was ſaide) is allwayes moſt gracious and admirable?

Anſwere. All the care, which the Lord hath ouer the bodies, and outward eſtate of euery faithfull ſeruant, and dutifull childe of his: it proceedeth altogether of that loue, which he chiefly beareth toward their ſoules.

In the which reſpect, in the place to the Hebr: lately alledged, God inſtituleth himſelfe to be in a ſpeciall manner, the Father of their ſoules and ſpirits.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is ſo indeed. For in all afflictions of the body, as well as by all outward comfortes of this life; God hath a moſt fatherlie care to turne all to the benefite of the ſoule: according to that of the Apoſtle Paul, Romanes 8. 28. Wee knowe that all things worke together for the beſt, vnto them that are called of his purpoſe, &c.

But more particularlie.

Queſtion. What is that admirable manner of the Lord God his moſt prouident, merciſull, and Fatherlie gouernment, ouer the ſoules of his children, and faithfull ſeruants?

Anſwere. VVhereas wee are all of vs by nature, vaine, fooliſhe, prowde, and rebellious, againſt God, and his word; he doth by the gracious power of his holie Spirit, through his word, ſo alter and change the hearts, mindes, and willes, of all thoſe that be his: that hee maketh them fooles in themſelues, & ſheweth them to be in themſelues meake alſo, miſerable, & euery way forlorne; that ſo he may make them carefull, to ſeek to be truely wiſe, holie, and bleſſed in him. Yea hee loadeth them downe, as it were, to the loweſt pitte of Hell: that he may make them fitte at the laſt, to inhabite the higheſt, and moſt glorious Heauens.

And all this, of his meere grace and fauour, in his beloued Sonne our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: euen according to his owne counſell and purpoſe in him, before the world was, as was ſaide before.

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence. Explicatiõ & proofe.

The Ground & meaning

It is verie true. For euen herevnto, doth the Lord subordinate the course of his gouernment, ouer all his other creatures, and workes. To this purpose, hath hee sanctified all his holie ordinances, worde, prayer, Sacraments, &c. To this purpose doth hee speciallie guide the thoughtes, wordes, and works of his children; censuring, rebuking, and chastising them, so farre as they doe erre and goe astray from him: but comforting, incouraging, and reioycing them in all things, wherin they doe well obeying his word, and the holie motions of his good Spirit, which frameth their hearts, of conscience, to will and desire, that onelie which God willeth, &c.

This your last answere, containeth both the effectes, and also the cause of this excellent prouidence of God concerning his children. For the which I desire that you should shewe some proofe, out of the holie Scriptures.

And first concerning the effectes of Gods most holie gouernment, in the altering and changing of the heartes of his children: of fooles making them wise, of weake strong, &c.

Question. What ground haue you for the proofe of these things?

Answere. To this purpose, the Apostle Paul teatheth vs, that wee are not of our selues sufficient (no not fitte) so much as to thinke a good thought. 2. Cor. 3. 5. Much rather therefore, must the will and the deede be of God. Philipp: 2. 13. For it is God (saith the same Apostle) who worketh in you the will, and the deede, euen of his good pleasure.

And 1. Corinth: 12. 3. No man can say that Iesus is the Lorde, but by the holie Ghost. And Romanes 8. 14. They that are the Sonnes of God, are ledde by the Spirit of God.

Finallie. Galatians 5. 22. &c. The fruite of the Spirit is loue, ioye, peace, long-suffering, gentlenes, goodnes, faith, meeknes, temperance: against such there is no lawe. For they that are Christes, haue crucified the flesh with the affections and lustes. If wee liue in the Spirit, let vs walke in the Spirit.

Explicatiõ and proofe. See the last Answere, in the former page.

These holie Scriptures, doe shew in deed, the most excellent and admirable worke, and gouernment of God, concerning the soules of his children.

To the which purpose also, the Apostle saith further. Let euery one that seemeth to be wise in this world, be a foole that he may be wise. For the wisedome of this world is foolishnes with God, &c. 1. Corinth: 3. 18. 19.

Reade also Rom: 7. 9. &c. to the ende. And Galat: 5. 17. Read likewise Reuel: 3. 17. 18. 19. Thou saiest, I am riche, &c. and knowest not that thou art wretched, &c. I counsell thee to buye of mee gold tryed by the fire, that thou maiest be made rich, &c. As manie as I loue, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and amend.

And that the Lorde leadeth his children downe, as it were, to the lowest pit, and raiseth them vp againe, from all their feares and sorrowes, &c. it is euident. Psalm: 86. 13. and Psalm: 130. 1. And likewise, Actes 14. 22. The beaten way to the kingdome of God, is by manifold affliction and tribulation. But in all troubles and afflictions, the Lorde standeth by his children, as a tender supporter, and comforter. 2. Corinth: 4 8 9.

Moreouer, how exact a watche, and howe prouident a gouernment, the Lorde exerciseth ouer his children: reade it notablie described, Psalm: 139. 1. &c. O Lorde (saith the Psalmist) thou hast tryed mee, and knowne mee. Thou knowest my sitting and my rising: thou vnderstandest my thought a farre off: &c. Thou boldest mee straite behinde and before, &c. Whether shall I goe from thy Spirit, &c. But all this, to the singular benefit of euerie true seruant of God: whom God nourtereth, as a Father his childe whom hee dearely loueth.

And as hee dealeth thus watchfullie, for euerie one aparte, so doth hee for the whole bodie of the Church conicyntlie: against the which, the verie gates and power of Hell, shall neuer bee able to preuaile, as our Sauiour Christ himselfe assureth vs.

Finallie, the gouernment of God ouer the soules of his children, (whether of euerie one apart, or of manie, or of all together) it is to be considered, not onely

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

The Ground and meaning.

onely in his long sufferance before their conuersion, but also in their conuersion itselfe, and for euer after. So that if they waxe at any time forgetfull, he causeth their owne heartes to smite them, as hee did the heart of king Dauid, after that hee had sinned in numbring the people: hee giueth them troubled consciences: he chastiseth them sharplie in their bodies, because of the sinne of their soules: he taketh awaye all comfort of his Spirit for the time, though hee mindeth to restore them to their former ioyes againe. But who can expresse the manifold wisedome of Gods most holie prouidence, in the gouernment of his children?

Hetherto of the effectes, of Gods most gracious prouidence towardes his Church, and euerie member thereof.

LEt vs now come nowe to the chiefe cause of all. The which (as was saide) is the meere grace and fauour of God.

Question. What ground haue you hereof?

Answere. Because thou wast precious in my sight (saith the Lord by his holie Prophet,) and thou wert honourable, and I loued thee, therfore will I giue man for thee, and people for thy sake. Isai: chapt: 43. 4. &c.

Explicatiō & proofe. The same we may see likewise testified Deut: chapt: 7. verses 6. 7. 8. &c. and Ezek: chapt: 16. 1. 2. 3. &c. The which testimonies, though they respected more particularlie the Church of the Iewes; yet by them it is euident, what manner of affection, the Lord beareth towards his whole church, both of Iewes and Gentiles: and also what is the true cause of all the dignitie and happinesse of the Church; euen the free loue and adoption or acceptance of God, as hee himselfe expresslie professeth, and as the Church dutifullie acknowledgeth. Psalme 44. 3.

Neuertheles let vs see some proofes out of the new Testament.

Question. What haue you to alledge from thence?

Answere. In the first chapter of the epistle to the Ephesians, verse 3. &c. thus we reade. Blessed be God, euen the Father of our Lord Iesus Christ, who hath blessed vs with all spirituall blessing, in heauenly things in Christ, As hee hath chosen vs in him before the foundation of the world, that wee should be holie, and without blame, before him in loue. Who hath predestinated vs, to bee adopted, through Iesus Christ vnto himselfe, according to the good pleasure of his will, To the praise of the glorie of his grace, wherwith he hath made vs accepted in his Beloued, &c.

Explicatiō & proofe. This one place, dulie considered, maketh all, fullie open and plaine, concerning the chiefe and most high cause of all, together with the effects and fruits thereof. For the which, the Apostle teacheth vs by his example and practise, to be most thankfull to God: and to giue him the highest glorie and praise that may bee. For this doth equally appertaine to all beleeuers, whether Iewe or Gentile, that they are elected of God, &c. Gal: 3. 28. Colos: 3. 11. This one place therefore, might suffice alone to this purpose.

Neuertheless, it shall not be amisse, to adde some other testimonie, to this out of the Ephesians: to the ende this so principall a point, may be made more familiar vnto vs.

To this end therefore, read Rom: 8. 29. 30. Those whom he knewe before, bee also predestinated, to be made like to the image of his Sonne, that hee might be the first borne among many brethren. Moreouer, whom he predestinated, them also he called, &c. And 1. Corinth: 1. 27. 28. God hath chosen the foolish things of the world, to confound the wise, and God hath chosen the weake things of the worlde, to confounde the mightie things, &c. And Tit: 3. verse 4. &c. Wee our selues also were in times past vnwise, disobedient, deceiued, &c. But when the bountifulnesse and loue of GOD our Sauiour, toward man appeared. Not by the workes of righteousnesse, which wee had done, but according to his mercie hee saued vs. &c.

There are manie other such like places: but these shall for the present ſuffice. From the which, wee may eaſilie conceiue, that as the myſterie it ſelfe is very great and admirable: ſo alſo is that prouidence & gouernment, whereby it is ordered and diſpoſed, moſt admirable and glorious, as the Sunne when it is at the higheſt, and ſhineth in the full ſtrength and brightneſſe thereof.

Hetherto therefore, concerning the groundes of the whole prouidence and all-ſeeing gouernment of the Lord God, ouer all his workes both viſible, and inuiſible, ſmaller and greater, and greateſt of all; euen ſo farre forth, as the Creation of the ſame our moſt wiſe and Allmightie God, hath extended it ſelfe.

NOwe henceforth, let vs in the next place, inquire of the Promiſes, concerning the gratious and Fatherlie prouidence of God, and that in the ſame order, as neare as wee can: wherein wee haue ſearched out the groundes, or proofes, and meaning of this Article.

Neuertheleſſe, in ſo much as all other promiſes, concerning the Fatherlie prouidence of God, toward vs, and all true beleeuers, reſteth vpon that firſt promiſe; which it pleaſed God our heauenly Father, to make our firſt, and moſt ancient parents, or progenitors, touching both their and our owne recouerie, out of their moſt wofull fall: let vs beginne with that firſt of all.

Queſtion. What promiſe haue wee therefore, concerning the moſt gratious and Fatherlie prouidence of God our heauenlie Father in this behalfe?

Anſwere. In the third chapter of Geneſis verſe 15. This moſt gratious promiſe of God is contained. It is a parte of that ſpeech, wherein the Lorde our God denounced his heauie curſe againſt the Serpent, which was the inſtrument of the Diuel, wherewith he deceiued Eue: or rather againſt the Diuel himſelfe, who was the auter of the euil. I will alſo (ſaith the Lorde) put enmitie betweene thee, and the woman, and betweene thy ſeed, and her ſeede. Iſhall breake thine head, & thou ſhalt bruiſe the heele of it.

Explicatiõ and proofe. This beeing the firſt promiſe of God after the fall, it is alſo the moſt gratious promiſe that euer hee made; and in deede the verie grounde of euerie promiſe, whatſoeuer hee hath at any time for euer after vttered to mankinde.

The meaning of it is this; that God of his moſt Fatherlie goodneſſe and mercie, will not ſuffer any one of his elect children, ſeruilelie to abide vnder the ſlauerie and tyrannie of the Diuel: but that in and by his Sonne our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, hee will giue them power and grace, not onely to reſiſt, but alſo finallie to vanquiſh and ouercome him; howſoeuer in the meane while, hee ſhall trouble and annoye them.

This is liuelie expreſſed, by an vnequall compariſon betwixt the heade of the Serpent, and the heele of the ſeede of the woman: the cruſhing of the one, and the bruiſing or byting of the other. For notwithſtanding one and the ſame Hebrewe verbe, is referred both to the head and to the heele, yet according as it admitteth a diuerſe ſignification, ſo is it iuſtlie to be tranſlated, for the beſt commoditie of the ſence.

Wherefore the Serpents annoiance may fitlie be called a bruiſing, or rather a byting or ſtinging (though not deadlie) following vppon the Serpents hyſſing, as the Hebrew word Shuph, referred to the Serpent, properly ſignifieth. And likewiſe the victorie of the womans ſeede, may well be expreſſed by our Engliſh worde cruſhing, or beating to pieces, or as one would ſay, ſtamping to pummiſſe, to the vtter confuſion of the Diuell: according as the ſame word is vſed, Iob chapter 9. 17. Hee deſtroyeth me with a tempeſt.

Moreouer, as the cruſhing of the head, is more grieuous then the bruiſing of the heele: ſo is the ſpeache apt to expreſſe, that the Diuell ſhall goe by the worſe in this conflicte. And ſo doth the Apoſtle interprete the ſame word, as it is referred to the ſeed of the woman. Rom: 16.20. The God of peace ſhall tread downe Satan vnder youre feete ſhortlie. Suntripſei. For Sumribo, ſignifying to breake, ſhukke, or cruſhe a thing to pieces: being applied to the feete, noteth that breaking or cruſhing, which is by ſtamping vppon a thing.

The Promise.

And so we may see, that the Apostles Greeke wordes, are a most fit interpretation of the Hebrew word (Shuph,) which the Prophet Moses vseth in the 3. chapter of Genesis, to expresse the victorie of the seede of the woman, against the Serpent, and his seede. It is like in signification to the word Ramas, Psal. 91. 13. Thou shalt walke vpon the Lion and Aspe: the young Lion and the Dragon shalt thou tread vnder feete. But this victory is not obteined by our owne valour and strength; but only in and by the diuine power and grace of our Lord Iesus Christ: according as the Apostle Paul, euen in the place now alledged sheweth, in that so soone as he had made mention of the victory, by and by, (as it were pointing to the Author and atchieuer thereof) The grace of our Lord Iesus Christ be with you: saith the Apostle to the Romans. As though he should tell them in plaine words, that it is by his grace alone: that they and all Christians obtaine victorie against the diuell.

Question.

NOw therefore, hauing seene as it were the foundation of all the promises of God: let vs proceede to the rest. Among the which, in the first place, what promise haue you that God in his fatherly prouidēce, will after this life ended, receiue vs, and all his children, truly beleeuing in him, into his inuisible and glorious heauens: our soules first, and afterwards our bodies at the last day, in the generall resurrection?

Answere.

The couenant of God, wherein he promiseth to be our God, it is an assurance of either of these blessings vnto vs, and to all true beleeuers: according to that comfortable interpretation and testimonie, which our Sauiour Christ giueth hereof, against the heresie of the Sadduces, who denied the resurrection, in that hee answered them, as we read Mat. 22. verses 29, 30, 31, 32. Ye erre (saith he) not knowing the Scriptures, nor the power of God. For in the resurrection, they neither marrie wiues, neither are wiues bestowed in marriage, but they are as the Angells of God in heauen. And concerning the resurrection of the dead, (he saith further) haue ye not read what is spoken to you of God saying: I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaak, and the God of Iaakob? God is not the God of the dead, but of the liuing.

And 1. Thess. chap. 4. 17. The Apostle Paul testifieth, that we shall be caught vp in the cloudes, to meete the Lord in the ayre: and that so we shall bee for euer with the Lord.

Explicatiō and proofe.

Yea: and to this end also, it is further assured vnto vs by the Apostle Iohn, Reuel. 20. 13. That the Sea shall then giue vp her dead: that is to say, all the bodies of men that haue beene drowned and consumed therein. Yea, that death shall deliuer vp the seruants of God, with what manner of death soeuer they haue beene bereaued of this life: and howsoeuer their bodies haue beene destroyed by their murtherers and persecutors; whether with fier, or by wilde beasts, (to whom they haue beene cast to be deuoured) or any other way, for the testimonie of the truth and Gospell of our Sauiour Christ. Whereof also, our Sauiour himselfe doth further assure vs: in that he promiseth, That the holy Angells shall gather together the bodies of his elect, from the foure windes, and from the one end of heauen to the other. Mat. 24. 31.

And touching the soules of the faithfull, that they are receiued into heauen, so soone as they leaue their bodies, and depart this naturall and transitorie life: we may perceiue by the gratious promise of our Sauiour Christ, to that thiefe, vnto whom God gaue the grace, euen vpon the Crosse to beleeue in Christ, and to repent of his sinnes. For thus saith our Sauiour vnto him: This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise. Now there is no doubt, that he will be lesse gratious, to those that shall be carefull to yeelde a more speedie, and a longer continued faithfull seruice vnto him.

Likewise, in so much as the same our Sauiour sheweth, that the Angells of God carried the soule of Lazarus into Abrahams bosome: that is, into the place of the heauenly rest and happinesse of the faithfull and elect children of God: he giueth therewithall to vnderstand, what the state and condition is of the ſoules of all the reſt, ſo ſoone as they depart out of this life. Finally, to put all out of queſtion, the ſpirit of Chriſt teſtifieth generally, of all that die in the Lord, That they are euen thenceforth (for euer) bleſſed, in that they reſt from their labours, and in that their workes follow them. Reuel. 14. verſe 13. But of this more afterward in the Article of the reſurrection of the body.

Queſtion. IN the meane while, that we may goe on forward: What promiſe haue you concerning the holy Angells, that God in his fatherly prouidence and gouernment, will vſe them for inſtruments of his mercy, toward vs, and euery one of his children, while we liue here in this world?

Anſwere. In the 91. Pſalm. verſes 11, 12. it is written. God will giue his Angells charge ouer thee, to keepe thee in all thy waies. They ſhall beare thee in their hands, leſt thou ſhouldeſt hurt thy foote againſt a ſtone.

Explicatiõ and proofe. This is a very gratious promiſe of God. To the which end, marke I pray you, how the tenderneſſe of the loue and care of the holy Angells ouer vs, is expreſſed as a fruit of the moſt gratious good will of God himſelfe. They would not willingly haue vs take the leaſt hurt in the world, while wee walke faithfully in the waies and commandements of God. For this doth the holy Ghoſt giue to vnderſtand, in that it is ſaid, that they would not willingly ſuffer vs to ſtumble at a ſtone. And Matth. 18. 10. the like is affirmed by our Sauiour Chriſt ſaying, See that yee deſpiſe not one of theſe little ones, for I ſay vnto you, that in heauen their Angels do alwaies behold the face of my father which is in heauen.

But why then (may ſome ſay) doe the children of God ſometimes not onely ſtumble, but fall downe right and take great hurt? The anſwer is eaſie and readie at hand, becauſe none of vs doe walke ſo vprightly and entirely with our God, as we ought to doe. For verily if we did not faile our ſelues, God would neuer faile vs: neither would or ſhould his holy Angells faile vs at any time. The experience and proofe of this moſt readie willingnes of the holy Angells, is plentifully confirmed by many teſtimonies of the holy Scriptures, as we ſhall haue further occaſion to note by ſome particulars, when we come to the comforts.

Touching the wicked Angells, otherwiſe called diuells: wee haue ſeene alreadie, how God hath promiſed that he will ſtrengthen vs to preuaile againſt them, in that he will giue vs power to breake the Serpents head: ſo that we will ſtand heere no longer about them.

Neuertheleſſe, in ſo much as the diuell hath now more dangerous, and greater plentie of euill inſtruments: both to deceiue by, and alſo by the ſame to execute more cruell violence, then the Serpent, which he vſed at the beginning, could or now can doe, howſoeuer the kind of them be multiplied euery where: that is to ſay, ſeeing inſteed of one Eue, he hath thouſands, both ſubtile & wicked women, and men alſo, all of our owne ſexe and kinde, moſt apt & mightie to deceiue and hurt by: let vs conſider in this behalfe, what promiſe we haue, that our good God, in his fatherly prouidence, will preſerue all his faithfull and obedient children, from their violence and craft, while they walke dutifully before him.

Queſtion. What proofe can you alledge for this?

Anſwered. We haue one notable proofe hereof Pſalm. 37. verſes 12, 13, 14, 15. The wicked (ſaith the holy Prophet of God) practiſeth againſt the iuſt, and gnaſheth his teeth againſt him. But the Lord will laugh him to ſcorne for he ſeeth that his day, (that is, the day of his calamitie or deſtruction) is comming. The wicked haue drawne their ſword, and bent their bow to caſt downe the poore and needie, and to ſlay ſuch as be of vpright conuerſation. But their ſword ſhall enter into their owne heart, and their bowes ſhall be broken.

Likewiſe verſe 28. The Lord loueth iudgement and forſaketh not his Saints: they ſhall bee preſerued for euermore: but the ſeede of the wicked ſhall bee cut off.

And

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

The Promise.

And yet againe in the same Psalme, verses 32,33. The wicked watcheth the righteous, and seeketh to slay him. But the Lord will not leaue him in his hand, nor condemne him when he is iudged. Finally, verses 39,40. The saluation of righteous men shall be of the Lord, he will be their strength in time of trouble. For the Lord will helpe them and deliuer them: he will deliuer them from the wicked, and he will saue them because they trust in him.

Heere it is plaine, that the faithfull haue the most gratious promise of God, for their defence against the outward violence of the wicked instruments of the diuell: yea and against their crafty indeuours also, so farre as it shall bee good for them.

Shew likewise some promise, for preseruation against the more spirituall craft of the wicked.

Question. What promise haue you for our warrant in this point?

Answere. In the 24. verse of the 24. chapter of Saint Matthew, our Sauiour Christ assureth vs, that so gratious will the Lord be, in guiding and preserning the soules of his elect: that it is vnpossible that they should bee deceiued by any false Prophets, how deceiueablie soeuer they goe to worke, yea though they seeke to confirme their false doctrines, by neuer so strange signes and wonders.

Explicatiõ and proofe. It is certainely true. They shall not bee totally, or finally deceiued, in the fundamentall points or Articles of the true Christian faith and religion.

But what is the reason and ground hereof? Verily not their owne wisedome and warinesse, or strength and constancie: but because God of his mercie hath so decreed and promised, and therefore will by the wisedome and power of his grace, working in them, accordingly effect and accomplish the same. God hath in former times gratiouslie performed this his promise: and there is no doubt to bee made, but hee will shewe the same grace and fauour still, to those that shall seeke it at his handes, euen at this day, and to the ende of the worlde. Reade 2. Thessalonians 2. 11,12,13.

LEt vs now come to the promises, concerning the prouidence of God our heauenly father, in his gouernment ouer other of his creatures, for the benefit of his children.

And first concerning the visible heauens, with the hostes and furniture Question. of them. What promise haue you that God will so order and gouerne them, as they shall serue for our benefite, and not bee armed against vs for our hurt?

Answere. In the 121. Psalme, verses 5,6,7,8. The Lord is thy keeper (saieth the holy Psalmist) the Lord is thy shadow at thy right hand. The sunne shall not smite thee by day, nor the moone by night. The Lord will preserue thee from all euill, hee will keepe thy soule. The Lord will preserue thy going out, and thy comming in from henceforth and for euer.

Likewise Hosea chap. 2. 21. God will cause the heauens to heare the earth: that is, he will make it fruitfull for mans commoditie and vse, if he will faithfully serue and obey God.

Explicatiõ & proofe. The grace of this promise of God, may bee discerned from the contrary: in that God threatneth against vs, that the heauens shall bee as it were yron and brasse ouer our heads, and otherwise hurtfull also, if wee refuse to walke in good dutie and obedience before him: as Leuiticus 26. 9. and Deut. 28. verses 22, 23, 24. Whereof also, wee haue examples recorded touching the performance of this iudgement in former times, for our further admonition and warning, as it hath beene obserued before: Iosh. chap. 10. verse 11. And Iudg. chap. 5. 20. The heauens, euen the starres of the heauens, are said to haue fought against Sisera in their courses. And 1. King. chap. 17. 1. and chap. 18. 1. Iames 5. 17,18.

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly prouidence.

The Promise.

But beside former warnings: are there not examples among our selues from time to time, of some stricken with lightnings, or killed with thunder, destroyed by tempests, &c? Gratious therefore is the promise of God to be iustly acknowledged: in that through his gratious gouernement, the heauens shall be fauourable vnto vs, if we will truly beleeue and obey him. Hetherto of the heauenly creatures: the earthly are next.

Question. WHat further promise haue you, that God in his fatherlie prouidence, will gouerne and dispose of them, to the benefit of his obedient and faithfull children?

Answere. In the same 2. chapter of Hosea, mentioned euen now, in the 18. verse thereof, thus we reade: In that day (saith the Lord by his Prophet) I will make a couenant for them with the wilde beasts, and with the fowles of heauen, and with that which creepeth vpon the earth: and I will breake the bow, and the sword, and battel out of the earth, and I will make them sleepe safely.

And then also in the 22. verse, immediately after that the Lord had promised to heare the heauens, and that the heauens should heare the earth (as was answered before) it followeth thus in the next words. And the earth shall heare the corne, and the wine, and the oyle, and they shall heare Izreel.

Explication and proofe. That is to say, euen so many as God (alluding to that word Izreel, which is by interpretation, God will sow) promiseth in the next verse, to sow vnto him selfe: that is, will in speciall manner blesse and prosper. For so it followeth in the 23. verse. And in the Hebrew language the allusion is plaine. They shall heare Izregnel (saith the Lord) and I will sow her, Vezrangtiah, &c. Marke well therefore, how the Lord most gratiously promiseth to his people, that if they would faithfully cleaue vnto him, and purely worship and serue him: hee would (and no doubt still is willing) to cause a most sweete concent, and harmony as it were, betwixt all other creatures, for mans benefite and comfort.

This promise was mentioned, when the doctrine of the creation was by vs inquired into. So was also that which we reade Genesis 8. 21, 22. and chap. 9. 1, 2, 3. and Iob chapter 5. 23. But in so much as they doe more directly belong to the prouidence of GOD, as was there obserued: therefore they are vpon this occasion, to be called to minde, and diligently perused againe.

Reade also, as belonging to the Lordes couenant concerning the wilde beasts on our behalfe, vpon condition that wee would faithfully beleeue and obey him. Psalm. 91. 13. alledged not long before. And Isai. chap. 11. 6, 7, 8, 9. though from hence a further blessing is signified by that allusion. The wolfe also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shal lie with the kid, and the calfe, and the lion, and the fat beast together, and a little childe shall leade them. And the kow and the beare shall feede: their young ones shall lie together: and the lion shall eate straw like the bullocke. And the sucking childe shall play vpon the hole of the aspe, and the weaned childe shall put his hand vpon the cockatrice hole. Then shall none hurt nor destroy in the Mountaine of my holinesse: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters that couer the Sea. Reade also Marke cha. 16. 18. the like promise of our Sauiour Christ, and the same confirmed in part by an example of Gods gratious prouidence. Act. 28. 3, 4, 5, 6. The Viper was restrained from stingng of Paules hand.

Surely, it is our owne wickednesse, and not want of vigilancie or mercie in the Lord: which doth as it were arme and inrage the wilde beasts against vs. For otherwise by the vertue & grace of this promise of God they should be at peace, yea willingly subiect vnto vs. But in so much, as we rebell against God, and breake our couenant with him: it is iust with God, that they should rebell against vs, and breake that couenant, which hee vpon condition of our obe-obedience to God, had by the Law of his creation, made with them for vs. And so God himselfe hath threatened. Leuit: 26. 21. 22. and Deut: 28. verse 26. An example whereof also, wee haue seene before, concerning those 42. children, which two beares did teare in peeces, because they mocked the Prophet Eliſha. Yea this iudgement doth not onely fall vpon those that are very wicked, but sometime also euen vpon those that haue some desire to serue the Lord, in the times of some common calamitie: according to that we read, Psal: 79. 2. The dead bodies of thy seruants haue they giuen to be meate vnto the fowles of the heauen: and the flesh of thy Saints to the beasts of the earth. Neuertheles in such cases the Lord knoweth how eternally to saue his owne, when he reiecteth the vngodly, for euer.

And for the full clearing of the Lords gracious promise this way, if wee would and could faithfully keepe couenant with him: we may plentifully informe our mindes, from that which he hath by his holy Prophet Moses recorded at large, as well Deut: chap: 28. from the beginning of the chapter to the end of the 14. verse, as Leuit: chap: 26. from the 3. verse to the 14. of the same.

Let vs therefore for our instruction in this point, read these notable texts of holy Scripture; and consider diligently of them. And first of that in Leuit:

Question. How reade you there?

Answere. In the 26. chap: of Leuiticus thus we read. If yee walke in my ordinances and keepe my commandements and doe them (saith the Lord) I will then send you raine in due season, and the land shall yeeld her increase, and the trees of the field shall giue their fruite, &c.

Explicatiõ & proofe. This is a notable place, containing (as wee see in the through reading of it in our Bibles) promises of all sorts, spirituall and temporall, for soule and body, publike & priuate, &c. And like to this, is that other of Deuteronomie, Let it not seeme vnnecessarie, or a lost labour, for vs to rehearse & consider of that excellent Scripture likewise. For it shall be to our further benefit, as wee may well trust, through the goodnes of our God. I pray you therfore let vs read this also, yea and if it may be, commit it so to memorie, that we doe neuer forget it.

Question. How therefore doe you read?

Answere. It is thus written Deut: ch: 28. from the beginning of the chapter.

If thou wilt obey diligently the voice of the Lord thy God, and obserue and doe all his commandements which I command thee this day, then the Lord thy God will set thee on high aboue all the nations of the earth.

And all these blessings shall come on thee, and ouertake thee, if thou wilt obey the voice of the Lord thy God. Blessed shalt thou be in the citie, and blessed also in the field. Blessed shall be the fruite of thy body, &c.

Explicatiõ and proofe. This place is as a second notable witnes of Gods gracious promise, and of his very true purpose, to exercise a most fatherly and fauourable prouidence, toward all his faithfull seruants and children, touching all kinde of prosperitie and blessing, while they walke faithfully and dutifully before him.

And although peraduenture, some will obiect and say, that these promises are legall promises, and so not of faith or belonging to the faith of the Gospell: and we also doe grant it to be so, according to the first vse of the Lawe, which is to discouer sinne and to conuict those of extreame vanitie, whosoeuer seeke to be iustified in the sight of God, by the workes of the Law. Neuertheles, this we adde therewithall, and constantly affirme, that to such as haue learned to humble themselues before God in the sight of their sins, and haue receiued the gift of faith, to relye vpon the fatherly prouidence of God, through our Lord Ie: Christ; they are, according to an other vse of the Law of God (which is to guide and incourage all true beleeuers in the right way of obedience to God our heauenly Father) they are I say, the same with the promises of the Gospell. And accordingly, they are iustly to be apprehended & beleeued by faith, as no vaine incouragements to godlines of life: like as the Apostle Paul affirmeth. 1. Tim: 4. 8. Godlines hath the promise of the life present, and of that which is to come. And according to that, 2. Cor: 1. 20. All the promises of God are in Christ, yea and Amen.

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

The Comfortes.

Likewise according to that, Psal: 34.9.10. Feare the Lord yee his Saints: for nothing wanteth to them that feare him. The Lions lacke and suffer hunger, but they who seeke the Lord, shall want nothing that is good. Read also, Psal: 91.14.15.16. Because he hath loued me, therefore will I deliuer him: I will exalt him, because hee hath knowne my name &c. And Psalm: 121.1, 2, 3, 4. and so forth as was alledged before.

It cannot be denied indeede, but insomuch as the best of all, faile in obedience to God, according to that of the Apostle Iames, In many things we sinne all: and they that are strongest in faith, haue their weakenes, so as they haue neede to pray, Lord increase our faith: and further also, insomuch as it is the pleasure of God, vpon holy and iust considerations, to try the faith, and to exercise the patience of his seruants; and therefore doe they meete with many afflictions. yet euen in these respects also, God hath most graciously promised, that all shall worke together for their best: Rom: 8:28. as by the grace of God we shal more fully declare vpon some further occasion afterward.

In the meane season, from these manifold promises of Gods most gracious and fatherly prouidence toward vs: we cannot but see and acknowledge that the comforts are manifold, to all those that doe truely and firmely beleeue the same.

Yea so plainely may we discerne it; that it may seeme needeles, to imploy any further labour to the laying of them forth, any other way.

NEuertheles, for some ouerplus (if so be there may be any ouerplus of true spirituall comfort from faith in the fatherly prouidence of God) we will of purpose vse some further diligence, that through the good blessing of God, we may seeke out, and as it were sucke forth a more ful draught of consolation, from this former ground of the promises thereof.

Question. How may this be?

Answere. First, by considering the faithfulnes of Gods promises, in all former times, by the accomplishing of them in their due and proper seasons: whether for mercy to his people: or punishment vpon the wicked, for his peoples sake and benefit: that from thence we may confirme our faith, concerning the present goodnes of God, and in the certaine expectation of the like fulfilling of his promises for all time to come.

Secondly, by looking to the generall testimonies of the word of God, concerning Gods continuall prouidence: answereable to those particular examples, wherein he hath most rarely and miraculously illustrated and manifested the same.

Thirdly, by hearkening to that experience, which any of the faithfull seruants of God haue either proued in themselues: or obserued concerning any other of their fellow-brethren.

Fourthly, by our owne recordation and calling to our minde, what God hath done for our selues, or for any other of his children, in our owne age and knowledge.

Fifthly, by our earnest and speedie reproouing and rebuking of our selues, for that discomfort, which, in time of temptation, wee finde to be assaulting and inuading our soules. And therewithall also, by a contrarie heartening and incouraging of our selues to be of good cheare in the Lord. But most of all by hearkening to those holy incouragements, which God himselfe hath from time to time giuen vnto his seruants.

Sixthly, by a watchfull taking of heede, that we neuer lye securely in any sinne, to the hindering or delaying of that comfort, which God for his part, hath readie and prepared in his hand for vs: and likewise that wee doe not by any peruerse and froward dealing, prouoke the Lord to deale crossely with vs.

Seauenthly, by a serious defence of Gods fatherly prouidence, against all such obiections, as the Diuel and carnall reason, or infidelitie and atheisme, doe suggest against the same.

Finally, by a diligent meditation of those manifold fruites and benefits, which all afflictions doe bring to the children of God, euen from the least of them, vnto death it selfe, which is the greatest and last, and as we may say, the death of them all, for euer and euer.

The

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence. Explicatiõ and proofe

The Comfortes.

The consideration and obseruation of these things, will, no doubt, inlarge our comfort: if wee can wisely weigh them, and laye them diligently to heart.

Let vs therefore, staie a while, as it were a seede time vpon them: that so we may afterward, in due season, reape the harueſt of them.

And first of all, concerning the faithfulnes of Gods promises, and for the singular comfort thereof: the Lord himselfe doth not say in vaine, I haue spoken, and I will doe it. Isay: 46.11. And chapt: 55.11. My word shall not returne vnto me voide, but it shall accomplish that which I will, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it. Read also Ezek: ch: 12, v. 22, 23, 24, 25, &c. and Numb: chap: 23.19.

This is planely to be seene, both in mercies promised as was answered: and also in iudgements threatened.

Touching the mercifull performance of the promise of Gods good prouidence, in the ordering of the whole course of his creatures, for our comfort: we haue generall and long beaten experience, according to that which wee read, Gen: 8.22. Hereafter seede-time and harueſt, and colde and heate, and summer and winter, and day and night shall not cease so long as the earth remaineth. And according to that which wee reade againe in the same booke: chap: 9. verse 8. &c. God spake also to Noah, and to his Sonnes with him, saying, As touching mee, behold I establish my couenant with you, and with your seede after you. And with euery liuing creature, that is with you &c. that from henceforth all flesh shall not bee rooted out by the waters of the flood, neither shall there bee a flood to destroy the earth any more, &c. The like faithfulneſse hath God vsed concerning all the propheſies, which hee hath giuen forth at any time, for the comfort of the Church: such as are the fulfilling of the propheſie and promise of their deliuerance out of Egipt, Gen: ch: 15. verses 13, 14. And of their returne out of the captiuitie of Babel: Ier: 25, 11, 12, &c. and ch: 33, 7. Ezra, ch: 1. &c. But most graciously, concerning our spirituall redemptiõ, by the sending of our Sauiour Christ, according to all the propheſies (which were giuen forth of him, euen from the beginning of the world: Luk: ch: 1. 70, Act. 3, 24. & ch: 10, 43.) which spake long before, of the time of his comming, of the singular manner of his conception, of his birth, of the place of his birth, of his carrying, & recarrying out of Egipt, &c. as we shall haue further occasion to consider more fully hereafter.

And touching the faithfulnes of God, in his threatenings: it may be euident by a good tast; if we compare that which we read, Iosh: 6, 26, with 1. King: 16. 34. Likewise, if we compare 1. King, 21. 19. with ch: 22. 38. Againe, 1. King: 21. verses 23. 24. with 2. King: 9. 6, 7, 8, 9. 10, 25, 26, 34, 35, 36, 37, and ch: 10. v. 10. 11. Moreouer, 2. King: 10. 30. with ch: 15. 12. And if we compare the 2. vers. of the 7. ch: of the same booke, with the 19. & 20. verses of the same chapter.

Great therefore, may be our comfort: and reuerend ought our feare to be toward our God, in either respects; according to that we read Exod: 15. 11. Who is like vnto thee ô Lord among the Gods! Who is like thee so glorious in holines, fearefull in praises, doing wonders! And Ps. 92. 4. 5. Thou Lord hast made me glad by thy works, and I will reioice in the workes of thy hands. O Lord how glorious are thy workes! and thy thoughts very deepe. And Psal: 119. 52. I remember thy iudgements of olde ô Lord and haue beene comforted. Read also, Psalm: 77. 5. 10. 11, 12. &c. And Psal: 143. 4. 5. My spirit was in perplexitie, &c. yet doe I remember the time past: I meditate in all thy workes, yea, I doe meditate in the workes of thy handes. And againe, Psalm: 119. 27. Make mee to vnderstand the way of thy precepts, and I will mediate in thy wonderous workes. And in this comfort, iustly may wee reason for the certaintie of all the promises of God, yet to be performed: and therein to comfort our selues according to that, 1. Thes. 4. 18. Comfort ye one an other with these words.

And

Beliefe in Gods fatherly Prouidēce.

The Comfortes.

And according to that of the ſame Apoſtle, 2. Cor: 1.10. God hath deliuered vs from a great death, and he doth deliuer vs: in whom we truſt that yet hereafter, he will deliuer vs.

Secondly, the comfort of Gods fatherly prouidence in his vſuall and ordinarie courſe, cannot but be the more comfortable: if we conſider, that it is nothing inferiour, but many degrees more bounteous, and of longer continuance by great oddes, then haue beene the particular extraordinarie actions and workes thereof, though for the preſent, neuer ſo wonderfull and ſtrange: as wee may perceiue by comparing the one with the other, in their ſeuerall kindes.

As for examples ſake. It muſt needes be acknowledged, that God hath vſed his holy Angels, in moſt worthy and waightie ſeruices, and that at ſundrie times: according as he hath recorded them, and made the memoriall of them famous in his Church; both for the bodily preſeruation and ſaftie of his ſeruants, and alſo for their ſpirituall inſtruction and comfort. For their bodily ſaftie and preſeruation: as we read, Gen: 19.15. concerning the deliuerance of Lot from the deſtruction of Sodom. And chap: 32.1.2. of Iaakob from the rage of his brother Eſau. Of Eliſha from the Hoſt of the Aramites: 2. King: 6.16. 17. Of Hezekiah and his people from that fierce ſiege of the King of Aſſur, chap: 19.35. in the ſame booke. Likewiſe Dan: chap: 3.28. God deliuered the three men of Iſrael from burning in the hote fierie fornace by the miniſterie of an Angell. And chap: 6.22. Daniel himſelfe, was by an Angell of God deliuered from the mouthes of the hungry and rauenous lions. An Angell alſo, was the holy inſtrumēt, which God of his goodnes, vſed to make the poole of Bethesda healthfull to the diſeaſed: euen to any one whoſoeuer ſhould from time to time, after the ſtirring of the water by the Angell, be firſt put into it: Iohn, chap: 5, 2.3.4. And Act: 5.19. The Angell of the Lord deliuered the Apoſtles out of priſon, And chap: 12.7. An Angell deliuered Peter. And chap: 27.23. An Angell of God comforted Paul againſt the feare and danger of ſhip-wracke.

And as the Lord hath thus vſed his holy Angels, for their bodily deliuerance and preſeruation: ſo hath he vſed them in extraordinarie ſeruices, to the ſpirituall inſtruction and comfort of his people. As Gal: 3.19. The Lawe was ordained by Angels in the hand of a Mediator. And Dan: ch: 9, 21, &c. Daniel was informed concerning the ſeuentie weekes of yeares: that is, what ſhould be the ſpace of time from the returne of the people of Iſrael out of their captiuitie; til the time of the deliuerance and redemption of the whole Church of God, both of Iewe and Gentile by the death of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. He was alſo inſtructed by the ſame Angell in many other things. chap: 10, &c. Likewiſe, an Angell, (euen the ſame Angell Gabriel, as it ſeemeth) certified Zacharias of the conception and birth of Iohn Baptiſt, the forerunner of our Sauiour Chriſt. And the virgine Marie of Chriſts conceptiō & birth. And Ioſeph of the crueltie of Herod againſt him, from his birth, &c. Thus the miniſterie of the holy Angels, in extraordinarie courſe, was from God, exceeding gracious to his Church. But their ordinarie and continuall ſeruice, to our Sauiour Chriſt, and his Church, is yet greater then in theſe fewe particulars if it be apprehended by faith, and duly weighed and conſidered, according to the teſtimonies thereof, Pſal: 34.7. Mat: 18, 10. Iohn, 1, 51. and Heb: 1.6. 14. though their ſeruice is not externally ſo apparant; but in a more ſecret and inuiſible courſe.

It may not be denied, but God wrought a great and gracious worke by the windes, when remembring Noah that was in the Arke, hee cleared the earth from the waters, Gen: 8.1. But is not his prouidence as great, and as gracious, in his continuall bringing forth of the windes out of his treaſures: for the daily clearing of the aier, leſt it ſhould grow contagious? &c. Pſal: 133, 7.

God wrought a wonderous worke (as it muſt be confeſſed) when hee fed the people of Iſrael fortie yeares together, with manna from heauen: Deut: 8, 3, 4, and chap: 29. 5. 6. and Ioſh: 5, 12. But is the prouidence of God leſſe worthy to be celebrated of vs, for feeding all the world, with bread out of the earth more then fortie hundreth yeares: yea by the ſpace of ſixe and fiftie hundreds of yeares? according to that, Pſal: 104. 14. 15.

It was indeed a rare miracle of God, that the rauens at his appointment, fed Eliah the Prophet, 1. King: 17. 4. but the worke of Gods perpetuall prouidence, is greater, in that he ordereth the continuall flying, and the life & death of euerie foule, euen to the falling of a little ſparrowe.

Moreouer, we cannot but acknowledge, that it was a notable worke of God, in that he cauſed the gourd or whatſoeuer plant it was, to growe vp to his full ſtature in one night, to ſhadow the Prophet Ionah, from the heate of the Sun. But why ſhould wee not wonder more at the conſtant worke of the ſame our God, in the continuall grouth of all plants, and trees, and graſſe, ouer the face of the whole earth? For it is the moſt prouident, and admirable hand of God, which worketh all this, Pſal: 104. 14. 15. &c. as we haue ſeene before.

And that we may ſee it, yet further, to be ſo: let vs conſider it in ſome other matters.

The ſame God, who once tooke the kingdome of Iſrael from Saul, & gaue it to Dauid, 1. Sam: 14. 28: he doth from time to time, order and diſpoſe of all the kingdomes in the world. According to that, Pſal: 75. 6. 7. Dan: 4. 22. The moſt high beareth rule ouer the kingdome of men, and giueth it to whomſoeuer hee will.

The deliuerance of Iob out of his affliction, was exceeding gracious, according to the greatnes of his affliction; and accordingly doth the Apoſtle Iames make him an example, for the common comfort of the faithfull: inſomuch as it is an vſuall thing with the Lord, to take pittie vpon his ſeruants in their greateſt aduerſities, and to deliuer them out of them in his due time, Pſ. 107. Likewiſe, as God deliuered Dauid out of all his aduerſitie, ſo he is neare to ſaue euery one that is afflicted in Spirit, Pſal: 34. 17. 18.

God that deſtroied the counſell of Ahitophel: 2. Sam; 17. v. 14. 23. hee doth vſually breake the counſell of the heathen, and bring to nought the deuiſes of the people, Pſ. 33. 10. And v. 11. The counſell of the Lord ſhal ſtand for euer, and the thoughts of his heart throughout all ages.

As Balaam ſaide, that he could not ſpeake, but as the Lord would haue him, Numb: 24. 13. ſo it is generally affirmed, that the anſwere of the tonge is of the Lord, Prou: chap: 16. 1.

The ordinarie cures which the Lord worketh concerning all ſorts of diſeaſes, they are in effect the ſame, and in number infinitely more, then his miraculous cures haue beene. All proceed from one and the ſame mercie of God, toward his people: whether he worke by meanes, or without meanes, in ſome proceſſe and tract of time: or more ſpeedily in a moment, Pſalm. 103, verſes, 3, 4.

As God directed the lot, to find out Achan, Ionathan, Ionah, Matthias: ſo by the ſame prouidence of God the whole diſpoſition of euery lot, is of the Lord; though to our thinking, it is caſt into the lap, as it were by hap-hazard. Prou: 16. 33.

Finally, as our Sauiour Chriſt could not be apprehended and put to death, vntill the time came, appointed of the Lord: ſo the times of all the faithfull ſeruants of God, are in his handes, to diſpoſe of them as it pleaſeth him; al the contrary indeuours of the wicked notwithſtanding. As 2. Chron: 16. 9. The eyes of the Lord beheld all the earth, to ſhewe himſelfe ſtrong with them that are of perfect heart toward him.

Great therefore is the comfort of faith in Gods fatherly prouidence, to euery one that truely beleeueth in him, according to this ſecond conſideration. And the rather will this conſideration be comfortable, if we obſerue that God doth not at this day so tye himselfe to ordinarie courses, but so often as he thinketh meete, he sendeth extraordinarie succours to his distressed seruants. According as it is credibly reported, that God hath in these our daies strangely directed his seruants, sometimes to preuent the apprehension of their persecutors, & sometime to escape, after they haue bene apprehended, though they haue beene narrowly watched. According also as at the siege of Rochel, it is reported, that when the poorer sort wanted bread & victuals, God did send thē in the riuer, a kind of fish called Surdmes, euery day so long as the siege lasted, in great aboundance: and that they ceased the same day that the siege brake vp. Act: and Monum: at the very end of the booke. Thus much concerning the second help, to further & inlarge our cōfort in the fatherly prouidence of God.

Thirdly, to the same ende serueth the experience and testimonie of other concerning the same. Such as is the testimonie and experience of Iosua, concerning himselfe and the people in his time: ch: 21. 45. There hath nothing failed (saith he) of all the good things, which the Lord hath said to the house of Israel, but all came to passe. And againe, ch: 23. 14. 15. as it were vpon his death-bed. Behold (saith he) this day doe I enter into the way of all the world, and yee knowe in all your hearts, and in all your soules, that nothing hath failed of all the good things, which the lord your God promised you, but al are come to passe vnto you: nothing hath failed therof. Likewise King Salomon, 1. King. 8. 15. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel (saith he) who spake with his mouth vnto Dauid my Father, & hath with his hand fulfilled it, &c. And so K. Dauid before him, Psa: 18. 4. &c. The sorrowes of death compassed me, &c. But in my trouble I called vpō the Lord, & cried vnto my God, he heard my voice out of his Temple, & my cry did come before him into his eares, &c. And Ps. 34. 2. &c. My soule shal glory in the Lord the humble shal heare it, and be glad, &c. I sought the Lord, and he heard me: yea he deliuered me out of all my feare. They shall therefore looke vnto him, and runne to him, and their faces shall not be ashamed, saying: This poore man cried, and the Lord heard him, and saued him out of all his troubles. And Ps. 37. 25. I haue beene yong and am old, yet I neuer saw the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread. But on the contrarie touching the wicked, verses 35. 36. I haue seene the wicked (saith he) strong and spreading himselfe like a greene bay tree, (or as the word Ezrach arbor indigena signifieth) a tree in his native soile. Yet he passed away, and loe he was gone, & I sought him, but he could not be found. But that we may returne againe, to the testimonies of the Prophet, concerning his owne experience: read, Psal: 66, 16, &c. Come (saith he) and hearken all yee that feare God, and I will tell you what he hath done to my soule, &c. And againe, Ps. 116. 5. 6, &c. To the furthering of this comfort, it is to singular purpose, that we doe throughly acquaint our selues, with those holy histories of the Bible: wherein God himselfe, hath of speciall purpose, most liuely manifested the most gracious vertue of his prouidence. As is notably in the histories recorded concerning Iaakob, Ioseph, Dauid, Iob, and such like. Whose end and issue, out of their manifold and great troubles, we are willed to consider, to the comforting of our selues, against our owne afflictions and trialls, Iames. chap: 5. 10. 11.

Fourthly, our owne experience from times past, faithfully recorded in our hearts: will be verie helpefull, to the increase of our comfort, for all times to come. And therefore we are exhorted, diligently to marke the Lords gracious dealing with his seruants. As Psal: 37. verse 37. Marke the vpright man, and beholde the iust: for the end of that man is peace. Thus euery one of vs, should keepe a diligent register, of all Gods mercifull dealing toward our godly friendes, and acquaintance: both cōcerning their life, & their death. All which ought to be so many incouragements, to confirme vs, to walke in the like godly course, that they haue walked in, and so to hope for the like good end, which they haue made: according to that, Heb: 13, 7.

The fewnes of such kind of obseruers of Gods prouidence, is noted to their reproofe: Ps. 107. 43. But as touching those that are diligent obseruers of it, the fruite is noted to bee singular, euen in the same verse, insomuch as they shall vnderstand; vnderſtand; to wit, to their comfort, how great the kindeneſſe of the Lord is. Contrariwiſe, all profane neglect, whether of the mercies, or of the iudgements of the Lord; it is ſubiect to the iuſt diſpleaſure & vengeance of God, Pſ. 28. 5.

The Comfortes.

Verily, if we would diligently call to minde; wee ſhould eaſily remember, that God hath ſhewed vs much mercie in our life time, in ſauing vs from many hurtes and miſchiefes, ſometimes from breaking a legge, or an arme; ſometimes from drowning, or burning: ſometimes from the loſſe of the eye of our body, or from the loſſe of the ſpirituall eye of our vnderſtanding, whereby we ſhould haue fallen into this or that herifie of ſoule. Yea if we would carefully call things to minde: we ſhould eaſily remember, that God hath not ſeldome times preſerued vs, euen from the imminent danger of death it ſelfe. The which, if we would duly weigh, and ponder with thankfull and dutifull hearts, nothing could more confirme vs, that there is a diuine prouidence. If we were but once, or ſeldome deliuered: we might peraduenture imagine, that it came by chance: but when the experience is very often, yea an vſuall thing with God, to preſerue vs from daily perills; this doth clearely argue, that God of his infinite mercie, keepeth a vigilant watch ouer vs.

And concerning other, we may eaſily obſerue the like, to the ſtirring vp of our hearts, to be continually thankefull to God, and to gather ſtill more and more comfort, to our owne ſoules thereby. We may eaſily call to minde, that God preſerued ſuch a mans houſe moſt mercifully and ſtrangly from burning by diuerting of the winde from it on a ſodaine, or ſome other way: ſuch a mans body from being cruſhed to peeces by a cart, &c. ſuch an other, that the houſe did not fall downe vpon his heade, it falling downe preſently after hee came out of it: ſuch a man from the infection of the plague, though at vnwares, he had eate and drunke, and companied with the infected. &c. ſuch an other from the hands of murthering thieues &c. this mãs child from ſcalding, or burning, or from being troden vnder the horſe feete, &c. But who can reckon vp all the waies, whereby God doth daily, and euerie where, infinitely manifeſt the tender effects of his fatherly prouidence?

Fiftly, our reprouing of our owne diſcomfort (as was anſwered in the fift place) and on the contrary, our owne incouraging of our ſelues, from thoſe ſo many good grounds, as God hath giuen vs for our incouragement: theſe will, through the bleſsing of God, reuiue & cheare vp, yea confirme and augment our comfort, in the faith of Gods fatherly prouidence. We haue herein, the notable example of the Prophet Dauid, 1. Sam: 30. 6. He comforteth himſelfe in the Lord his God. Likewiſe, Pſ. 42. & Pſ. 43. O my ſoule, why art thou ſo diſquieted within me? Truſt in God, &c. But moſt notably, Pſ. 77. 6. 7, &c. I called to remembrãce my ſong in the night: I cõmuned with my own heart, and my ſpirit ſearched diligently. Will the Lord abſet himſelf for euer? doth his promiſe faile for euermore? Hath God forgotten to be mercifull? hath he ſhut vp his tender mercy in diſpleaſure? Selah. Thus the Prophet reaſoneth againſt his preſent diſcomfort, and concludeth, that it was onely from his own infirmitie, and from no failing of mercy in the Lord, that his ſoule refuſed comfort, &c. But among all other incouragements, thoſe which the Lord himſelfe doth more immediately hearten vs with; they ought moſt effectually weigh with vs, to our moſt ſingular comfort; and for the ſame cauſe, we are moſt diligently to attend vnto them. Such as are thoſe which we read, Deut: 31, 6, 7, 8, 9. & Ioſh: ch: 1. 6. 7, 8, 9. cõpared with Heb: 13. 5, 6, where the Apoſtle applieth that incouragement, which God gaue more particularly to Moſes and Ioſhua; to the ſpeciall comfort of euery faithfull Chriſtian. For euen for their ſakes alſo, the Lord hath ſaid, as the Apoſtle teſtifieth: I will not leaue thee, nor forſake thee, &c. Read alſo like vnto this, the gracious incouragement of our Sauiour Chriſt, Mat: 6. 25. &c. concerning Gods fatherly prouidence, in reſpect of outward things. And for comfort in regard of ſpirituall bleſsings, to be reached forth by the ſame gracious and prouident hand of his; euen by his holy ſpirit: read Iohn: chap: 16. 6. 7. &c.

The greatnes of this comfort of Gods fatherly incouragement, may be ſome thing familiarly discerned of vs, from the similitude of a louing natural father; whose speech must needes be comfortable to his dutifull child, when he shall bid him be carefull for nothing, but to follow his booke, insomuch as he is minded to bring him vp in learning, and therefore promiseth him to prouide for him all things that are meete, so as he shall not neede to take any care for them. Neuertheles, this comfort of the naturall child: is infinitely inferiour, to that comfort, which the child of God may take, from the incouragement of his heauenly Father.

To the which end, I pray you, let vs marke the infinite wisedome, and sufficiẽcie of the prouidẽce of God, to be aboue all that man can possibly performe. For if he denieth vs one benefit, because he seeth it not meet for vs, he wil make a supply some other way: if not by outward helpes, yet by spirituall grace: if not at the very instant, yet within a while after, yea euen in the best season that may be: if not in this place, yet some other where: if not by the fauour & succour of this man, yet by the helpe of another: if not by a mans acquaintance, yet by some meere stranger: if not by a friend, yet sometimes by a very enemie: according to the holy Prouerb, ch: 16.7. which was alledged not long before.

No doubt, God will make an issue for his children, so farre as he shall see it to be best for them; aboue that the wisest man in the world, can conceiue: according to that most ancient holy Prou: In the mount will the Lord prouide. Gen: 22. v. 8. compared with v. 14. For though Abraham knew of no other sacrifice, which he should offer vp, but onely his sonne Isaak: yet the Lord, had an other sacrifice in store, which should be brought to Abrahams hand in stead of his sonne. Whereupon, the former holy Prou: arose, and grewe into common vse, in the church of God, to the cõforting of such, as shuld be exercised with great difficulties & straits, aboue that they thẽselues could see how they might escape.

We haue likewise, a notable example in the deliuerance of Dauid out of the hand of King Saul: as we read, 1. Sam: 23. v. 26. 27. 28. Saul and his souldiers were on the one side of the mountaine, & Dauid on the other, hasting himself, all that he could, away from him: but Saul and his company, had compassed Dauid round about, so as it was very likely, that he must needes take him. How therefore should poore Dauid now escape? Behold the excellent prouidence of God. There came a messenger to King Saul, euen at that very instant (as the text reporteth) saying, Hast thee and come: for the Philistims haue inuaded the land. So by this occasion, Saul was hindered from his pursuit after Dauid; and went against the Philistims, to performe a more necessarie and cõmendable seruice. Wherevpon, that place tooke the name Selahammalekoth; that is, a place of this happie parting of the armies of Saul & Dauid. Yea, and if we consider frõ time to time the whole history of Dauid: we shall see the manifold reskues of Gods prouidence, laid plainely before our eies; to our singular instruction & cõfort.

This gracious prouidence of God, is to be vnderstood of vs, as not onely reaching to priuate persons; but also to families, cities, and nations, of such as truly feare, worship, and serue him: neither for one age alone, or a short time, but euen from the beginning to the end of the world.

Yea, so God mainteineth not onely his children, but also all sorts of his workes, as none are able to ouerthrowe them. For though all the world should consent, vtterly to destroy, but euen the least and frailest kind of creature that is; they should not be able to bring it to passe. And therefore we may iustly assure our hearts, that much lesse shall the wicked, though they band and associate themselues, neuer so firmely; be euer able to suppresse, and roote out the people of God, from the face of the earth: no nor yet doe them the least annoiance, but as God himselfe, shal for iust causes, permit. He wil surely vphold his Church, against the very gates & power of Hell. This therefore may iustly be to our singular comfort against many temptations. And namely against this, that we are ready to thinke, that by professing the true faith, feare, and loue of God; we take the most ready way to ouerthrowe our selues: insomuch as the true worshippers of God, are most of all maligned and maliced of the world.

No

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly prouidence.

The Comfortes.

No, no, it is not so. We doe thereby make our choise of the most sure and safe state and condition that can be, both for the establishing of our selues, and also of our posteritie. Not that we may looke to be free from troubles, but because (as hath beene shewed) wee walking in the waies of our God, are vnder the speciall protection and defence, of the Almightie, and most wise, and gratious God.

Wherefore (according to that which was answered in the sixt place) to the end we be not the hinderers and abridgers of our owne comfort; wee must take diligent heede, that we lie not securely in any sinne: and that we doe not, in any thing, deale crookedly and frowardly with our good & gratious God. For then indeede, we might iustly feare, that God in his iust pleasure, should deale croslely; that wee say not crookedly and frowardly with vs. Not with any such frowardnesse as is in vs; but with a holy and iust punishment, such as is most meete, and answerable to the qualitie and degree of our sinnes: euen such as should bee least to our owne liking, and furthest from our expectation. And thus wee reade, that God himselfe, borrowing his speech figuratiuely, and in way of imitation: doth from the practise of our wayward dealing with him, threaten vs accordingly. As Leuit. chap. 26. verses 23, 24. If yee will not be reformed by me, but walke stubburnly against me. Then will I also walke stubburnely against you, and I will smite yee yet seuen times for your sinnes. And againe, verse 28. the which some translate thus: If yee walke rcatchlesse, (& as it were at aduenture, & ye care not how) toward me: then will I deale likewise toward you. That is, not in any fauourable & setled course, to your comfort, as you would desire: but so confusedlie and troublesomelie, that yee shall not know (as one would say) where to haue me. So Ezekiel chap. 20. 24, 25. Because they executed not my iudgements, &c (saith the Lord) therefore I gaue thē also statutes that were not good, & iudgements wherin they should not liue. That is, he sent vpon them his punishments, to their euill and smart: the which, it pleaseth God figuratiuely and vnproperly to call Statutes. Reade the like 2. Sam. 22. 27. And againe Psal. 18. 26. With the froward (saith Dauid) God will shew himselfe froward: not with such a kinde of frowardnesse, as is in the peruerse hearts of the wicked, as was said before: God forbid wee should once thinke so: but in such sort, as he will make them wearie of their partes. Like as the Father or Master wil say to his childe, or seruant, whom he seeth murmuring; doe ye murmure? I will murmure with you by and by, &c.

Now, that sinne (wherein eyther wee our selues doe securely lie, or any of those that belong to our gouernment, through our default and negligence) doth hinder the comfortable course of Gods prouident and fatherly dealing toward vs: see Iosh. chap. 7. verses 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, &c. The Lord said to Iosua, Get thee vp, wherefore liest thou thus vpon thy face? Israel hath sinned, &c. Thus much concerning the sixt branch of the Answer.

Moreouer (as was answered in the seuenth place) the serious bending of our minds to answer the obiections, which the diuel, and fleshly reason do suggest to the weakening, yea to the vtter taking away of our comfort in the fatherly prouidence of God, if it might bee: it will no doubt bean excellent meanes, of the establishing; yea of the enlarging of our comfort therein. For that which is wonne by a iust conflict, and conquest: it is of all other things, most comfortably and effectually atchieued and gotten.

Finally (as was answered in the last place) a wise and carefull meditation of the manifold commodities, which belong to the afflictions of Gods children, which may most of all seeme to be against the comfort of faith in Gods fatherly regard of vs: it cannot but be very comfortable, to those, that by faith haue learned, to iudge of things, not according to outward appearance, and bodily sense, but by a right iudgement: according to that precept of our Sauiour Christ Iohn chap. 7. 24.

Of these two last points therefore, the which doe require at our handes

some further examination and inquirie: let vs dispose our selues, earnestly to consider of them, according as God shall giue vs grace, and as the matter it selfe doth worthily giue vs iust cause.

AND first how we may answer the obiections. In which respect; let vs the rather, well and throughly arme our selues against them; because otherwise, not only by the colourable contradiction of the aduersaries, but also by reason of many hard and vncomfortable accidents, which fall out in the world from the hand of God, (yea and as it may seeme, euen as well against the children of God many times, as against the wicked and vngodly, as it is most wisely obserued by King Salomon: Eccles: chap. 9. 1, 2.) wee should not only, not be able so comfortably to discerne the truth of this doctrine, concerning the gracious and fatherly prouidence of God, as were to bee wished: but wee might be in further danger, to fall to deny the Article altogether, as many haue done. According as it is recorded against the wicked. Psal. 10. verse 11. and Psalm. 94 7. and Zeph. 1. 12. Mal. 3. 14, 15. and Iob. 21. 15. and chap. 22. 15, 16. Yea without good caution, so dangerous is the temptation; that the Prophet Dauid, willingly confesseth against him selfe for the admonition of all other: that his feete were almost gone, and that his steps had well neare slipped. For (saith he) I fretted at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked, &c. Psal. 73. 2. &c. The same temptation troubled the Prophet Ieremie also, as appeares in the beginning of the 12. of his prophesie.

Wherefore, seeing we are so apt to receiue some euill impression, this way: let vs as throughly as we may, fortifie our selues against euery stumbling blocke, which either the diuell, or our owne blinde reason, and vnfaithfull heart, may cast in our way.

And because (as was mentioned euen now concerning the Prophet Dauid) this will likely be obiected for one of the first doubts; how it should come to passe, that if God doe rule and gouerne all things with a fatherly prouidence, for the benefit and comfort of his children; that the riches, pleasures, and honours of the world, should be so plentifully bestowed vpon the wicked & vngodly, as we see them to be: euen vpon such, as doe nothing at all regard, eyther to know, beleeue, loue, or obey God, as their Father; but contrariwise, doe continually rebell against him, in treading vnder their feete, all his holy lawes and commandements.

Question. What may we answer to this obiection, in the iust defence of the fatherly prouidence of the Lord our God?

Answere. God doth this to declare his vnmeasurable and incomprehensible goodnes and bounty, in the sight of all the world: in that the extreame wickednes of the wicked, can not restraine him from doing good vnto them, euen because they are his creatures: though neuer so much degenerated from him, and the obedience of his holy will.

Explication and proofe. For the proofe of this, reade Matth. 5. 45. He maketh his sunne to arise on the euill and the good, and sendeth raine on the iust and the vniust. Likewise Act. 14. 15, 16, 17. God is he who made heauen and earth, and the Sea, and all things that in them are. Who in time past suffered all the Gentiles to walke in their owne waies. Neuerthelesse he left not himselfe without witnes, in that he did good, and gaue vs raine from heauen, and fruitfull seasons filling our hearts with foode and gladnes. And againe, chap. 17. 27, 28 Reade also Psa. 17. 14 He filleth the bellies euen of the men of the world, (that is, of those whom we by a fit name call worldlings) with his hid treasure: whose children also haue enough, & they leaue the rest of their substance for their children.

*Deus sine exceptione creaturas omnes amore prosequitur. Sed non nisi filios suos quos Spiritu adoptionis regenuit paterno amore complectitur. Cal. Harm. Marc. 10. 21.

But herein, it is meete that we doe consider, that the Lord dealeth not thus with the wicked, because they are wicked, and to maintaine them in their sin: but onely, because they are his creatures, and therefore thus farre respecteth them, for his own creations sake. To the which purpose, well saith a very godly learned man* God sheweth forth his loue to all his creatures, none excepted: yet so, as he imbraceth none with a fatherly affection, but those his children, whom he hath regenerated by his Spirit of adoption. And furthermore, as touching those of the wicked, who harden their hearts in their despising of the bountifulnesse of Gods mercies: it cannot otherwise be, but he must in his iustice, call them to an account, so as they must one day smart for all. Read Psal. 49. and Prou. 10.30. Luk. chap 12. 16, 20, 21. and ch. 16. 25. And Rom. 2. 1. &c. 4. Thus as it is Psal. 69. 22. Their table becommeth a snare to them, and their prosperity is their ruine. when once the measure of their wickednes is full. As Leuit. 18. 24. &c. and Ezek. chap. 16. 49. 50.

Well, let this be so. Yet there is a further doubt concerning Gods fatherlie prouidence, in so much as he doth not alwaies bestow these outward blessings vpon his owne children, as well as vpon the wicked: albeit they doe truly beleeue in him, and from their very hearts vnfeinedly loue & obey him, as their most reuerend and deare Father. What is to be answered to this?

Question.

Answere. God giueth hereby plainly to vnderstand, that he hath more excellent, both riches and pleasures, and honours, in store for them in his heauenly kingdome of glorie: yea & euen in that he doth now presently in his kingdome of grace as we call it, giue vnto them heauenly knowledge, faith, feare & loue, with many other most precious & sweet spirituall graces; & therwith, the most comfortable hope of euerlasting life & glory it self. It is a portion most worthy to be preferred before al the vain riches, pleasures, and honours of this transitory world.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

So in deed we read Ps. 4. 6, 7. Many say, who will shew vs any good? Lord lift thou vp the light of thy countenance vpon vs. So shalt thou giue me more ioy of heart, then they haue when their wheate and their wine doe abound. And Ps. 17. 15. I shall behold thy face in righteousnes and when I awake, I shall be satisfied with thine image. That is, when at the resurrection, I shall see and know thee as thou art, in the full and perfect riches of thy eternall goodnes and mercy. Read also Ps. 31. 19. O how great is thy goodnes which thou hast laid vp for them that feare thee? yea done to them that trust in thee, euen before the sonnes of men? Thou dost hide them priuily in thy presence from the pride of men, &c. Likewise Ps. 34. 8, 9, 10. Moreouer Ps. 19. 7. &c. The law of the Lord is perfit conuerting the soule, &c. More to bee desired then gold, yea then fine gold, sweeter also then honie, yea then the hony fresh out of the hony combe. And Ps. 119 verses 14, 57, 72, 93, 103, 111, 127, 162, 165. Likewise Pro. 3. 13. &c. Blessed is the man that findeth wisedome, and the man that getteth vnderstanding. For the marchandise thereof, is better then the marchandise of siluer, and the gaine thereof is better then gold. It is more precious then pearles: and all things that thou canst desire, are not to be compared vnto her, &c. Whereunto adde that which we reade ch. 15. verse 16. Better is a little with the feare of the Lord, then great treasure, and trouble therewith And ch. 16. 8. Better is a little with righteousnes, then great reuenewes without equity. And chap. 17. 1. Better is a drie morsell & peace be with it then a house full of fluine things, (to wit, prepared to make a feast) where there is strife.

And touching this point, let it be well obserued of vs, that the eternall loue and fauour of God, touching euerlasting happinesse, is in no wise to be measured, according to our enioying of the riches of this world: nor the hatred and displeasure of God, by our wanting of the abundance thereof. For as we reade Eccl. 9. 2. No man knoweth either loue or hatred by this rule. For many notoriously wicked, are externally very prosperous in the world: and contrariwise, many of singular godlines, are for a time, in great aduersitie, so as they might seeme to be of all other most miserable. Outward prosperitie, is then onely a testimony of Gods loue, when (as King Salomon saith) God giueth wisedome with an inheritance: that is, when he giueth grace to vse it soberly, and in the right godly manner. Neither is aduersity a token of hatred, but of loue, toward all such as beare it patiently. For vnto such, God offereth himselfe as vnto children: as the Apostle teacheth vs Heb. 12. 7. &c.

Finally, for the answer of this obiection; it is euident in the sight of all the world, that (according as it seemeth good in the eyes of God) he giueth some of his seruants, euen the riches and lawfull and honest pleasures of this life: as well as the comfort and possession of the graces of his heauenly kingdome.

The Comfortes.

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

But that we may come to answer some other obiections: what should be the reason, that euen touching some of those which we speake of, though it be but a small summe: yet God doth take away from some of them, euen that which hee had before giuen, or rather onely lent vnto them for a time. For of rich, he doth within a short time make them poore: and from honour, hee bringeth them by and by downe to a low state and degree againe. And this may seeme to be more grieuous to such, then if they had neuer beene so inriched and aduanced: but had remained alwaies, in a meane, and poore condition of life. How, therefore, may Gods tender and fatherlie care, be discerned of vs, through the thicke mist of this so darke a clowd?

Question.

Answere.

God in his fatherly prouidence, most wisely fore-seeth; that the continuance of the worldly prosperitie of such, would in time, prone hurtfull vnto them: and therefore he doth ether while remoue worldly riches & honour frō his deerest children, lest their minds should be lifted vp & corrupted by them; & so carried away, & withdrawne from him, and from the due care of seeking after their owne true heauenlie treasure and honour.

Explicatiō and proofe.

So it is indeede. For as our Sauiour Christ teacheth vs, Matth. 13.23. the thornie cares of this world, and the deceitfulnes of riches do choake the word: and make many vnfruitfull touching the kingdome of God. Reade also Psa. 30.6. In my prosperity (saith the Princely Prophet Dauid) I said I shall neuer be moued. His meaning is, that he grew shortly to vaine confidence, by reason of his riches and power, &c. Wherefore God (as he saith further) did hide his face, so that he was troubled, and learned thereby, that it was continually necessary for him, to seeke vnto God by prayer, and to make him his onely stay. And therefore also, Psalm. 119.71. it is worthily said: It is good for me that I haue been afflicted, that I may learne thy statutes For as we reade before, verse 67. Before I was afflicted, I went astray: but now I keepe thy word.

God verily, hath very many notable and worthy lessons, to teach his schollers by afflictions; the which they neither would, nor could, euer learne so wel, in continuall prosperity: namely to be meeke and patient, to deny themselues, to contemne the vanity of this present euill world, to long earnestly after the kingdome of heauen, &c.

He doth it also, to manifest the faith, and sundry other graces, wherewith he hath alreadie indued, and furnished his seruants: the triall whereof, bringeth vnto them more excellent aduantage, then all corruptible gold, neuer so perfectly fined, could aforde. 1. Pet. 1.7. Rom. 5.3, 4, 5. and Iames chap. 1. verses 3, 4. and verse 12.

Moreouer, by the constancie of the stronger, in their trialls; God doth prepare, and strengthen the faith of the weaker, against the time of their like pretious trialls: while they doe behold the constant faith, and patience of those that haue gone before them.

Finally, as our Sauiour Christ assureth vs, Whosoeuer shall loose house or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for the sake of Christ and his Gospel: hee shall receiue a hundreth fold now at this present (to wit, inward peace of conscience, with ioy in the holy Ghost, &c.) and in the world to come, eternall life. Marke chap. 10. 28 &c.

Question.

But some peraduenture, will demand of vs yet further, and aske; Why should God take away these outward blessings of his, from some of his children, and not from other?

Answere

What may we answer to this demand?

This maketh the holy prouidence of God our heauenly father, so much the more cleare and manifest, and the excellencie of his diuine wisedome, to shine forth, so much the more brightly: by how much he doeth more particularly dispose both of all things, & also of all persons, as may be best for euery one. And as touching our owne selues, wee must take diligent heed; that howsoeuer it pleaseth God to deale more bountifully, in the constant vpholding of the prosperous estate of any other, in respect of this world, then with vs: that our eye be not euill, and enuious, because our God is good and mercifull.

The Comforter.

any other, in respect of this world, then with vs: that our eye be not euil, and enuious, because our God is good and mercifull.

So in deede, doth our Sauiour Christ teach vs, Matth: 20. 15. Yea the holy Scriptures doe often renewe this lesson vnto vs, that wee should not enuie or grudge at the prosperity of any; no not of the wicked. As Psalme 37. 1. Prou: chapt: 23. 17. and chapt: 24. 1. and verse 19. Of the which instruction, there is certes euerie way very great reason.

First, in respect of the wickednesse, and vtter vnlawfulnes, of enuie it selfe; the which proceedeth from the Diuel, and maketh those who giue themselues ouer vnto it, verie like vnto him: according to that Matth: 13. 28. where our Sauiour Christ noteth out the Deuil, by the name of the enuious man.

Secondly, there is great reason, in respect of the state and condition of the wicked, euen in the middest of their wealth; the which beeing duely considered, is rather to be pitied: yea euen in this, that their portion of pleasures, is onely in this life, and then followe most wofull paines and tormentes for euer. Psal: 17. 14. and Psal: 49, 12, 13, 14. and 73. 18. 19. 20. And Luke ch: 16. 25.

Now therfore, if we may not enuie the prosperity of the wicked: much lesse may wee enuie at the prosperitie of the godlie. But contrariwise, it is our dutie to reioice, and to blesse and praise our most good and gratious God for it.

Thirdly, the reason against enuie, is great, euen in regard of our selues; whose estate is infinitelie more happie and blessed, yea in our greatest affliction that may be: then theirs is or can be, in their greatest worldlie pompe and felicitie. As is euident from the testimonie of the Spirite of God: Matth: 5. 11. 12. Luke 26. 24, 25, 26. Iames 1. verses 2. 12.

Fourthlie, the reason against this sinne, is most weighty, in respect of God; to whom alone doth iustlie belong, the souereigne & free bestowing, and disposing, of all his creatures and blessings, both spirituall, and also belonging to this life: aboue all demande of euery why, or wherfore hee should doe so, or so. It is proper, and pertaining to God alone, to saye: May I not doe with my owne as I will?

Let vs therfore, cast away all enuying at the prosperitie of other; speciallie of other our fellow brethren; and conuert all murmuring into a thankfull admiration at the goodnes of God, which he exerciseth continuallie, towards the poorest and basest of those that doe truely beleeue in him. Whose outward afflictions, hee doth recompence alwaies, with inward and spirituall comforts and blessings: as was said a little before.

GOD our heauenlie Father, in this his vnequall & vneuen course (as flesh and blood is readie to thinke of it) may (as one saith well) be likened to a most skilfull Phisition, in that hee ordereth his Phisicke, according to the differing estate and condition of his Patients. For hee knoweth that one dramme will doe as much with some, as a greater quantitie of the same Drugge, in another mans bodie, &c. So likewise, the Lord he knoweth, that a little headache, will preuaile as much, to humble one whom hee hath alreadie broken: as an extreame collicke, or gowte, with an other that is yet of a sturdie and stoute stomacke. The diuerse dealing of the Lorde therefore, sheweth plainelie, that hee doth not rule as a Father ouercarried with an inordinate, or partiall pittie: but as a most wise, holie, and righteous Father.

But admit this, (it may bee, some will say) that God, as a most wise, holie, and discrete Father, vseth the afflictions and humiliations of his children; like as a Phisition vseth his bitter potions, to cure the euils and sinnes, which they are subiect vnto here in this life: Yet how can death, which to the viewe of the carnall eye, doth not seldome fall cruellie vppon them, be counted for good phisicke, and to be a healing medicine? For this destroyeth euen nature it selfe. And death (as we may say) is after a sorte, the shame of all phisicke.

Question. Howe therefore may it agree to the Fatherlie hand of God: and that his Diuine skill should haue any stroke herein?

Beliefe in Gods father-ly Prouidēce. The Comfortes.

Answere. Meſt of all, ſeeing he hath in his moſt gracious prouidence, appointed, and preordained, death to be vnto all his children, a counter-poiſon againſt death; & the moſt ſpeedie and immediate paſſage vnto euerlaſting life; and therein, to the poſſeſſion and fruition of all perfect health, wealth, and honour, for euer and euer.

Explicatiō & proofe. A notable proofe hereof wee read, Philip: 1, 21, 22, 23, 24. Likewiſe 2. Timot: 4. 8. and 1. Pet: 1. 3. 4. &c.

Moreouer Pſalm: 116. 15. Precious (ſaith the holy Prophet) in the ſight of the Lord is the death of his Saints. And the ſame againe, Pſalm: 72. 14. Deare ſhall their blood be in his ſight.

And beſide this, it is to be further conſidered, that it is the good pleaſure of God, to take away his righteous ſeruants, from greater euils, that are after to fall vpon the wicked that remaine. Iſai: chap: 57 1. And that, to this gratious ende and purpoſe; that they ſhould not be peruerted in their mindes, to fall into errors of iudgement, ouerſwaied by the corruptions of the time: nor carried away after common ſinnes, and diſorders, increaſing ouer-ſtrongly in the dayes wherin they liue.

Neuertheleſſe, it is not ſeldome ſeene, that the Lorde maketh his ſeruants, euen here in this world, glorious by his wonderfull deliuerances: and that hee crowneth them with age, as with a crowne of glorie, in that they are found conſtant in the righteous waies of God, euen as it pleaſeth him: though death had ſeemed, ſundrie times, to haue grappeled vpon them. Yea, and euen generallie, if wee ſhall wiſely conſider; wee ſhall finde, that in common calamities, God ſheweth himſelfe, oftentimes more fauourable to his people, then to their aduerſaries: though manie and great be their ſinnes, whereby they doe dailie prouoke him. According to that we read, Iſai: chapt: 27. 7. Hath he ſmitten him as hee ſmote thoſe that did ſmite him? Or is hee ſlaine, according to the ſlaughter of them, that were ſlaine by him? Thou contendeſt with him (that is, with thy people, as ſaith the holie Prophet) in meaſure, &c. But hee taketh their enemies away, as with a rough Spirit (or blaſt) in the daye of the Eaſtwinde.

But for all this it will peradventure, be further obiected, and vrged in waye of amplification: that not onely particular perſons, but alſo euen whole Cities, Countries, and Nations, profeſſing the true religion of God, doe ſometimes fall before their enemies, who are wicked and profeſſed idolaters, &c.

Queſtion. What is to be further anſwered to this?

Anſwere. They that haue the better cauſe; may neuertheles be guiltie of ſome grieuous ſinnes, wherin they lie without repentance: for the which God in his iuſtice, ſeeth meete to puniſh them.

Yea, and by circumſtance: the ſinnes of the profeſſors of the Goſpel, may eaſilie bee greater, then the ſinnes of ſome ignorant idolaters: who haue not the light of the word of God, ſhining among them.

Explicatiō and proofe. It is true: according to that manner of aggrieuing the ſinnes of Bethſaida, and Capernaum, aboue the ſinnes of the Sodomites, &c: the which our Sauiour Chriſt vſeth Matth: 11. 20. &c. And againe, he affirmeth generallie, that whoſoeuer he be, that knoweth his maiſters will, and doth it not, ſhal be beaten with the more ſtripes.

But be it, that their ſinnes be not more heinous; yet what letteth, why God may not correct them, in that meaſure whervnto they are growne: that ſo hee may preuent the extremitie wherevnto they would ſhortly come.

And beſides, it may be that in the preſent action of defence, or reuenge vpon the enemies of Gods truth, or violaters of common honeſtie and iuſtice: they who haue the better cauſe, doe not prepare themſelues to deale in it, with holie mindes. Or it may bee, they doe truſt in their owne ſtrength, and doe not ſtaye themſelues vprightly vpon the Lord. The which ſeemeth to be the ſinne, of the other tribes of Iſrael, againſt the tribe of Beniamin: before whom they fell twice, Iudges, chapt: 20. For this, verilie wee are verie apte vnto, euen to preſume ouer-much in a good cauſe: as if our owne ſinnes could not hinder the succeſſe of it in our hands. But therin, we may eaſilie deceiue our ſelues; and therfore it ſtandeth vs in hand, to walke humblie before the Lord our God, and to ſeeke peace with him: that ſo he may be intreated to proſper vs, euen in the beſt ſeruice which wee may poſsiblie be imployed in.

But the cauilling wittes of men, will be yet ſtill maligning, and oppugning the Fatherlie prouidence of our God. For by an vnreuerend prying into it, they ſnatch at thus, among the reſt of their quarrells, that manie notoriouſlie wicked (both particular perſons, & alſo whole Cities and Nations) haue bene ſpared very long: when as in the mean while, God hath more ſpeedily iudged his own people; he cauſing iudgement to begin at his own houſe, as the Apoſtle Peter teacheth. 1. Epiſt. 4. 17. How are we to anſwere this obiection?

Queſtion.

Anſwere. The Lorde vſeth long-ſuffering toward the wicked, for the ſalvation of thoſe among them, which doe belong vnto him; and to leaue the reſt the more inexcuſable.

But as touching thoſe, whom hee hath allreaaie called home to the knowledge and faith of his truth: hee doth chaſtice them betimes, when he ſeeth them to beginne to goe aſtray; leaſt they ſhould returne to their former wickednes againe.

Finally hece it is manifeſt, that God the righteous Iudge of all the world, iudgeth his own childrē, as wel as any other: & that without al partial reſpect of any, either cauſe or pſon

Explicatiō & proofe.

So in deed we read, Iob: 34. 10. &c. Hearken vnto me ye men of wiſedome (ſaith Elihu) farre be it from vs to thinke, that wickednes ſhould be in God, and iniquitie in the Almightie. For he wil render to man according to his work, and cauſe euery one to finde according to his way. Certainlie, God will not doe wickedlie, neither will the Almighty pervert iudgemēs &c. & Ro: 2. 6. God will reward euery man according to his works. & v: 11. For ther is no reſpect of perſons with God. It is oftē affirmed, elſe-where.

Moreouer, touching the long-ſuffering of God toward the wicked: wee haue a notable place in the beginning of the ſame chapt. And 2. Pet: 3. 9. The Lord is patient toward vs, and would haue no man to periſh, but would all men to come to repentance. And verſe 15. The long-ſuffering of the Lord is ſalvation.

Neuertheles, that he will chaſtice his owne children when they goe aſtray: reade Pſalm: 89. 30. 31. 32. &c.

But it is yet further inſtanced, and alledged, that not onely olde ſinners, but alſo, that ſometime yong infants: yea euen the ſeede of the faithfull, are taken away by death, yea by the ſword of mercileſſe Tyrants: as namelie by Herod, in that his moſt ſauage and cruel infanticide or murthering of many yong children in Bethlehem and in the borders there abouts.

Queſtion. How may Gods fatherlie prouidence be iuſtified in this?

Anſwere. Onelie original corruption and attainder, is of it ſelfe a ſufficient cauſe, why God in his iuſtice, may not onely give yong infants ouer, to a temporal iudgement: but alſo euen to eternal death, in the ſeueritie of his iuſtice.

But no death, neuer ſo ſodeine, or as it may ſeeme vntimely: can at any time fruſtrate the eternal ſalvation of the yongeſt of thoſe, which doe belong to Gods moſt holie and eternall election.

Explicatiō & proofe.

It is ſo no doubt. For, in ſo much as they belong to our Sau: Chriſt, & to the kingdome of God, Mark: 10. 14. it cannot be that they ſhould periſh. God alſo, in taking them to his mercie by one calamitie (the bitternes wherof they had not the reaſon to diſcerne) he endeth moſt ſpeedilie, and at once, all their miſeries: which would haue multiplied vppon them, in a long continuance and courſe of life.

And further, as touching the wicked ſeed of the wicked, the Lord oftentimes cutteth them off, as it were in the ſhell, becauſe, according to the prouerb, they are as the euill egge of an euill birde: and for that (as the Lorde knoweth) the yong cubbe, would in time proue as craftie, and by craft as hurtfull to the Church, as the olde foxes haue beene. And that the whelpe of the woolfe, would grow to be as rauenous as euer was his damme, &c.

Qreſtion. Well then, wee acknowledging all theſe things to be true: yet in ſo much as God hateth ſinne, and cannot but in his holie iuſtice, inflict his heauie iudgements vpon ſinners: why (as ſome boldly inquire) doth not God at once by his power, cause sinne to cease? Yea as they feare not to expostulate, & quarrell with God: why did he at all suffer sinne to haue any entrance into the worlde? What shall wee say to these?

This is most venterous and desperate boldenes in deede: in all such as feare not thus to obiect. To whom wee may, both more iustlie, and also more boldlie, say with the holie Apostle Paul, euen to the stopping of their presumptuous mouthes whosoeuer they be: O man who art thou, which pleadest against God? Shall the thing formed, say to him that formed it, why hast thou made me thus? Hath not the Potter power of the claye? And so forth, as it followeth in the 9. chapter of the Epistle to the Romanes from the 11. verse of the chapter.

And further also, seeing sinne is come into the world, onelie through mans defait, as hath bene declared before; it is for euer iust with God to punish sinne, yea to punish sinne by sinne, in the continuing and multiplying course thereof; and one wicked man by another, from generation to generation: yea and his owne children also, so farre as they shall communicate with the wicked world in sinne, vntill he haue humbled, and brought downe the pride and contumacie of all the world, before his most high and glorious Maiestie; euen to the perfect glorifying both of his iustice and also of his mercie, both heere and in the world to come.

Explication and proofe.

For the further confirmation of the former part of this Answere, reade Isaiah: chapt: 45. 9. 10. Woe be vnto him that striueth with his maker, the potsheard with the potsheards of the earth: shall the clay say to him that facioneth it, what makest thou? &c.

In the which reproofe, we are not so to vnderstand the Lord, as if he should peremptorilie forbid all reasoning in this case; as though the obiection could not be answered, and therfore must rest answereles: but that herein he doth admonish the fraile creature, of his dutie toward the most high and soueraigne Maiestie of his Almightie & most reuerend Creator. That is to say, that hee doe conceiue reuerendlie both of all the wo. kes of his Creation, and also of his prouidence, without any contradiction against either of them.

And beside this, ther is in this the Lords most iust prohibition, and staying of all captious reasoning: a perfect and familiar reason, for the staying & suppressing of all such presumptuous reasonings for euer.

For when as in all matters, both of nature, and also of arte, heere beloweth there are boundes of modesty acknowledged, for the limiting of questioning: which would otherwise prooue endlesse and vndutifull, yea verie contentious and hurtfull. For no man would allowe, that the childe should quarrell with his Father, because he is of no taller stature, or of no better complexion, or of no more noble birth, &c. And in matters of Arte wee will silence the scholler with this common rule, Unicuiq, in sua arte credendum: Euerie man must be of some credite in his arte. No Artificer will like to be vrged, to giue a reason of all his dooings.

Wherfore, much rather ought ther to be a holie limitation, & a seuere censuring of all bold reasonings with God: concerning his most high & heauenlie matters? Verilie, there is no such disparagement betwixt the Father and the childe, the maister and the seruant; no nor betweene the clay and the potter: as there is betwixt God, and the greatest Prince; or the most skilfull Artizan, or professor of the liberall Artes and sciences in all the world.

And touching the latter part of the answere, howe God in his most holie iustice, punisheth sinne by sinne; and one sinner by another: read Isai: 33. 3. Woe to thee that spoilest, &c. when thou shalt cease to spoile, thou shalt be spoiled, &c. And Psalm: 58. 11. Doubtles there is a God who iudgeth in the earth.

The historie of Gods holie Prouidence recorded in the holie Scriptures; and experience also from time to time, doe confirme the same, to all wise obseruers of the gouernment of God. Hee raiseth vp great Tyrants, to punish the little Tyrants. For euerie man is a Tyrant to his neighbour, till by his worde and corrections; and many times by publike calamities: hee maketh all wea-rie, of oppreſsing, and gladde to liue quietlie, and peaceablie, one by another.

Finallie, God ſuffereth ſinne to continue in the worlde, that from the euill fruites, which doe iuſtlie accompanie the ſame (ſuch as are manifold ſicknes-ſes, warre, famine, &c.) to the humbling of all fleſh before him: hee hauing (according to the good pleaſure of his owne bleſſed will,) reſerued the time of the full ceaſing of it, vntill he ſhall perfitlie eſtabliſh his owne righteouſnes, in his heauenly Kingdome of glorie and eternall bleſſednes. According to that which he hath promiſed, and deſcribed moſt comfortablie vnto vs. Reuel: chapt: 21. 1. &c. And chapt: 22. 3. 4. 5.

Thus then, wee acknowledging, that all captious cauilling, yea euen all curious queſtioning about the high counſells and works of God, are iuſtlie to be ceaſed among vs, and among all the people of God: let vs with all humblenes of minde, and in the reuerend feare of God, propound onely one queſtion or two more, to be anſwered on the behalfe of the Fatherlie Prouidence of our moſt gratious good God.

The one is this, that ſeeing God is a moſt louing and tender Father ouer his children, and ſpecially ouer their ſoules: how commeth it to paſſe, that erewhile, his poore children, are ſuffered to erre, as it were in the wide and dangerous wildernes of this worlde, as ſheepe without their Shepeheards, as our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe lamented their caſe, in the daies, wherin hee (the chiefe paſtor of all) was bodily preſent among the Iewes? Yea, howe commeth it to paſſe, (may ſome ſaye) that when at the laſt, it hath pleaſed God to giue them Paſtors and Teachers, to inſtruct and comfort them, in his holie wayes: that hee ſhould (as it doth not ſeldome fall out in the worlde, yea in the Church) euen after a while, take them away againe? But moſt of all, it wilbe demanded of vs, howe it may ſtand well with the Fatherlie prouidence of God; that hee ſhould permit the cruell wolfe, and falſe Prophet, to haue anie entrance into his Church: and there to ſet vp a myſterie of iniquitie, euen an Antichriſtian doctrine and gouernment, oppoſite to the truth, both of the doctrine, and alſo of the Eccleſiaſticall diſcipline of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, to the diſhonour of his owne name, (as it may ſeeme) and to the indangering of the whole flocke.

Queſtion. Howe therefore may this agree with the gratious and Fatherlie prouidence of our God?

Anſwere. The moſt gratious and Fatherlie prouidence of God doth herein moſt notablie appeare; in that (notwithſtanding all whatſoeuer is here obiected) he doth neuertheleſſe, both effectualie conuert and call home, and alſo conſtantlie preſerue vnto himſelfe, all his elect children. And that alſo, euen againſt all externall defectes, and againſt all the power and craftie of Antichriſt, and his diuelliſh illuſions, againſt all their lying ſignes and wonders, and againſt all the hypocritical and counterfet appearance, or maske of holineſſe, which is held forth, and boaſted of among them.

And further alſo, well may wee likewiſe admire, and wonder at the moſt gratious goodnes of God; for that he doth at any time ſende any true and faithfull Preachers of his holie worde and Goſpel to his people, and that they continue any while at all with them: rather then vnthankefullie, and mutteringlie, to complaine of any either reſtraint or delaye; ſeeing wee are altogether vnworthie of the leaſt grace and mercie this waye.

And the rather alſo, becauſe when we doe (through the goodneſſe of God) enioye the bleſſed and ordinarie meanes of our ſaluation: wee doe no more thankefullie accept, and entertaine the ſame.

Explicatio and proofe. Wee may iuſtlie doe ſoe indeede. For we haue all, and euerie one of vs, deſerued a thouſand times to periſh for euer, in our infidelitie, and in our manifold ſinnes, and vnthankfulnes: ſeeing we continue therin, notwithſtanding the mercies of God are renewed daylie and howerly vppon vs. And becauſe we doe not yet to this day, dulie regard, thoſe precious meanes & inſtruments, which God doth ſend to further vs in the way of eternall life and ſaluation.

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly prouidence.

The Comfortes.

Verilie, this sinnefull worlde is alwaies vnworthie, of the least of the seruants of God: Heb: 11. 38. Much more vnworthy of Christ himselfe, his Gospell, and Sacraments, &c. Wherefore, iustly may we, yea ought we to acknowledge, and confesse; that God doth not for any want of loue in himselfe toward his people, with-holde or skant his principall blessinges from them: but for their want and failing in loue toward him, and toward his holy ordinances, which he hath vouchsafed to bestowe vpon them.

And herein also is the goodnes of God to be acknowledged of vs, in that all his withdrawing or skanting of his blessings, is onely to this end (as touching his elect children) that by the want of them for a while, hee might prouoke them, to a more earnest desire, and longing after them againe: and to a more carefull & religious vsing of them, when-soeuer it shall please him to returne and sende them againe. According to that Hosh: 5. 15. I will goe and returne to my place (saith the Lord) till they acknowledge their fatte, and seeke me: in their affliction they will seeke me diligentlie. And chapt: 6. 1. 2. 3. Come (say the faithfull one to another) let vs returne to the Lord: for he hath spoiled, and hee wil heale vs: hee hath wounded vs, and hee wil builde vs vp. After two dayes hee wil reuiue vs, and in the third day, hee wil raise vs vp, and wee shall liue in his sight. Then shall we haue knowledge, and indeuour our selues to knowe the Lord: his going forth is prepared as the morning, and hee wil come vnto vs as the raine, and as the latter raine vpon the earth. Read also, Song of Songes, chapter third. And chapter 5. 3. &c.

But as touching the wicked and vngodly hypocrites, who do altogether prophane and abuse the blessed and glorious word and Gospell of God, and our Sauiour Christ; it is most iust, that God should take seuere vengeance vpon them, by giuing them ouer to strong delusion, that they should beleeue lies, &c: according to the holy menace of the Apostle Paul: 2. Thessalon: 2. 10. 11. 12.

For seeing it cannot be denyed, but that it was iust with God; seuerelie to punish the heathen, for their smothering of the dimme light of naturall vnderstanding, which was remaining in them: as we read Rom: 1. verse. 18, &c. Much more must it be acknowledged, to be most agreeable to the most pure iustice of God; to double his wrath against those, that despise the perfit light of his Gospell: and doe rebell against his most holie Spirit, which shineth forth most gratiouslie, and admirablie toward them, in the same.

Nowe therefore, for the conclusion of all obiections, against the Fatherlie prouidence of our good God: let vs come to the last question, which is this. Howe it should come to passe, that the Lord of his infinit mercie, granting his children, the meanes of their saluation, and most vigilantlie watching ouer their saluation; yet some of the most deare and best beloued of them, should be so left to themselues, that they should at anie time fall into some greeuous sinne or other: as king Dauid, and king Salomon did, Peter also, and manie more: when as God could by the gratious power of his Spirit, haue preserued them from such grieuous falls. Howe therefore, may this be perceiued, to accord with his Fatherlie prouidence and gouernment?

Question.

Answere. The Lord doth hereby iustlie, and yet also in exceeding great mercie, chastice some former sinne; either of negligence, or it may be of some degree of presumption: to make the humane corruption, and infirmitie of all men without exception, euery way more fullie knowne, for the common instruction and admonition of all.

And also, to this gratious ende among the rest, that the reioycing of the children of God, may neither rest in themselues, nor vpon any other creature: but onely in and vpon the Lorde himselfe, who alone, is the onely constant and neuer-failing direction, strength and saluation of his people.

Moreouer, euen in this, wonderfull is the Fatherlie goodnes of God; who neuer suffereth any of his children, finally to perish in their falls: but he raiseth them vp againe by repentance, and reneweth the ioy of their saluation vnto them.

Wee

Teliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

Explicatio & proofe.

The Comfortes.

Wee are to wonder at it in deede: and with admiration to blesse and praise his most holie, gratious, and blessed name, for euer and euer. Amen.

The whole answere is euident from the examples euen now alledged. To the which purpose also, let vs hearken to the Prophet Ieremiah, chap: 9. 23. 24. Let not the wise man glorie in his wisedome, &c. But let him that glorieth, glorie in this, that hee knoweth me (saith the Lord) for I am the Lord which doe shewe mercie, iudgement, and righteousnes, in the earth: for in these things I doe delight, saith the Lord. Likewise the Apostle Paul. 2. Cor: 1. 30. 31. Let him that reioyceth, reioyce in the Lord.

Thus therefore (for the conclusion of this discourse) let vs resolue our selues, vppon the vndoubted acknowledgement of the Fatherlie Prouidence of our most gratious and mercifull God, against all the cauils that may by anie, bee obiected against it. For by the groundes of the Answeres alreadie alledged: wee may with like facilitie, answere euerie other, whatsoeuer they may bee.

But what though wee should not be able, throughlie to discerne the reason of some of Gods diuine proceedings, and iudgements towardes any other of his children, or toward our owne selues? Should it be a sufficient reason, for vs to call into question the Prouidence of God? God forbid. Excellentlie well (saith M. Caluine,) that it is one of the chiefe exercises of our faith, to be humbled vnder the mightie hand of God, and with silence, to rest quietlie in his iudgements. Sciamus (inquit) vnum esse ex præcipuis exercitijs fidei nostræ, humiliari sub forti Dei manu, & cum silentio acquiescere eius iudicijs. In Psalm: 39. vers: 10.

Alas, we poore wretches, through our negligence, doe not know many of those things, which we both might and ought to know. How then may wee presume, or once imagine, that we may attaine to knowe the reason, of euerie secret worke and iudgement of God? The mercie of the Lorde (saith the holie Prophet) reacheth to the heauens, and his faithfulnesse to the cloudes. His righteousnes is like the mightie (or huge) mountaines: his iudgements are like the great deepe. Ps: 36. vers: 5. 6. Read also Iob: ch: 33. ve. s: 12. 13. 14. Behold (saith Elihu to Iob) in this thou hast not done right: I will answere thee, that God is greater then man. Why doest thou striue against him? for he doth not giue account of all his matters. For God speaketh once or twice, and one seeth it not, &c. to wit, vntill hee open the eares of men, euen by their corrections, which hee had sealed: as it followeth in the 16. verse. And againe, chapter 36. 22. &c. Beholde, God exalteth by his power: What teacher is like vnto him? Who hath appointed to him his way? Or who can saye:, Thou hast done wickedly? Remember that thou magnifie his worke which men beholde. All men see it, and behold it a farre off. Beholde, God is excellent aboue that wee can knowe, &c.

It is meete therefore, that euery one of vs, doe reuerence, and with holie admiration, glorifie and adore that in the Diuine counselles, and workes of the Lord God: whereof wee in our shallow conceits, can apprehend no reason that may satisfie our curious and carnall mindes to our liking.

It ought aboundantlie to suffice all that bee godlie, and dutifullie minded toward God: that it hath pleased him to reueale vnto vs in his holie Scriptures, so much as it is meete for vs to desire to knowe.

And the rather also, for that hee doth therwithall, vouchsafe accordinglie, to giue vs good experience, if wee will open our eyes to see it: that hee guideth and disposeth of all things, both mercies, and iudgements; as they doe most exquisitelie serue in the ende, to the manifolde profite and comfort of all his elect children and people.

VNto these manifold profites and comfortes therefore, let vs nowe henceforth, settle our mindes: and call them altogether away from such hautie speculations, as be too high and vnseemely for vs to climbe vnto.

Beliefe in Gods fatherly Prouidēce.

The Comfortes.

For this is the second of those two latter pointes, mentioned among the obseruations set down before: the which (as you answered) doe serue to the more full opening of the comforts which are furthermore to be found in the faith of Gods Fatherlie prouidence. And that to verie good purpose.

For if we can finde out this, that all iudgements of God vpon the wicked; and likewise that all his afflictions & most sharp chastisements vpon his own children, doe tende to their singular profite and comfort: how then may they be thought any way to impeach his Fatherlie pouidence?

Let vs therefore to so good a purpose, make our diligent inquirie into this pointe also.

Question. And first concerning the fearfull iudgements of God against the wicked; howe may the execution of them redounde to the benefite and profite of the childen of God?

Answere. First, because they daunte them for a time, yea those of them that are of the most wicked and reprobate, or desperate minde: so that by the terror of the iudgements of God vpon them, they are discouraged, and driuen from the pursute of many their most dangerous and mischeuous enterprises against the Church of God.

Secondly, they are hereby humbled, though not of any heartie good will, but rather of a seruile minde, and dissemblinglie; to doe some good to the faithfull seruants of God: yea sometime, to become vassalls and seruants vnto them.

Thirdly, God doth by his fearfull iudgementes, executed vppon the wicked, make his diuine Prouidence and souereigne iustice to be, for the time, famouslie knowne, and after a sorte acknowledged in all the world: but specially of the faithful, in the church of God, to the more setteled confirmation of their faith.

Finallie, by the fearfull iudgements of God, cast downe vpon the heads of the wicked, they are conuicted in their owne heartes, to acknowledge against themselues: that the children of God (notwithstanding all their outward afflictions) are in better estate, then themselues.

Explicatiō and proofe These, (and if there be any such like) they are indeed the notable effects of Gods fearfull iudgements against the wicked, euen to the benefit of the childrē of God: according to the thanksgiuing of the Church of God, Psalme 136. Which celebrateth the praise of the iudgements of God against the wicked, as a fruit of his euerlasting and constant mercie, toward his owne Churche and people.

The first branch of the Answere, may be exemplified, from the Egiptians; who by the plagues, wherewith God visited them, were not onely staied from their vnreasonable proceedings against the Israelites: but they were also ouercome at the last, to do all the good they could vnto them, euen to the inriching and adorning of them with their iewells, so far forth, that they did leaue themselues as it were naked, and bare. And which I pray you of all those that were ouer-whelmed in the red Sea, while they pursued the Israelites, after they had let them go out of their captiuitie: would not likewise haue wished themselues to haue ben rather in their estate, then in their owne; when they saw the Seas violently returning vpon them?

And haue not wee our selues, had a notable experience in our owne age, of our singular benefit, by that famous iudgement which Almighty God cast vpon the inuincible and proude nauie of our late chiefe enemies, and their confederates. Anno. 1588.

No doubt, but the heauie hand of God, being then as it were palpablie perceiued, and felt, euen in their own iudgements vpon themselues: it made them the lesse bolde to renew the like attempt against vs, nay contrariwise the more willing to be at a kinde of peace with vs.

And doubtlesse, it shall be as a plentifull streame of water, still to quench that fierie malice and ambition, (at the least, as touching that high degree of scorching heate, wherewith they were at that time inflamed) vnlesse (which God of his infinite mercie, staye and forbidde,) the extremitie of our sinnes, and intollerable vnthankfulnes for so glorious a deliuerance: doe (as it were with much wood and brimstone, through the iudgement of God against vs) set on fire, & altogether inflame their rage, and giue them power to burne vs vp as stubble.

Secondly, as touching the seruile submission of the wicked, caused by the iudgements of God: consider it from the 44, and 45. verses of the 18. Psalm. Where, after that King Dauid hath reported, how his sword (which was the sword of the Lords battels) had preuailed against his enemies, who were also the enemies of all the Lords people: As soone (saith hee) as they heare, they shall obey me: strangers shall be in subiection vnto me (though lyingly as the Hebrew verbe Iechahhashu there vsed signifieth) strangers shall shrinke away and feare in their priuie chambers. Yea alreadie they had done thus. For the King sheweth what the Lord had formerly done for him in that behalfe. And it may well be also, a propheſie of the continuance of the same hand of God still, for the benefit of his Church, frō time to time: euen so often as he in his wisdome shal see it so meete. There is also a notable historie to this purpose, concerning the Gibeonites in the 9. chap. of the booke of Iudges. Read also 1. Kin. 20. 31. &c. The seruants of the King of Aram, submit themselues with halters about their necks, to the King of Israel. Yea, though Ahab was a wicked King, yet thus wrought the Lord for his owne names sake, and for the remnant of the people. And 2. Chron. 32. 22, 23. After that God had executed that his memorable iudgement against the King of Ashur, and his prowd Armie: Many are said to bring offerings to Ierusalem, and presents to Hezekiah King of Iudah, so that he was magnified of all the Nations frō thence-forth. And Act. ch. 12. By the feareful iudgment of God against Herod, the Lord made way for his word to grow and multiply. There are many such like examples to be obserued.

Thirdly, concerning the manifestation of Gods most holy iustice, and soueraigne prouidence, by his iudgements against the wicked, to the euicting of them, and to the strengthening of the faith of his people: reade Psalm. 58. 10, 11. The righteous man shall reioyce, when he seeth the vengance: he shall wash his feete in the blood of the wicked. And men shall say, verily there is a fruit for the righteous: doubtles there is a God that iudgeth the earth. Reade also Psalm. 83. 17. 18. Let them (saith the Psalmist) that is, let thine enemies be confounded O God, &c. That they may know that thou who art called Iehouah art alone, euen the most high ouer all the earth. And Psalm. 9. 16. The Lord is knowne by executing iudgement. And Psalm. 126. 2. 3. When the Lord brought againe the captiuitie of Sion: to wit, after the Babilonians were subdued, &c. then said they among the heathen, The Lord hath done great things for them. And therefore much rather doth the Church it selfe in the same place acknowledge it saying, The Lord hath done great things for vs, whereof we doe reioyce. Read also Ps. 33. 10, 11, 12. and 119. 52. I remembred thy iudgements of old, and haue bene comforted. Thus, the iudgments of God being to the terror of the wicked: they are contrariwise, a ioy & cōfort to the godly.

Finally, concerning the last branch, let it be considered, that as Balaam the foolish Prophet, saw euen in his prosperitie, the blessed estate of the people of God, to be so great; that hee wished that hee himselfe might die their death: Num. 23. 10. so, yea much more no doubt, when the reuenging hand of God fell vpon him, would he haue wished to haue beene as the least among the people of God: to wit, when the sword came against him, in the slaughter of the Midianites. Num. 31. 8. And thus questionlesse would all the wicked desire, when they are terrified by the vengeance of God breaking forth against them: like as was noted before, concerning the Egiptians, at that time when the water began to returne forcibly vpon them. Thus the iudgements of God vpon the wicked, are many waies profitable and comfortable to the godly.

NOw let vs come to those fruites and benefites, which the children of GOD, doe in time, reape to their comfort, from the iudgements of

After that God had executed that his memorable iudgement against the King of Ashur, and his prowd Armie: Many are said to bring offerings to Ierusalem, and presents to Hezekiah King of Iudah, so that he was magnified of all the Nations frō thence-forth. And Act. ch. 12. By the feareful iudgment of God against Herod, the Lord made way for his word to grow and multiply. There are many such like examples to be obserued.

Thirdly, concerning the manifestation of Gods most holy iustice, and soueraigne prouidence, by his iudgements against the wicked, to the euicting of them, and to the strengthening of the faith of his people: reade Psalm. 58. 10, 11. The righteous man shall reioyce, when he seeth the vengance: he shall wash his feete in the blood of the wicked. And men shall say, verily there is a fruit for the righteous: doubtles there is a God that iudgeth the earth. Reade also Psalm. 83. 17. 18. Let them (saith the Psalmist) that is, let thine enemies be confounded O God, &c. That they may know that thou who art called Iehouah art alone, euen the most high ouer all the earth. And Psalm. 9. 16. The Lord is knowne by executing iudgement. And Psalm. 126. 2. 3. When the Lord brought againe the captiuitie of Sion: to wit, after the Babilonians were subdued, &c. then said they among the heathen, The Lord hath done great things for them. And therefore much rather doth the Church it selfe in the same place acknowledge it saying, The Lord hath done great things for vs, whereof we doe reioyce. Read also Ps. 33. 10, 11, 12. and 119. 52. I remembred thy iudgements of old, and haue bene comforted. Thus, the iudgments of God being to the terror of the wicked: they are contrariwise, a ioy & cōfort to the godly.

Finally, concerning the last branch, let it be considered, that as Balaam the foolish Prophet, saw euen in his prosperitie, the blessed estate of the people of God, to be so great; that hee wished that hee himselfe might die their death: Num. 23. 10. so, yea much more no doubt, when the reuenging hand of God fell vpon him, would he haue wished to haue beene as the least among the people of God: to wit, when the sword came against him, in the slaughter of the Midianites. Num. 31. 8. And thus questionlesse would all the wicked desire, when they are terrified by the vengeance of God breaking forth against them: like as was noted before, concerning the Egiptians, at that time when the water began to returne forcibly vpon them. Thus the iudgements of God vpon the wicked, are many waies profitable and comfortable to the godly.

NOw let vs come to those fruites and benefites, which the children of GOD, doe in time, reape to their comfort, from the iudgements of Beleefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

The Comforts.

God vpon themselues, while they did liue in their sinne: and after that also, by his chastisements, from the time that they began to repent, and to turne vnto him.

Question. And first, what are the comfortable fruites or benefites, proceeding from the iudgements of God vpon them, while they lay in their sinnes: and were not mooued to repentance, or (to say the most) were onely entring into it?

Answere. While the children of God are in this estate, God vseth his iudgements or punishments, as effectuall helpes:

First, to humble them in the sight of their sinnes, by a taste of that horrible wrath and miserie, which is in the iustice of God due vnto them.

Secondly, to stirre them vp to seeke for mercie and forgiuenesse.

Thirdly, to make their deliuerance and saluation, the more sweete and pretious vnto them.

Finally, that by the recordation, and calling to minde of the same their former punishments, they (being once turned to God) might thenceforth, take warning, that they doe neuer returne to their former wickednes againe.

Explicatiõ and proofe. You say well, that the iudgements of God are effectuall helpes, to the ends you haue rehearsed. For it pleaseth God, for the better expedition, and more speedie effecting of his worke, to adde vnto the threatnings of his word, the execution of his curse in some measure, euen vpon his owne elect children: whom he findeth to bee by nature children of wrath, and knoweth that they haue neede of such vehement awaking, and rowsing vp, out of their dead sleepe of sinne.

To this purpose, reade in the booke of Iob, cha. 33. verse 17, &c. Where, after that he hath spoken of the sundry afflictions, wherewith God doth humble his children; preparing them first by his bodily chastisements, and then sending the instruction of his word vnto them: then saith Elihu to Iob, verses 27, 30. Lo all these things will God worke twice or thrice with a man, That he may turne backe his soule from the pit, to be illuminated with the light of the liuing. That is, that he hauing his life prolonged, may learne the way to the kingdome of heauen. And hereof, we haue the most wicked King Manasses for a notable example. 2. Chron. 33. 12, 13. Of whom it is written, that howsoeuer hee exceeded in wickednes, and despised the ministerie of the Prophets, which were sent vnto him: yet when God cast him into tribulation, (that is, gaue him into the hands of the King of Ashur, who put him in fetters, and bound him in chaines, and carried him to Babel) then he prayed to the Lord his God, and humbled himselfe greatly before the God of his fathers. And he praying to God; God of his infinite mercy was intreated of him: and heard his prayer, and brought him againe to Ierusalem, into his kingdome. And then (as the text saith) Manasses knew (that is, he acknowledged) the Lord to be God.

To this purpose also, it is well obserued by a godlie learned man; that by affliction, as by a speciall helpe: God vseth commonly to call them whom he will saue, and make instruments of his saluation to others. To the which end, he alledgeth the example of Paul, from the testimonie of the holy Scriptures: and from Ecclesiasticall storie, the example of Constantine the first Christian Emperour, and of Edwine the first Christian King of Northumberland. Of the which Edwine thus he writeth; that notwithstanding he had married a Christian woman, the daughter of Ethelbert a christened King of Kent: who perswaded with him all that shee could, and Paulinus also a preacher of the Gospel; yet could he not be wonne, till God had bumbled him by sundry afflictions. No not till at the last, hee was sore wounded by a wicked and desperate cutthroat, who was suborned to kill him. This is the obseruation of Mr. Foxe in the historie of King Edwine, about the yeare of our Lord 630. Where also he alledgeth to the same end, the late example of Martin Luther: whose spirituall conflicts, and agonies were many; before hee could bee made fit to preach the doctrine of iuſtification by Chriſt, openly. And ſo (ſaith hee) be all they moſt commonly, which come to any liuely feeling, or ſenſible working of Chriſt the Lord in them.

Hence it is, that this confeſſion is heard often in the mouthes of the ſeruants of God, after that they are once truly and effectually humbled vnto him. Bleſſed be God for ſuch a ſharpe checke that I had: for ſuch a loſſe: for ſuch a diſgrace: for ſuch an impriſonment: for ſuch or ſuch a danger: for ſuch a languiſhing ſicknes: for ſuch a paineful or loathſome diſeaſe: for ſuch a wound: for ſuch a terrible feare in a grieuous thunder and lightening, &c. For if I had not bin thus or thus afflicted, & humbled; I had not knowne my ſelfe: I had not regarded Gods word: I had neuer come to the feare of God: I had periſhed in my ſinnes, &c. If I had not loſt ſuch or ſuch a friend, or worldly ſtay; I ſhould not haue depended vpon Gods prouidence as now (by the grace of God) I ſee that I ought to doe. Thus much therefore, for the two former vſes of afflictions, or puniſhments, or iudgements; howſoeuer we doe thinke good to call them.

Now thirdly; how the bitternes of ſuch iudgements, or afflictions ſent of God, doe make the ſaluation of God, and his tender mercies, the more ſweete and comfortable: I neede not to ſpeake, ſeeing no man can truly diſcerne what ſweetneſſe meaneth, vnles hee haue taſted before what the ſower is.

Finally, touching the laſt point, it cannot be doubted: but that ſpeciall iudgements of God, are ſent to the end they might leaue behinde them, a memorable impreſſion of his reuerend feare, in the hearts of his children; and ſo to nouriſh in them, a continuall care of dutie, anſwerable to the firſt entrance of their calling: remembring alwaies, that the anger of God againſt ſinne, is as great as any feare that is euer apprehended of vs. Pſal. 90. 11. Who knoweth the power of thy wrath? For according to thy feare is thine anger. The practiſe of this memoriall is commended vnto vs, Lament: chapter 3. verſes 19, 20, 21. in theſe wordes of the Prophet. Remembring mine affliction and my mourning, the worme-wood and the gall. My ſoule hath them in remembrance and is humbled in mee. I conſider this in my heart, therefore haue I hope. But this place, reſpecteth not onely ſuch as haue beene at the firſt prepared to repentance: but ſuch rather, as are by afflictions ſollicited to better their repentance.

Let vs therefore, by this occaſion, proceede now to the fruites of afflictions, which follow after the calling of the children of God. For ſo God ſeeth it good, and profitable: that the afflictions of thoſe that bee his, ſhould bee often renewed, one way or other. What may theſe comfortable fruites or profites be?

Queſtion.

Anſwere Firſt and formoſt, the Lord doth thereby further, and more and more perfect the repentance of his children.

Secondly, he preuenteth (and as it were defeateth) many dangerous prouocations, and enticing occaſions of ſinne.

Thirdlie, GOD doeth teach his children, from their experience of the bitter fruites of ſinne now and then renewed vpon them: more and more to hate and abhor ſinne.

Fourthly, he trieth, fineth or purgeth our faith, that vpon the often renewed experience of his mercie: we may more purely, and vndoubtingly, ſettle our comfortable truſt and confidence in him.

Fiftly, he doth by afflictions quicken and prouoke vs, to often and earneſt ſupplication & prayer.

Sixtlie, hee doeth thereby alſo, inure vs to patience and meekenes: yea ſo, that Patience, an excellent Chriſtian vertue, may haue the more perfect worke in vs.

Hereby alſo, God doth teach vs by our owne experience of afflictions, to iudge more wisely, and charitably of all others, vpon whom he laieth his fatherly corrections: and accordingly, to be more tenderly and pittifully affected toward them.

Beleefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

The Comforte.

Moreouer, by former afflictions, he prepareth, and maketh vs the more fit, to beare those more sharpe ones that are to come: euen those, through which, we must necessarily passe, before we can attaine to the kingdome of heauen. Yea sometimes it pleaseth God to lay vpon vs a greater affliction for a little while: to the end he may humble vs to beare some lesser, which he shall thinke good more ordinarily to exercise vs withall.

Beside all these, God doth by the want of health, or any other of his blessings, either spirituall, or bodily: teach vs a more holy, sober, and thankefull vse of them, then we had learned before; after that, of his mercy hee vouchsafeth to restore them to vs againe.

But who can reckon vp, and throughly vnderstand, all the commodious and profitable vses, whereunto God of his infinite mercy, hath sanctified the sundry afflictions of his deare children?

Explication and proofe.

It is very true. No one can throughly vnderstand all. Neither any the least fruit of any one; but onely such, to whom God himselfe vouchsafeth to giue the secret experience thereof, as it were into his bosome. The fruit of affliction, may be resembled to the Manna which was hidden, and kept close in the Arke: and to the written name, which no man knoweth, saue he that receiueth it. Reuel. 2.17.

But for some further explication and proofe of the fruites now mentioned: let vs call to minde first of all, that which was not very long since alledged out of the 119. Psalm. verse 67. Before I was afflicted (saith the Prophet) I went astray, but now I keepe thy word. And verse 71. It is good for me that I was afflicted, that I may learne thy statutes. Read also Hebr. 12. 10. God doth chastise vs for our profite, that wee might bee partakers of of his holinesse. And againe. Though no chastising for the present seemeth ioyous but grieuous: yet afterward, it bringeth the quiet fruit of righteousnes, to them which are exercised thereby.

Verily, this is an excellent fruit of afflictions, that the Lord doth thereby renew our repentance, by putting vs in minde of our old sinnes, as well as of our new: and therewithall, that he doth reuiue our prayers for the forgiuenes thereof, to the further assurance of the comfort of our faith, that they are pardoned and forgiuen vnto vs.

Secondly, that afflictions, doe (through the blessing of God) preuent sinne; we may learne from the Apostle Paul: who telleth vs, that God gaue vnto him a pricke in the flesh, the messenger of Sathan to buffet him, to the end hee might not be exalted aboue measure. 2. Cor. 12.7. This pricke in the flesh, was some notable inward affliction, whereby hee could not walke so expeditely as he desired in good dutie: like as he that hath a thorne or the stub of a bush in his foote, he walketh more slowly and with greater paine. Neuertheless, howsoeuer the Apostle could not satisfie himselfe: yet he was aboundant in labours, and in comparison of others, verie expedite and quicke. Whatsoeuer it was, this (as hee saith plainely) was the vse of it, that by this meanes, he was humbled: and so it was a preseruatiue against spirituall pride. And that in this respect, affliction is a benefit: our owne mouthes doe willingly testifie, when we wish that we had beene sicke in our bed, when we did (at vnawares, or willingly) that which afterward it repenteth vs of. No doubt but sickenes, and other afflictions, doe keepe vs from many euills, that otherwise we should fall into.

Touching the third point, it is of it selfe so plaine, that it may be palpably felt, of all that haue any spirituall sense in them: according to the common saying, which may well haue vse heere, The burnt childe dreades the fier. Neuertheles, for examples sake, wee may confirme it from that wee reade Iosh. chapter 22. verses 16, 17, &c. Thus saith the whole congregation of the Lord, what transgression is this that yee haue transgressed against the God of Israel?

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly prouidence.

The Comfortes.

Israel, &c. Haue we too little for the wickednes of Peor, whereof we are not cleansed to this day, though a plague came vpon the congregation of the Lord: yee also are turned away this day from the Lord: and seeing yee rebell to day against the Lord, euen to morrowe hee will be wroth with all the congregation of Israel.

And verse 20. Did not Achan, the sonne of Zerah trespasse grieuously in the execrable thing, and wrath fell on all the congregation of Israel? And this man alone perished not in his wickednes.

Fourthly, touching the triall, or fining and purging of faith by afflictions: read, 1. Pet: 1. 6. 7. Wherein (that is, in the which saluation) ye reioyce (saith the Apostle, writing to the Christian Iewes) though now for a season (if neede require) yee are in heauines through manifold temptations. That the triall of your faith, being much more precious then gold which perisheth, (though it be tried with fier) might be found vnto your praise, and honour, and glory, at the appearing of Iesus Christ, &c.

This triall of faith, causeth it more purely and firmely to rest it selfe in God; because it giueth vs experience of our own weakenes, and how vaine all other meanes of helpe are: and therewithal, how al-sufficient the arme of the Lord is of it selfe alone, when all other helpes or meanes of helpe, that we knowe of, doe faile. According to that. 2. Cor. 1. 8. 9. Bretheren (saith the Apostle Paul) we would not haue you ignorant of our affliction which came vnto vs in Asia, how wee were pressed out of measure passing strength, so that we altogether doubted euen of life. Yea, we receiued the sentence of death in our selues, because we should not trust in our selues, but in God who raiseth vp the dead. So then, as the tempest trieth the marriner, and the battaile the souldiar: so doth affliction the faithfull Christian. And that experience of Gods assistance in trouble; and of his deliuerance out of trouble, confirmeth and strengtheneth faith; it may appeare by that which followeth in the 10. verse of the same first Chapter of the 2. Epistle to the Corinths Wherein the Apostle writeth further concerning himselfe and Timotheus, that they trusted that God who had deliuered them from so great a death, and did deliuer them: would also yet thereafter deliuer them still. Read also, 2. Tim: 4. 17. 18. The Lord assisted me (saith the Apostle) and strengthened me, that by mee the preaching might be fully knowne, and that all the Gentiles should heare: and I was deliuered out of the mouth of the Lion. And the Lord will deliuer me from euery euill worke, and will preserue me to his heauenly kingdome: to whom be praise for euer and euer, Amen. And in the holy storie, Dauid being strengthened by the Lord to preuaile against the Beare, feared not to incounter against the Lion: and hauing ouercome the Lion, he feared not to try the combate with the armed giant, Goliah. Read also, Psalm: 23. Thus it is true, that faith groweth, and is heartened and made bold by experience of Gods former assistance and deliuerance.

Fiftly, that affliction quickeneth and prouoketh the faithfull to praier, it is also so certaine, that he who hath no care to pray to God in his affliction: may be truly said to haue no faith, or at the least, that it is for the time, violently smothered and concealed in him. The time of affliction, is a speciall time of Praier. Iames, chap: 5. 13. And Psalm: 50. 15: Call vpon mee (saith the Lord) in the day of thy trouble. And Rom: 8. 15. The Apostle Paul teacheth, that it is a principall effect of the holy spirit of adoption, to teach, incourage, and strengthen the children of God, in all their necessities to cry Abba, Father. And verses 26. 27. The spirit helpeth our infirmities, &c. And whether, I pray you, should children goe, but to their Father, when they bee in any distresse? Hee is a foolish, or proude childe, whosoeuer hee be: that will not seeme to bee beholding to his Father, for his reliefe and succour. It is doubtlesse, and ought to bee, the kindly affection of the children of God: to let no affliction passe, without the sanctification of Praier, that so it might bee sanctified and blessed to their benefite.

Sixtly,

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly prouidence.

The Comfortes.

Sixtly, that God bleſſeth affliction to worke patience and meeknes: yea the increaſe of ſo excellent a grace: it is expreſly affirmed, Rom: 5. 3. Tribulation bringeth forth patience, and patience experience, and experience hope, and hope maketh not aſhamed. And it may further appeare by that which we read, Iames, chap: 1. 4. For if patience haue the perfect worke (as the Apoſtle teacheth) it maketh thoſe that doe ſo continue, and cheriſh it, that they be intire, lacking nothing. For to ſuch, it is aboundantly ſufficient vnto them, that they are ſure, they haue the Lord for their portion.

They knowe, that he that ſhall come, will euen come ſhortly, and that hee will not tarie: and that hee will bring his reward with him. Behold therefore how beneficiall, affliction is; euen by the cauſing; or rather occaſioning of this excellent grace of patience and meekenes. Whence it is alſo, that both the afflicted, and the meeke, are called in the holy Scriptures by one and the ſame name as it were. For Hhanauim noteth the one as well as the other: Pſal. 76. 9. Zech. 2. 3. Amos, 8. 4. and in diuers other places.

And hence alſo it is, that we learne to moderate our iudgement, concerning the afflicted: and to bee farre from raſh condemning of them, as if God had caſt them off, &c. For that good fruite, which (through the bleſſing of God) we find in our ſelues, by our own afflictions: cauſeth vs the rather to hope wel of Gods mercie, toward thoſe that are likewiſe afflicted. And the rather alſo, becauſe we vnderſtand, that God liketh well of ſuch, and pronounceth them bleſſed. So we reade, Pſal. 41. from the beginning of the Pſalme. The ſame likewiſe frameth our hearts, to commiſeration, and mercifull dealing toward them: as in the ſame Pſalme, we are not obſcurely admoniſhed. Which alſo is according to the expreſſe commandement of God: Exod. 22. 21. and Leuit. 19. 33. 34, Thou ſhalt loue the ſtranger as thy ſelfe: for ye were ſtrangers in the land of Egipt.

Moreouer, that former trialls, and thoſe more gentle; doe hearten againſt greater: it may be euident, by that which was obſerued, concerning the fift branch of this Anſwere. Wee are indeede, of our ſelues, altogether vnapt to beare patiently, and meekely, the leaſt affliction which God laieth vpon vs. Behold therefore, the excellent wiſedome and mercie of our GOD; in that ſometimes for a ſeaſon (as was ſaide) he layeth a greater vpon vs: that ſo hee may winne vs to be the more willing, to ſubmit our ſelues to ſome leſſer, the which he ſeeth meete, more ordinarily to exerciſe and humble vs withall. We make much of a little aking of our finger, or of ſome trifling loſſe, &c. But whē God beginneth to call into queſtion, our whole welfare touching either bodilie health, or outward eſtate: then we ſee the vanity of our former niceneſſe in our vſuall complaining for euery little, or nothing.

Finally, that God teacheth vs by want of health for a time, to vſe it better; and to bee more thankfull for it, when it pleaſeth him to reſtore it vnto vs againe: (and ſo in the reſt of his benefits) it ſtandeth with good reaſō: in ſo much as thereby we vnderſtand much better, of what price and value they are. Likewiſe, we learne thereby from whom we receiue them: and in whoſe power it is, to take them away againe, at his owne pleaſure. And therefore, that wee ought to be more and more carefull to glorifie him in the inioying of them, and not to ſerue our owne wicked luſtes by them. It is a common ſaying, and common experience proueth it to bee true: that by wanting, rather then by enioying (Carendo magis quam fruendo) wee diſcerne the greatnes of a benefit.

Much more might bee ſaide, concerning the manifold fruite and benefit, which commeth to the children of God by the fatherly afflictions, corrections, and trialls of God our heauenly Father, as was anſwered. For God (no doubt) doth by them teach vs many thinges, as was alſo obſerued once before: the which wee could not otherwiſe learne ſo well. Such as are, the deniall of our ſelues, the contempt of this world, an earneſt longing after the Kingdome of heauen, heauen, &c. Verily, we could neither knowe God so well in his mercy, nor in his righteousnes, nor in his power, nor in his wisedome, nor in his faithfulnes, nor in any of his diuine vertues: neither yet our selues so well, either in our frailtie and miserie, or in our peace and prosperitie, as by experience of afflictions (through the grace of our gracious good God and mercifull Father) we learne to doe.

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

The Comfortes.

Thus abundant (that wee doe not say infinite) is the commoditie of the fatherly afflictions of God, laid vpon his owne deare children. But that which hath beene deliuered, shall for the present suffice: vntill it may please God to inrich vs with a more full supply.

Hitherto therefore, of the commodities and fruites of afflictions.

LEt vs now henceforth, proceed (for a while) to inquire after the comfortes, which are to be found in them: at the least, after the chiefe and principall of them.

It is true indeed, that the former vses being profitable; they are also to all those that feele the fruit of them, euen in the same respect, very comfortable also: as we may euidently perceiue by the testimonie of the holy Ghost, Heb. 12. 5. &c. Where both the comfort, & also the profit of afflictions, are lincked together. Of the which place, more is to be said afterward.

And beside, insomuch as touching earthly profit, it is found true that the sent of gaine is pleasant, (Suauis odor lucri): infinitely much more ought that heauenly and spirituall gaine, which groweth from the fatherly corrections of God, duly pondered and weighed, to be delightfull, pleasant, and comfortable vnto vs.

But seeing there are some vses of afflictions, which doe more properly and entirely belong to comfort: let vs come to them, as comming yet something more properly vnder the name of comfort.

Question. Which may they be?

Answere. First, it is very comfortable, to consider that no affliction commeth without the most wise, loving, and fatherly prouidence of God.

Secondly, in that God is neuer nearer, nor more tenderly affected (yea euen as it were with bowelike compassion toward his children): then when they are in greatest distresse and trouble.

Thirdly, if we doe willingly suffer affliction for wel-doing, and while we walke in the holy waies of God: we haue our communion with our Sauiour Christ, in whose afflictions, all ours are sanctified, and made both comfortable and profitable vnto vs. For they are so many witnesses of our adoption to be the children of God, and that we are liuely members of the mysticall body of Christ.

Fourthly, the holy Ghost, our most inward and sweete comforter (euen the spirit of the highest glory, proceeding from God the Father and the Sonne) resteth vpon vs: and doth most immediately communicate, the perfit comfort of the whole blessed Trinitie vnto vs.

Sixtly, we haue in our afflictions, a holy communion and fellowship with all the faithfull as brethren & fellow-members with them in Christ: insomuch as it is the very cõmon & beaten high way, which God himselfe hath laid out for all his children, to trauell through the same, vnto his heauenly kingdome.

Moreouer, the holy afflictions wherewith God doth exercise vs, doe priuiledge and respite vs from infinite worldly cares and troubles, the which no doubt, would for our sins haue fallen vpon vs, if we had continued in them: and if we had not beene taken vp, and had as it were receiued our presse-mony, to be otherwise imployed in the special seruice, and as it were warfare of the Lord.

And yet further, the more sharpe, and fierie hote, our afflictions are; so much the more speedy and swift forerunners (or as it were harbengers) are they: to make way for speciall comfortes, so much the more shortly to followe after.

But

Beleefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

The Comforter.

But be it, that moſt hote and vehement afflictions (for the Lords cauſe and his Goſpel) doe continue a long while, as we count length of time: yet the longeſt, and the ſame alſo the ſharpeſt that may be; if they bee truly meaſured and weighed, they are but momentanie, and light in compariſon of that, which otherwiſe, and in more terrible and fearefull manner: our ſinnes haue deſerued. Or much rather, in reſpect of that moſt excellent and eternal weight of glory, wherevnto (through the infinite mercie of God our heauenly Father) they doe, as ſecondarie and helping cauſes, preferre and aduance vs.

Finally, infinite almoſt in number and varietie, as wel as endles in continuance; are the manifold comforts, belonging to the ſundrie and manifold afflictions and trials of the deare children of God for righteouſnes and the Goſpels ſake: aboue that any, not throughly exerciſed therewith, ſhal euer know or feele what they doe meane.

Explication and proofe.

So great and ſo many, yea euen almoſt aboue number indeede, are the ſundry and often renewed comforts, of the afflicted ſeruants of God: the which, the children of this world, cannot poſsibly be acquainted withall. For they doe not belong vnto them, neither can they receiue them: becauſe they cannot receiue him, who is the onely immediate giuer and worker of al comfort. According to that of our Sauiour Chriſt: Iohn: 14. ver. 16. 17. 18. I will pray the Father, and he will giue you an other comforter, that hee may abide with you for euer. Euen the ſpirit of truth, whom the world cannot receiue, becauſe it ſeeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye knowe him: for he dwelleth with you, and ſhal be in you. I wil not leaue you as orphanes (or comfortles) but I wil come vnto you. And againe, verſe, 27. Peace I leaue with you, my peace I giue vnto you: not as the world giueth doe I giue vnto you. Let not your heart be troubled. Or timerous and fearefull, &c.

It is the part, or rather the blot and iuſt reproach of an vnfaithfull friend, to faile his friend in time of neede. Our Sauiour Chriſt therefore, being a moſt faithfull friend, yea euen the fountaine, as it were, of all true friendſhip and fidelitie: he promiſeth aſſuredly, and will moſt certainely performe himſelfe to be a moſt truſtie and infallible friend: yea more then a friend, vnto all that doe approue their faithfulneſſe to him, in the holy profeſsion and obedience of his Goſpell.

And verily, if our Sauiour Chriſt had not alwaies hetherto performed his promiſe of ſending his holy ſpirit, that perfect Comforter, to his ſeruants, with his aboundant and manifold conſolation, according to the manifold and exquiſite moleſtations and torments of their perſecutors: they could neuer haue indured, thoſe ſharpe and cruell (though more ſpeedy) torments executed by the heathen. Much leſſe, the late more lingering cruelties, of the falſe-beleeuing and hereticall brood of Antichriſt: by their long, tedious, and moſt vncomfortable impriſoning, and dungeoning of the true ſeruants of God. And therewithall, by their famiſhing of them: by their often railing examinations and ſiftings: by their baſe and craftie falſe glozings and flatteries to ſeduce them: by their bitter ſcoffings not onely at themſelues, which they could more eaſily indure, but alſo at the moſt holy truth of our Sauiour Chriſt, which was more bitter then either impriſonment or death vnto them. The which alſo at the laſt, they inflicted with fier and fagot vpon them: that is to ſay, at the laſt after they had taken their fill in wourrying of them.

But let vs (as briefly as wee can) furniſh our ſelues, with ſome proofes, touching the particulars of this anſwere: to the end we may thereby ſtore our own hearts, with ſome good furniture and grounds of true comfort, againſt the times of our owne afflictions: whatſoeuer may in the fatherly counſell and prouidence of God, hereafter betide vs.

Firſt of all therefore (as was anſwered in the firſt place) this is, as the opening of a moſt liuely and plentifull ſpring of all holy conſolation and comfort: that no affliction commeth without the moſt wiſe, vigilant, louing, and tēder foreſight of Gods fatherly prouidence: the which no doubt, extendeth it ſelfe, to the aſsigning both of the fitteſt time for the beginning, and of the fitteſt measure for continuance, and also of the most blessed issue and ending that may be. For the which, read Mat. 10.28.29.&c. Feare yee not them which kill the body,&c. All the haires of your head be numbred, &c. Feare yee not therefore &c.

Likewise, Philip: 1.28. In nothing feare your aduersaries. And 1.Pet:3.14. Read also, 2.King:19.25.&c. And Psal:105.12.13.14.15. God will not suffer Tyrantes to haue their owne will, neither when, nor after such manner, as they themselues will. Hee hath his hooke in their nostrills, like as they leade beares: and his bit in their mouthes, as men restraine and hold in vnruly horses, &c. And yet further, 1.Cor:10.13. God is faithfull (saith the holy Apostle) who will not suffer any of his to be tempted aboue that they be able, but hee will euen giue the issue with the temptation, that they may be able to beare it.

So then, this may iustly be as a Sea of comfort vnto vs, in that wee knowe that God in his afflicting of vs (whether by his owne hand or by the wicked) dealeth like a most louing Father, in correcting and nourtering his Sonne: like a tender mother, in chastising her daughter: like a wise and mercifull Phisition, in the curing of his diseased Patient: like a most skilfull husbandman, in tilling and manuring of his barren ground, or in pruning and cutting off the superfluous branches of his vine: like the cūning Gold-smith, in trying and fining of his drosie gold, that he may make thereof a precious and shining vessell: like the artificiall mason, who most triely heweth and fitteth the rude and rough stones, to be laide vpon the foundation of his building: finally, he dealeth like the watchfull and painefull shepheard, who neuer leaueth seeking vp of his straied sheep, vntil he hath foūd it, & hūted it home to the fou d, that so it may be out of the danger of the wolfe, &c. In all which dealing of God, thus we are alwaies to iudge: that he doth not change his affection, as our estate and condition changeth here in this world: but he continueth cōstant in his loue, euen in the middest of the most vncomfortable afflictions, that may at any time befall any of his children. Yea verily, so long as the Lord our God and mercifull Father, preserueth vs from Hell, and eternall damnation: wee are to acknowledge him to be very gracious and mercifull, yea infinitely mercifull vnto vs. And by how much the more manifold, and the more often our afflictions be renewed, and that also in raging manner like the billowes of the Sea: the more they doe argue the most vigilant and al-seeing prouidence of God, after that we are by his goodnes deliuered out of them. Thus great is the comfort, contained in the first branch of the answere.

Touching the second branch, read Psalm: 46. The whole Psalme is notable to this purpose, both for doctrine and incouragement: and also for exemplification. Reade also, Psalm: 50.15, And Psal: 86.14.15, &c. O God the proude are risen against me. &c. But thou o Lord art a pittiful God and mercifull, &c. Turne thou vnto me, and haue mercy vpon me, &c. And Psal: 94.18.19. When I said my foote slideth, thy mercy o Lord staied mee ... In the multitude of my thoughts in my heart (he meaneth troublesome thoughts) thy comforts (saith the Prophet) haue reioyced my soule. To this purpose, many of the Psalmes are notable: namely, 34.19: 20.21, and 37,24,28.& 119. verses 149.150.151. & Ps. 145.14, and verse 18. And Prou: 24.15,16. The which, because they haue beene alledged heretofore, I doe not stand now to rehearse them againe.

Let vs come to the third branch. For the proofe whereof, reade Heb: chap: 2.10.11. where the Apostle sheweth, that it is well beseeming the excellent wisedome and righteousnesse of God: that hee being minded to bringe many children to glorie, should consecrate the Prince of their saluation through affliction: to the ende, that both the same his children, and also their afflictions, might bee sanctified in him, and by his afflictions. In which respect our Sauiour himselfe saide Iohn 17.19. For their sakes sanctifie I my selfe, that they also may be sanctified through the truth.

And the Apostle Paul, 2. Timo: 2.11.12. It is a true saying, For if we he dead with him, we shall also liue with him. If we suffer, we shall also reigne with him. And Philip: 1.28. It is a token of saluation, and that euen from God.

Wherefore let it not seeme strange vnto vs, nor any way discourage vs; that we are subiect to manifould afflictions and trialls: but rather, according to the often exhortation of the holy Scriptures, let vs reioice in that hereby, God our heauenly father fashioneth vs to be like vnto his owne Sonne, Rom: 8.29. Who though hee were the Sonne, yet learned hee obedience by those things which hee suffered. And being consecrated, was made the author of eternall saluation to all that obey him. Heb:chap:5.8.9. Now in nothing can we be here in this world, more like vnto the Sonne of God, while hee was in it; then by putting our faithfull trust in God, & by yeelding dutifull obedience vnto him, in the middest of our manifould afflictions and trialls for his sake. Wherefore, as a godly learned Preacher well obserueth: insomuch as Christ is herein the paterne, whose similitude we beare: who (duly considering it) can bee discouraged vnder the crosse? To the which purpose, let vs here also consider that which wee reade, Heb: 12.5. &c. In the which wordes (as was touched before) both the profit, and also the comfort of affliction, are lincked together. And now let vs further obserue, that the Apostle sheweth, that it was a matter worthy speciall reproofe, in some among the Christan Iewes: for that they did not incourage themselues, to the chearefull induring of the crosse, as they ought to haue done: considering that it is so notable an argumēt, that God hath adopted vs, and taken vs to be his children.

You haue forgotten (saith he) the consolation (or as we may read it exhortation, yet so as wee must still vnderstand it to be a most sweete and comfortable exhortation of the Spirit of God) which speaketh vnto you as vnto children. My sonne despise not the chastening of the Lord, neither faint when thou art rebuked of him. For whom the Lord loueth hee chasteneth, and hee scourgeth euery Sonne whom hee receiueth. If yee indure chastening, God offereth himselfe vnto you as vnto Sonnes, &c. Let vs I pray you, diligently reade, and for euer remember this, and the rest of the same Scripture, as it followeth in the text: and so through the blessing of God, wee shall at euery neede, finde it to bee a singular comfort vnto vs. Yea not onely in such afflictions as wee indure for godlinesse sake, but also euen in such, as God at any time, layeth vpon vs more directly for our sins: prouided that by them we shall learne amendment of life, and be sorie that wee haue offended God our most mercifull Father thereby. For then, as the Apostle, 1. Cor: 11.32. certifieth vs, God correcteth vs in the world, to the end we should not be condemned with the world. And this may iustly, be no small comfort vnto vs.

For the fourth branch read, 1. Pet: 4.12, 13, 14, 15, 16. where the Apostle Peter teacheth as much, as is contained therein: yea notwithstanding the afflictions be at the sharpest, & though the fier thereof doe burne most hotly vpon vs. Dearely beloued, thinke it not strange (saith hee) touching the fierie triall, &c. But reioyce in so much as yee are partakers of Christs sufferings, that when his glory shall appeare, ye may be glad and reioyce. If yee be railed vpon for the name of Christ, blessed are ye: for the spirit of glory and of God resteth vpon you, &c.

Fiftly, touching the readie ministerie of the holy Angels to comfort the children of God, euen then especially, when they are in greatest distresse: we may consider it first, from their seruice offered to our Saiour Christ in his first speciall temptations. Matth: 4.11. And againe, in his last speciall temptation, Luk: 22.43. And then wee may see it generally, concerning all that bee in Christ. Psalm. 34.7. The Angel of the Lord pitcheth round about them that feare him, and hee deliuereth them. Reade also, Psalm: 91.11. Matth: 18. 10. and Heb: 1.14. This might easily bee exemplified by many particulars. But because this point hath beene handeled more at large before: we hast vnto that which remaineth,

Now

The Comforties.

Now therefore touching the 6. branch, read, 1. Cor: 10, 13. There hath no temptation taken you, but such as appertaine to man. And 1. Pet. 5. 9, Resist ye (the Diuel) steadfast in the faith, knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren, which are in the world. And Reuel: ch: 1. 9. I Iohn (saith the holy Apostle of himselfe) euen your brother and companion in tribulation and in the kingdome and patience of Iesus Christ. In which respect, the Apo: Paul saith also, I reioice in my sufferings for you, and fulfil the rest of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh, for his bodies sake, which is the Church, whereof I am a minister, &c. For verily, there is great vse of such afflictions of the seruants of God: both for incouragement and confirmation of faith, and also for mutuall comfort: according to that of the same Apostle, 2. Cor: 1. 3. &c. Blessed be God, euen the Father of our Lord Iesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort, who comforteth vs in all our tribulation, that wee may bee able to comfort them which are in any affliction, by the comfort wherewith we our selues are comforted of God. For as the sufferings of Christ abound in vs, so our consolation aboundeth, through Christ. And whether we be afflicted, it is for your consolation and saluation, which is wrought in the indureing of the same sufferings which we also suffer: or whether we be comforted, it is for your consolation and saluation. And our hope is steadfast concerning you, in somuch as wee knowe, that as ye are partakers of the sufferings, so shall ye be also of the consolation. This place as we see, is as a ful Commentarie, concerning this point of the comfortable communion of the children of God, in their afflictions. Wherevnto also, that place is answerable which we read, Heb: 10. 32. 33, 34. 35.

This communion is so necessarie: that none can withdrawe themselues from it, & yet be true Christians. Nay it cānot be so done, without danger of perdition: according to that which we read, verses 38, 39. of that 10. chap: to the Heb: To the which purpose, consider the speech of Mordecai to Queene Ester, ch: 4. 13. 14. And the threatening of God, Amos ch: 6, verses 6, 7, 8. And that saying of our Sauiour Christ, Mat: 10: 33. wherein he professeth that he will bee ashamed of such, as be ashamed to professe his name, for feare of persecution, &c. Wherefore let the example of Moses be alwaies our blessed imitation; in that he made choise, rather to suffer aduersitie with the people of God: then to enioy the pleasures of sinne for a season. Esteeming the rebuke of Christ to be greater riches, then the treasures of Egipt: and in that respect, when he came to age, refused to be called the Sonne of Pharaohs daughter.

And finally, let this comfort, animate vs against that conceit which euery one is apt to discourage himselfe withall, in the time of his affliction: as if none were euer so afflicted, as we be. For it is not so; we haue our companions, whatsoeuer our affliction or triall is: or possibly can be. Let vs therefore in all our temptations, quiet and comfort our hearts in the Lord: and reioyce that wee haue our portion in Christ with the rest of his seruants, in euery affliction, wherein we suffer as Christians: as the Apostle Peter speaketh, 1. Epistle 4. 16.

Moreouer, as it followeth in the seuenth branch of the answere: it is not an idle or vaine comfort, that the holy afflictions of the children of God, doe by his fatherly prouidence, priuiledge them from worldly and profane cares and troubles: according to that similitude which the Apostle Paul vseth, 2. Tim: chap: 2. verses 3. 4, Thou therefore (saith he to Timotheus) suffer affliction as a good souldier of Iesus Christ. No man that warreth, entangleth himselfe with the affaires of this life, because hee would please him that hath chosen him to be a souldier. Much more therefore (as the Apostle giueth thereby to vnderstand) doth the true seruant and child of God, free his minde from all other cares. Yea, hee hath it freed (through the grace and mercy of God) to the ende hee may attend his seruice with comfort: and with good courage followe the fight of his spirituall warrefare. It is reported, that some of the Martyres, had their bodily health, more comfortably, through the almightie goodnes of God, in prison: then they had before, when they were at libertie. And generally, the goodnes of God is so bounteous, that for one or a fewe troubles, and discouragements, he giueth many comforts. Neither is any of his faithfull children, at any time, so destitute and miserable: but euen in their outward miserie, they haue beene spiritually very blessed and happie.

The Comfortes.

Nowe, that according to the 8. branch, speciall troubles may put vs in hope of speciall comforts at hand. Wee may consider it from that speech of King Dauid, whereby hee comforted himselfe against the extreame and raging railings of Shimei, 2. Sam: 16.12. It may be (saith the King) that the Lord will looke on my affliction, and doe me good for his cursing this day. Yea, we may consider and behold it, as it were with our eyes, in that effect which shortly ensued. Read also, Psalm: 109, 28. Though they curse, yet thou wilt blesse: they shall arise and bee confounded, but thy seruant shall reioyce, &c. And verse 31. For hee (that is, God) will stand at the right hand of the poore, to saue him from them that would condemne his soule. Reade likewise, Psalm: 102. 13. 14. Thou wilt arise and haue mercie vpon Sion: for the time to haue mercie thereon, for the appointed time is come. And Isay, 40. 1. 2. Comfort yee, Comfort ye my people, will your God say. Speake comfortably to Ierusalem, and cry vnto her, that her warre-fare is accomplished, that her iniquitie is pardoned: for shee hath receiued of the Lordes hand, double for all her sinnes. Compare it with Luke. 1, 51, &c. Read also, Heb: 10. 37. Yet a very little while, and hee that shall come will come, and will not tarrie. The Diuel rageth most, and accordingly hee inflameth the rage of his instruments, when their time is but short, and their destruction draweth neere. In which respect it is saide, Psalm: 76. 10. Surely the rage of man shall turne to the praise of God. It is a Psalme of thankesgiuing, for the destruction which God sent vpon the raging and railing Assirians, 2. King, 19. 28. &c. 35, 36, 37. Read also Mark: 1. 26. and Luk: 4, 35. and Reuel: 12, 12. The Diuel hath great wrath, knowing that he hath but a short time.

There is none of vs, that vse any diligence in the obseruation of Gods workes, but we may of our owne knowledge, within the space of fewe yeeres remember, that God hath cast his heauie burthen and iudgement, vpon such as haue beene fierce against his seruants. So then, vpon our owne experience, we may iustly say, as we read in the booke of Iob: chap: 9. 4. Who hath bin fierce against God, and hath prospered?

It is a worthy saying of learned Beza, that wee may take it for a shewe-token, that God is about to worke some strange and vnwonted worke: when he layeth the raines loose as it were vpon the neckes of the wicked, so that all things are hasting to confusion, through their wicked and outragious dealing: as (saith he) experience in all ages doth confirme. This is the effect of that learned mans sentence. His wordes are these. Quando animaduertimus Deum suis hostibus, laxas, vt ita dicam, habenas permittere, omniaque in peius ruentia, susque deque ferri, &c. tum norimus a Domino nouum aliquod & extraordinarium opus expectandum, vt seculorum omnium experientia satis id testatur. Homil: 9. in Hist: Passionis.

Finally, if there were nothing else to comfort in time of extremitie, yet this may suffice, that death endeth all. And so haue the holy Martyres comforted themselues, when they were going to the stake: yea so haue they one comforted another, that though they were to take a sharpe breakfast, yet they shoulde haue a ioyfull supper. For as the Apostle writeth, 2. Thes. 1. 6. &c. God accounteth it a righteous thing, to giue his seruants rest, the one with the other, in due time for euer: as also to recompence tribulation, to them that trouble his seruants.

Wherefore, that wee may conclude according to the 9. branch of the Answere: this may iustly be as the sealing vp, and ratifying of all comfort: that all afflictions of longest continuance, and the same also the greatest that may be; are but short and light in comparison of that heauenly glory whereunto they guide vs.

For

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly prouidence.

The Comfortes.

For so the Apostle Paul expressly affirmeth, 2. Cor. 4. 17. Our light affliction (saith he) which is but for a moment, causeth to vs a farre most excellent and an eternall weight of glorie. It is, as was answered, the onely beaten way to the kingdome of God. Act. 14. 22. and 2. Tim. 3. 11, 12. Wherefore they are not without cause pronounced blessed, euen by the sacred mouth of our Sauiour Christ, whosoeuer walke in this way. Matth. 5. 10, 11, 12. Neither is it in vaine, that in the same respect, he doth incourage all such to reioyce, and to be glad: yea, euen as it were to skip for ioy, seeing their reward in heauen is exceeding great. Luke 6. 23.

And thus we may clearely, and certainely perceiue, that the comforts belonging to all the afflictions of Gods children, (to speake generally of them) yea euen of those for sinne, when they cause repentance to saluation; but chiefely for those that are indured for Christ and his Gospels sake: that they are, and accordingly ought iustly to bee ascounted many waies, of exceeding, good and comfortable vse.

BVt there are some comforts, which may seeme more proper and peculiar to death; the which is an affliction naturally more fearefull then any other; though by the grace of God, it is to the faithful; not only a final end of all affliction, but also a speedie enterance into eternall blessednes and glorie. I desire therefore, so much the more gladly; to heare you rehearse some of those speciall comfortes, which are as the most specificall and proper medecine to the godlie, to helpe against all feare of death: whether naturall feare, or feare (as wee may say) supernaturall, and aboue nature; through the guiltinesse of our sinne, in our wounded consciences.

Question. Which I pray you may these speciall comforts be?

Answere As all afflictions and sufferings for the Lords cause, and in the way of righteousnes: so death especially, is to all those which in that respect doe endure it, a most comfortable warrantize, and as it were a sealing vp, of the truth of their faith and obedience to God for euer.

Death is also to the godly, the ending and abolishing of all euill: not onely of the euill of punishment or chastisement, but also of the euill of sinne; the ceasing whereof is to the godly, most comfortable to thinke vpon.

Furthermore, death bailing our soules for euer out of the prison house of this our corruptible, vile, and sinfull bodie; it doth lay wide open the way and passage into the kingdome of heauen: to the most comfortable presence of God the Father, to whom wee die; and to the Sonne of God our Lord Iesus Christ, who hath died for vs, that hee might bee our resurrection and life; and to the holy Ghost, by whom we are sealed vp against the day of our full redemption, euen the redemption of our bodies, to line againe reunited to our soules, and to be made incorruptible and glorious, so to abide for euer and euer.

Fourthly, death ought to be comfortable vnto vs, at the time which God our heauenly Father hath appointed, (what kinde of bodily death soeuer it may be) because it setteth our soules at libertie, to enioy the most sweete and comfortable societie of the blessed soules and spirites of all our reuerend fathers, deare bretheren, and faithfull friendes, whosoeuer haue died in the Lorde before vs: considering also, that all true beleeuers and faithfull seruants of God whom wee shall leaue behinde vs, and are now deare vnto vs in the Lorde; whether Magistrate, or Minister of the Worde, wife or childe, husband or friende, father or mother, shall shortlie in their season, follow after vs, and bee gathered to the rest of the Saints.

Finallie, it may iustlie bee no small comfort vnto vs; that GOD hath appointed his holie Angells, immediatelie vpon our death, to take and conuey our soules honourably, into the heauenly place of our most blessed and glorious rest.

goodnes of God is ſo bounteous, that for one or a fewe troubles, and diſcouragements, he giueth many comforts. Neither is any of his faithfull children, at any time, ſo deſtitute and miſerable: but euen in their outward miſerie, they haue beene ſpiritually very bleſſed and happie.

Nowe, that according to the 8. branch, ſpeciall troubles may put vs in hope of ſpeciall comforts at hand. Wee may conſider it from that ſpeech of King Dauid, whereby hee comforted himſelfe againſt the extreame and raging railings of Shimei, 2. Sam: 16. 12. It may be (ſaith the King) that the Lord will looke on my affliction, and doe me good for his curſing this day. Yea, we may conſider and behold it, as it were with our eyes, in that effect which ſhortly enſued. Read alſo, Pſalm: 109, 28. Though they curſe, yet thou wilt bleſſe: they ſhall ariſe and bee confounded, but thy ſeruant ſhall reioyce, &c. And verſe 31. For hee (that is, God) will ſtand at the right hand of the poore, to ſaue him from them that would condemne his ſoule. Reade likewiſe, Pſalm: 102. 13. 14. Thou wilt ariſe and haue mercie vpon Sion: for the time to haue mercie thereon, for the appointed time is come. And Iſay, 40. 1. 2. Comfort yee, Comfort ye my people, will your God ſay. Speake comfortably to Ieruſalem, and cry vnto her, that her warre-fare is accompliſhed, that her iniquitie is pardoned: for ſhee hath receiued of the Lordes hand, double for all her ſinnes. Compare it with Luke. 1, 51, &c. Reade alſo, Heb: 10. 37. Yet a very little while, and hee that ſhall come will come, and will not tarrie. The Diuel rageth moſt, and accordingly hee inflameth the rage of his inſtruments, when their time is but ſhort, and their deſtruction draweth neere. In which reſpect it is ſaide, Pſalm: 76. 10. Surely the rage of man ſhall turne to the praiſe of God. It is a Pſalme of thankeſgiuing, for the deſtruction which God ſent vpon the raging and railing Aſſirians, 2. King, 19. 28. &c. 35, 36, 37. Read alſo Mark: 1. 26. and Luk: 4, 35. and Reuel: 12, 12. The Diuel hath great wrath, knowing that he hath but a ſhort time.

There is none of vs, that vſe any diligence in the obſeruation of Gods workes, but we may of our owne knowledge, within the ſpace of fewe yeeres remember, that God hath caſt his heauie burthen and iudgement, vpon ſuch as haue beene fierce againſt his ſeruants. So then, vpon our owne experience, we may iuſtly ſay, as we read in the booke of Iob: chap: 9. 4. Who hath bin fierce againſt God, and hath proſpered?

It is a worthy ſaying of learned Beza, that wee may take it for a ſhewe-token, that God is about to worke ſome ſtrange and vnwonted worke: when he layeth the raines looſe as it were vpon the neckes of the wicked, ſo that all things are haſting to confuſion, through their wicked and outragious dealing: as (ſaith he) experience in all ages doth confirme. This is the effect of that learned mans ſentence. His wordes are theſe. Quando animaduertimus Deum ſuis hoſtibus, laxas, vt ita dicam, habenas permittere, omniaque in peius ruentia, ſuſque deque ferri, &c. tum norimus a Domino nouum aliquod & extraordinarium opus expectandum, vt ſeculorum omnium experientia ſatis id teſtatur. Homil: 9. in Hiſt: Paſſionis.

Finally, if there were nothing elſe to comfort in time of extremitie, yet this may ſuffice, that death endeth all. And ſo haue the holy Martyres comforted themſelues, when they were going to the ſtake: yea ſo haue they one comforted another, that though they were to take a ſharpe breakfaſt, yet they ſhoulde haue a ioyfull ſupper. For as the Apoſtle writeth, 2. Theſ. 1. 6. &c. God accounteth it a righteous thing, to giue his ſeruants reſt, the one with the other, in due time for euer: as alſo to recompence tribulation, to them that trouble his ſeruants.

Wherefore, that wee may conclude according to the 9. branch of the Anſwere: this may iuſtly be as the ſealing vp, and ratifying of all comfort: that all afflictions of longeſt continuance, and the ſame alſo the greateſt that may be; are but ſhort and light in compariſon of that heauenly glory whereunto they guide vs.

I desire therefore, so much the more gladly; to heare you rehearse some of those speciall comfortes, which are as the most specificall and proper medecine to the godlie, to helpe against all feare of death: whether naturall feare, or feare (as wee may say) supernaturall, and aboue nature; through the guiltinesse of our sinne, in our wounded consciences.

Question. Which I pray you may these speciall comforts be?

Answere As all afflictions and sufferings for the Lords cause, and in the way of righteousnes: so death especially, is to all those which in that respect doe endure it, a most comfortable warrantize; and as it were a sealing vp, of the truth of their faith and obedience to God for euer.

Death is also to the godly, the ending and abolishing of all euill: not onely of the euill of punishment or chastisement, but also of the euill of sinne; the ceasing whereof is to the godly, most comfortable to thinke vpon.

Furthermore, death hailing our soules for euer out of the prison house of this our corruptible, vile, and sinfull bodie; it doth lay wide open the way and passage into the kingdome of heauen: to the most comfortable presence of God the Father, to whom wee die; and to the Sonne of God our Lord Iesus Christ, who hath died for vs, that hee might bee our resurrection and life; and to the holy Ghost, by whom we are sealed vp against the day of our full redemption, euen the redemption of our bodies, to liue againe reunited to our soules, and to be made incorruptible and glorious, so to abide for euer and euer.

Fourthly, death ought to be comfortable vnto vs, at the time which God our heauenly Father hath appointed, (what kinde of bodily death soeuer it may be) because it setteth our soules at libertie, to enioy the most sweete and comfortable societie of the blessed soules and spirites of all our reuerend fathers, deare bretheren, and faithfull friendes, whosoeuer haue died in the Lorde before vs: considering also, that all true beleeuers and faithfull seruants of God whom wee shall leaue behinde vs, and are now deare vnto vs in the Lorde; whether Magistrate, or Minister of the Worde, wife or childe, husband or friende, father or mother, shall shortlie in their season, follow after vs, and bee gathered to the rest of the Saints.

Finallie, it may iustlie bee no small comfort vnto vs; that GOD hath appointed his holie Angells, immediatelie vpon our death, to take and conuey our soules honourably, into the heauenly place of our most blessed and glorious rest.

Beliefe in God: Fatherly Prouidence. Expecatiō and proofe.

The Comforts.

Seeing the death of the godlie is thus comfortable; no maruell though the Spirit of God doth pronounce all those, forth-with blessed, who die in the Lord: euen because (as the same Spirit assureth vs) they rest from their labours, and their workes follow them. Reuel. chap. 14. verse 13. Well also saith a godly learned mā, according to this testimony of the holy Ghost, Death is good because it bringeth rest: better because it renoweth vs: best because it putteth vs out of all danger of any fall or miserie, for euer after. The comfort of death therefore to the godlie, may well bee accounted a speciall comfort: seeing it containeth (as wee may say) all the degrees of comparison, good, better, and best of all.

But let vs consider more particularly of the proofes, which belong to the seuerall branches of the Answer.

And first, that all sufferings, (specially vnto death for godlines sake) doeth warrantize the truth of our faith and obedience to God: it may be confirmed from that which is saide concerning the perfection of our Sauiour Christ, his faith and obedience, argued by his death and sufferings, Philip. 2. 8 and Heb. 5. 8. Read also 1. Ioh. 3. 16, 17, 18, 19. And in the Gospell according to Iohn chap. 15. verse 13.

This doubtlesse, is an essentiall difference, betwixt the true seruants of God, and hypocrites or hirelings. The one sort abide faithfull to the end: the other fall away, when affliction and triall commeth. Matthew chapter 13. verses 20, 21, 22, &c. And Iohn chapter 10. verses 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18. It is a small matter (as one truly saith) to court the Gospell, in the time of peace and prosperitie. Verily, wee can haue no comfort concerning the truth of our faith, if it holde not out in the time of affliction and triall. It is faith of no valew, that is of no valoure.

Secondly, that to the godly, death is an abolishing of all euill, so as it can neuer comber them any more: it is plaine, because the death of the bodie is compared to a sleepe, till the day of the resurrection. Isai. 26. 19. and chap. 57. 2. and 1. Thessalonians 4. 15.

And touching the life of the soule, it is a most blessed life, so soone as it is parted from the bodie, as wee sawe before: and as it is further euident in that the soule of Lazerus, was carried by the Angells, into Abrahams bosome. And from the promise of our Sauiour Christ, to the thiefe repenting on the Crosse: saying, This day shalt thou bee with mee in Paradise. Also, because it is written, that all troubles from thence-forth bee forgotten, and remembred no more: and that euery teare shall bee wiped from the eye, &c. Reuel. 21 4. The reason is, because then all sinne, the cause of all euill, shall for euer cease. Heb. 12. 23.

Thirdly, that death baileth vs for euer, out of the prison, or to speake the best, out of a base cottage of the bodie: read 2. Cor. 5. 1, &c. 9. Call to mind also Iohn. 14. 1, 2, 3.

And that wee die vnto God, and so to our owne benefite: reade Romans chapter 14. verses 7, 8, 9. Whether wee liue or die, wee are the Lordes. And that it is best for vs to die, that so wee may goe to Christ, with whom our life is hidden in God, &c. Reade Philippians cha. 2. verse 23. Colosians chap. 3. verse 3. and Iohn chapter 11. verse 25. And that wee are sealed vp against the day of our full redemption, by the holy Ghost: reade Ephesians 4. 30. and Rom. 8. 23. Wherefore, there is no doubt, but wee shall then haue so much the greater comfort of his diuine presence: by how much wee shall lesse (that is) not at all, grieue him by our sinne. For the soules of the faithfull, are all iust and perfitted in the heauens. Hebr. 12. 23. as was euen now alledged. And as nothing can seperate vs from the loue of God; neither tribulation, nor anguish, nor persecution, nor famine, nor nakednes, nor perill, nor sword, neither death it selfe, &c. so shall nothing be able to seperate vs, from the most comfortable fruites and effects of his loue. Rom. 8. 35, &c.

Fourthly,

Beleefe in Gods Fatherly prouidence.

The Comforts.

Fourthly, touching the comfort of death, in that it setteth vs at libertie, to haue our communion with the faithfull departed: reade againe Hebrewes chapter 12. verses 23, 24. Yee are come to the congregation of the first borne, which are written in heauen, and to God the Iudge of all, and to the Spirites of iust and perfect men. And to Iesus the Mediator of the new Testament, and to the bloud of sprinkling, which speaketh better things then that of Abel. So that great is the excellencie of the condition and estate of true beleeuing Christians, euen here in this life: but as touching that perfection, which the soules of the righteous haue in the kingdome of heauen, wee cannot attaine vnto it here in this worlde. And therefore, as wee reade in the ninth chapter of the same Epistle, verses 27, 28. God hath appointed vnto men, that they shall once die, and after that, commeth the iudgement. So Christ was once offered to take away the sinnes of many, and vnto them that looke for him, hee shall appeare the second time without sinne, vnto saluation. Without sinne: that is, he shall appeare without any more sacrifice for sinne, and euen quite and cleane to abolish sinne out of our nature, by his glorious and perfect sauing grace, and power. This comfort therefore: to wit, that by death wee shall haue our sweete societie, with all the faithfull departed, both former & latter; and with all that were deare to vs in the daies that they lived here with vs in this world: it is very sensible to those that haue any spirituall sense, and affection in them, to minde heauenly things. The which also, wee haue neede to thinke often vpon, to draw our mindes away from the inordinate loue of this life: and that we may by faith incourage our selues, against the feare of death; the which is naturally exceeding sensible, and full of discomfort. It is true indeede, that both King Dauid, and also King Hezekiah, and so the rest of the faithfull, died comfortably when the time was come, and that they had serued the counsell of God in doing his holy will. Neuertheles, vntill they were thus prepared, and were by faith and the comforts thereof, made ripe as it were vnto death; the thought and feare of death, was very vncomfortable vnto them: as we may see Psalm. 6. and Isaiah chapter 38. verses 2, 3. and from the tenth to the end of the eighteenth verse.

The diligence of those, is very commendable, who haue earnestly bent their mindes, to meditate and finde out comforts, against all naturall feare of death: from that ground of comfort, which wee haue in our Lorde Iesus Christ and his Gospell. Let vs here call such meditations to minde. Namely, that death is to the true Christian, but as a Serpent which hath lost both poison and sting: yea or rather as a dead Serpent, or bare signe of a Serpent, hanged vp before the gate of a goodlie Inne. That death is as a safe arriuing, or landing at the hauen, after a long, tedious, and dangerous voyage: yea like to that safe landing, which setteth a man in his owne long desired and natiue Country.

That it is as the Lords Mid-wife, to remoone vs out of the straitnes of this world, to the large possession of his heauenly kingdome: or as the mothers taking home of her childe, from an vnkinde and churlish nource. That it is as the new casting of a precious vessell of gold, to make it pure from all drosse, that it may be beautifull to the finer. That it is to the soule, as the breaking of the egge-shell when the chicken is readie to be hatched. That it is to the bodie, as the sowing of the corne, as it were in the Lords field: that so it might take roote, and spring vp, against the time of the resurrection; which shall be as the Lords most ioyfull haruest. Finally, that death (as the Scriptures teach vs) is as a sweete sleepe, till the morning of our awaking and refreshing to eternall life. And thus our incounter against death, vnder the banner of our Sauiour Christ, here in this fraile life of ours, it is a comfortable fight: seeing we know before hand, that our enemy is very weak, what brags soeuer he maketh. He therefore that is not willing to die, when God calleth for him out of this world, to come to his heauenly kingdom: he dealeth as foolishly as one being dangerously tossed in the Seas, should refuse to take the benefite of a most commodious and comfortable landing: or as one that being shut vp in prison, should not accept of libertie and inlargement offered vnto him, &c.

Now, touching the last branch of the answer; to wit, the honourable conueiance of our soules to heauen, by the ministerie of the holy Angells, immediately after that they be loosened from the bodie: it may be proued, from that which was a while since alledged, concerning the soule of Lazarus, which was so conueied. For there is the same reason, why the soules of all other the seruants of God, should be so conueied, as well as the soule of Lazarus: seeing the one is as pretious vnto God as the other, and none is of it selfe more able to ascend and breake the heauens that it may goe to God, then any other, or then the soule of Lazarus was.

And beside, in so much as it is manifest, that God committeth the gathering together of the bodies of his seruants at the last day, to the ministerie of the holy Angells Matth. 24. 31: it neede not be doubted, but that he vseth their ministerie for the gathering of their soules before hand, seeing they are the more excellent and precious part of the persons of his seruants. And further also, seeing (as hath beene alreadie declared) the Angells are Gods ministers for the comfort of his children in this life: how can we doubt, but that they are likewise imployed for the furthering of their happines and felicitie, at the time of their death?

And thus, by the gratious goodnes and assistance of our good God, and most gratious heauenly Father: wee haue gathered together, the chiefe profites and comforts of all afflictions in generall, and of death it selfe more specially. And all this, principally indeede; that it might be manifest vnto vs, how the fatherly prouidence of God, may be iustified, toward all his children: against all malignant obiections, that are made to the obscuring and darkening of the same. But not onely to this ends; but that therewith also, wee might be animated & incouraged, to the willing induring, and ioyfull passing through all affliction and triall: whatsoeuer it shall please the same our good God and heauenly Father, to trie vs withall; yea euen to death it selfe, according to his owne most holy and blessed will. Remembring alwaies, what he by his owne good Spirit assureth vnto vs, by the ministerie of his Apostle Iames: chap. 1. 12. in that hee pronounceth the man blessed, that indureth tentation: and that when he is tried, he shall receiue the crowne of life, the which (as the Apostle writeth) the Lord hath promised to them that loue him.

Neuertheles, this we must vnderstand; that though the comforts arising from faith in Gods fatherly prouidence, be many, and the same also verie great: yet they cannot bee obtained without earnest and victorious strife against all contrarie discomforts, whatsoeuer biddeth battell against the same our faith.

AND now let vs (according to the course and order of our inquirie) from the comfortes, proceede to consider what the duties be: such as follow vpon that manifold and most beneficiall comfort, which ariseth to the faithfull, from this Article of beliefe in God the Father: in respect of his fatherly prouidence towards vs, and toward all things else for our benefit and comfort.

But to preuent all questioning, this will wee first say; that as all our comfort lieth grounded, and as it were lapped vp in the fatherly prouidence of GOD: so the opening and inlarging of our hearts to all good dutie whatsoeuer, (to the glorifying of the most gratious and glorious name of GOD our heauenlie Father) doth most boundenly belong thereunto.

This obserued; wee will for the present, stand onely to inquire of those duties (some of them at the least) which doe most properly, and principally belong to this Article: so neare as it shall please God to giue vs grace

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly prouidence.

Question.

Answere.

to discerne. Which are they that doe so?

The Duties.

First, and fore-most, it is our dutie, from the comfort of faith in the Fatherlie Prouidence of God our heauenly Father; euen at once, vtterly to renounce and cast away, as well all wandering opinion and conceit of blinde Fortune and chance, as all scrupulous and seruile feare, of heathenish and fatal Destinie.

Secondlie, it is likewise our bounden dutie, to abandon all inordinate, or distrustful and distracting cares and desires: with all wicked, and vniust practises, concerning earthly things.

Yea, it is our dutie, from faith in the Fatherlie prouidence of God, to moderate all lawfull and honest studies, or labours about them: and that wee doe enterprise nothing, in confidence of our owne wit or strength, but onely by the leaue, or permission; and as wee may well saye, vnder the correction of the Diuine prouidence of the Lorde our God.

Thirdlie, (as was said before) concerning the workes of Gods creation, so must wee likewise say, and acknowledge concerning all the workes of his continuall Prouidence: that it is our bounden dutie, to thinke, and speake alwaies, most reuerendlie of them, and for the defence and iustifying of them; against all who-soeuer shall presume to deprane the least, yea (if wee may so speake) those that doe seeme the vilest and baseste of them.

Fourthlie, from all former experience of the fatherlie prouidence of our God, watching ouer vs for our benefit: it is our dutie to incourage our selues, to waite comfortablie vpon him, for all time to come; without all seruile feare of our enemies, or distrust in his most gratious and Fatherlie good will.

In prosperitie, it is our dutie to be soberlie minded, and to prepare for aduersitie: that is, in health howe to beare sickness, in wealth howe to indure pouertie, in honour how to suffer reproche: and finallie, in all our life howe to die, and to be willing to lye downe in the dust, (a lesson very harde to be learned) that wee may at the last enioye a more sure foundation and building from the Lord.

And moreouer, when aduersitie commeth; wee knowing well, that it is from the most wise and gratious good hand of our heauenlie Father: it is our dutie, as obedient children, patientlie and meekely to submit our selues vnto it, as to his Fatherly correction and triall, labouring to make all good vses thereof, to our bettering.

Likewise, wee beleeuing all aduersitie to proceede of the fatherly and prouident hand of God: it is our dutie, chearefullie and comfortablie to hope and expect a good and blessed issue.

Furthermore also; from all former succoures and deliuerances, the which it pleaseth God from day to day to renewe vnto vs: it is our partes to grow and increase in loue to God; and therby to hearten our selues to indure greater affliction (if God will so haue it) for the time to come.

Finallie, it is our dutie, both in prosperitie and also in aduersitie, in life, and euen in death it selfe; and for all the iudgements of God against the wicked, to be thankeful to his diuine Maiestie: in so much as by all meanes, hee doth most wiselie fit and prepare vs, yea guide and bring vs home, to his heauenlie Kingdome and glorie.

Explicatio & proofe.

These in deed, are all of them, most bounden duties, belonging to the comfort of our faith, in the most gratious and Fatherlie prouidence of God. And more also in the particulars; aboue that could here for this time, be conueniently expressed, as was said before.

For manifolde and great comfortes; doe iustlie call for manie and great duties at our handes.

But for the ground of those that haue ben mentioned; let vs first of all consider, that euen among the wiser sorte of the heathen, the prouidence of God, hath bene alwaies, after a sort, acknowledged: yea so farre forth, that some of them haue called God by the name of Pronoia, euen prouidence, or fore-sight it selfe.

Wherevpon also, a learned writer obserueth verie well; that they easilie

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly Prouidence.

The Duties,

ſaw, that it ſhould be as vnreaſonable a thing, to acknowledge a God, & yet to denie his prouidence: as it ſhould be, to aſcribe an eye vnto him without ſight, a hande without power, and a minde without vnderſtanding, &c. Though herewithall it muſt be conſidered, that the wiſeſt of the heathen, not inlightened from the holie word of God: did neuer knowe rightlie, this Fatherlie Prouidence of God, wherof we ſpeake.

Neuertheles, thus farre the wiſer ſort of them ſawe; that the prouidence of God, wadeth moſt skilfullie betweene blinde Fortune, and that which is called the Fatall or Stoïcal deſtinie. Yea, and euen touching that which is called Fortune or chance here among men on earth, (as beeing altogether vncertaine and accidentall to them) yet vulgarlie, they placed it as a Goddeſſe in heauen: as though they ſhould acknowledge, that with God all things, (yea theſe that come by the greateſt happe-hazard as men deeme) are certainly knowne and foreſeene: according to that ſaying of the Poet,

Nullum Numen abeſt, ſi ſit prudentia: ſed te,
Nos facimus, Fortuna Deam: cœloq; locamus.

That is
No power Diuine doth want on earth, if wiſely men would deeme:
T'is wee like fooles, who Fortune place, Farre off, Shee-god in heauen.

Or thus
Ther wants no God at all, wher wiſedome doth adviſe:
Wee fooles doe Fortune Deïfie, and place aboue the Skies.

Much rather then, ought all the children of God, who are taught and inſtructed from the holie worde of God; to baniſhe, both from their mouthes, and alſo from their hearts: all falſe aſcription, or imputation of any thing, to Fortune or lucke, &c. And likewiſe it is our dutie, to put away all blaſphemous and deſperate thoughts and ſpeaches, ſuch as are found in the mouthes of thoſe that neither ſhame nor feare, rudely and barbarouſly to ſay: If I be ordained to this or that deſtinie, I cannot poſſiblie auoide it, I muſt of neceſſitie, be hanged or drowned. I thinke I was borne vnder an ill Planet, &c. Theſe, and all ſuch like ſpeaches and thoughts, are moſt carefullie to be auoided: yea, to be vtterlie abhorred, and reiected of all the children of God. For moſt certaine it is, that God hath not by his moſt holie Prouidence, excluded that gratious priuiledge, which hee hath granted to faithfull Praier. Neither is it his holie will and pleaſure, to fruſtrate that godlie circumſpection and wiſe fore-ſight, which it pleaſeth him from time to time, to giue vnto his ſeruants, for the preuenting and auoiding of imminent dangers: yea euen for the auoiding of ſinne it ſelfe, the verie cauſe of all euill and danger whatſoeuer. Much leſſe hath hee tyed and ſnared, the moſt free libertie of his owne Diuine counſell; to anie neceſſarie, or fatall connexion and knitting together of naturall cauſes, and their effects: as it is manifeſt, in that hee hath oftentimes wrought againſt the vſuall and ordinarie courſe of naturall things, for the benefite of his people. As in the leading of his people out of Egipt toward the land of Canaan, through the red Sea on drie land: when ther was no naturall cauſe ſufficient, for the diuiding of the waters. And by his feeding of them in the barren wildernes, with Manna from heauen, by the ſpace of fortie yeares together, &c. And as touching the ſpirituall work of our redemption, and ſaluation, by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: it is altogether aboue nature. So that the Lorde may worthilie ſay by his holie Propet Iſaiah ch: 55. 8. againſt all ſuch Iudges of euil thoughts: (that is, ſuch euill thinking Iudges as the Apoſtle Iames termeth them.) My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor your wayes my wayes. For as the heauens are higher then the earth, ſo are my wayes higher then your wayes, and my thoughtes, then your thoughtes, &c.

And furthermore, it is not in any wiſe to be doubted, but that inſomuch as God vouch-ſafeth by his holie worde and Spirit, to teach and warne, to command & exhort, to promiſe and incourage his children, to walk in his bleſſed waies; to the end they may not onely eſcape euerlaſting death, but alſo be partakers of his bleſsings, to their endles life: it is not to be doubted, I ſay, but that he will giue them the fruit & benefit of euerie part of his holie ordinance, according to those good endes, whervnto he hath appointed the same.

Finallie, it is euen as certainlie true, concerning the reprobates, that they doe not goe on in their sinnes, and so fall into the curse and condemnation, by anie compulsion or temptation, and prouocation from God: but of their own voluntarie disposition, contrarie to the expresse will and commandementes of the Lord. And in this respect it is, that the Lord, with whom ther is in truth, no repentance, or change, such as is in vs: doth yet ascribe repentance, and changing of minde to himselfe, vpon the obstinacie of the wicked, according to that Gen: 6. ver: 6. It repenteth mee that I made man. And again Ier: 8. 18. If the nation against whom I haue pronounced a plague, doe turne from their wickednesse, I will repent of the plague, &c. An example wherof, we haue in the Prophesie of Ionah: ch: 3. vers: 10.

The first dutie therfore, of faith in the Fatherlie prouidence of God is this; that we trusting in his mercie, & goodnes: do renounce all blind fortune, & all fatall necessitie of Stoical destinie, according to the first branch of the answer.

Touching the second branche: to wit, that it is our dutie to abandon all inordinate, & distrusting, or distracting cares about earthly things: read a plaine proofe hereof. Matth: ch: 6. 25. &c: and verses, 32. 33. 34. Be ye not carefull, (saith our Sauiour Christ) for your life, what ye shall eate, &c. For your heauenly Father knoweth that ye haue need of all these things. But seeke ye first the kingdome of God, and his righteousnes, and all these things shalbe cast vnto you. For in so much (as els-where he assureth vs) that it is the Fathers pleasure is to giue vs a kingdome, yea such a kingdome as is onelie worthy to be in request. Luke 12. 32. howe can we thinke, that he will faile any of his children, touching the necessaries of this life, so farre forth as may be good for them. Touching the moderation of our lawfull studies and labours: we haue a flat commandement, Pro: 23. 4. 5. Trauell not too much to be rich: but cease from thy wisedome. Wilt thou let thine eyes flie vpon that which will shortlie flie away, &c?

And that it is our dutie to submit all our enterprises to the holie prouidence & will of God: Read Exod: 18. 23. If thou doest this thing (saith Iethro) & God command the, &c. And 2. Sam: 12. Be strong (saith Ioab) and let vs be valiant for our people, & for the cities of our God, and let the Lord do that which is good in his eyes. And 1. Chro: 13. 2. If it seeme good to you (saith king Dauid) and that it proceedeth of the Lord your God, wee will send &c. And Heb: 6. 3. And this will we do, if God permit. And 1. Pet: 3. 17. It is better, (if the will of God be so) that we suffer for well doing, then for euill doing. And Iames 4. 13. &c: the holy Apostle doth earnestly reproue the contrarie presumption. Goe to now (saith S. Iames) ye that say to day or to morrowe, we will goe into such a citie, and continue there a yeare, & buy and sell, and get gaine. (And yet ye cannot tell what shalbe to morrow, For what is your life? It is euen a vapour, which appeareth for a little time, and afterwards vanisheth away) for that ye ought to say, If the Lord will, and if we liue we will do this or that. But now yee reioice in your boastings, all such reioicing is euil. Therefore to him that knoweth how to doe well, and doth it not, to him it is sinne. To this purpose also, serueth well the holie Prou: chapt: 15. 3. The eyes of the Lord in euery place, beholde the euill and the good. Read also Psalm: 139. God seeth in the night as-well as in the day, hee giueth sleepe, and he holdeth our eyes waking, &c. Read also Ester, chap: 6. 11. &c.

Thirdlie, that it is our dutie (as a fruite of the comforte of faith in the Fatherlie prouidence of God) to thinke and speake most reuerently of the same, and of all the workes therof: it is euident euen of it selfe, vnlesse wee should willinglie take his name in vaine. For it is certaine, that as God by his worde of Creation created all, so doth hee continuallie, by his worde of Prouidence and gouernment, (wherof we read, Psal: 147. 15, 16, 17, 18.) hee doth I say by this word and wisedome of his, rule, gouerne, & dispose of all things in the world, frō the greatest & most honorable, to the least & basest; & from the best & most vertuous, to the worst & most wicked thing that is done vnder heauen.

Yet

Note. Wee ought to speake it often for the open profession of our faith before men: but to thinke it alwaies for the truth of our faith in the sight of God.

Note also, To this end it is our dutie to haue the works of Gods prouidence & gouernment, in a holy admiration: vpon a diligent view and reuerend consideration of them. Read Iob 36, 22. 23 &c. and in the chapters following. Read also Psal. 8. & Psal. 46. 8, &c. and 66. 5.

Beleef in Gods father-ly Prouidēce.

The Duties.

Yet so, as we must take heede, that we impute not the least error or euill, or the least defect of goodnes that may be, to him. Farre be this from vs. Read Iames. 1. verse 13. It is one thing to be author or cause of an euill: and farre another thing, to be the orderer and disposer of the euill, to a good and holie ende, contrarie to the intent and minde of the euill worker. It must be confessed indeed, that God himselfe doth sometime take vpon himselfe, the doing of that, which is of the owne nature sinfull: as the hardening of the heart of Pharaoh against the Lord, and the abusing of the concubines of Dauid, &c. But before we can say so, without blasphemie against God: wee must see, or rather by faith aboue our reache, acknowledge first, that it is iust and holie in God so to doe, though it be wicked and vniust in men.

And secondly, we must dulie consider the manner of Gods working, which is not by impulsion, but by leauing the wicked to themselues, and by giuing them ouer to the power of the Diuell: and all to this end, that he may take iust vengeance for former sinnes. And thus it is iust with God, to punishe one sin by another. But as touching all other things, God doth not onely order and dispose them: but he doth likewise effectuallie and originallie worke them all. Hee worketh great and strange things, that all flesh might learne to feare before him. He sendeth hard things, to trie our faith and patience. He worketh small things, to shew vs the infinitenes of his power, and wisedome: and that thereby wee might the rather discerne, the greatnes of the greater of his works. He causeth many defects in nature; that we might by the defect, the rather acknowledge his fulnesse and sufficiencie in those that be perfecter. He maketh many monstrous things, to admonish vs of the benefit of a right and orderlie shape. Hee maketh some fooles and blinde, &c: that wee may know from whence wee haue our sight and wisedome, &c: Hee maketh some men light and ridiculous, to trie our grauitie: and that we might learne to auoide the scurrilitie that is in our nature, &c. Thus, from the greatest thing, to the least of all, that is not in the owne nature simplie sinne; God hath not onely his ruling, but also his actiue and working hand: euen from the Elephant, to the little flie, as well in prouidence and gouernment, as in Creation; as was obserued before in the doctrine therof.

This, while some haue not aduisedlie thought of: they are iustlie reproued of the more sound defenders of Gods holie prouidence. Not onelie that heathenishe and ouer-wise Plinie, who thought that if an vniuersall prouidence should be acknowledged in God; it must needes breede him ouer-much trouble, and put him to many base seruices: but also they haue reproued, and not without cause Ierome a learned and renoumed Christian, for that hee hath negligently let fall some thing, sauouring of the same vaine & erroneous conceit: as if God were to be thought of, as one not regarding small matters, or base creatures. But alas, this is the basenes of their owne conceipt, and (at the best) an ouer-curious feare of a causelesse dishonour to be put vpon the Lord. For (I beseech you) shall wee suppose, that either the Prince of a countrie, is employed in base busines, because hee ordereth not onely the greater matters, at the Counsell table: but also, all mechanicall and hospitall busines, for the well vsage of the poorest creatures vnder his gouernment?

Natur: hist: lib: 2. cb. 7.

Hieronim: in cap: 1. Hab:

Or shall we say, that the chiefe Magistrate or Maior in a citie, is baselie emploied: when he taketh order for the cleansing, and keping sweet of the channelles of the citie, and for the carying out of the draught, at the fittest times, with the least annoyance that may be? Nothing-lesse. It is so much the more to their honour, by howe much they shall stoope downe more lowe: and for the common benefit of the nation, or citie; shall after a sorte, forget their honour, &c. So then, yea infinitely much more is it to the honour and glorie of God, in that notwitstanding he is the most high and excellent; yet he abaseth himselfe to beholde the things both in the heauen, and in the earth: according to the excellent obseruation of the holie Prophet, Psal: 113. 5. 6. Yea, euen to the mustering of the Flies, &c: against Pharaoh king of Egipt, Psalm: 105. 31. &c.

Thus then, glorifying the name of the Lord in all things: wee must not exclude the holie prouidence, no not from the least thing. Yea, and euen touching the most wicked, outragious, and strangest confusions, that at any time breake out in the world, through the practise of the wicked: they doe so much the more illustrate the most wise and Almightie prouidence of God, in that he turneth all to a quiet calme, and setteth things in better order againe, then they were before.

Say therefore vnto God, as we are exhorted, Psalm: 66. 3, &c. How reuerend art thou in thy workes! through the greatnes of thy power shall thine enemies be in subiection vnto thee, &c.

Read also Ierem: 5. 23. 24. and chapt: 10. 6, 7. &c.

Fourthly, that former experience, & the present sense of Gods mercie, ought to incourage vs to be in comfortable expectation of a good issue: it may appeare from the nature of faith, in regard wherof the Prophet Isaiah saith, Hee that beleeueth shall not make haste. Isai: 28. 16. And ch: 30. 15. Thus saith the Lord God the holy one of Israel, In rest and quietnes shall ye be saued: in quietnes and in confidence shalbe your strength, but ye would not. But Psalm: 112. 7. It is said of the righteous man (that is, of the true beleeuer, louing and following righteousnes) that hee will not be afraide of euil tidings: for his heart is fixed, and beleeueth in the Lord.

Let vs heere remember againe the gratious issue, which God hath vsually giuen to his seruants, in bringing them out of their troubles: to Ioseph, Dauid, Iob, &c. And that comfortable Prouerb, vpon so comfortable an occasion. In the mount will the Lord prouide. And 1. Corin: 10. 13. God will not suffer vs to be tempted aboue that wee are able, but he will giue the issue with the temptation, that wee may be able to beare it. Read also Isaiah, 51. 12. 13. I euen I am hee that comfort you. What a one art thou, that thou shouldest feare a mortall man, &c. And Matth: 10. 28. and Luke 12. 4. 5. I say to you my friendes, be not afraied of them that kill the bodie, &c: saith our Sauiour Christ.

That in prosperitie it is our dutie to prepare for aduersitie: Read Eccles: 7. 16. and Hebr: 13. 3. Remember them that are in bonds, as if yee were bound with them, &c.

Note.

Two extremities are to be auoided: according to that Prou: 3. 11. and Heb. 12. 5. My sonne despise not the chastening of the Lord, neither faint when thou art rebuked of him. Read also, all sottish neglect of Gods corrections condemned. Isai. 42. 25. and Hosea. 7. 9. Read also Eccl: 7. 16.

That in aduersitie, wee ought patientlie and meekely to submit our selues vnto it, whatsoeuer it be, as knowing it to be the hand of God: it is according to that, Amos, 3. 6. Shall there be euill in a citie, and the Lord hath not done it? And Lament: 3. 38. But for our dutie of patience and meekenes, in the bearing of our aduersitie, call here againe to minde, the comfortable exhortation of the Apostle, Hebr: 12. 5.

Read also Leuit: 10. 1. 2, 3. Nadab and Abihu, the sonnes of Aaron, were deuoured by the fire: but Aaron held his peace.

And 1. Sam: 3. 18. It is the Lord (saith Eli) Let him doe what seemeth him good. And 2. Sam: 15. 26. If the Lord say thus, I haue no delight in thee, Behold (saith king Dauid) here am I, let him doe to mee, what seemeth good in his eyes.

And Psalm: 39. 9. I should haue beene dombe, and not haue opened my mouth, because thou diddest it.

And Psalme 119. 75. And Isaiah 39. 8. The word of the Lord is good, which thou hast spoken, saith Ezekiah to the Prophet Isaiah.

Read also, Dan: 9. 7. 8. 13. 14. and Nehem: 9. 33. And not to waite for the counsell of God, is noted to be a fruit of vnbeliefe, Psalme 106. 13.

For the hope of a good issue, wee haue seene sufficient ground in the fourth branch.

That it is our duty to increase in loue toward God, according to the increase of our deliuerances, Read Psalm: 116. 1. I loue the Lord, because he hath heard my voice, and my prayers, &c.

Beliefe in Gods fatherly Providice.

The Duties.

And Psalme 18. I loue thee dearely, O Lord my strength. It is the beginning of the Psalme, which Dauid writ after that God had deliuered him out of the handes of all his enemies.

The fruit whereof was this, that he was the more established in Gods goodnes. See Psalm: 3. and 23. And in the holie Storie, 1. Sam: 27. 54. 55. 56. 57. And 2. Cotinth: 1. 10. and 1. Timot: chapt: 4. 1. 2. 3. 4.

That it is our dutie, both in prosperitie and aduersitie, to be thankefull to God: take Iob for a notable example, chapt: 1. 21. The Lord hath giuen, and the Lord hath taken: blessed be the name of the Lord. And chapt: 2. 10. Shall we receiue good at the hand of God, and shall we not receiue euil? In all things (saith the Apostle) giue thankes: for this is the will of God, in Christ Iesus towardes you. 1. Thess: 5. 18.

Verilie, there is no bit of bread that we eat in prosperitie, nor any garment which we put on, &c. Neither in aduersity, is ther the least mitigation of paine or renewing of comfort: but it is from the prouident and Fatherlie hand of God, who houldeth our soules in life. And therfore, iust cause why we should be thankfull to him, for all his goodnes. Both in the one estate, and also in the other, we ought to resolue our selues with Iob: to put our trust in the Lorde, though hee should kill vs. ch: 13. 15.

It is our dutie also, to reioice in the execution of the iudgements of God, against the wicked. Read Psalm: 58. 10. 11. and 64. 10. and 92. 1. 2. 3. 4. And Psal. 136. And Psal. 119. 62. At midnight (saith the Prophet) will I rise to giue thankes vnto thee, because of thy righteous iudgements. And verse 164. Seuen times a day doe I praise thee, because of thy righteous iudgements.

And Isaiah 49. 13. Reioyce O heauens, and be ioyfull O earth: breake forth into praise O mountaines: for God hath comforted his people, and will haue mercie vpon his afflicted, &c.

Finallie, wheras wee haue seene before, that there are speciall comfortes appertaining to death, as touching those that die in the Lord: so let it not be forgotten heere; that in so much as it is in it selfe a speciall fruit or punishment of sinne, there are speciall good vses to be made of the due meditation of it, in this respect.

For first, it is verie effectuall to beate downe all hautines and pride of hearte in vs: whilest that wee remember (as the truth is) that wee are but dust; and that to dust, wee must returne. Genes: 3. 19. And Psalme 90. 3. Genes: 18. 27.

Secondlie, it may iustlie preuaile with vs, to withdrawe our heartes from all inordinate care of delicious pampering of the flesh: which is but a fatting of it, for the wormes, Isaiah. chap. 14. 11. Iob. 17. 13. 14.

Thirdlie, it may iustlie prouoke vs to the speedie imbracing of the feare of God, and to the diligent practise of euery good and Christian dutie: seeing we haue but a short time of abiding here, and because God wil call vs to an account, howe wee haue spent our life: Psalme. 119. 17. 18. 19. Ecclesiast. 11. 9. and chapt. 12. 14.

Fourthlie, it may well be vsed as a speciall remedie against hypocrisie, in matters of Gods holie and immediate worship: and against all dissembling & deceitfull dealing towards men: because nothing will giue sound comfort against death, but that which is sincere and vnfained. An euill conscience will betraye it selfe, Matth. 7. 21. 22. 23. And chapt: 22. 12. 13.

Last of all, it is mightie to admonishe vs, to holde fast the faith and loue of Christ, who is the onely roote and fountaine of all comfort: both in life and in death; in this worlde, and in that which is to come. Philippians, chapter 1. 21.

These then, and all other like to these; are the duties belonging to the comfort of faith in Gods fatherlie prouidence.

But here a doubt may seeme profitablie to be answered: though something hath hath bene alreadie said (concerning that point) for the answering of it before.

For seeing that all things are so ruled and ordered by Gods Almightie prouidence, that without his blessing, it is altogether in vaine, to goe about to build the house, or to watch the citie, &c: as wee read Ps: 127. Doth not this take away, and vtterlie frustrate all our prouidence or fore-cast: & all whatsoeuer diligence and indeuour we shal vse, either in our ciuill, or domesticall and houshold affaires, and busines of this life?

Question.

Answere No, it is farre otherwise. God expreslie requireth, and commandeth our best diligence, withall holie and discret circumspection, and fore-sight, to serue his diuine Prouidence, in verie many things, for his glorie and our owne benefit: and hee hath also promised, and doth daylie yeelde blessing, and good successe there-vnto.

Onely wee must take heede, that we trust not in our owne wit & diligence, or in any lawfull meanes whatsoeuer we vse: but in the blessing of the liuing God alone. As touching wicked and vnlawfull meanes, we must in no wise vse any of them.

And seeing the wisedome & gouernment of God our heauenly Father, is high aboue all our vnderstanding and indeuours: therefore also it is our part, to be content, though things take not that effect alwaies, which we intend & desire; insomuch as we may be sure, that God will bring all to a more excellent passe, then we could once conceiue in our mind.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

It is very true, and wee haue seene sufficient ground of it before. Neuertheless, God alloweth of all those indeuours which his children make, according to the rules of his reuealed will: and within the compasse of their callings. Hee will also turne their indeuours to their blessing and reward: howsoeuer, for secret causes knowne to himselfe, hee doth not giue them their desired and expected effect: but rather the contrary, as it may seeme.

And that God requireth our diligence, and wisedome, in seruing his prouidence, it is euident euery where: both by precept, and also from the notable examples of the seruants of God. Read Pro: 6. 6. Goe to the pismire ô thou sluggarde, &c: & Eccl: 9. 10. All that thy hand shall find to doe, do it with all thy power, &c: and Ier: 48. 10. Cursed be he that doth the worke of the Lord negligentlie, &c.

Wee haue also notable examples, such as is that of Ioab, mentioned a little before. 2. Sam: 10. 12. It is a right noble speach, of a wise & valiant captain of the Lords hoste. Read also. Ps: 118. 7. The Lord is with me (saith the Princelie Prophet) among them that helpe me: therfore shall I see my desire vpon mine enemies. See, he doth not neglect, or lightly esteeme of the helps which God gaue him. Nay, God himself doth not despise the help of his poore seruãts: as Iudges 5. 23. &c: Where, the spirit of God commendeth those that came forth, to help the Lord: but accurseth the rest. Read also Act. 27 31. &c. v: 43. 44. Verily God hath so wisely disposed of all things, that though he ruleth all things (as it is most meet he should, or els they would be rawlie ordered) yet he hath left enough for euery seruant of his, to busie themselues about, & that to very good and blessed purposes, in the seruice of his holie prouidence. Thus the diuine and Fatherlie prouidence of God, doth not frustrate the outward, either ciuill or houshold indeuours of his children, touching the affaires of this life.

Question. But doth it not take away all deliberation, and freedome of our thoughts and affections, touching heauenlie things?

Answere No neither. Neuertheless, this we must alwaies remember, & acknowledge, that all our freedome to minde or effect any thing that is good, and godlie, and perteyning to the kingdome of heauen: it standeth in this, that God himselfe doth first make vs free, and then also, that he confirmeth our libertie & freedome, by his holie Spirit; and all through the grace of our Lord Iesus Christ, working in vs, that which is pleasing in his owne sight.

Explicatiõ & proofe. So indeed we read Heb: 13. 21. And in many other places, familiarly knowne to those, that are acquainted with the holy Scriptures. As on the contrarie, it is as plentifullie testified, that without the grace of God making vs free: we and all other, are of our selues, willingly at liberty, onely to serue sin & the diuell: & that also through our owne default. Yea, so are we in the voluntary bonds of sin, and Satan; that howsoeuer ther may be some appearance of goodnes, in some actions, before wee be renewed, and set free by the holy Ghost: yet all is but in hypocrisie, or in some outward respect, for vaine-glorie, or worldlie profit, &c. So that it is but libertie in shewe, and meere bondage in truth.

The danger of not beleeuing.

THese things thus obserued: let vs nowe conclude this Article of our faith in the Fatherlie prouidence of God.

Question. What is the danger of not beleeuing in God, as in our most gratious, wise, and prouident Father, the ruler and gouernour of all things, as well as in him beeing the Almightie Creator.

Answere. Without faith in Gods Fatherlie prouidence, no man can be eyther trulie patient in aduersitie, or trulie thankefull to God in prosperitie: no not in harueſt time for the outward fruites of the earth; or in any other harueſt, or greateſt plentie that may be, of any of Gods blessings.

God can haue no glorie yeelded vnto him of such, in any of his works: nor be acknowledged any where, with any reuerend regard of his diuine presence. No such can hope for any good thing from him.

Nay, it cannot bee, but all such as beleeue not in the Fatherlie prouidence of God; must needes, without repentance, proue verie Atheists, and to be as the Apostle saith, without God in the world: nothing regarding his commandementes, but walking after their owne lusts, vsing the worst meanes, and courses that may be, howsoeuer they may possiblie make anie shifte for themselues.

Explication and proofe. So great is the danger indeede, for not onely are they Atheists, who vtterlie denie God, (wherof there are but few to speak of, that doe so farre harden their hearts) but such also as denie him to be such a one as he hath reuealed himself: to wit, the Father, Sonne, and holie Ghost: and also the Sonne to be God, manifested in the flesh, &c. And consequently, such are likewise Atheists in parte, whosoeuer denie him to rule and gouerne any of his creatures, specially mankind: and among them, chiefly his holie Church; reiecting in his behalfe, the Testimonie and declaration of his owne most sacred and holie word.

Herein therfore, we are to condemne, not onely those diuers sorts of Philosophers, who either denied, or doubted of the diuine prouidence altogether (in that some of them called into question, whether there be a God or no; such as Protagoras, and Melius, are reported to haue bene: likewise Democritus, and Epicurus, who leaue all to chance and fortune) Or els doe, as it were, pinion and straighten the prouidence of God (as they that make it nothing else but a bare prescience and fore-knowledge of all things, as they are to come to passe: and they that doe binde the Prouidence of God, to a necessitie of naturall causes, by a perpetuall and in-euitable connexion and progression of them, as the Stoikes, and they that do excepte those things from Gods Fatherlie prouidence, which are commonlie taken to be in mans owne free power and will, and that according to a certaine souereigntie of his owne reason and disposition: as Cicero and Plinie, &c.) Wee are not onely, (I say) to condemne their opinions, but also all the erroneous doctrine of such as professing themselues Christians, doe anie way abridge the holie and vniuersall prouidence and gouernement of God, as if it did not extende it selfe to small and vile creatures: or to mans ordinarie and common affaires.

Seneca lib: de Prouidentia. Cicero 2. de Diuinatione. Plini: natur: hist: lib: 2. cap. 7 vt sup. Hieron: in cap. 1. Abac. vt sup. Damasc: lib: 2. orthodox: fi: ca. 29 Quæst. &

But chiefliе, wee are to condemne the blaspemie of all Atheists, and Epicures, which in these dayes of the cleare light of the Gospell, doe most sacrilegiouslie, and impudentlie denie both God and all Diuine prouidence, either for punishment of vice, or reward of vertue. &c.

For if wee should consent to so great wickednes and impietie: howe can any think, but that it must needes be to the euerlasting destruction both of our bodies and soules, from the presence and fauour of God?

And no doubt also, the cause why God doth so oftentimes forget (as it were) and withholde his Fatherlie goodnes and bountie, and send scarcitie or sickenesse, or warre, &c: in stead of health, and wealth, peace, and plentie, &c:

it is

Beliefe in Gods Fatherly prouidence.

The Danger of not beleeuing.

it is for that his good and fatherly prouidence is not so thankfully acknowledged in the ordinarie course of his mercies, as it ought to be.

Certainly, if we would glorifie God, as we ought to doe for his gracious gouerning of his creatures to our benefit and comfort, by the sending of the good word of his prouidence, according to that, Psal: 147. 15. &c. We should not haue had such dearths of victuals, or such plentie of sicknesses of bodies, or troubles in common-wealth, or any other calamitie, either spirituall or temporall, such as wee haue often met withall. God therefore our heauenly Father, giue all of vs, and all his people euery where, grace to acknowledge him better, in his most gracious and Fatherly prouidence: that so it may goe better with vs, and with his whole Church, for Iesus Christs sake Amen.

Thus farre of the Article of our faith in the fatherly prouidence of God our heauenly father: yea of our faith in God the Father the first person of the holy Trinitie, as well concerning the Creation, as the Prouidence, and all their particulars, appertaining to this part of the profession of our true Christian beliefe.

Beliefe

The Contents.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, touching his chiefe manifestation in our humane nature to be so: for the perfect working of our redemption and saluation.

This chiefe manifestation, going immediately before his enterance into his publike estate and condition of life: was first by the testimonie and preaching of Iohn the Baptist: both before, and also after the baptisme of our Saviour. The history whereof, and also of the conception, birth, and life of Iohn Baptist himselfe, beeing a most singular fore-runner, and witnes of the comming of our Saviour: it is set downe, pages. 69. 70 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77.

Secondly, the manifestation of the Sonne of God in mans nature, was by the testimony of God the Father, and of God the holy Ghost, at his baptisme. pa. 78.

Thirdly, by himselfe in the most powerfull execution of his Office: as it is described, pag. 90. &c. But first, the difficultie of his enterance vpon the execution of his Office, is layed forth. pages 79. 80. 81. 82. 83.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who taught a most holy and perfect doctrine.

And the next sentence is thus to be englished.

When he (that is, the Sonne) shall deliuer the kingdome to God. That is to say, When he shall cease to reigne, as he reigneth now; to wit, by ruling in the middest of his enemies: the which power he receiued of the Father,&c. For otherwise then thus, the Father reigneth now by the Sonne, and the Sonne shall reigne eternally with the Father, onely after another manner: that is, all enemies being then subdued.

And page, 531. the English of the Latine sentence out of Vrsinus in the margine is this, Christ is inferiour to the Father as well in office as by nature, in that he is man: but not in nature, but by office onely, in that he is God.

And the other sentence out of Augustine, may be englished thus. Christ in that he is God together with the Father, he hath vs in subiection to him: but in that he is our Priest, he together with vs, is subiect to the Father.

Note also that page, 420. a Latine sentence of Master Caluin, is printed in the margine: which should haue beene placed in the page before the english of it, which is there set downe after these words, That is,&c.

THE DOCTRINE OF THE GOSPEL.

II. BOOKE.

Beliefe in God the Sonne.

NOw it is high time, that wee proceede to the doctrine of the same our Christian beliefe in the seconde persone of the most holie Trinitie, God the Sonne. And yet this must wee doe, so as wee beare in minde, that all which followeth (both concerning the Sonne manifested in our nature, and the holy Ghost, and also concerning the Church) it is principally, and in effect nothing else, but a continued, and more full and plaine declaration of the most holy prouidence of God, for the recouery of mankinde out of his fall: and to restore all that doe belong vnto God, to the interest and comfort of his fatherly loue, and of all the inestimable fruites and benefites thereof, for euer againe.

So that (to speake all in a word) it is the vnfolding of the couenant of the Gospell and free grace of God. The which being mentioned immediately after the fall of mankinde, hath beene from time to time more clearely reuealed, vntill the appearance and manifestation of the Sonne of God our Lord Iesus Christ himselfe: by whom, it hath now long since, beene most fully and plainely made knowne.

To this more full and plaine declaration of the couenant of God his free grace, and of the fruite thereof, euen life and saluation by the Sonne of God: Let vs now proceede.

Question. AND first of all, how doe the Articles of our faith teach vs, to professe that we doe beleeue in the Sonne of God, the second Person of the most holy and blessed Trinitie?

Answere. After the profession of our beliefe in God the Father almightie, maker of heauen & earth: they teach euery one of vs to professe likewise, that we beleeue in the second Person God the Sonne, in manner as followeth in these wordes. And in Iesus Christ his onely Sonne our Lord, which was conceiued by the holy Ghost, borne of the Virgin Mary. Suffered vnder Pontius Pilate, &c. From thence shal he come to iudge both the quick and the dead.

God and man in one diuine person of a mediator betwixt God and man.

The order of the Articls which doe concerne him.

They doe so indeede. For these wordes I beleeue, are here to be vnderstood againe, as though we should repeate them, and say thus: And I beleeue in Iesus Christ, &c.

These articles doe teach vs, first more generally and coniointly, to beleeue in the second Person of the most holy & glorious Trinitie, as wel cõcerning his most high and diuine Person, God manifested in the nature of man, as his most high and holy office executed by the same: as the titles here attributed vnto him doe declare; Iesus Christ, the onely Sonne of GOD, our Lord. And then they doe teach vs more particularly, and by piecemeale as wee may say.

First, after what manner, this second Person of the holy Trinitie, God the Sonne, tooke mans nature, and therein did manifest himselfe: namely, in that we professe, that we doe beleeue, that in respect of his humane nature, he was conceiued by the holy Ghost, and borne of the Virgin Mary.

Secondly, they doe teach vs in what order, hee did, in the same his humane nature, execute his Office here vpon earth; specially his high Priesthood, which is one chiefe and principall part thereof: in that, (as it followeth in the Articles of our faith) we professe further, that we beleeue in him, as hauing suffered vnder Pontius Pilate, and as being crucified, dead, buried, and descended into Hell.

Thirdly, they teach vs concerning the same second Person, the Sonne of God, our Lord Iesus Christ: how he hath by his exaltation declared himselfe, to haue obtained of the Father, all whatsoeuer he had humbled himselfe and suffered for before: euen our perfect redemption, iustification, and saluation, in that it followeth, He rose againe the third day, and ascended vp into heauen.

Fourthly, they doe teach vs what our Lord Iesus Christ, the Sonne of God, doth for vs still, to the perpetuall confirming and vpholding, of all that he hath once obtained: in that we professe yet further, that we beleeue, He sitteth at the right hand of God the Father almightie: to wit, as a continuall Mediator and Intercessour, by vertue of his former sufferinges and obedience on our behalfe.

Finally, the Articles of our faith doe teach vs, what the same our Lord Iesus Christ, the Sonne of God, wil doe at the last, for the perfecting of all things; to the end that we and all the elect of God, may haue the full fruition of all the benefites of our redemption for euer: in so much as he is, in this respect, ordained of God, to be the Iudge of the world; and therefore shall come againe from heauen, to giue a finall sentence vpon all people, at the end of the world; according to the wordes of our Beleife, From thence shall he come to iudge both the quicke and the dead.

So then, wee cannot but easily perceiue, that there are many things, of the greatest waight and importance, that which we are to inquire, and consider off, in this part of our beliefe.

And first and foremost, wee haue this singular great mysterie, yea euen a double mysterie laid before vs; in that the Articles of our faith doe giue vs to vnderstand, that we are to beleeue, not onely in the Sonne of God, the second Person of the most holy and glorious Trinitie, considered simply in his Godhead, by relation to the Father, in a distinction of the second Person from the first: but also, as he hath now, by reason of his incarnation, a distinction of nature, in the same his diuine Person, in that he is both God and man.

Great is this Mysterie of godlines, as the Apostle Paul doth worthily call it: that God is manifested in the flesh, iustified in the Spirit, &c. And it is most worthily, with all diligence, and in most holy and humble reuerence, to be inquired into of all Christians.

NOw therefore, let vs henceforth very diligently and with all holy reuerence (as we haue promised) inquire of these most weightie points of our Christian faith: according to our former course, from the ground and warrant of the holy Scriptures of God.

And

Beliefe in God the Sonne both God and man in one diuine Person of a Mediator betwixt God and man.

The Ground and warrant of it.

Question. And first of all, what ground haue you, that we are to beleeue in the second Person of the most holy Trinitie, not onely as he is God, simply considered in his Deitie: but also as he is both God and man, in the vnion of either nature, in one and the same most holy and diuine Person?

Answere Explicatiõ & proofe.

Ans. In the beginning of the 14. chap. of the Euangelist Iohn, we haue an assured groũd, from the testimonie of the same most holy and diuine Person himselfe: who is the very truth, and cannot but giue a most faithfull and true testimonie in all things, whereof hee speaketh.

Rehearse the wordes of the text. Which are they?

He saide to his Disciples: Let not your heart bee troubled: yee beleeue in God, beleeue also in me.

This place doth plainely confirme it vnto vs indeede. For who was he that spake thus to his Disciples, but he that was in the very true nature of man, daily and familiarly conuersant among men: euen one in all thinges like to those vnto whom he spake, as touching his humane nature, sinne onely excepted?

And these wordes of our Sauiour, they were a part of his last Sermon to his Disciples. Wherein he doth before hand, most louingly and sweetly comfort his Disciples, against the trouble and offence of his reprochfull death, and of his bodily departure from them: the which our Sauiour knewe right well, would shake his Disciples faith.

Hee is therefore very earnest in exhorting and incouraging of them, to bee constant both in faith toward him, and also in loue among themselues, &c: as wee shall haue occasion in the particulars, to declare more fully hereafter.

In the meane season, let vs well obserue to our present purpose, that these words of our Saui: to his Disciples, did not onely teach them: but they are also of singular vse to teach vs, and all Christians, euen to the ende of the world: how we are to beleeue in the Sonne of God our Lord and Sauiour. That is to say, euen as we doe beleeue in God the Father himself. For so doth the speech of our Sauiour giue plainely to vnderstand, in that he saith, Yee beleeue in God; beleeue also in me. Or as some read the sentence interrogatiuely, Doe yee beleeue in God? Beleeue also in me. As though hee should say, Howsoeuer you shall see indeede, that I am in respect of my humanitie, mortall, and must shortly dye: yet be ye not discouraged; waite a while: and yee shall see my diuine power more effectually manifested, and confirmed thereby vnto you. In the meane while also, see that ye doe not forget that I am very God, equall to the Father in Godhead, as I haue taught ye heretofore: as well as I haue euery way shewed my selfe to bee very man, like to your selues in the common frailtie of mans nature. And therefore, see that yee cease not to put your trust in me, as in your Sauiour and redeemer. Such is the plaine testimonie of our Sauiour CHRIST concerning his Godhead. And as wee reade also, 1, Iohn. 3. 23. It is the commandement of the Father (saith our Sauiour) that we doe beleeue in the Sonne. And therefore it must needes followe, that he is God. For we must beleeue in no creature, concerning saluation; seeing there is no other Sauiour but God: as GOD himselfe doth very often affirme by his holy Prophet Isaiah. And likewise, in manie other places of the holie Scriptures.

But that wee may see into the ground of this mysterie more cleerely, let vs more particularly inquire after some proofes: first that our Lord Iesus Christ the Sonne of God, the second Person in the blessed Trinitie, is GOD. Secondly, that hee is man. And thirdly, that hee is, in the vnion of the humane nature to the diuine, one diuine Person, both God and man, and so a meet Mediator betwixt God and man.

Question. First therefore, what proofe haue you, that our Lord Iesus Christ the Sonne of God, is very true God?

Eche se in God the Sonne both God and man in one diuine Person of a mediator betwixt God and man.

The groũd & warrant of it.

Anſ. The proofes, as I haue learned, are diuers.

Firſt, thoſe teſtimonies of holy Scripture, which doe attribute the very name of God, as of right belonging vnto him.

Secondly, thoſe that aſcribe the eſſentiall attributes or proprieties of the diuine nature vnto him: ſuch as are eternitie, omnipotencie, infinitenes of wiſdome, perfection of Iuſtice and mercy, and ſuch like.

Thirdly, ſuch as aſcribe the workes of the Deitie vnto him: to wit, the workes of creation, the workes of gouernment generally ouer the whole world, and more ſpecially concerning the Church of God.

Fourthly, ſuch as ſhewe that the ſame duties of ſpirituall worſhip and honour, are due to him, which are onely belonging to God: namely, faith, hope, praier, thankesgiuing, &c.

Theſe proofes doe euidently declare, and very ſufficiently warrant vnto vs, the Deitie and Godhead of our Sauiour Chriſt.

And firſt, that the holy Scriptures doe attribute the name of God, as of right and not in way of reſemblance belonging vnto him: it is manifeſt, by many places of holy Scripture.

Queſtion. Which are they?

Anſwere. In the beginning of the holy Goſpell written by Saint Iohn, it is expreſſy affirmed, that our Sauiour Chriſt (there called the eſſentiall and eternall word) is very God.

And in the end of the firſt Epiſtle of the ſame Euangeliſt, that he is very God and eternall life.

Likewiſe, the Apoſtle Paul, Rom: 9. verſe 5. Chriſt is God ouer all, to be bleſſed for euer. Amen.

Explication and proofe. Theſe are very manifeſt teſtimonies indeede. And there are many other like to theſe, both in the olde Teſtament, and alſo in the newe. Namely, Iſai: 9. 6. The mightie God, as God the Father calleth him. And Pſalm 45. 6. conferred with Heb: 1. 8. O God thy throne is for ever and euer. And Pſalm: 97. verſes 1. 7. conferred with Heb: 1. 6. The Lord (the word is Iehouah) reigneth, &c. And let all the Angels worſhip him. Likewiſe, Pſalm: 102. 25, conferred with Heb: 1. 10. Thou Lord in the beginning haſt eſtabliſhed the earth, &c. And Pſal: 104. 4. conferred with Heb: 1. 7. where, that which is ſaide of the Lord God, in reſpect of his creation, and gouernment of the Angels, is attributed to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, But of this ſort of teſtimonies, wee ſhall haue occaſion to collect them, when wee come to the workes of the Deitie, attributed to our Sauiour Chriſt.

In the meane ſeaſon, this is plaine, both from the one ſort of teſtimonies, as well as from the other: that the name of God, is properly and eſſentially aſcribed to our Sauiour Chriſt.

Now let vs come to ſee ſome proofes, that the eſſentiall attributes of the diuine nature, be likewiſe aſcribed vnto him.

And firſt of all, concerning eternitie:

Queſtion. What proofe haue you, that it is attributed to our Sauiour?

Anſwere. We haue a manifeſt teſtimonie of it, in the 8. chap: of the holy Prouerbes of King Salomon, from the 22. verſe of the chapter, to the 27. Where he doth in a holy figuratiue ſpeech deſcribe the Sonne of God, vnder the name of the wiſedome of God, ſpeaking thus.

The Lord hath poſſeſſed me in the beginning of his way: I was before his workes of olde.

I was ſet vp from euerlaſting, from the beginning, and before the earth.

When there were no depthes was I begotten: when there were no fountaines abounding with waters.

Before the mountaines were ſetteled, and before the hilles was I begotten.

He had not yet made the earth and the open places, nor the height of the duſt in the world.

The

Beleefe in God the Son both God and man in one diuine person of a mediator betwixt God and man.

The ground and warrant of it.

The wisedome here spoken of by Salomon, or rather he which spake & vttered these holy words by the tongue and penne of King Salomon; must needes be the eternall wisedome of God, a Person distinct from the Father: like as Paul the holy Apostle, calleth our Sauiour Christ the Son of God, the wisedome of God. 1. Cor. 1.24. And in the same place also, the power of God, according to the further description of King Salomon in the place before alledged, as we shall haue occasion to repeate afterward.

But for the present, let vs here call to minde, that there are many like testimonies, for proofe of the eternall Godhead of our Sauiour. As Isaiah. chap. 9. 6. The father of eternitie: that is to say, he that being eternall in himselfe, and without beginning, together with the Father, is the author of eternitie to the Church: insomuch as, though it haue a beginning yet it shall neuer haue end. For vnles he were eternall, and without beginning, he could not establish any thing, to haue an eternal continuance. And therfore it is further said Col. 1.17. He is before all things, and in him all things consist. And Hebr. 7. 3. that hee hath neither beginning of his daies, nor end of his life. And Reu. 1.8 that he is Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending: who is, and who was, and who is to come, euen the almightie. The which almightie power of his, is further argued, from the works of the Deitie attributed to him: as we shall haue occasion to obserue anone.

Question. Now what proofe haue you, that our Lord Iesus Christ, the sonne of God, is (in that he is God) infinit in maiestie and greatnes, euery where present, and filling all places?

Answere. This may be perceiued by his owne words, Iohn 3. 13, No man ascendeth vp to heauen, but he that hath descended from heauen, the Sonne of man which is in heauen. And againe, Behold I am with yee alway, vntill the end of the world. Matth. 28.20. And by that which the Apostle saith Ephes. 3.17. Christ dwelleth in the hearts of the faithfull by faith

Explicatiõ and proofe These and such like speeches, may well warrant vnto vs the vbiquitarie, or euery-where-presence of the Deitie of our Sauiour: howsoeuer his humanity, was, and is limited, and circumscribed in his proper place. For otherwise, he would not haue said, that hee was in heauen, while hee was here on earth, &c.

But seeing our Sauiour is not onely infinite in diuine Maiestie and greatnes, but also in all diuine perfection: let vs see some proofes of it, And first more generally, and then in some particulars.

Question. First therefore, what proofe haue you, for the diuine perfection of our Sauiour, more generally?

Answere. In the sixteenth chapter of the Euangelist Iohn, verse 14. our Sauiour himselfe saith thus, speaking there of the holy Ghost, He shall glorifie me: for he shall receiue of mine, and shew it vnto you.

And in the next verse, All things that the Father hath, are mine: therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shew it vnto you.

The Apostle Paul saith likewise, that it pleased the Father that in him should all fulnes dwell. Colos. 1.19. And chap. 2.9. In him dwelleth all the fulnes of the Godhead bodilie.

Explicatiõ & proofe. These places, doe indeed shew the diuine perfection of our Sauiour, generally. And like to these, are many other. Such as we reade Iohn 3.31. He that is come from on high, is aboue all: saith Saint Iohn the Baptist. And before that, chap. 1.27. Whose shooe latchet I am not worthie to vnloose.

Neither did our Sauiour himselfe reproue the Iewes, for vnderstanding his words in such sense: as that thereby hee did make himselfe equall with God. Iohn chap. 5. verse 18. And accordingly, the Apostle Paul saith plainely, that our Sauiour being in the forme of God, thought it no robberie to be equall with God. Phil. 2.6. Whence also it is, that he is described to be the image of the inuisible God. Colos. 1.15. And the brightnes of the glorie of God, and the in- graven forme of his person. Heb. 1. 3. Read also Isaiah chap. 6. 1, 2, 3. conferred with Iohn 12. 41. Where the Euangelist speaking of that glorious vision of Isaiah, wherein was represented the diuine glorie and maiestie of GOD: saith that the holy Prophet sawe therein, the glorie of our Sauiour Christ.

But let vs come to our more particular inquirie. Wherein first; What proofe haue you that there was diuine perfection of wisedome, in the Sonne of God our Lord and Sauiour?

Question.

Antwere. All the treasures of wisedome and knowledge, are hidden in Christ, saith the Apostle Paul Colos. 2. verse 3.

Explicatiō and proofe.

Thus also testified the holie Prophets of former times. As in that eight chapter of the holy Prouerbs, verse twelfe, I wisedome dwell with prudence, and I finde forth knowledge and counsells. Or rather as Tremellius and Iunius haue translated it, Ego sum sapientia cohæreo astutiæ, & scientiam summa solertia præsentem habeo. I am wisedome, I cleaue vnto prudence, and I haue the knowledge of most exact (or expert) skill present with me. Euen the reuerend feare of the Lord, &c. And verse 14. Counsell and euery thing else is mine, prudence is mine, strength is mine, By me Kings reigne, &c. But of this diuine gouernment of our Sauiour, we shall speake afterward. Concerning the diuine perfection of his wisedome, wee may vnderstand it further, by the prophesie of Isaiah chap. 9. 6. Wherein he foretelleth that he should be called Wonderful, Counseller, &c. And more-ouer, by the saying of our Sauiour himselfe, Matth. 11. 27. No man knoweth the Sonne but the Father: neither knoweth any man the Father but the Sonne, and he to whom the Sonne will reueale him. And Iohn chap. 10. verse 15. As the Father knoweth me, so know I the Father. And therefore no maruell, though the same Euangelist saith, chapter 2. verses 24, 25. that hee knew what was in the hearts of men. According also, as the Disciples iointly professed, chapter 16. verse 30. Wee know that thou knowest all things. And as Peter professeth apart by himselfe, (though in the hearing of the rest) Lorde thou knowest that I loue thee. Yea as he addeth further, Lord thou knowest all things. Whereunto finally, accordeth that of our Sauiour himselfe, Reuel. 2. 23. All the Churches shall know that I am he who searcheth the reines and hearts, &c.

Question.

Now what proofe haue you for the diuine perfection of his gracious goodnes and constancie?

Answere. All that the Father giueth me, (saith our Sauiour) shall come vnto me: and he that commeth vnto me, I cast not away. Iohn 6. 37.

And chap. 10. verse 27. My sheepe heare my voyce, and I know them, and they follow me.

And I giue vnto them eternall life, and they shall neuer perish, neither shall any plucke them out of my hand. And chap. 13. 1. Those whom hee loueth, he loueth to the end.

Explication and proofe.

It is true. For that which he performed toward his Disciples, in the continuance of his loue to them: he performeth the same to all, whomsoeuer he beginneth once to manifest his loue vnto. Read also Prouerbs 8. 17. I loue them that loue me, &c. And verses 20, 21. I will fill their treasures. And verse 31, &c. My delight is with the children of men, &c. Likewise Iohn 1, 9. And euery where we may see plainely, that he is of the same minde with the Father, whose gifts and calling are without repentance. Heauen and earth (saith he, Matth. 24. 35.) shall passe away, but my words shall not passe away.

The perfection of the diuine truth, and righteousnes of our Sauiour, may well follow in the next place. What proofe of holy Scripture haue you to this purpose?

Question.

Answere. In the first chap. of the Epistle to the Hebrewes, verse 8. Wher the Apostle sheweth, that these words of the 45. Psalme (O God thy throne is for euer and euer, the scepter of thy kingdome is a scepter of righteousnes) were spoken concerning the Sonne of God our Lord Iesus Christ: and so are a plaine proofe of his most perfect and diuine iustice.

They

Beleefe in God the Son both God and man in one diuine person of a mediator betwixt God and man.

The ground and warrant of it.

They are so indeede. Hereof also, is that a like proofe, which we read Prou. 8. 15 By me Princes decree iustice. And verse 18. With me is righteousnes. And verse 20. I cause to walke in the way of righteousnes, and in the middest of the paths of iudgement. No doubt, hee that prescribeth, guideth, and incourageth others to walke in righteous waies, is righteous himselfe. The same is also faithfull and true. And therefore is worthily called the true light. Iohn 1. 9. And chap. 7. 18. He that seeketh his glorie that sent him, the same is true, and there is no vnrighteousnes in him. This very same, was our faithfull Lord and Sauiour Iesus Christ. And therefore most worthily doth he beare the name of Amen: & of him that is in a matchlesse degree, the faithfull and true witnes, Reuel. 3. 14.

Question. Finally, what proofe haue you, of the most perfect and diuine holines of the Sonne of God our Sauiour?

Answere. He is holy in the same perfection of holines, with the Father and the holy Ghost: according to that holy acclamation of the holy Angells. Isai. 6. 3. Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hostes: the whole earth is full of his glorie.

Explicatiõ and proofe It is true, (as the Euangelist Iohn testifieth chap. 12. 41.) that the holy Prophet both saw Christ, and spake of him at that time. And the same Euangelist in his first Epistle 2. 20. calleth our Sauiour, the holy one. And Reuel. 3. 7. Thus saith he that is holy and true. And Act. 3. 14. The holy and iust one. Yea he is so holy, that he sanctifieth himselfe. Iohn 17. 19.

Thus farre, for the proofe of the Deitie of our Sauiour Christ, by reason that the attributes, proper to the Godhead, are equally ascribed to him, as well as to God the Father.

In the next place, we are likewise to inquire, how the same may be warranted, by such proofes, as ascribe the workes proper to the Deitie vnto him, as being his workemanship. Haue you any proofe for this?

Question.

Answere. Yea, both for the workes of creation, and also of prouidence and gouernment. In eyther of them (as I haue beene taught) the holie Scriptures are verie plentifull.

Explicatiõ & proofe. They are so indeede. Let vs therefore call some of those proofes to minde, for the confirming of our faith in this so excellent a point.

Question. And first, concerning the works of Creation: What proofe haue you, that these are ascribed to our Sauiour Christ, in that he both is, and was before all beginnings, verie true, eternall, and almightie, the most wise, righteous, and holy God?

Answere. Prouerbs 8 27. and so forth, When God prepared the heauens (saith he) I was there, when he set the compasse vpon the deepe.

When hee established the cloudes aboue, when he confirmed the fountaines of the deepe.

When he gaue his decree to the Sea, that the waters should not passe his commandement: when he appointed the foundations of the earth.

Then was I with him as a nourisher, and I was daily his delight, reioycing alway before him.

Explicatiõ & proofe. Vnto this place of the holy Prouerbs, out of the old Testament: agree many other both of the new, and also of the old. Namely, Psalm. 102. 25. as wee reade those words to be applied, Heb. 1. verse 10. Likewise Psal. 104. verse 4, &c. as they are interpreted, Heb. 1. 7. And in the same chap. verse 2. God hath made the worldes by his Sonne.

Moreouer Iohn chap. 1. verse 3. All things were made by him, and without him, was made nothing that was made. And verse 10. The world was made by him.

Likewise 1. Cor. 8. 6. There is but one God, which is the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him: and one Lord Iesus Christ, by whom are all things, & we by him. And Ephes. 3. 9. God hath created all things by Iesus Christ. And Colossi: 1. 16. By him were all things created which are in heauen, and which are in earth, thinges visible, and inuisible, whether they be Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities,

Beliefe in God the Sonne both God and man in one diuine Person of a mediator betwixt God and man.

The Ground and warrant of it.

cipalities, or Powers: all things were created by him, and for him.

Thus wee see, that our Sauiour is intituled to the workes of Creation: whereby also, his almightie power is manifestly argued, as was touched before.

Now likewise (for a further declaration of his infinite wisedome) let vs inquire whether we haue like warrant, that the diuine gouernment of the creatures, doth likewise belong vnto him. And first more generally, *What proofe haue you for it?

" Hitherto (saith our Sauiour himselfe) my Father worketh and I worke. Iohn 5. 17.

And verse 19. Whatsoeuer things the Father doth, the same things doth the Sonne also.

* Question
" Answere.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

Of this sort of proofes, are these that follow. Prou. 8. 31. I take my solace (saith the Sonne of God, the wisedome of the Father) in the compasse of his earth. And Colos. 1. 17. In him all things doe consist. And Heb. 1. 3. Hee beareth vp all things by his mightie word. Thus much for the gouernment of our Sauiour, generally.

Question.

Now let vs come to the particulars. And first concerning the holy Angells. What proofe haue you that our Sauiour Christ the Sonne of God our Lord, hath the gouernment of them?

Answere.

The place before alledged Heb. 1. 7. doeth plainely proue it to be so. For, of the Angells he saith, (that is, God saith by his holy prophet Psal. 104. 4.) Hee maketh the Spirites his messengers, and his ministers a flame of fire.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

That is, God the Sonne, together with the Father, hath created the Angells, and giuen them a kinde of commodious kinde of nature, subtile and piercing quicke and mightie, most like of all creatures, to the nature of the windes, and flaming fire: and accordingly vseth them, as his ministers, to diuerse great and worthy seruices. According to this right, which our Sauiour hath to command them: it is said further, Psalm. 67. 7. (and so it is repeated againe, Heb. 1. verse 6.) Let all the Angells of God worship him. And in the last verse of this chapter. Are they not all ministering Spirites (saith the holy Apostle) sent forth (to wit, by the Sonne of God) for their sakes, which shall be heires of saluation? As though the Apostle should say. It is out of doubt, both that they are such, and also that our Sauiour vseth them, in that their holie seruice. Yea, not onely doth he gouerne the holy Angells, which are willing to obey him: but he also ruleth, yea ouer-ruleth the wicked Angells: we meane, the Diuell, and all vncleane Spirits. According to that which we reade Zech. 3. 1, 2. The Lord said to Satan, (that is, the Sonne of God said) The Lord, (he meaneth God the Father) reproue thee O Sathan: euen the Lord that hath chosen Ierusalem, reproue thee, &c. Read also Matth. 8. 29, 30, 31. Mark. 1. 27 and Luk. 4. 41,

Likewise, he ruleth, yea ouer-ruleth all wicked men; restraining the extreamitie of their wickednes at his pleasure: and iudgeth their rebellions in due season. According to that, Iohn. 5. 22. The Father hath committed all iudgement to the Sonne.

And for the execution of this iudgement, in time to come: see the propheste of it, Psalm. 2. 9. And Psal. 110. 1, 2. and verses 5, 6, 7. And Isai. chap. 11. 4. and chap 42. 3. He shall bring forth iudgement in truth: Or vnto victorie, as Mat. 12. 20. Thus also hath he gouerned in former times: according to that we read in the holy storie, Exod. 23. 21. Read also 1. Cor. 10. 9. Let vs not tempt Christ as some of them also tempted him, and were destroyed of Serpents.

The continuance of the same his gouernment to this day, is to be seene in his restraining and punishing of the wicked.

It shall be most fully accomplished, at the end of the world. Act. chap. 10. verse 42. and chap. 17. verse 31. And Reuel. 1. 18. I haue the keyes of hell and of death.

But let vs come to his gratious gouernment ouer his Church, to the benefit of all such as doe submitte themselues vnder the same: " What proofes haue you for this?

* The proofes are manie and diuerse, according to the manifolde and sondrie benefites of his most gracious and Diuine gouernment.

They are so indeed. For as he doth (together with the Father, and the holie Ghost) call, gather together, and sanctifie his church, institute a holie ministerie, deliuer a diuine Doctrine, worke mightie and miraculous workes, ordaine Sacraments, send forth ministers of the Gospell, giue spirituall gifts, and graces, make them effectuall to inlighten, to regenerate, to guide, to comfort, and to strengthen: and as he doth reueale things to come, heare praiers, giue good Kings and Princes, forgiue sinnes, giue euerlasting life (all which are works of diuine gouernment) so ther are seuerall & expresse proofes in the holie Scriptures, for them also.

" Question.

* Answere Expacatio & proofe.

Let vs therefore come to these seuerall proofes, that wee may call to minde some of them.

Question. And first, what proofe haue you, that the Sonne of God, our Sauiour, doth call, gather into one, and sanctifie the Church, together with the Father, and the holie Ghost?

Answere. In the 49. chapter of Isaiah, verse 6. Hee is in this respect, called the light of the Gentiles, and the saluation of God, vnto the end of the world.

Explicatiõ & proofe. That is, ouer the face of the whole earth, and from the one end therof to the other. Read also, Psal: 110. 2. 3. And chapt: 3. verse 3. And Iohn. 10. 16. Other sheepe haue I also, which are not of this foulde, them also must I bring, and they shall heare my voice: and there shalbe one sheepe folde, and one Sheep-heard.

Herevnto also tendeth that prophesie of Caiphas, chapt: 11. 51. 52. And Ephes: 5. 25. 26. Christ loued the Church & gaue himself for it, that he might sanctifie it. &c.

Question. Let vs come to the next point. What proofe haue you, that our Sauiour, did by diuine autoritie, institute a holie ministerie?

Answere In the 15. chapter of Iohn, verse 16. Ye haue not chosen me (saith our Sauiour to his Disciples) but I haue chosen you, and ordained you, that ye goe and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remaine.

Explicatiõ & proofe. This fruit, is the fruit of that ministerie, which our Sauiour hath ordained, to that end: & whervnto, he made especiall choice of those his Disciples.

The ordination is more plainely autorized, and that not onely for the Apostles times, but also, to all posteritie: Matth: cha: 28. 18. 19. 20. And Ephes: 4: 8. &c.

Question. Nowe what proofe haue you, that the doctrine which hee deliuered, is Diuine, and that euen from his owne autoritie?

Answere. Matth: 7. the last verse of the chapter. He taught (saith the Euangelist) as one hauing autoritie and not as the Scribes.

Explicatiõ & proofe. And not onely so, but with greater autoritie, then euer any other did: whether Moses, or any of the Prophets: person compared with person, or calling with calling: so that well might the officers say, and professe, Iohn: 7. 46. Neuer man spake like this man. For the which, read further, Heb: chap: 1. vers: 2. &c. And chapt: 3. verses. 6. 11. &c. and chapt: 12, 25. 26. &c.

It would be too long for you, to answere to all the points, and to bring forth proofes for them. I will therefore more briefly recite them.

That our Sauiour did, by diuine power, work his miracles, read Matth: 12. 28. and Luke 11. 20. And therefore are these workes of our Sauiour, called the workes of the Father. Iohn: 5. 36. and chapt: 10. verse 25. and verses, 37. 38. And chap: 14. 10. The Father that dwelleth in mee, he doth the workes. And Luke: 6. 19. Vertue went out of him, and hee healed all. And chapt. 8. 8. 24. 25. Hee rebuked the winde, and the water, and they obey him.

But of the miracles more afterward,

Beleefe in God the Sonne both God and man in one diuine Person of a mediator betwixt God and man.

The ground & warrant of it.

That he ordained Sacramēts, not as Moses by faith & as a seruant only, Heb: 11. 28. but by diuine authoritie: it is euident, in that he commanded baptisme, in his owne name: & appointed the holie Supper in a memoriall of himselfe.

That he sendeth forth Ministers of the Gospell, by his owne autorite: it is euident in the place before alledged, Matth: 28.19. &c. Read also before that, chapt: 10. 5. &c: and verse 16. &c. And chapt: 23. 24.

That he furnisheth the same his ministers of the Gospell, with spirituall gifts and graces: wee may see it in the first institution, Matth: 10.1 & verses 7. 8. And Luke 21.15. I will giue you a mouth and wisedome, wher-against all your aduersaries shall not be able to speake, nor resist. And Iohn: 20. verses 22. 23. Receiue the holy Ghost, &c. Experience also, sheweth it to be so, euen to this day: though not in so extraordinarie, and miraculous a manner: according to that, Ephes: 4. 11. 12. &c.

That our Sauiour Christ doth, by the ministerie and preaching of his Gospell, effectuallie inlighten, regenerate, guide, comfort, and strengthen the hearers of it: the same place last alledged, may be a notable proofe of it. Reade also Acts 26.18. And the place before alledged, Iohn. 15. ver. 16. Daylie experience confirmeth it, from the beginning of the institution of the Ministerie of the Gospell, to this daye. Marke, 16.20. And 1. Corinth: 14.3. Hee that prophesieth, speaketh vnto men, to edifying, and to exhortation, and to comfort. And 2. Tim: 3. 16. 17.

That our Sauiour had a diuine knowledge of things to come: the thinges that he fore-told, while he was here on earth, doe sufficientlie testifie. Matth: 24. and chapt: 25. And after his Ascention, Acts: 9. verses 15. 16. And Reuelat: 1. verse 1. And chapt: 22. 16. I Iesus haue sent my Angel, to testifie vnto you, these things in the Churches, &c.

That the same our Sauiour heareth praiers; it is euident, not onely in that God heareth vs, praying in his name, like as we are also baptized in his name: but also, because faithfull Christians are described to bee such, as make their praiers vnto him. 1. Corinth: 1. verse 2.

That he giueth good Kings and Princes, for the defence and comfort of his Church: Read Prou: 8. 15. 16. By me Kings reigne, and Princes decree iustice. By me Princes rule, and the Nobles, and all Iudges of the earth.

That he forgiueth sinnes, it is likewise euident, in that Baptisme (the seale and assurance of forgiuenesse) is ministred in his name. For so it is expreslie said, that Baptisme is appointed of God, to that end. Mark: 1.4. Act: 2.38. & ch: 22.16. It is likewise euident, Matth: 9.6. The Sonne of man hath auteritie to forgiue sinnes in earth. Now having had that power on earth, no doubt but hee hath it in heauen. Moreouer, Iohn 1.12. He giueth power to such as beleeue in him, to be the Sonnes of God. And cha: 8. 34. &c. Whosoeuer committeth sinne, is the seruant of sinne, &c. But if the Sonne make you free, ye shalbe free in deede. And Act: 7. 60. Stephen praieth to the Lord Iesus, that hee would not lay the sinne of his persecutors to their charge.

Finallie, that our Sauiour hath power to giue euerlasting life, hee himselfe assureth vs, Iohn 5. 21. saying: As the Father raiseth vp the dead, & quickeneth them, so the Sonne quickeneth whom he will. And chapt: 6. 40 I will raise him vp at the last day. And chapt: 10. 27. 28. My sheepe heare my voice, &c. And I giue them eternall life. Reade also, Philipp: 3. 20. 21.

Now therfore, seeing all these works, both of creation, and also of gouernment, generallie of the whole world, & more speciallie ouer the church: with all the gratious prerogatiues, and gratuities thereof (which belong onely to the power & bountie of the Godhead) are ascribed to our Sa: Christ, the Sonne of God, as well as to the Father: and seeing also, (as was declared before this) that both the essentiall name of God, & all the attributes of the Godhead, are likewise ascribed vnto him: it is out of all question, that hee is (together with the Father, and the holie Ghost) verie true and eternall God.

The

Beliefe in God the Sonne both God and man in one diuine person of a Mediator betwixt God and man.

The ground and warrant of it.

The same may be furthermore confirmed, because (as was answered) the same duties of diuine worship, and honour, belong to the Sonne, which are due to the Father.

But we will deferre to speake of this proofe, vntill we come to speake of the Duties, according to the appointed course, and order of our inquirie.

IT followeth therefore, heere in the next place, that (according to your answere, in our entrance into this discourse) you shew some proofes, that our Saviour Christ, beeing thus very true God, is likewise verie true Man. And also, that hee beeing both God and Man, in one diuine Person, is a mediator betwixt God and Man. What proofe haue you for these pointes?

Question.

Answere. Hee is in respect of his humanitie oftentimes called the Sonne of man: yea he so speaketh of himselfe, as it is vsually recorded in the holie Gospell. The same also is plainely testified Iohn. 1. 14. Galat: 4. 4. 5. Philip: 2. 6. 7. 1. Timoth: 3. 16. &. 2. 8. & 1. Iohn. 1. 1. 2. 3.

And furthermore, the Apostle Paul, in his first epistle to Tim: chapter 2. verse 5. writeth thus, There is one God and one Mediatour betweene God and men, which is the man, Christ Iesus.

Explicatiō and proofe.

These are verie plaine proofes: so that wee neede not at this time, make anie longer staye vppon these pointes. And the rather, because much of that which hath beene saide alreadie hath prooued them; and all that followeth to be spoken, concerning the articles of this parte of our beliefe; touching the Sonne of God, the second Person of the holie Trinitie: will be in effect nothing else, but a further, and more full clearing of them.

And first, the titles expreslie attributed to our Saviour Christ, in the articles of our beliefe: will bring great light vnto them.

Question.

Wherefore, let vs first of all consider of them. Which are they?

Answere. They are these foure. First, Iesus. Secondlie, Christ. Thirdlie the Sonne of the Father. Fourthlie, our Lord.

Explication and proofe.

So in deede, doe the wordes of the Creede followe, And in Iesus Christ, his onely Sonne our Lord. That is to say, As I beleeue in God the Father Almightie, &c. So doe I likewise, beleeue in Iesus Christ his onely Sonne our Lord.

In the which titles, there are two principall things to be considered.

First, the most diuine Person, consisting both of the diuine and humane nature: secondlie, the most holie office of the same person.

These first two, Iesus, and Christ, may be vnderstood more specially to concerne his office. The former, from the effect, which is saluation: the latter, from the cause, in that hee is called Christ, or the annointed of God: as will further appeare, when we come to the interpretation, & meaning of the titles. Of the which, the other two may be vnderstood, as more speciallie to concerne his Person. The which, in regard of the most high & Diuine excellencie of it, considered by a relation, to the first person of the holie Trinitie) is called, The onely Sonne of God: & in a relation to his Church, is called our Lord: as one hauing the soueraignetie ouer it, in speciall manner, and of most due right, belonging vnto him.

It is most true, that there are many other Titles vsed in the holie Scriptures, to describe vnto vs, what manner of one our Saviour is. And namely Isai: ch: 9. 6. there are fiue more set downe then are here mentioned: of the which also, wee haue partly considered. Wonderfull, Counseller, the mightie God, the euerlasting Father (not in person, nor naturallie, but in a metaphoricall, or borowed phrase of speech, to note his tender and constant care of his Church) & the Prince of peace. The perpetuitie, and eternitie, of whose Kingdome, is likewise laied forth, very notablie, in the next verse. In which respect also, in the 19. chapter of the Reuel: verse 16. Hee is called. The King of Kings, and the Lord of Lordes. And in the same chapter, verse 13. The worde of God.

And

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who is Iesus.

The grāde & warrāt of it.

And there are diuerse other, in the three first chapters of the same booke, as wee haue partlie seene before. The which titles also, haue bene spoken of at large, in a Sermon, to that purpose. The vse of which doctrine, that we may learne to applie to our selues, let vs diligentlie consider what M. Caluin writeth verie notablie to this ende. So often (saith hee) as any doubt ariseth, and wee can see no issue, &c. Let it be a sufficient reliefe, that he is Wonderfull, and hath both waies and power to helpe, aboue all that we can conceiue or beleeue. When counsell shal faile vs: let vs call to minde that he is the counseler. When strength faileth, that he is mightie, and strong. Whensoeuer wee are assalted with renewed seares, and shall see manie deaths at hande, let vs staye our selues vpon his Eternitie, whereof hee is not without cause called the Father, and hereby let vs learne to alaye all the miseries of this life. And against all inward tempests & troubles of conscience, let vs remember that Christ is the Prince of Peace, who cā easily calme all troubles, & defend vs against Satan & hell itself. But let vs now make our speciall inquiry, cōcerning these foure, which are mētioned in the articles of our beliefe, & that according to our appointed order.

Question. First therefore, what ground haue you, that the Sonne of God, is to be beleeued in, as in Iesus?

Answere. In the first chapter of the Euangelist Luke, verse 31. the Angel Gabriel sent from God, to the virgin Marie, saith thus vnto her. Thou shalt conceiue in thy wombe, and beare a Sonne, and thou shalt call his name IESVS.

Explication and proofe. The reason why this name was thus appointed by God, to be giuē to our Sauiour: was because he should in the most powerfull effect, answere to his name. Yea, because hee had already bene such a one to his church, frō the beginning. For all saluation was alwaies through him alone. And therfore also, the Angel was sent likewise, to Ioseph afterward, with the same message: saying, Thou shalt call his name Iesus. Matth: 1. 21. This title is most vsuall in all the writings of the newe Testament: speciallie in those of the Euangelists.

Question. The second title is Christ. What ground haue you for that?

Answere. In the 41. v: of the 1. ch: of the Euangelist Iohn, We haue found the Messias (saith Andrew) which is (as the Euangelist saith) the Christ. And in his 1. epi: ch: 2. 22. Who is a liar (saith the same Euangelist) but he that denieth that Iesus is Christ?

Explicatiō & proofe. Messias is in deed, by interpretation out of the Hebrew language into Greek, Christ. What it is in ours, we shall see anone.

This title also, is verie frequentlie, and often, ioyned with Iesus, and with the fourth title Lord. As Luk: 2. 11. A Sauiour, which is Christ the Lord. And Act: 2. 36. Let all the house of Israell know for a suretie, that God hath made him both Lord and Christ, this Iesus I say whom yee haue crucified. And euery where, in the Epistles of the holie Apostles. Sometime with Iesus alone, as in the two former epistles of Iohn. And sometime singled alone by it selfe, as 2. Cor: ch: 5. And 1. epi: of Peter, diuerse times. But in his 2. epist: conioined after this sorte, Our Sauiour Iesus Christ. And our Lord Iesus Christ.

Question. Nowe in the third place, what ground of holie Scripture, can you alledge for the third title, Sonne of God?

Answere. Wee haue two sortes of Testimonies.

The one, of such as doe intitle him to be the Sonne of God, without any further addition; though in a singular manner: so as no other beside him, is the Sonne of God.

The other sorte, is of such as doe call him, more fullie and expresse, the onely begotten Sonne of the Father: and his owne Sonne, and his Sonne singularlie beloued.

Explicatiō & proofe. There are two sorts of them indeede. And these latter, may well be accounted an interpretation of the former.

Question. Let vs call to minde some examples of either sort.

Which are they of the first sort?

Answere. In the first ch: of S. Luke, the Angel telleth the Virgin Marie, that the childe which she should conceiue in her wombe, & beare should be great: and that hee should be called the Sonne of the most high: verse 32. And againe. vers: 35. That holie thing which shalbe borne of thee, shalbe called the Sonne of God, saith the holie Angel.

The

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who is the onely Sonne of the Father.

The Ground and warrant of it.

The reason why he must be so called, was no doubt, because hee answereth to his name, and is so in most perfit truth. And thus Acts: 9. 20. the Apostle Paul, immediatlie after his miraculous conuersion from his sin, after his calling to the office of Apostleship, preached in the Synagogues of the Iewes, that Christ was the Sonne of God. And the Apostle Iohn: 1. epi: 3. 8. For this purpose appeared the Sonne of God, that he might loose the works of the Diuell. And ch: 4 vers. 14. 15. We haue seene, & doe testifie, that the Father sent the Sonne, to be the Sauiour of the worlde. Whosoeuer confesseth that Iesus is the Sonne of God, in him dwelleth God, and he in God. And chapt: 5. verse 5. Who is it that ouercommeth the world, but he that beleeueth that Iesus is the Sonne of God? yea, in the same chapter by an often repetition, about eight or nine times.

And namely verse 13. These things haue I written to you, that beleeue in the name of the Sonne of God, that ye may knowe that ye haue eternall life, and that ye may beleeue in the name of the Sonne of God. And in the Gospell, according to the same Euangelist, chapter 1. 14. Iohn the Baptist saw and bare recorde, that Christ whom hee baptized, was the Sonne of God. And vers: 49. Thou art the Sonne of God, saith Nathanaell. And chapter 3. 17. God sent not his Sonne into the world, that hee should condemne the world; but that the worlde through him might be saued.

And againe, verses 35. 36. And chap: 5. from the 19. verse, to the 28. about ten seuerall times. And chap: 8. 16. and chap: 9. 35. 36. 37. and chapt: 20. 31. These things are written (saith the Euangelist) that yee might beleeue that Iesus is that Christ, the Sonne of God: and that in beleeuing, yee might haue life, through his name. Yea, this is the ende of all Preaching also, and of Baptizing. &c. Matth: 28. 19. And Ephes: 4. 11. 12. 13. Till wee all meete together, in the vnitie of Faith and knowledge of the Sonne of God. And no maruell, seeing Christ the Sonne of the liuing God, (as Peter professed, being so taught of the Father,) is the rocke and foundation of the Church. Matth: 16. verses 16. 17. 18.

In these, and in manie other places, our Sauiour is called the Sonne of God, without any further addition.

Question. Let vs nowe likewise call to minde, some of the latter sorte: Which may they be?

Answere In the first chapter of the Euangelist Iohn, verse 14. The word (saith hee) was made flesh, and dwelt among vs, and wee sawe the glorie thereof, as the glorie of the onely begotten Sonne of the Father, full of grace and truth.

And verse 18. No man hath seene God at any time: the onely begotten Sonne, who is in the bosome of the Father, hee hath declared him.

Explicatio & proofe. Here indeede is a further addition, which sheweth more plainely, that our Sauiour, is so the Sonne of God, as no other is: that is to say, his naturall Sonne, and therfore verie God, of the substance of the Father. So that this Filiation, as we may say, or comming to be a Sonne, is not by creation, nor by begetting, or adoption in time, but by an eternall, & beginninglesse generation.

And there are other testimonies, of this sort: as Iohn 3. 16. and verse. 18. and 1 epist: chap: 4. 9. and Hebr: 1. 5. 6.

The same thing is likewise confirmed by this, that our Sauiour is called, Gods owne Sonne, as Rom: 8. 32. Hee spared not his owne Sonne, saith the Apostle. And our Sauiour himselfe, Iohn: 5. 17. 18. affirmeth in like manner, that God is his owne Father, or properlie and singularlie his Father, Patera idion.

Finallie, it is euident by this other addition, that hee is the beloued Sonne of God. as Matth: 3. verse 17. God the Father saith at the baptisme of our Sauiour, This is my beloued Sonne, in whom I am well pleased. And againe ch: 17. at the trāsfiguration, This is my beloued Sonne, in whom I am wel pleased: heare ye him.

Question. The fourth title is yet behinde. What ground haue you therfore, that this, the onely begotten Sonne of God, is our Lord?

Beleefe in God the Sonne, who is our Lord.

The grõd & warrant of it.

"King Dauid, long before the appearing of the Sonne of God in the flesh, called him by the Spirit of Prophesie, his Lord: Psal. 110. in the beginning of the Psal: The Lorde (saith hee) said to my Lord, sit thou on my right hand, &c.

" Answere.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

That king Dauid spake these words, of the Sonne of God: our Sauiour himselfe declareth, Matth: 22. 41. &c: as though he should haue said, The Lord, Iehouah, God the Father, said to my Lord Iesus Christ the Sonne of God, &c. Whom Dauid knewe before to be appointed of God, to appeare in the nature of man. Read also Iohn 20. 28. the profession of Thomas, Thou art my Lord, and my God. And Acts 10. 36. Christ is Lord of all. And 1. Corint: 1. 1. 2. 3. and chapt: 2, 8. and Philip: 2. 19. But the places are aboue repetition. For he is called the Lord, or our Lord, as often almost, as mention is made of him: speciallie in the Epistles of the holie Apostles.

Thus much therefore, in the first place, concerning the groundes of this part of the profession of our beliefe in IESVS CHRIST, the onely SONNE OF GOD, OVR LORD.

NOwe in the second place, according to our order of inquirie, let vs come to the meaning of these Titles.

Question. And first, what is the meaning of the Title IESVS?

Answere. IESVS, is a word of the Hebrewe language, all one in signification, with our englishe word, Sauiour.

Explication and proofe.

This title therfore, as was touched before: describeth the office of the Sonne of God, both God and Man, in the person of a Mediatour betweene God & man, from the most gracious effect and benefit therof: which is, that hee deliuereth and saueth vs. As Ephes: 5. 23. Christ is the head of the Church, and the Sauiour of his bodie. This is the verie ende, wherefore hee came into the world, as we read, Iohn 3, 17. God sent not his Sonne into the world, that he should condemne the world, but that the world might be saued through him. And 1. epi: 4. 14. We haue seene, & do testifie, that the Father sent the Sonne to be the Sauiour of the worlde. Likewise Acts 16. 31. Beleeue in the Lord Iesus Christ (say Paul & Silas, to the keeper of the prison) and thou shalt be saued, and thine housholde. And 2. Pet: 1, 1. And in other places of that epistle, the Greeke word, signifying a Sauiour, is ioyned with the Hebrewe word Iesus, for interpretations sake, as wee say in our tongue, Iesus our Sauiour. See chapter, 1. verse 11. and chap: 2. 20. and chapt: 3. 18. The excellencie of which benefit of saluation, hath bene heretofore, more at large described vnto vs, in the beginning of this second part of our Treasurie.

Nowe therefore, onely for a word of remembrance, and for reference sake, vpon this so iust an occasion.

Question. What is that, from the which our Sauiour doth deliuer and saue vs?

Answere. Hee saueth vs from our sinnes: as well touching the offence thereof against God, as the guiltinesse of our owne consciences: and also concerning the most woefull and euerlasting punishment, both of soule and bodie, due vnto them.

Finallie, our Sauiour saueth and deliuereth vs, from the power and dominion, both of them, and also of the Diuell.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

So in deed doth the Angel of the Lord, interprete this name or Title Iesus, Matth. 1. 21. Thou shalt (saith hee to Ioseph) call his name IESVS: for hee shall sane his people from their sinnes.

The signification of the word, is yet of a more large extent, as hath bene declared heretofore: from whence, let vs call to minde, that which is furthermore to be considered, for the more full vnderstanding of this pointe.

Question. Wee hast nowe to the Title CHRIST. What is the meaning hereof?

Answere. The word Christ, beeing a Greek word, of the same signification with the Hebrew word Messiah: it signifieth in our language, the anointed: & noteth vnto vs, the diuine ordination & calling of our Sauiour Christ: to the performãce of the office of Mediatourship in the nature of Man, for the effecting of the saluation of vs, & of his whole Church.

That

Beleefe in God the Son: who is the Christ. Explicatio & proofe.

That this is so: it may be remembred, from that which was alledged a while since, out of Iohn: chapt: 1. 41. And wee may see it likewise, Isai: 6. 1. &c. and Luke 4. 18. &c. Where our Sauiour speaketh of his calling, to the office or function of his most holie Propheſie.

The like is testified, concerning his calling, to his most holie Priest-hood, and kinglie dignitie: Hebr: chapt: 5. verses 4. 5. 6. No man taketh this honour vnto himselfe, but hee that is called of God, as was Aaron.

So likewise Christ tooke not to him selfe this honour, to be made the high Priest, but he that said vnto him, Thou art my sonne, this day begate I thee, he gaue it him. As hee also in other place speaketh, (as the same Apostle addeth) Thou arte a Priest for euer, after the order of Melchisedech: that is, in a kinglie order.

So then, in our Sauiour Christ, by this his three-folde office, and dignitie, of Prophetship, Priest-hood, and Roiall principalitie: is the full accomplishment, of all that was figured vnder the law, by the materiall annointing of some of the holie Prophets, and more vsuallie, of the high Priestes, and Kings of Iudah. And therefore it is written, that though our Sauiour was not annointed with outward oyle, as they were: yet hee was spirituallie, and by a diuine consecration, sanctified of God, to a more singular worke, then would be performed of any one, or of all the most holie Prophetes, Priests, and Kings, that euer were: & accordingly, is said to haue bene annointed with the oile of gladnesse, aboue all his fellowes. Psalm: 45. 7. and Hebr: 1. 9. Of the which, more, when wee shall come to speake of the comfortes of faith, concerning this point.

In the meane season, it shall be good, to our present purpose, to consider the reason, why our Sauiour Christ was thus annointed, to this three-folde office.

Question. What therfore, was the reason of it?

Answere. He was ordained of God, to be a Prophet: to teach and instruct vs in the perfect knowledge, of the good will of his heauenly Father toward vs, whereof wee are naturallie, and of our selues, altogether ignorant.

Hee was ordained an high Priest, to make satisfaction for our sinne, by his death, and by prayer to obtaine pardon for vs miserable sinners.

He was ordained a spirituall King, and the Prince of our saluation: to maintaine & vp-holde the same, against the power of the Diuell, and what-soeuer else would hinder it: seeing wee poore fraile and feeble creatures, haue of our selues, no power at all, to resist them.

Explicatiõ & proofe. Thus then, that most high and holie office of our Sauiour Christ, beeing an office of wisedome, holinesse, and strength: it is most gratiouslie fitted, and disposed of God, for the reliefe of all our necessities.

The principall wherof (as you haue truely answered) are ignorance, wickednes, and weakenes, in our selues. Yea, not onely before wee are called, to the knowledge and faith of the truth, which is in Christ: but euen when wee are come to the highest measure of that grace, which God bestoweth vpon vs; further then it pleaseth him, in, and through our Lord Iesus Christ, to strengthen and vp-holde vs. According to that which wee read. 1. Pet: 1. 2. 5. and chapt: 2. 24. 25. And 2. Cor: 12. 8. 9. And Iohn: 15. 5. Where our Sauiour Chr: himselfe affirmeth as much, saying: Without me, ye can doe nothing. Where note that hee speaketh of his most choise Disciples.

Thus much for the interpretation of the Title of Christ.

Question. Now what is the meaning of this, that the same our Sauiour Christ, is called the Sonne of God: yea his onely begotten, and most deare Sonne?

Answere. This sheweth plainelie, the most high excellencie of his Person, in that beeing the naturall Sonne of God: hee cannot but be verie God, of the same substance and God-head with the Father.

The meaning of it.

Beliefe in God the Sonne who is the onely Sonne of God, our Lord

The meaning of it.

It sheweth also, the excellencie of his humane nature, by reason of the personall vnion thereof, with his Diuine nature: not onely infinitely aboue any the most excellent men, but also euen aboue all the holie Angells of heauen.

Finallie, it doth most clearely shewe vs the reason, why the obedience & sufferings of our Sauiour, are of most infinit merit before God for vs, and the whole Church?

Explicatiõ and proofe.

It is verie true: and euen of it selfe most cleare, to such as haue in them any light of the Spirit of God, to discerne of spirituall and heauenlie things, spiritually. For what excellencie may be compared to the excellencie of the Sonne of God? Yea of him that is the naturall Sonne of God: according to the excellent declaration in the first ch: of the Epistle to the Hebrews, euen from the beginning to the end. And againe ch: 2. 5. &c. And ch: 3. 6. & ch: 12. 24 25. &c.

But this hath beene sufficientlie confirmed, in the proofes of the Deitie of the Sonne of God, collected and set downe before.

Question.

Nowe in the last place, what is the meaning of this: that Iesus Christ, the onely Sonne of God, is called our Lord?

Answere.

This noteth the absolute soueraignety of his diuine autoritie ouer all creatures, in so much as all were created by him: but in speciall maner ouer his Church, by the right of that redemption, whereby he hath recouered, and purchased it to himselfe, to the eternall saluation thereof.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

It is true, according to that 2. Pet: 2. 1. where the Apostle calleth him, the Lord that hath bought vs. And that not with siluer and golde, but with his most precious blood, as the same Apostle hath taught before. 1. epi: 1. verses, 18. 19. Read also. Cor: 6. 20. and ch: 7. 23. Acts: 20. 28. Read also Iohn: 3. 35. and chapt: 17. 2. Matth: 28 18. Rom. 14. 9. And Mal: 3, 1.

Now therfore, from that which hath bene said, for the interpretation of the particular titles, wee may the more easilie perceiue, what our meaning must be in the whole: when we professe, that we doe beleeue in Iesus Christ, the onelie Sonne of God our Lord?

Question.

What is the summe of all saide together?

Answere.

The meaning of all, is briefly thus much: that wee are to beleeue in the second Person of the most holie and glorious Trinitie, the onelie begotten & naturall Sonne of God; that he beeing verie true God and eternall life, coessentiall & coequall with the Father, touching his diuine nature: hath taken our humane nature, (and in this respect, inferiour to the Father) was from all eternitie, appointed of God, to be in one, and the same Person, verie God, and verie Man, the perfect Mediator, Redeemer, and Sauiour, of the whole Church. Of the which, euerie faithfull Christian is to beleeue himselfe to be a member, and that our Lord Iesus Christ, the Sonne of God, is particularlie, his Redeemer and Sauiour, as well as any other.

Explication and proofe.

It is true. Euerie true Christian must so beleeue, as he may say in some measure of truth, with Iob, I beleeue that my Redeemer liueth. And with the Apostle Paul, I am perswaded, that neither death, nor life, &c: shalbe able to separate vs from the loue of God, which is in Christ Iesus our Lord. Rom: 8. 38. 39.

The reason why euerie Christian must in some measure beleeue this, is, for that euerie one must liue by his owne faith: according to that Hab: 2. Rom: 1. 17.

The particulars of this answere, haue beene alreadie prooued: and therefore it is not necessarie, that wee should set downe the proofes againe at this time.

Onelie, let vs here summarilie call to minde, and consider thus much in this place: that beside the mysterie of the second Person of the holie Trinitie, distinct from the Persons, both of the Father, & also of the holie Ghost, and yet remaining neuertheles one in nature and substance with them: wee haue this other great mysterie, to know: & to beleeue, concerning the same, the Sonne of God, our blessed Lord and Sauiour; that ther is a Personall vnion of the humane nature to the Diuine: according to that holy acclamation of the Apostle Paul, Great is the mysterie of godlines, God manifested in the flesh, &c.

Con-

The ground and warrant of it.

Beleefe in God the Son both God and man in one euine person of a meadiator betwixt God and man.

Concerning the which mysterie, we haue seene also, that it is religiously to be obserued: that like as the distinction of the Persons in the holy Trinitie, hindereth not the vnitie of the blessed Godhead, (though euery one doe entierly and constantly retaine their incommunicable properties) so neither doeth the distinction of the two natures in our Sauiour Christ the Sonne of God, (in that he is both God and man) hinder the vnitie of the Person of the Mediator: albeit either nature remaine entier in it selfe, and do hold their seuerall properties, incommunicably agreeing to either nature, without all commixtion or confusion, or any other inconuenience. For the diuine nature of our Sauiour, abideth alwaies infinite, incomprehensible, almighty, knowing all things, euery where present, &c. But the humane nature (how highly soeuer it be dignified and aduanced by the Personal vnion with the diuine) yet it is still both finit in substance, and also in euery qualitie or vertue: yea euen since it hath beene glorified in heauen; in that it is not, neither can be euery where present, neither almightie, &c. as the diuine nature is.

Neuertheles, we are yet againe to keepe in minde; that although either nature doe abide for euer, thus distinct: yet the Person is, neuer but one and the same, neither dis-ioyned in nature, nor seperate in the least distance of place, since the verie first moment, that the Personall vnion was made in the wombe of the Virgin. For whersoeuer the humanity is, hath beene, or shall be: there the diuine nature is, hath beene, and will be alwaies present: though the humane nature neuer could, nor can be present in all places at once, as the Godhead is, as our Sauiour himselfe giueth to vnderstand: Matth. 26. 11. conferred with chap. 28. 20. And Reuel. 2. verse 1.

And furthermore, let vs in no wise forget, that (without any contradiction to distinction of the natures; and onely to note the most neare and inseperable cõiunction of them, in the vnion of one and the same Person) diuers speeches are vsed in the holy Scriptures, which though as they may seeme, somewhat cõfusedly; yet in truth they do very elegantly attribute the same things to either nature, by an vnproper, or tropicall communicating of the proprieties: as learned Diuines haue of ancient times heretofore, and euen to this day taught and obserued. Such as are, Iohn 8. 58. Where our Sauiour himselfe saith thus, Before Abraham was, I am. And chap. 17. 5. I had glory with the Father, before the world was. And Colos. 1. 15. Where the Apostle affirmeth, that our Sauiour was before all things, and that all things doe consist by him. And such like. The which, though they were spoken concerning our Sauiour, since the time that he had taken the humane nature; yet they did properly belong to him, in respect of his eternall and diuine nature.

Tropus, Veteribus idiomatum communio, dictus,

On the other side, where it is said, that our Sauiour (though very true God, and equall with the Father) is notwithstanding, his Fathers seruant, and his inferiour, (and therefore not to speake of himselfe, nor to doe his owne will, to haue increased in wisedome, and stature, and to haue beene seene, and handled, &c.) these things doe properly belong to his humanitie. For his Godhead is inuisible, neither can be handled, nor admitteth any increase, either in substance, or quality, or any way else.

And yet, both these attributes, and also the former, doe truely agree to one and the same Person of a Mediator: as it is yet more plaine, from those actions and effects, which are ioyntly ascribed to either nature, though more proper to the one of them. As Iohn 3. 13. Where, our Sauiour being here on the earth, speaketh neuertheles as if he had beene then bodily in heauen: though he was at that time, onely in respect of his Godhead, there, No man (saith he) ascendeth vp to heauen, but he that hath descended from heauen, the Sonne of man which is in heauen. Like to this, is that of the Apostle Paul: Ephes. 4. 10. He that descended is the same that ascended far aboue all heauens, that he might fill all things. For to speake properly, neither did the humanity descend from heauen, but onely ascended vp thither: neither did the Deitie either descend or ascend. How then?

Beliefe in God the Son, euen in Iesus Christ, the onely Sonne of God our Lord.

The meaning of it.

The Godhead is said to descend, in that it manifested it selfe here on earth, in the Personall vnion, with the humane nature: according to that, Iohn, chap. 1. verse 14. The word was made flesh, and dwelt among vs: and wee saw the glorie thereof, as the glorie of the onely begotten Sonne of the Father, full of grace and truth. And againe, 1. Iohn, chap. 1. verse 1. Wee haue heard, wee haue seene, wee haue handled the word of life. Neither can the Godhead be said to ascend, otherwise, then by a speciall declaration of the presence of the Deitie, in the same Personal vnion with the bodie being ascended, and in the ascension of it, and before it did ascend. And yet (as wee see) the same action is iointlie attributed, (as one would thinke) to either nature of the same Person. So is also one and the same effect: as Act. chap. 20. verse 28. God hath purchased his Church with his owne blood. And 1. Cor. chap. 2. verse 8. The Lord of glorie was crucified. Though we know, that (to speake properly) onely the bodie of our Sauiour was crucified, (that is, was fastened to the crosse) and that thereupon, it shed the blood out of it. And yet the vertue and efficacie thereof (to wit, redemption) came by reason of the merit and worthines of the Person that suffered, who was not onely man, but also very true God.

Institut. lib. 2. cap. 14. Sect. 4.

This obseruation (as saith Master Caluin notably well) shall be to no small vse, for the cutting off of many doubts: if the Readers doe wisely apply it. For it is strange (saith he) how much, such kinde of speeches, doe trouble the vnskilfull, yea some not vtterly vnlearned, which they see to be attributed to Christ, and yet be not verie fitly agreeing either to his Godhead, or to the manhood: because they doe not consider his Person, wherein he is manifested to be God and man: nor his office of Mediatorship, to the which they doe agree. But it may easily bee perceiued, how all things agree verie well, each with other, if so be they meete with a sober interpreter: such a one, as doth examine so great mysteries, in such religious manner, as they ought to doe. As for those that haue distempered and braineſicke Spirites, there is nothing, which they doe not make troublesome. They snatch at those things, which are attributed to his manhood; to take away his Godhead. And againe, they snatch at the things attributed to his Godhead: to take away his manhoode. And as touching those things which are spoken concerning either nature, so iointlie, that they doe agree to neither of them apart: they snatch at them, to take away both of them. Now, what is this else, but as much as to contend, that Christ is not man, because he is God: and that is not God, because he is man: and that he is neither man nor God, because he is both God and man? Wherefore wee determine thus, that Christ, as hee is both God and man, consisting of both natures (though onely vnited and not confounded) is our Lord, and the true Sonne of God, euen in respect of his humanitie, though not for his humanities sake. Thus farre Master Caluin.

And thus (beloued in the Lord) wee see (as was said) that wee haue in this part of our beliefe, a verie great mysterie to consider of, concerning the vnion of the diuine nature of the Sonne of God, and of the nature of man, in one person: beside the former mysterie of the second Person of the holy Trinitie, in a singular respect of the vnitie of the Godhead thereof, with the Father and the holy Ghost, from all beginninglesse eternitie. The which, though it be a very high secret, and exceeding the vnderstanding of the most wise, in the perfection of it: yet no christian is of so small vnderstanding, but it is his dutie, neuer to cease prayer to God, nor attention to the holy doctrine thereof; vntill he haue attained to some measure of the sound knowledge and faith of it: so farre forth as he may be able, to giue a reason of his hope, in this behalfe. According to that of the Apostle Peter, 1. Epist. chap. 3. verses 15, 16. Be yee readie alwaies to giue an answer to euery one that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you. Yea, and wee are so much the more earnestlie to striue, not onely to the attaining of this knowledge and faith, but also for the perpetuall Beleeue in God the Son euen in Iesus Christ, the onely Son of God, our Lord.

The meaning of it.

petuall maintenance of it: because the Diuell and his instruments, both haue, and doe still labour in nothing more, then to subuert this ground and foundation of our faith, and the onely true meanes of our redemption and saluation.

To this euill end and purpose, the Arian denieth the eternall Godhead of our Sauiour: the Marcionite his manhood: the Eutichian the distinction of the natures: the Nestorian the vnity of the Person, &c.

But let vs (beloued) firmely and constantlie beleeue, against all contradiction; that our Lord Iesus Christ the Sonne of God, is both God and man, in one onely Person of a mediator betwixt God and man. For so it is necessary for our saluation, as may be euidently perceiued, by that which hath beene said alreadie.

Question. But what is the reason, why he that is our mediator to God, must be both God and man, in one Person?

Answere. The reason, (as I haue beene taught) is, for that, if he had not beene man, he could not by his sufferings, haue satisfied the iustice of God, who in his iustice, was to punish that nature, which had offended him.

And if hee had not beene God, hee could not for one moment, haue endured that intollerable burthen of the wrath of God, which hee must of necessitie endure, that was to make satisfaction for our sinnes. Neither could he in so short a time as he suffered, haue made a full and perfect satisfaction for vs. Neither could hee haue vanquished our so mightie aduersaries, as Sinne, Death, Hell, and the Diuell are.

Finally, hee could not haue purchased and atchieued the crowne of euerlasting happines and glorie for vs, most vnworthy and miserable sinners: if he had not beene in our nature Immanuel, that is, God with vs, & for vs: euen very true God, and eternall life it selfe.

Explicatiõ and proofe It must needes haue beene so indeede. For insomuch as there is no Sauiour, that can saue with an eternall saluation, but the Lord God, the eternall Iehoua: as God himselfe often affirmeth, and namely Isai. 43. 11. Neither is there any other name in heauen, or in earth, whereby we can be saued, but by our Sauiour Christ: Act. 4. 12. It must therefore follow, that our Sauiour and Mediatour betwixt God and vs, must needes be God. And that, euen because (as was touched before) the most high and infinite merit of the sufferings of our Sauiour, and consequently, all the most worthie and mightie effects thereof doe depend vpon it: as may easily bee perceiued, by calling to minde that which is written, Act. 20. 28. Likewise Colos. 1. 12, 13, 14, &c. and chap. 2. 8, 9, 10. and Heb. 7. the whole chapter, and Reuel. 5. 2, 3, 4, 5, &c. 9, 10, &c. None was found worthy to take the booke, and to open the seales thereof, but onely our Sauiour, who alone was killed, and who alone hath redeemed vs to God by his blood, &c.

And for the same cause, it was, that the Sonne of God, did not take the nature of the Angells: but the nature of man, as it is expresly obserued, Heb. chap. 2, verses 14, 15, 16, 17, 18. Reade also Matth. chap. 1. verse 23. The Angell sent from God to Ioseph, saith, They shall call his name (that is, the name of the man childe to bee borne of the Virgine Marie) Immanuel; the which (as the Euangelist obserueth) is by interpretation, GOD WITH VS. Thus therefore it behooued, that onely the Almighty God, in the fraile nature of man, should be a meet & sufficient Mediatour and Sauiour for vs.

And thus, I trust, that by the grace of God, we haue had a sufficient declaration of the meaning of these wordes of our beliefe, In Iesus Christ, the onelie Sonne of God, our Lord.

NOW that wee may goe forwarde, let vs come to the promise, where-vnto our faith is to looke, for the support and stay of it in Beliefe in God the Son euen in Iesus Christ, the onely Sonne of God, our Lord.

The Promise.

this so necessarie a point.

Que. What promise therefore haue we, in the holy Scriptures, that the Son of God, both God and man, being anointed of God to be the Christ, and a Sauiour, and the Lord ouer his Church: shall be our Lord and Sauiour, a Prophet, high Priest, and King vnto vs: to saue vs, and so many as shall truly beleeue in him?

Answere.

We haue the promise hereof, euen from the beginning of the world, immediately after the fall of mankinde: as hath, by another occasion, been answered before, out of the third chapter of Genesis. Where God himselfe saith, The seede of the woman shall breake the Serpents head.

Explication and proofe.

This seed here spoken of, in way of prophetical promise, is no doubt, Christ the Sonne of God, whom now we speake of: according to that of the Apostle Paul, Gal. ch. 4. verse 4. When the fulnes of the time was come, God sent forth his Sonne, made of a woman, and made vnder the law, that he might redeeme them which were vnder the law, that we might receiue the adoption of Sonnes. So that here wee haue both the most ancient, and (as we may) say the primitiue promise of the Gospel: and there-withall also, the performance of it, in the due and proper season, appointed therevnto by God himselfe, who onely is the vndoubted and most faithfull Author of it.

Moreouer, the Angells interpretation of the name Iesus, giuen to the Sonne of God, by the commandement of God himselfe, as we haue seene before: containeth a promise of saluation, to the whole Church by him. Matth. 1. 21. Thou shalt call his name Iesus, for he shall saue his people from their sinnes. Reade also Isai. 49. 6. It is a small thing (saith the Lord) that thou shouldest be my seruant, to raise vp the tribes of Iaakob, and to restore the desolations of Israel: I will also giue thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my saluation vnto the end of the world. That is, ouer the whole earth, both to Iew and Gentile. There are many such testimonies.

And yet further, all the anointed and consecrated high Priests, Prophets, and Kings of Iudah and Israel, before the comming of our Sauiour Christ: they were so many visible or typicall promises, (as one may say) of spirituall redemption and saluation by him.

But let vs inquire more particularly, for the gratious promises of God, in this behalfe.

Question.

And first of all: What promise haue we, that the Sonne of God, our Lord Iesus Christ, should be a Prophet to the Church, to teach it the will of God, most perfitly, as it were from the bosome of the Father?

Answere.

We haue the promise hereof, expresly recorded in the 18. verse of the 18. chapter of the fift booke of the Prophet Moses called Deuteronomie.

Rehearse the words.

I will raise thee vp a Prophet (saith the Lord to Moses) from among thy brethren, like vnto thee: and I will put my words in his mouth, and he shall speake vnto them all that I shall command him.

Explication and proofe.

That this promise is made concerning our Sauiour Christ. Reade Acts. 3. 22, 23, 24, 25, 26. Reade also Isaiah chap. 61. verse 1, &c. and Luke 4. 17, &c.

This was, vpon these grounds and testimonies of the holy Prophets, so vulgarly expected in Israel: that euen the prophane woman of Samaria, professeth her selfe to be assured, that the Messias should come, and shew himselfe a most perfect Prophet, and Teacher. I know well (saith she) that the Messias shall come, who is called Christ. When he is come, he will tell vs all things. And herevnto accordeth our Sauiour himselfe. For he saith by and by vnto her, I am he that speaketh to thee. Iohn, cha. 4. verse 19. and 25, 26.

Thus then it is plaine, that our Sauiour Christ was promised to come to be a Prophet: and therevpon, was of singular expectation in the Church of God.

What

Beliefe in God the Sonne in Iesus Christ, the onely Son of God, our Lord.

• What promise haue you likewise, that he should be an high Priest, and a King vnto his Church?

" In the 110. Psalme, there is contained a prophetical promise of both: and that also, with the confirmation of a diuine oath, iointly together, in these words.

I haue sworne (saith the Lord) and will not repent. Thou art a Priest for euer, after the order of Melchizedek.

• Question.
" Answe. Explicatiõ & proofe.

This one proofe is so euident, that it may stand in stead of manie. For the order of Melchizedeks priesthood, doth plainely expresse, Kingly order: seeing he was both a King, and a Priest, Gen. 14.18. and Heb. 7. 1,2,3. and verses 15,16,17,18,19,20,21. Read also Zech. chap. 6. verses 12,13. Hee shall rule vpon his throne, and he shall be a Priest vpon his throne.

The like propheticall promise vpon oath, is recorded concerning his Kingly dignitie, and power, Psalm. 89. 3. 4. and verses 27, 33, 36, 37. Reade also Ier. 23.5,6. and chap. 30. 9. and chap. 33. 15.16.17. And Ezek. chap. 21. verses 25,26,27. and chap. 34.23,24,&c. And Luke, 1.32,33. Acts.5.31.

Question.

Of like nature to this, is the dignitie and soueraignetie of Lordship, which belongeth to our Sauiour Christ. Haue we any promise, that he should be Lord ouer the Church, for the benefit thereof?

Answere.

The Lord whom yee seeke, (saith the holy Prophet Malachie, chap. 3. verse 1.) shall come speedily to his Temple, &c. Hee shall sit downe to trie and fine the siluer: he shall euen fine the Sonnes of Leuie, and purifie them as gold and siluer, that they may bring offerings to the Lord in righteousnes.

Then shall the offerings of Iuda and Ierusalem, be acceptable to the Lord, &c.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

That this propheſie, containing a promise of the Lords comming to his Temple, is concerning our Sauiour Christ: the words of the text do make it plaine, in that they make mention of Iohn Baptist, that was to be his Messenger, to prepare the way before him. And accordingly the promised fruit and benefit thereof, doth concerne the Church of Christ generally, vnder the names of Iuda and Ierusalem.

And like to this, is that of Micah. chap. 5. verse 2. Out of Bethlehem shall bee come forth vnto thee, that shall be ruler in Israel, whose goings forth, (that is, the effects and declaration of his Godhead) haue beene from the beginning, and of ancient time. To wit, euen as clearely manifested, as the Sunne maketh it selfe manifest, by the daily risings thereof.

The word of God, is stored most plentifully, with all sorts of most sweete and gratious promises, touching forgiuenes of sinnes, resurrection of the bodie, and euerlasting life and saluation, through our Lord Iesus Christ: as we shall, (by the grace of God) see more fully, when we come to those Articles of our faith. Generally, all the promises of God, are yea and Amen, in our Lord Iesus Christ the Sonne of God. 2. Cor. 1. 19,20. And they are worthily called by the Apostle Peter, most great and pretious promises. 2. Epist. 1.4.

HEtherto of the promises. The Comforts contained, and as it were lapped vp in the promises, are now to be inquired after, and to be as it were vnfolded of vs.

Question.

First therefore: What is the comfort of this, that our Sauiour in whom we beleeue, is the Sonne of God?

Answere.

The comfort is this, that hereby we are assured, that we haue a most perfect and all-sufficient Sauiour: in so much as this title, Sonne of God, assureth vs, that he is not onely man, but also verie true, and most gratious, and almighty God.

Explicatiõ and proofe.

It is very true. For from this ground, it is most comfortably affirmed, that Whosoeuer beleeueth in him, shall not perish, but haue euerlasting life: Iohn, 3.16, &c. And cha. 8.36. If the Sonne make yee free, ye shall be free indeed. Read also Rom. 8.3.4. and verses 38,39. And Gal. ch. 2.26. and cha. 4.4,5,6,7. And Iohn, 1. Ep. 4.9,10. We liue through him. He is the reconciliation for our sins. And verse 13. Whosoeuer confesseth that Iesus is the Son of God, in him dwelleth God, and he in God.

Beliefe in God the Son, euen in Iesus Christ, the onely Sonne of God, our Lord.

The meaning of it.

God. And chap. 5. verse 5. Who elſe is he that ouer-commeth the world (ſaith the Apoſtle) but he who beleeueth that Iesus is the Sonne of God? As though hee ſhould ſay, Certainely none but ſuch, can haue ſo great a victorie. And verſe 20. He is very God and eternall life. Wherefore as it is in the 2. Pſalme: Bleſſed are all that truſt in him.

The comfort of this, that the Sonne of God is thus our Sauiour, is infinitely aboue that comfort, which the Iudges of Iſrael, could poſsibly bring to the people: though they did not in vaine, beare the name of Sauiours among them. For they deliuered them onely, from the oppreſsions of their externall enemies and Tyrants. And therein, they were but onely certaine obſcure types and figures, of this our Sauiour: who deliuereth and ſaueth vs, out of the hands of all our enemies, both the Diuell, and all ſorts of his deſtroying inſtruments.

The excellencie of the Comfort therefore, is according to the excellencie of the Perſon, aboue euerie other Sauior: whether Gideon, Iphtah, or Sampſon, Dauid, or Salomon, or any other. And that by verie good reaſon. For great and excellent Perſons, giue no ſmall gifts; they are not ſent to worke ſmall exploits. When they take vpon them to be mediators, they procure no ſmall fauour. They will not be denied their requeſts, that they make for their fauorites, &c. But heerein, the fauour is moſt admirable, that our Sauiour, working from God, and by his diuine grace and power, the greateſt ſaluation of all other: is ſo deſirous, that we ſhould be partakers of it; that whereas wee, through our rudenes and ignorance, doe not eſteeme of it, as wee ought: hee is, as it were, a moſt earneſt Suter, that wee would accept of it: 2. Cor. 5. 19, 20.

The exceeding greatnes of this ſaluation, may be the better diſcerned, if we ſhall ſeriouſly bend our mindes, on the one ſide, to conſider the greatnes of the euills, ſpecially of ſinne, and that horrible damnation and torment, which is for euer due vnto it, from which we are deliuered: and on the other ſide, if we will truly ponder, and weigh in our mindes, the greatnes of the contrarie happines, and eternall glorie, which our Sauiour hath aduaunced all true beleeuers vnto. Verily the more thoſe things ſhall be duly thought of: the more wonderfull will they appeare to be. So iuſtly may we, in the comfort hereof, reioyce in our Sauiour, with the Virgin Marie: and with ioy vnſpeakeable and glorious, as the chriſtian Iewes did, to whom the Apoſtle Peter wrote, 1. Epiſt. cha. 1. verſe 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.

In deede, it is true, that to infidels and vnbeleeuers, theſe things are no more comfortable, then there is taſte in the white of an egge without ſalt, as Iob ſpeaketh. For it is faith onely, which maketh them reliſh: and therefore to the beleeuers onely, they are thus ſweete and comfortable, as hath beene deſcribed. Whereof we may ſee a contrary example, in either ſort; that is, both of beleeuers, and vnbeleeuers, Act. 28. verſes 23, 24. and ſo forth to the end of the chapter.

But let vs now proceede.

Queſtion. What is the comfort of this, that the Sonne of God, our moſt bleſſed and comfortable Sauiour, is the Chriſt or annointed of God, as we haue ſeene before?

Anſwere. This alſo muſt needes be exceedingly comfortable, to euery beleeuing Chriſtian; in that, according as he is a perſon of incomparable dignities; ſo he is called of God to a moſt holy office, aboue all other, (both Prophets, and alſo high Prieſts, and Kings) euen to ſuch an office, as bringeth the greateſt ioy that may be, to the Church of God: as hath alreadie beene in a good part declared.

Explicatiõ and proofe. It is ſo indeed. For in this reſpect (as was alledged before) hee is ſaid to be annointed with the oyle of gladnes, aboue all others. Heb. 1. 9. For the which cauſe alſo, hee is moſt worthily celebrated, to bee both the light of the Gentiles, and alſo the glorie of Iſrael: and ſo the onely reioycing of all the people of God.

Luke.

Beleefe in God the Son euen in Iesus Christ, the onely Son of God, our Lord.

The Comforts.

Luke. chap. 2. verses 29, 30, 31, 32. and 1. Cor. 31.

And it standeth with very good reason: in so much as hereby we know him, to be one lawfully called to this high honour: and not to haue intruded himselfe, as was likewise obserued before. Heb. 5. 4. These things with the rest, mentioned in the interpretation, are here necessarily to be called to minde againe. Generally, the comfort hereof, may euidently appeare in this, that by the grace and vertue of this most holy anointing of our Sauiour Christ: all true beleeuers are called to the dignity of christianity: according to that which is recorded, Acts. 11. 16. Where wee see the originall of this honourable name. And in the 1. Ep. of Iohn, ch. 2, verses 20. and 17. Where we haue the comfortable signification of it in part, as noting that spirituall knowledge, wisedome, and discretion which christians receiue from Christ. But let vs search out the comfort of the anointing of our Sauiour, more particularly.

Question. And first: What is the comfort of his anointing to the Prophetship: that is, to be the Prince of all Prophets, and the chiefe Doctor & Teacher of the Church?

Answere It is very comfortable, in that wee are hereby put out of all doubt, whom wee are to heare: and in whose doctrine, we may safely rest and stay our selues.

Explicatio & proofe. It is a very great comfort indeede, as we may perceiue by the consideration of the contrary. For it breedeth a very vncomfortable distraction, and confusion, in the minde of a man desirous to know the truth: when through the diuersitie of Sects, and Teachers, hee knoweth not whom to beleeue nor to whom he should ioyne himselfe.

To this end therefore, it may iustly be to the singular comfort of euery christian, to consider, euen to the certifying and quieting of his minde in this behalfe: that our Sauiour Christ is vndoubtedly appointed of God, to be the onely, chiefe, and vniuersall Doctor and Teacher, of his whole Catholike and vniuersall Church. For so our Sauiour himselfe saith, Matth. 23. 8. 10. One is your Doctor Christ. And to the end, we might the rather be cõfortably established in this point: our Sauiour doth most earnestly and vsually affirme his doctrine, in a manner of asseueration proper to himselfe, saying, Verily, verily, I say vnto you, &c Wherevpon also, he hath this title giuen vnto him, that he is Amen, faithfull and true, yea the very truth it selfe: as we haue seene before.

To this purpose also, it is testified, that he hath taught vs the will of God, from the bosome of the Father. Iohn. 1. 18. And that in him, are hidden all the treasures of wisedome, and knowledge. Colos. 2. 3. Read also verse 4, &c. This I say (saith the Apostle) lest any man should beguile you with enticing words, &c. As ye haue therefore receiued Christ Iesus the Lord, so walke ye in him, rooted and built in him, established in the faith, as ye haue bin taught, aboũding therein with thanksgiuing, &c

This comfort, may well be furthermore obserued, from the speech of the same Apostle, borrowed from the Prophet Moses, Rom. 10. 6 &c. Say not in thine heart, who shall ascend into heauen. &c. or who shall descend into the deepe, &c. The word is neare thee, euen in thy mouth, and in thine heart, &c. And herewithall, did Peter comfort himselfe, and his fellow Disciples. Iohn 6. 60. For to whom shall we goe (saith he to our Sauiour Christ) Thou hast the words of eternall life.

Let vs therefore conclude this point, with the words of our Sauiour, the very true wisedome of God, Pro. 8. 33. 34. Blessed is the man that heareth me, watching daily at my gates, and giuing attendance at the postes of my doores. For he that findeth me, findeth life, and he shall obtaine fauour of the Lord.

Thus then, it is very comfortable to our faith, that our Sauiour Christ is anointed of God, to be our Prophet. We shall see it yet more fully, when we come to his doctrine.

It followeth now, that you are to shew, what the comfort of the same our Question. faith is, in that he is anointed of God, to be our high Priest, yea a royall and kingly high Priest: What, I say, or how great may the comfort of this be?

Answere. The comfort hereof, is so much the greater, by how much his most holy and high

Priest-

Beleefe in God the Son euen in Iesus Christ, the onely Son of God, our Lord.

The Comforts.

Priesthood, is infinitely more beneficiall, and profitable to the Church, then euer was the Priesthood of Aaron : in so much as he is a most mercifull high Priest, and able to saue them that come vnto God by him, seeing he liueth for euer, to make most effectuall intercession for them.

That it may be so much the more comfortable, we may euidently perceiue, by that testimony and comparison, which the Apostle maketh in this behalfe. Heb. cha. 2. verse 17. And cha. 7. the whole chapter, &c.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

Question.

But is there no other comfort?

Answere.

In so much as our Sauiour Christ is not onely a high Priest, but also of a royall and Princely order; this doth further more warrant vnto vs not onely his high estimation with God, but also that hee shall preuaile against all the aduersaries of our saluation.

It warranteth vs also, that he hath power and authoritie, to make lawes for the gouernement of his kingdome, as also to appoint offices and officers for the administration of his gouernment, vnder his authoritie and name and finallie to execute by his Ministers, all the censures and iudgements, belonging to the gouernment of his Church here in this world, both for spirituall rebuke, and also for comfort.

Explication and proofe.

That these things are so, we may euidently perceiue from the latter part of the 110. Psal. Reade also Heb. 3. 6. Matth. 28. 18. Luke. 1. 32, 33. Act. 1. verses 2, 3. 1. Tim. 5. 21. and cha. 6 13. 14.

Question.

Is there yet any other comfort, that you can rehearse?

Answer.

He hath by the vertue and efficacie thereof, made vs, and all true Christians, Priests, and Kings, yea a royall Priesthood vnto God : Whereunto also, he hath appointed and sealed vs, by the earnest of his holy Spirit, which he hath giuen vnto vs.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

This is expresly affirmed, Reuel. chap. 1. verses 5, 6. And againe chap. 4. 10. and 1. Pet. 2. 9. and 2. Cor. 1. 20, 21, 22. And whence should this double dignitie be deriued vnto vs, but from this his owne anointing, whereof he maketh vs partakers : To wit, in such sort, as i may be meete for vs, to haue communion with him herein, as we shall consider further hereafter.

Question.

But now for a further helpe to the clearing of this matter. What meaneth this, that our Sauiour Christ hath made vs Priests and Kings vnto God?

Answere.

Whereas we are in our selues profane, God hath sanctified vs to himselfe, in our Sauiour Christ & taken vs all as it were into holy orders with him : and therefore doth not any longer, account any of vs for profane and vnholy, but admitteth vs as holy Persons, to performe the holy duties of his diuine worship and seruice before him.

Likewise, though we are in our selues, verie vassalls to Sinne and Satan, who is the Prince, and father of the children of this sinfull world : by our Lord Iesus Christ, we are set free, and made more then conquerours ouer them : so that by his power and vertue, we are enabled to commaund them, and as it were, euen to tread and trample them vnder our feete.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

These verily, are most great and comfortable aduancements; and could in no wise agree to such base and sinfull wretches, as we are: were it not by meere and high fauour, through the mediation & intercession of the Sonne of God, our most worthie and royall high Priest.

Now therefore, seeing our Sauiour Christ hath purchased them for vs, and God hath for the same our Sauiours sake, freely bestowed them vpon vs: let vs not profanely cast away, so great an honour and dignitie from our selues. Neither let vs any longer, suffer the Popish hierarchie, falsely to appropriate it to them, taking and making themselues an odious kinde of Priesthood, of their owne deuising : whereby they haue vniustly made the honourable name of Priest, vnpleasant to christian eares : in so much as they haue notoriously abused it, to a most sacrilegious vsurpation, highly derogatorie to the onely propitiatorie sacrifice of our Lord Iesus Christ ; in that they challenge to themselues, a power to offer Christ euery day to God, in an vnbloodie propitiatory, and meritorious sacrifice, for the quicke and the dead.

But

Beliefe in God the Sonne euen in Iesus Christ, the onely Son of God, our Lord.

But we, reiecting their wicked abuse, and ouerstriding the stumbling blocke, which they haue laid in our way. Let vs (according to the holy ordinance, and meaning of the Lord) reioyce, and blesse his holy name, for this our christian prerogatiue: in that the vaile being rent, and the Priesthood of the law abolished, we are now all of vs made a holy and kingly priesthood to God. Yet so, as two cautions are herein, necessarily to be obserued. First, that we doe not in this respect, fancie any confusion in the Church of Christ: as if there were no difference now, betwixt Minister and people, in regard of publike ministerie. And secondly, that we must alwaies remember, that this is a spirituall, and no earthly aduancement, wherein we should pride our selues, with contempt of Princes and Magistrates, in the ciuill estate: but that the truth and perfection of this our glorie and aduancement in Christ, is to humble our selues most lowe, in giuing glorie to God, and in seeking the benefite of his Church, lifting vp our mindes onely against sinne, and the Diuell, ouer whom our Sauiour Christ hath giuen vs power to reigne. But of this, more in the Duties.

Question. Now, in the last place of the Comforts: What is the comfort of this, that Iesus Christ the Sonne of God, is called, and is in verie deede our Lord?

Answere Seeing he hath the onely soueraigne right and Lordship ouer vs; we haue this comfort to our consciences, that wee are spiritualy free from the bondage of all other, whether profane Tyrants, or superstitions, and prowd popish Prelates: in that they haue no lawfull power and authoritie granted them of God, to command and binde our consciences, to any thing contrarie to his lawes, and to the doctrine of the Gospell of our Sauiour Christ.

This in deede may also be iustly a great comfort, considering we haue but one Master and Lord, ouer our soules and consciences:, whom we are to serue and to whom we stand bound, to seeke to approue our selues. So that if we shall please him, in the way of our saluation, and in the spirituall affaires of his kingdome: we may (touching those matters) be out of care, to please any other Master or Lord, whosoeuer shall shew himselfe to bee of a contrarie or disagreeable minde.

The comfort of this, is the same in effect, with the comfort of Christs kingly authority: but it is, vnder this word Lord, more familiarly and distinctly expressed, in the words of our Creed.

And finally, let vs marke, and we shall perceiue, that all the comforts, haue their originall ground, from euery of the titles, as well as from any of them: and from all of them ioyntly, though we haue for the more plainnes of instruction, thus distinguished them. Happy therefore, yea thrise happy, are all true christians, who haue such a Sauiour, as is both the Sonne of God, and also Iesus, and Christ, and Lord: that no consolation, might at any time, or in any estate, and condition of life, be wanting vnto them.

Hetherto of the comforts.

NOw let vs come to the Duties, belonging to these notable Comforts, of our christian faith.

Question. And first, to speake more generally: Which may they be?

Answere. In our iudgement, we are to esteeme him, to be most high and excellent, aboue all other: not onely earthly men, but also heauenly Angells.

In our affection, we are accordingly to loue and reuerence him, aboue all creatures and most earnestly, to seeke after the true knowledge of him.

In outward profession, and practise of diuine worship, it is our dutie, euen from our verie soules and spirits; to honour and serue him with the same honour and seruice, which belongeth to the diuine Maiesty of God: in faith, and feare, with prayer, &c.

Finally, we are to be so farre off from being ashamed of him or of his Gospel: that we must esteeme it to be the greatest honour vnto vs, that may bee, to professe his name.

Explicatiõ & proofe. Thus it ought to be indeede.

For first, touching most high estimation in iudgement, the Apostle tea-

Beliefe in God the Sonne euen in Ieſus Chriſt the onely Sonne of God, our Lord.

cheth it plentifully, in the whole firſt chapter of the Epiſt. to the Heb. that it ought to be ſo: in ſo much as he is the Sonne of God.

And further alſo, in ſo much as he is incomparably, a farre more excellent Sauiour, then any of the Iudges of Iſrael euer were, as was obſerued before. Yea, more excellent then was Ioſhua, that mighty Captaine, otherwiſe called Ieſus, Act. 7.45. and Heb. 4.8. who before the time of the Iudges, brought the people of Iſrael, into the land of Canaan, by a mighty conqueſt.

Likewiſe, in ſo much as he is a more excellent high Prieſt, then Aaron, or any of his race and ſucceſsion. Heb. 7. And a more excellent Prophet, then Moſes. Heb. 3. verſes 3, &c. or then Eliah. Iohn. 1.21.25.30. or then Ionas, or any other: For as our Sauiour ſaith, Matth. 12.41. A greater then Ionas is here. Finally, ſeeing he is more a excellent King, then Salomon, as in the ſame 12. chap. of Matth. verſe 42. A greater then Salomon is here. Yea, ſeeing he is the King of all Kings, and Lord of all Lords: therefore ought we more highly to eſteeme our Sauiour, by infinite degrees, aboue any, or all of them. Yea aboue the holy Angells alſo, (as was well anſwered) according to the 1. chap. of the Epiſt. to the Hebrewes.

Secondly, in ſo much as affection ought to follow a right iudgement: therefore, ſeeing our Sauiour is moſt high and excellent aboue all, it is our dutie, accordingly to loue and reuerence him, aboue all: as the Song of Songs doth notably teach vs chap. 1. verſes 1, 2, and chap. 5. 1, 2, &c. and chap. 3. 8, 9, &c. Reade alſo 2. Cor. 5. 14. The loue of Chriſt conſtraineth vs. And 1. Epiſt. 16, 22. If any man loue not the Lord Ieſus Chriſt, let him be had in execration, &c. Reade alſo Philip. 3. 7, 8, &c. All things are to be accounted loſſe, and dongue, in compariſon of the excellent knowledge of Chriſt Ieſus our Lord, after the example of the holy and zealous Apoſtle. He that loueth father or mother, or ſonne, or daughter, more then me, he is not worthie of me: ſaith our Sauiour, Matth. 10.37. And Luke. 14.26. He that hateth them not, in compariſon of his loue to our Sauiour Chriſt, (if neede ſo require) he cannot be his Diſciple.

Thirdly, that in all outward obedience, we ſtand bound to yeelde our Sauiour Chriſt, (yea and that from our inward ſoules and ſpirits) all diuine worſhip, and ſeruice, due to the Maieſtie of God: it is euident, from ſundry teſtimonies of the holy Scriptures. And namely, Pſal. 2. 12. Kiſſe the Sonne of God, leſt he be angry. And Iohn 5. 22, 23. The Father hath committed all iudgement to the Sonne, becauſe that all men ſhould honour the Sonne, as they honour the Father. He that honoureth not the Sonne, honoureth not the Father, which hath ſent him. And Philip. 2. 9, 10, 11. conferred with Iſai. 45. 23. God hath highly exalted him, and giuen him a name aboue euery name: that at the name of Ieſus, euery knee ſhould bow, &c. And that euery tongue ſhould confeſſe, that Ieſus Chriſt is the Lord, vnto the glory of God the Father. But of this externall worſhip, we ſhall ſee the practiſe, in the duty of Prayer.

We muſt alſo beleeue in our Sauiour Chriſt, Pſal. 2. 12. Bleſſed are all they that truſt in him. Reade alſo Iohn 3. 36. He that beleeueth in the Sonne, hath euerlaſting life. And chap. 9. 35. our Sauiour himſelfe inſtructeth and prompteth the man, whom he had healed of his natiue blindnes, to beleeue in him. And ſo he teacheth his Diſciples, chap. 14. 1. as wee haue conſidered more at large heretofore. Reade alſo Matth. 9. 22. and chap. 15. 28. and Luke 7. 9. he commended thoſe that beleeued in him. And Rom. 15. 12. In him ſhall the Gentiles truſt. And 1. Iohn 3. 23. It is the commandement of God, that we doe beleeue in the name of his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt.

It is our dutie likewiſe, not onely to pray to the Father, in the name of our Sauiour, in that hee is our Mediator: but euen to pray to him, as being one God with the Father, and the holy Ghoſt: as our baptizing into his name, together with theirs, may plainely teach vs. Reade Act. 22. 16. Yea, hereof we haue many approued examples, euen ſuch as be allowed by our Sauiour himſelfe, cõcerning thoſe that were guided by the ſpirit of God, to make their praiers vnto him. Namely, Mat. 8. 2. A leper worſhipped him ſaying, Maſter if thou wilt, thou canst make me cleane. And chap. 9. 18. A certaine Ruler worshipped him saying, My daughter is now deceased, but come and lay thine hand vpon her, and she shall liue. And chap. 15. 22. A woman of Canaan cried vnto him, Haue mercy on me, O Lord thou Sonne of Dauid: my daughter is miserably vexed with a Diuell, &c. And chap. 17. verses 14, 15. A man kneeling downe to him, said, Master haue pitie on my sonne, for he is lunatike, &c. And Mark. chap. 9. 24. The same man professeth himselfe to beleeue, and praieth our Sauiour to helpe his vnbeleefe. Lord (saith he) I beleeue, helpe my vnbeleefe. And Luke. 17. 5. The Apostles make the like praier, Lord increase our faith. Or as the words, in the original, & circumstance of the place, both here, and Matt. 17. 20.) incline to this sense: Lord giue vs the gift of faith. The words themselues are Prosthes hemin pistin, adde faith vnto vs. And the Lord said, If yee had faith as much as is a graine of mustard seede, &c. In the 7. chap. of the Act. verse 9. Stephen being at the point of death, praieth thus, Lord Iesus receiue my spirit. And 2. Cor. 12. 8, 9. Paul saith, that he praied often to the Lord Iesus for himselfe. And so he did for many other. Rom. 1. 7. and in the beginning of his other Epistles: Grace be with you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Iesus Christ. And againe in the conclusion, chapt. 16. verses 20 and 24. Reade also 2. Cor. 13. verse 13. The grace of our Lord Iesus, &c. be with you all, Amen. Moreouer 1. Thes. 3. 11. Now God our Father, and our Lord Iesus Christ, guide our iourney vnto you. And 2. Epist. chap. 2. 16, 17. Now the same Iesus Christ our Lord, and our God euen the Father; who hath loued vs, and giuen vs euerlasting consolation, and good hope through grace: Comfort your hearts, and stablish you, in euery word and good worke.

Explicatio and proofe.

Yea, generally, all christians are described by this note, or marke, that they are such as doe call vpon the name of our Lord Iesus Christ: as Act. 9. verse 14. and againe verse 21. And 1. Cor. 1. verse 2.

Thus then, Inuocation and Prayer, is a dutie to be performed to Iesus Christ the Sonne of God our Lord.

The same is to be affirmed, concerning thanke-giuing. Read Psalm 47. And 68. 18, 19. compared with Ephes. 4. 7, 8. And when wee praise God the Father in him, and through him: it is as much as to praise and thanke him with the Father. Rom. 7. 25. and 1. Cor. 15. 57. Ephes. 5. 20. and 1. Thes. 5. 18.

It is our dutie likewise, to reuerence and feare our Lord Iesus Christ: as 1. Cor. 10. verse 9. Let vs not tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted him, and were destroied of Serpents. Reade also Exod. chap. 23. verses 20, 21. Consider also, that he is appointed the Iudge of the world: and that he hath the keyes of hell, and of death, &c. Act. 17. 30, 31. Reuel. 1. 18. and chap. 6. 15, 16, 17. and in sundry other places. Reade also Psal. 2. 9, &c.

We stand bound, by the expresse commandement of the Father, to obey our Sauiour in all things, Matth. chap. 17. verse 5. And Luke chap. 6. verse 46. Why call ye me Master (saith our Sauiour himselfe) and doe not the things that I speake.

And thus wee may perceiue, (according to that which was before touched, and promised to be in this place further declared) that, in so much as all duties of diuine worship, proper to the Godhead, are due to our Lord Iesus Christ, the Son of God, as well as to the Father, and to the holy Ghost: this containeth one very euident, and inuincible proofe among the rest, that he is very true God, co-equall, and coeternall with them.

Whereupon also, iustly may it be concluded, (according to the last part of the answer) without any further proofe: that euery christian, ought to be, so far from being ashamed of Christ, and his Gospel: that we ought to esteeme it, the greatest honour that may be, to professe his most holy & glorious name: yea, though it should bee with the greatest reproach, that might fall vpon vs here in this wicked world, for the same: according to the incouragement of our Sauiour himselfe. Matth. 5. 11, 12. Luke. 6. 22, 23. And of the Apostle Pe- ter. 1. Ep. 4. 13. 14. 16. Read also Rom. 1. 16. and 2. Tim. 1. 7. 8. and verses 12 16.

These are the duties of faith, in a more generall consideration of the titles, iointlie together. Now, that we may, for our further instruction, consider the duties belonging more particularly, to the same.

Question.

First, What are the duties of faith in this respect, that our Lord Iesus Christ, is the Sonne of God?

Answere.

In so much as the Sonne of God, hath abased himselfe, to the lowest degree of a seruant for vs: we must needes acknowledge, that it is our bounden dutie, to humble our selues, in the lowest degree of humiliation that we can, vnto him: and in the greatest measure of loue, that we may attaine vnto, to performe all good dutie vnto him. Yea, and one of vs to another also, for his sake: according as he himselfe doth in this respect, require it of vs.

Explicatio & proofe.

He doth so indeed, Matth. 11. 29. Take my yoke on you, and learne of me, that I am meeke, and lowlie in heart: and ye shall finde rest to your soules, &c. Read also cha. 18. 1, 2, 3, &c. And cha. 20. verses 25, 26, 27, 28. And againe Luke. 22. verses 24, 25, &c. And Iohn, cha. 13. verses 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17.

We haue also the instruction of the Apostle, to the same end: Rom. chap. 15. verses 12, 13. We which are strong, &c. For Christ also would not please himselfe, &c. And verses 5, 6, 7. And Philip. chap. 2. verses 5, 6, 7, 8. Let the same minde be in you that was euen in Christ Iesus, who being in the forme of God, thought it no robberie to be equall with God: But he made himselfe of no reputation, &c. Likewise Heb. 5. verses 8, 9. And though he were the Sonne, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered. And being consecrated, was made the author of eternall saluation to all that obey him. Marke, that it is our dutie, to obey him: who being the Sonne of God, was more obedient to God, in our nature, and for vs, then any other Sonne of man, could possibly be.

Now likewise, What dutie belongeth to the comfort of faith in this, that though he so humbled himselfe for vs, yet is our Lord: yea, that euen by humbling of himselfe for vs, he hath obtained a most iust soueraignitie ouer vs, aboue any other: as it followeth in the 2. cha. of the Epist. to the Philip. mentioned before.

Question.

What dutie, I say, belongeth to the comfort of this?

Answere.

We stand bound to obey him absolutely, and for himselfe but no other Lord, other wise then in him, and for him.

We doe likewise stand bound, from the comfortable consideration hereof, to imploy our selues, and all our gifts: and also his creatures, and all his ordinances, as they that must giue an account vnto him of the same.

None must be ouer-masterly, in indging and censuring of his fellow seruants, and christian brethren: but contrariwise, it is the part of euery one, to be verie tender, and charie, that he doe not willingly, and lightly offend, or discourage any of the least among them.

Finally, as euery one of vs, must in all things, and all the daies of our liues, liue vnto our Lord Iesus Christ: so must we willingly die vnto him, and for him, if need do require: to the end, that being at the last approued of him for good and faithfull seruants, we may for euer liue and reigne with him.

Explication and proofe.

That great dutie doth belong to the Sonne of God, in that he is called our Lord, the verie title it selfe, doth plainely import: according to that challenge, which the Lord God maketh by his holy Prophet Malachie, chap. 1. 5. If I be a Lord, where is my feare? Out of all question, rightfull Lordship, requireth reuerend seruice. Now we know, that God hath set ouer, as it were, the right of his gouernment ouer vs, to our Sauiour Christ. And therefore saith our Sauiour himselfe also, Luk. 6. 46. Why do ye cal me Master, Master, and do not the things that I speake: as was mentioned before. For verily, it is but trifling, yea a meere mockery, for any seruant to yeeld his Master his title, and to denie him his seruice. Well therefore reasoneth the holy Psalmist, concerning our Lord Iesus Christ, Iesus in God the Son euen in Iesus Christ, the onely Son of God, our Lord.

Christ, when he giueth the Church this charge, Hee is thy Lord, and reuerence thou him. The word Hishtahhaui, which the Prophet vseth, signifieth an humble seruice, by bowing vnto him. Psal. 45. 12.

But let vs consider a little, of some proofes, for the particular branches of the answer.

First therefore, that we are absolutely to obey the Sonne of God, in that he is our Lord; and no other, but in him, and for him: that is, according to his will and commandement, and as may be most for his diuine honour, and glory: and not otherwise: reade 1. Cor. 7. 22. 23. He that is called in the Lord, being a seruant is the Lords free man. Likewise also, he that is called being free, is Christs seruant. Ye are bought with a price, be ye not the seruants of men. And Galat. 1. 10. Doe I about to please men? I were not then the seruant of Christ; saith the holy Apostle. Reade also Ephes. 6. 1. and verses 5, 6, 7. And 1. Thes. 4. 1, 2. and 1. Tim. 6. 1, 2, 3, 4. According to all which testimonies, it is good reason, that all our obedience to any other Master or Lorde; must bee limited so, as it may stand with obedience to our Lord Iesus Christ: because all other Lords, yea euen the chiefe of them, either be, or ought to be, his seruants; according to that admonition, Psal. 2. 10, 11, 12. So that they haue no more power, to command any thing, contrary to the commandements of the Sonne of God, our Lord from heauen: then any inferiour iustice, may contrary any law, publikely enacted by the King of the Land.

Secondly, that we doe stand bound, to imploie our selues, with all the gifts that we haue in our mindes, and with all outward gifts bestowed vpon vs: as also, to vse all creatures and ordinances of the Lord, so as we may giue a good account thereof, at the day of iudgement: we may perceiue, by that which we reade Matt. 12. 6. and cha. 25. 13, &c. 2. Cor. 5. 10. and 1. Pet. 4. 5. There is good reason, that we should not abuse any thing, no not the least, or baest of the creatures: euen because they are the Lords. We must doe nothing, without our commission from him.

Thirdlie, that none must be ouer-masterly, or rigorous, either in domesticall, or ciuil, or ecclesiastical gouernment: it may be euident, in that our Sauiour is chiefe Lord in euery respect. Ephes. 6. verses 4. 9. Colos. 3. 19. 21. Read also Isai. 49. 22, 23, &c. Moreouer Rom. chap. 14. verses 10, &c. And Iames. 3. 1. And 1. Cor. 10. 22, 23, &c. Matth. 24. 48, &c.

For the proofe of the last point, reade Rom. 14. 7, 8. and 2. Cor. 5. 9. And Act. 7. 59. Where the example of Stephen is notable. Likewise the example of the Apostle Paul, chap. 20. 24. And in the Gospel Luke 23. the beleeuing and repenting theefe on the Crosse, who though he had notoriously failed in not liuing to the Lord; yet he did most singularly yeelde his dutie to our Lord Iesus Christ, in dying vnto him: to the great glorie of his grace, in the sight of all malitious disgracers of him.

These, therefore are the duties, which the comfort of faith yeeldeth from this: that the Sonne of God, is our Lord.

Question. Now, What are the duties, which the comfortable title of Iesus a Sauiour, doth call for at our hands?

Answere. First, it requireth that we doe acknowledge our selues, to be in, and of our selues, vtterly lost, yea most miserable and damnable creatures.

Secondly, it requireth, that we doe seeke to him alone, for our saluation.

Thirdly, that we vse those meanes onely, of Word, Prayer, Sacraments, which he hath commanded and sanctified, as blessed helpes thereunto.

Finally, it requireth at our hands, yea at our hearts, that we be in speciall manner thanke-full with neuer ending thanks: and in like manner specially dutifull, with all the best fruites of dutie that may be, for this euerlasting, and vnualuable benefit of our saluation.

Explicatio & proofe. It is verie true. In this respect, iustly may we enter into most earnest consultation with our selues (after the example of King Dauid, Psalme 116.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, euen in Iesus Christ, the onely Sonne of God, our Lord.

saying) What shall I render to the Lord, for all his benefits toward me? And well may we answer our selues as, hee did, I will take the cup of saluation, and call vpon the name of the Lord. I will pay my vowes vnto the Lord, &c.

But that we may henceforth, begin with the proofe of the first branch of the answer: reade Matth. 18. 11. The Sonne of man is come to saue that which is lost. Yea so, as he professeth, that he came not to call the righteous, (that is, such as are iust in a prowd conceit of their owne vertues) but sinners, to repentance. chap. 9. verses 12. 13. And so consequently to saluation.

For the proofe of the second branch, reade Act. 4. 12. There is giuen no other name vnder heauen, whereby we must be saued. And first Tim. 2. 5. There is one God, and one Mediatour betwixt God and man, which is the man Iesus Christ. Good reason, yea necessary good reason therefore, that wee doe seeke to him alone. And there is no doubt, but where there is any truth of faith, in acknowledging from the heart, that the Sonne of God is the onely Sauiour of mankinde: there will be a diligent seeking after Christ; yea an earnest seeking, vntill he be found by the most neare approach, that may be made vnto him. What a seeking was there, to the poole at Ierusalem, called Bethesda, as it were a place of mercie? Iohn, chap. 5. verse 2, &c. There cannot any man come about, which professeth any speciall skill of curing bodily diseases: but euery one that hath any imper, is readie to seeke vnto him. How much more therefore (aboue all the degrees of comparison) ought we not to seeke to our Sauiour Christ, who is come, not onely to repaire all our impers both of bodie and soule, but euen wholly to saue vs, and to build vs vp into a perfect building in himselfe: where as we were before, altogether ruinated, cast downe, and destroied? And the rather ought we to doe thus, because wee may be vndoubtedly certaine, both of the diuine skill, and also of the most gratious good will and of the all-sufficient power, of this our blessed Lord and Sauiour. Isai. 53. 11. And 1. Tim. 1. 15. 16.

As touching the cure of all bodily Phisitions or Surgians, beside that it is but bodily, and that also but for a while; and in a small measure, when it is performed in the best degree that may be: it is for the most part, very doubtfull in the most dangerous diseases, whether the hand of the cunningest professour can yeelde any helpe or no.

Wherefore now thirdly, as a consequent of the former; the true beleeuer (being perswaded of the most perfect skill of this our Phisition) will doubtles vse all good and holie meanes, as soueraigne medicines, whatsoeuer our Sauiour hath in his diuine wisedome commanded and sanctified to the furthering of his so great a saluation: namely the word, and sacraments, and such other, as was said before. For euen to this purpose, the word of God is called a healing, and sauing Word: And so are the holy Sacraments, and Praier: as Isai. 57. 18. 19. Act. 13. 26. 1. Tim. 4. 16. and 1. Pet. 3. 21. And Iames, 5. 15. 16.

As for the last branch, the proofe was set downe, from the example of King Dauid, in the first place: and by some other testimonies. And it is so cleare, that it requireth no further proofe, then our diligent and carefull practise of so bounden a dutie.

It followeth now, that we are to inquire of the duties of faith, in the comfort of this: that the Sonne of God our Lord and Sauiour, is the Christ, or anointed of God.

Question. And first, concerning his anointing to be a Prophet vnto vs. What may these duties be?

Answere. The comfort of faith herein, requireth this dutie first and principally, that we doe most reuerendly obey him, in his word and Gospell, and ministerie thereof: with care of continuall profiting in knowledge, and faith, and in euery other grace.

Secondly, that we doe labour according to the encrease of our owne knowledge, and the comfort of our faith, &c. euery one to further, and profite those that belong vnto vs.

Thirdly, it is our dutie, to beleeue as vndoubtedly, those things which our Sauiour our hath propheciied and fore-told, that they shall hereafter come to passe; as those things which hee hath taught, & set downe, for the perpetuall instruction of his Church.

" It is verie meet, and necessarie, that it should be so. For to what other ends should we thinke, that God hath anointed him, to be a Prophet vnto vs: but that wee should receiue all such instruction from him, as hee was to giue, and hath giuen vs; to make vs wise, yea more and more wise vnto saluation? The children of the former Prophets, stood bound to profit by those that were sent vnto them. Act. 3.25. much more then, wee that are the children of this most high Prophet, the Prince of all the rest. Heb: 2.13.

But let vs more distinctlie, consider the particulars of the answer.

And first, that we must in respect of this Prophesie of our Sauiour, heare & obey his doctrine: wee haue the commandement of God, as we may remember, Matth: 17.5. And 2. Pet: 1.17. Hee receiued of God the Father, honour and glorie, (saith the Apostle) when this voice came to him, from the excellent glorie, &c. Here also call to minde againe, Matth: 23. 8. 10.

It may iustlie be accounted a most absurd thing, for anie to professe themselues Christians, and to haue bene schollers of Christ: and yet to be ignorant of the knowledge of Christ, and of that mysterie of redemprion, and saluation, which hee hath both taught plainely, and wrought effectuallie, for all that doe truelie beleeue in him. Verilie, none of that sorte, euer entred the right way into the profession of Christianitie. Doubtles, they came not in by the dore, for then they should haue bene let in, by the keye of knowledge. The which, seeing they want, it is apparant that they rather crept in at the windowe, like theeues and church-robbers, then otherwise. And therefore they haue neede to looke better to themselues. For if they haue no knowledge, it is certaine, that they haue no faith: and so consequentlie, that they cannot be saued.

Wee thinke it a iust cause of reproofe to yong children, and a discredit to their Schoolemaisters, if they do not in some good proportion, profit in learning, according to the time of their going to schoole. And Cicero, a heathen wise man, reasoneth with his sonne, that hee ought to haue made no small profiting vnder a choice teacher: and in so learned an vniuersitie, as hee had sent him vnto, though hee had (as yet) bene there but one whole yeere. What then shall wee say of our selues, if after many yeares teaching, vnder the ministerie of the Gospell: wee be found olde truantes, and non proficientes in the schoole of Christ, the chiefe Teacher, whose doctrine is the most excellent doctrine, and his teaching, the most powerfull teaching that can be?

The reproofe of the Apostle, is iust against all such, Hebr: 5. 12. in that, whereas they ought to haue so farre profited, that they might haue ben teachers of others, they are yet ignorant of the first principles of the word. The punishment also belonging vnto this sinne, is verie fearefull, as wee shall haue occasion to obserue further, anone.

Thus then, according to the first branch of the answere, we may easilie see, that it is a dutie, where-vnto we are streightlie bound: to heare, and obey, the most holie propheſie and doctrine of our Sauiour Christ; and that, vnder the great perill of our soules, to the contrarie.

Nowe secondlie, that it is furthermore, in the same respect the dutie of euerie Christian to further another, according to his owne profitting, in his seuerall place and calling (the Minister of the worde his people, parentes and Maisters of families, their children and seruantes: and euerie one, his companion, friend, and neighbour) Wee may plainely perceiue by the parable of the Talents. Matth: 25. verses 14. 15. &c. 30. Read also, 2. Corinth: 3.1. And Hebr. 6.1.

Moreouer, read Ephes: 6.4. And in the fourth commandement of the morall lawe of God.

And yet further, read Isai: ch: 2, verses, 2. 3. & againe Micah: 4.1. & Mal: 3.16. By these testimonies, the second branch may be plentifullie confirmed.

Beleefe in God the Sonne euen in Iesus Christ the onely Sonne of God, our Lord.

The third dutie, is likewise euident, by those manifold testimonies, which are euery where giuen, concerning the most perfect truth, and faithfulnes of our Sauiour Christ, in euery point of his doctrine: as hath beene declared, at large before. And seeing euery prediction of his seruants the Prophets, haue beene fulfilled in their times and seasons alwaies hetherto; how may we doubt of the fulfilling of any the predictions of our Sauiour himselfe? And the rather also, because some of them are fulfilled since he fore-told them: as namely, his owne sufferings, and the destruction of Ierusalem.

These are the duties of faith, in due regard of the propheticall office of our Sauiour.

The duties belonging to the comfort of his most royall and holy Priesthoode, remaine yet to be considered of vs. Which therefore are the duties of faith, in respect of this combined comfort of his Kingdome and Priesthood?

Question.

Answere. In so much as faith assureth vs, to our comfort, that by our Sauiour Christ, and through that redemption which he hath wrought for vs, we are aduanced in a spirituall manner (answerable to the nature of his Kingdome) to be here on the earth, Kings and Priests vnto God: it doth from the same comfort, teach vs, that it is our dutie, to offer vp our selues, our soules, and our bodies, a liuely sacrifice, holie, and acceptable to God, in the crucifying of our wicked flesh, with the lusts thereof, and in rising vp to care and conscience, of yeelding vnto him, the holy fruites of a new life.

Secondly, as a further fruit of the comfort hereof, and of the same our care, it is our dutie to offer vp euery spirituall sacrifice, of true christian obedience: and namely, contrition of heart, praier, praise, and almes-giuing.

Thirdly, it is our dutie, from the vertue of the princely power of our Lord Iesus Christ deriued vnto vs, continually to subdue & keepe vnder, not only sin and the lusts thereof: but also the suggestions of the diuel, & this world, that they neuer reigne or rule ouer vs.

Finally, it is our dutie, in the same respect, (if neede so require) that we doe offer vp our liues themselues, as it were a sacrifice, or thank-offering, for the witnessing of the truth, by holy martyrdome.

Explication and proofe.

These things also, haue indeed their warrant, from the holy Scriptures.

For the first point whereof, we haue (to begin withall) one plaine testimony, Rom. 12. 1. 2. Reade also Gal. 5. 24. In this respect, the preaching of the Gospel, is a kinde of sacrificing of the people vnto God: euen of so many, as are thereby conuerted vnto him. Rom. 15. verses 15, 16, 17. and 2. Cor. 2. 15.

For the second point: to wit, that the duties mentioned, are to be performed, as spirituall sacrifices to God: reade Psal. 51. 17. The sacrifices of God (saith the Kingly Prophet Dauid) are a contrite heart, &c. And Psal. 141. 2 Praier is called a sacrifice. Likewise Reuel. chap. 5. 8. and chap. 8. 3. 4. So is thanks-giuing. Heb. 13. 15. And in the next verse, almes-giuing or beneficence is termed by the same name. And againe Philip. 4. 18.

These are the sacrifices, whereunto (as the Apostle Peter assureth vs) christians are called, as a holy Priesthood, to offer vp spirituall sacrifices, acceptable to God, by Iesus Christ. 1. Ep. chap. 2. verse 5. And verse 9. Ye are a royall Priesthood, &c. that ye should shew forth the vertues of him that hath called you out of darknes into his maruelous light.

Basil. uete.*

For the proofe of the third point, we haue Rom. 6. 12. Where the Apostle writeth thus, Let not sinne reigne in your mortall body: he vsing therein, a *word noting the spirituall kingdome ore dominion of sinne: which cannot be subdued, but by a countermand of a kingly power, superiour vnto it. And verse 13. he saith further, Neither giue yee, your members as weapons of vnrighteousnes: where he vseth a * word of Priesthood, by an allusion to the presenting, and placing of the bodily sacrifice before the Lord, after the manner of the law. Reade also, concerning that power, which wee haue by our Sauiour, against the world. 1. Iohn. chap. 5. verses 4, 5. And ouer the Diuell. Iames 4. 7. And Ephes. 6. 10, 11, &c. Likewise Rom. 16. 20. and 1. Iohn. 3. 8. and chap. 5. 18. In all which things, let vs not lightly weigh and consider with our selues (I pray ye) how great a dignitie this is: for a man to haue power to countermand

 Parisiā-uete.*

Beliefe in God the Son euen in Iesus Christ, the onely Son of God, our Lord.

The Duties

mand and suppresse his wicked lusts, & the world, and the Diuell: according to that Prou: 16. 32. And Eccles: 7. 21. But now on the contrarie, let vs also well consider, how absurde and vnseemely, yea, how dangerous, and deadlie a thing it is; for the Prince to be his subiectes vassall: yea the vassall of the most traiterous, and murtherous subiect that may be. Euen so absurde it is, that a Christian should be at the command of sin and Satan: that they should be as the Generall of the field, & we to fight vnder their banner. This should not onely be to our owne reproch, who doe beare the name of Christ; but also euen to the dishonour of our King and Sauiour himselfe. Let vs therefore earnestly consider, that it is our dutie to take diligent heed, against these euills.

For the proofe of the last pointe, let vs read Philip: 2. 17. For euen like as, when the zealous Magistrate putteth to death the malefactor that is well worthie of it, it is as a holie sacrifice offered vnto God on his part: so when anie other faithfull Christian, giueth his life for the Gospell, hee doth in speciall manner sacrifice himselfe vnto God.

Neither let it (I beseech ye) offend any (as we were partly aduised before, in the Comfortes) touching that hatefull reproch, which the Papists haue iustlie brought vpon their sacrilegious & blasphemous Priest-hood, the which, without all ground, and to a most vaine and wicked purpose, they appropriate to their clergie. It is sufficient for vs, that without them, wee knowe the minde of our Sauiour Christ, and in how honorable a sence, he hath aduanced vs, and all true beleeuing Christians (without exception) to be Priests vnto our God. And therfore, in this respect, and thus farre forth; let vs not balke this name, which in it selfe, and according to the right vse, & application of it, hath bene, & is stil a name of verie great dignity, & of a reuerend & holy honor. Nay, cõtrariwise, let euerie Christian, as well of the faithfull people, as of the publike ministerie, reioyce in this our dignitie together: in that wee are all sanctified, and admitted, to offer spirituall sacrifices, as hath bene shewed. The Minister publikelie in the assemblie, and the people with him, by his speciall guidance and direction in the name of God: and they also priuatlie by themselues, and with their families, in euerie priuate, and allowable dutie of Christianitie, according to the rule of Gods holie word. And herein, let vs haue no scruple, but that God admitteth vs freely, to drawe neare vnto him, through our Lord Iesus Christ, with holie hearts and consciences, to make our praiers vnto him, at all due times, and in all meete places, holding vp pure hands without wrath, and doubting, &c. Tim: 2. 8. And in manie other places of holie scripture.

The summe of all, is this: Seeing our Sauiour is anointed of God, to be our great Prophet: we stand bound to submit our selues to his doctrine.

Seeing hee is our onely high Priest; we must seeke for reconciliation, and peace to our consciences, with God, through him.

Seeing he is our Lord and King, we must submit our selues to his lawes and gouernment, that so we may enioye the benefit of his protection.

And on the contrarie, wee must renounce all false Mediatours, false Prophets, false Christes, and false Lordes: and namely, the yoke of the most grieuous proude and statelie Lord, the Antichrist of Rome.

Thus farre therfore, concerning the duties belonging to the comfort of our Christian beliefe, in that our Sauiour is the Christ, or anointed of God: and likewise of the duties, in respect of euerie other of the titles, Sonne of God, Iesus, and Lord: whom while we thus obey, wee may be sure, that the holie Ghost is giuen vnto vs, according to that which we read, Acts: 5. 32.

AND nowe at the last, to conclude this part of our inquirie, concerning beliefe in the second Person of the holie Trinitie, in regard of the same his Titles, noting vnto vs his most high Person, & also his most holy office:

Question. What is the danger of not beleeuing, & of not obeying this our Lord IESVS CHRIST the Sonne of GOD, in all these respectes?

Beleefe in God the Sonne, euen in Iesus Christ, the onely Sonne of God, our Lord.

Ans. Who is a liar (saith S. Iohn) but he that denieth that Iesus is the Christ? he same is the Antichrist, that denieth the Father and the Sonne. Whosoeuer denieth the Sonne, the same hath not the Father. 1. Ep: chap. 2. verses 22. 23. And chap. 5. 11. 12. Eternall life is in the Sonne of God. He that hath the Sonne, hath that life: he that hath not the Sonne of God, hath not that life.

And in the Gospel of Iohn chap: 8. 24. Our Sauiour Christ telleth the Iewes, that if they would not beleeue in him as being the Sonne of God, they should dye in their sinnes.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

The same is likewise testified, in diuers other places of holy Scripture, to set out this great danger: some whereof, haue beene mentioned before. As Iohn chap: 3, 18. 19. and verse 36. And chap: 16, 8. 9. wherein it is noted for a very hainous sinne, not to beleeue in Christ. And 1. Cor: 16. 22. If any man loue not the Lord Iesus Christ, let him be had in execration. &c. And 2. Thes: 1. 7. 8. the punishment is threatened, to be answerable to the hainousnes of the sinne of not knowing nor obeying. Read also, Deut. 18. verses 15. 19. Act: 3. 23. Heb. 1. &c. and chap: 3, 1, 7, 8. and chap: 12, 25, &c.

For this cause it is, (that is, for the auoiding of this so great and horrible a danger) that God of his infinite mercie, (desirous that all which belong vnto him should bee saued) hath caused our Sauiour Christ to bee most famously published and made knowne to the world; by prophecies of men, by the testimonie of Angels, by the sound of his owne voice, by the often renewed witnesse of Iohn Baptist: yea and the cause why our Sauiour himselfe preached himselfe; most plainely professing, that hee was the very Messiah and Sauiour of the world. Iohn: 4, 26, 41, 42. and chap: 7. 37 &c. And chap: 9, 35, 36, 37, 38, and chap: 11, verses 24. 25, 26. And Iohn: 20, 27, 28, 29. And Luke, 24, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, &c. And Heb: 2, verses, 3, 4. And therefore how great an indignitie is it indeed, to refuse so great a saluation, as is offered by so worthy a person? shall it not be iust with God, to punish all such with a thousand damnations, if it were possible, And the rather, if refusing the true Christ, any should yeeld himselfe, to the worship of Antichrist. Reuel: chap: 14, 9, 10, 11.

Wherefore, let all Turkes and Iewes, Athiestes and profane persons, reproch vs for beleeuing in him that was the Carpenters Son, in such a one as was crucified, and could not, as they blaspheme, saue himselfe: let vs reioyce in this, that through the rich mercie of God, we beleeue in that Sonne of God, who was indeed by common estimation, the Sonne of Ioseph, and who did in very deed, of his owne most gracious good will, giue himselfe to the death of the crosse for vs, &c.

And thus may we see, that it is no vaine labour, that we take: when we search out the ground and riches of this most excellent mysterie of faith and godlines: seeing our saluation lyeth vpon it. And as our Sauiour himselfe, giueth vs to vnderstand; they that will not receiue him, being the true Christ, are in danger to be giuen ouer to imbrace a false Christ, through the iust iudgement of God, Iohn: 5, 43. I am come in my Fathers name, and ye receiue me not: if an other shall come in his owne name, him will ye receiue. Read also, 2. Thes: 2. 10.

Finally, those horrible and blasphemous herisies which many haue fallen into, ought to awaken vs, to looke diligently to our hearts: that we doe vnderstād, and beliue rightly, this article of our faith. To the which end, it may not be amisse (for the more forcible admonitions sake) if we set down some of those sundry heresies, wherewith the Diuel hath peruerted the mindes of many.

And first, against the true vnderstanding of the titles IESVS and CHRIST: in that the heretikes called Gnostici, and the Cerinthians, and the Colarbasij, seperated Iesus and Christ: as if these two names, had signified two seuerall Persons. And againe, in that the Valentinians deuided Iesus Christ into three Persons.

More particularly, against the title Iesus, appropriated to our Sauiour: the heretike Menander called himselfe, Iesus and the Sauiour. The Manichees say, that Iesus is the redeemer onely of our soules, and not of our bodies.

The

Beliefe in God the Son euen in Iesus Christ, the onely Son of God, our Lord.

Danger of not beleeuing this Article.

The Paternians, and Postillians: they forsooth, will haue Iesus to bee the redeemer of the vpper partes of the body onely, and not of the nether parts.

Likewise, against the right vnderstanding of the title Christ: the Nestorians, and the Christotytes, make in Christ, one Person of his diuinitie, and another of his humanitie.

The Perate say, that Christ hath a threefold body consisting of three parts of the world.

The Helcesaites make two Christs.

The Simonians said that Simon Magus was Christ.

The Sethians say that Seth was the Christ.

Against the true meaning of the title, onely begotten Sonne; Basilidians, and Origenistes, they contend that Christ was a created minde: yet so, as they say that he was the first begotten minde or vnderstanding.

The Marcionites say, that Christ is not the Sonne of God the Creator, but of another.

The Origenistes and Arians say, that Christ was a creature by nature, and God by grace or fauour.

That Christ the Sonne of God, should bee begotten of the seede of God the Father, the Heracleonites and Bardesanistæ made a fabulous narration.

The Valentinians, Secundians, and Colarbasij fancie, that Christ should not be of God, but ex Æonibus, according to their most vaine & curious speculatiõ.

The Benohans say, that Christ was the Sonne of God, but yet by adoption.

The Natimtarij say, that Christ was indeed from euerlasting with the Father: but not the Sonne from euerlasting, neither begotten by him.

The Artemonites, Samosateniant, Marcellians, Photinians, and Lucians, denye Christ to be God: or to haue beene at all, before the time of his incarnation, from the Virgine Mary.

The Seruetani will haue the Father, to be from euerlasting, about to generate the Sonne: but not to doe it indeed, till the time he was begotten of the Virgin Mary.

The Arians and Exoucontij, will haue Christ made of things that had no beeing before.

The Arians againe, and the Donatistes say, that Christ was not (Autotheos) God of himselfe, but a made God, and inferiour to the Father.

The Melchisedecians say, that Christ was inferiour to Melchisedec, both in power and nature.

The Accatians, Semi-ariani and the Macedoniani, doe hold Christ, to be onely of like substance with the Father, Omoiousion, not Omoousion of the same substance.

The Eunomians say, that hee is of another substance then the Father, Heterousios.

The Anomians and Aetians, that he is of a dislike substance from the Father, Anomoios.

The Duliani, that he is the Fathers seruant.

The Agnoetæ say, that the diuine nature of Christ, was ignorant of some things.

The Monophysitæ, that the diuine nature in Christ, did take the beginning from the incarnation.

Finally, against the true meaning of the title Lord: the Papists make the Pope heade of the Church: and acknowledge him to haue a power, to make lawes beside the word of God, to bind the conscience vnder paine of dãnation.

These manifold, hereticall, blasphemous, and monstrous conceites, laied thus before vs: may iustly admonish vs, to vse all good and holy diligẽce, with most humble praier and supplication to God, and all reuerend attention to the word of God: lest at any time we should be any way dangerously peruerted, and turned aside, from the true faith of the Sonne of God, our Lord Iesus Christ.

The

The ground of the article.

God the Son, who was cõceiued by the holy Ghost.

The which holy care, and manifold great grace, God of his infinite mercy, and very rich grace, grant vnto vs all, for Iesus Christ sake. Amen.

And thus hauing inquired more generally, into the doctrine o four Christian beliefe in the second Person of the holy Trinitie; according to these titles attributed vnto him, Iesus, Christ, the onely Sonne of God, our Lord: it followeth nowe, that wee are to proceede, to make our more particular inquirie, concerning the manner howe it came to passe, that the same second Person of the blessed and glorious Trinitie, the Sonne of God, was incarnate, and tooke the nature of man: and thence-forth, to consider of his holy natiuitie, and birth: and so of all that hee hath wrought, and suffered for our redemption and saluation, as it followeth further in the Articles of our beliefe.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who was conceiued by the holy Ghost.

Question. WHat therefore is next set downe in them?

Answere. It followeth thus in the next place.

Who was conceiued by the holy Ghost.

Question. It doth so in deede: But what ground of holy Scripture haue you, to warrant your faith, in this point of your beliefe?

Answere. We haue a sure ground and warrant for it, in the first chapter of the holy Gospel written by S. Matthew, verses, 18, 19 20.

Explicatiõ and proofe. This mysterie of the conception of our Sauiour, was reuealed from God, by the message of an Angell, to the Virgine Marie first, before he was conceiued in her wombe: as we read: Luk. 1. 31. Thou shalt conceiue in thy wombe, and beare a Sonne, and shalt call his name Iesus, saith the holy Angell. And chap. 2. 21. the Euangelist Luke remembreth againe, that this was spoken by the Angell, before our Sauiour was conceiued in the wombe. But after the conception, it was likewise, vpon a speciall occasion, reuealed to Ioseph by the Angell of the Lord, before the birth of the child: as the Euangelist Matthew reporteth, in the place by you alledged. Let vs heare his words.

Question. Which are they?

Answere. When as Marie the mother of Iesus Christ, was betrothed to Ioseph, before they came together, she was found with child by the holy Ghost.

Then Ioseph her husband, being a iust man, and not willing to make her a publike example, was minded to put her away secretly.

But while hee thought these things, behold (saith the Euangelist) the Angell of the Lord appeared to him in a dreame, saying, Ioseph the Sonne of Dauid, feare not to take Marie for thy wife: for that which is conceiued in her, is of the holy Ghost.

This testimonie may not vnfitly be alledged in the first place here, though in order of time it followed that other in the first chapter of S. Luke: because that may more fitly be reserued, till wee come to speake of the Promise of this conception, to the benefit of vs & the whole Church of God. Vnto the which time also, we will reserue that which is to be obserued more fully, concerning this point.

Explication and proofe. Neuertheless, here we may not neglect the testimonie which was giuen of it the second time, and that by the message of a holy Angell, vpon such an occasion, as serueth notably, to confirme the truth of this great mysterie, that our Sauiour was conceiued by the holy Ghost, in the wombe of the virgine Marie, she remaining still a virgine. For seeing both Marie and Ioseph, were verie chast and godly persons, and minded not to come to the mariage bed, till they should be married, though they were alreadie betrothed: as Ioseph for his part, is cleared, in that it is testified of him, that hee was much troubled at Maries conception, conception, ſo ſoone as he perceiued it to be ſo: and Marie alſo, cannot be accuſed of Ioſeph, nor iuſtlie ſuſpected of him, to haue dealt vnfaithfullie and vnchaſtlie againſt him. And therefore, though hee were a iuſt man and hated ſinne: yet hauing a ſecrete perſwaſion of Maries innocencie, and partlie (it may be) giuing credit to the ſtrangeneſſe of that defence for herſelfe, which it is likely ſhee did, at the leaſt inſinuate and ſecretelie liſpe out vnto him: hee durſt not once thinke of vſing any hard courſe againſt his Spouſe, but onely thought to put her away ſecretlie, and to leaue the iudgement of ſo great a ſecrete to the Lorde himſelfe. By all theſe conſiderations, in the beſt probabilitie that wee might alledge: but in way of certaine demonſtration, from the teſtimonie of the holie Angell, and by the full ſatisfaction of Ioſeph, againſt all feare and doubtfull diſtraction about the matter; the article of the Conception of our Sauiour, by the holie Ghoſt, in the wombe of the bleſſed Virgine, is vndoubtedlie confirmed vnto vs. Of the which, becauſe, as was before determined, wee ſhall haue occaſion from the other teſtimonie of Saint Luke, to conſider more fullie, from the example of the Virgine Marie herſelfe: when wee come to the Promiſe. Wee will content our ſelues, to haue ſpoken onely thus much at this time: and ſo come to the meaning of the Article.

The meaning of the wordes.

Queſtion. WHat therfore, I pray you, is the meaning of theſe words, that our Sauiour Chriſt the Sonne of God, was conceiued by the holy Ghoſt, of the Virgine Marie?

Anſwer. To the vnderſtanding of theſe wordes, three things are to be knowen, and well conſidered of, as I haue bene taught.

Let it be ſo, which are they?

Queſtion. Anſwere. The firſt is this, that the Sonne of God, was by the power of the holie Ghoſt, made verie true man, in that hee tooke our nature of the ſubſtance of the Virgine: and ſo was of the true ſeede of Dauid, and made fleſhe of a woman, in the fulneſſe of time, according to the expreſſe doctrine of the holie Scriptures.

The ſecond thing to be conſidered, is that the ſame humane nature of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, the Sonne of God, was moſt perfitlie ſanctified, euen from the verie firſt moment of the conception: whereby not onely all originall ſinne and corruption, whatſoeuer, was vtterlie preuented, but alſo the ſpirituall ſeede of all fulneſſe of heauenlie grace, and holineſſe, was conferred, with power to growe vp, with moſt mightie increaſes.

The third thing is this, that from the ſame firſt moment of the moſt holie conception of our Sauiour, the humane nature was vnited to the diuine: and ſo became one in perſone with the ſame, to continue for euer and euer, though alwaies diſtinct in nature, without anie either confuſion, or the leaſt ſeparation of either from the other.

Explicatio and proofe. Theſe pointes indeed, as you haue well learned, are to be diligently conſidered, to the vnderſtanding of this great myſterie. The proofes and explication wherof, wee will nowe adioyne vnto them.

Touching the firſt, we read thus, Iohn 1. 14. The word was made fleſh. And Galat: 4. 4. The Sonne of God was made of a Woman. And Rom: 1. 3. and 2. Tim: 2. 8. He was made of the ſeede of Dauid, according to the fleſh. For the virgine Marie was of the poſteritie of King Dauid, as hereby plainely appeareth. And in this reſpect, hee is furthermore called the Sonne of Dauid: and therewithall, the Sonne of Man: as Matth: 20. verſes 28. 30. 31. and chapter 22 verſes 41. 42.

The Genealogie alſo of our Sauiour Chriſt, from Abraham, and ſo forward to Ioſeph, the reputed Father of our Sauiour in his deſcent, generation after generation, by the Euangeliſt Matth: cha: 1. verſes 1. 2. &c. And againe, from the ſame Ioſeph backward, euen to the firſt man Adam, ſet down by the Euangeliſt Luke, in his 3. chap: verſes 23, &c: in the aſcent or parentage of Marie: confirmeth this moſt plainely, and plentifullie, to all that are teachable, and willing to vnderſtand the ſame.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who was conceiued by the holy Ghoſt.

The meaning of the word.

Moreouer allbeeit the tribes did often marrie one within the other, Iudges 14. 3. as Dauid of Iuda married King Sauls daughter of Beniamin.

And Elizabeths mother, though of Iuda in all likelyhood, was married to one of Leui, and ſo was coſen to the Virgine Marie, Luke chapt: 1. verſes 5. 36. Yet becauſe they did moſt vſuallie marrie within their owne tribe, as the examples are frequent, and the matter cleare, euen of it ſelfe; and in one caſe, euen by ſpeciall cõmandement that it ſhould be ſo. Num: ch: 36, 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. We may iuſtly conceiue that Ioſeph tooke Marie to wife out of his owne tribe, after the vſuall manner. Yea, and more then this, all teſtimonies of the holie Euangeliſts, confirming that the holie propheſies, touching the deſcent of our Sauiour, are fulfilled: they are ſo many vndoubted proofes, that Marie as well as Ioſeph, was of the very familie & ſtock of king Dauid. For otherwiſe the propheſies could not haue ben fulfilled, & ſo the truth of the whole Goſpel ſhuld be called into queſtion of wicked Atheiſts. &c. Read alſo He: 2. 16. ch: 4. 15.

Well therfore may we reſolue of this truth, that our Sauiour Chriſt hath the verie true nature of man, of the bodilie ſubſtance of the Virgin Marie, like to vs in all things, euen from the conception, ſinne onely excepted: & indued likewiſe with a reaſonable ſoule, inſpired of God, at the time appointed, after the ſame manner, as God vſeth to animate (if we may ſo ſpeake) other children, in the wombs of their mothers: hauing an aptnes from the beginning, to vnderſtand and affect things: and growing afterward in knowledge, & wiſedome of minde, as well as in ſtature of bodilie ſubſtance: as it followeth to be conſidered of vs, in the time thereof. The ſumme of our preſent inſtruction is this, that our Sauiour did euen from the conception, take the true nature of man.

And what a wonderfull myſterie is this, that for the ſaluation of mankinde, the Sonne of God, being verie God, ſhould ſo farre abaſe himſelfe, to be made man, by aſſuming of mans nature: the immortall, to become after a ſort mortall, the infinite, finite, the Creator, creature? This is admirable mercie, this is a myſterie moſt worthie to be loued and reuerenced aboue all other.

But on the contrary ſide, very erroneous & heretical, is the opinion of all ſuch, as doe obſtinatelie hold, that our Sauiour did not take his humane nature from the ſubſtance of the bleſſed Virgin: but came from heauen, and paſſed through her wombe, as if wine ſhould be put into a veſſell, & afterwards to be emptied againe out of the ſame. whervnto they doe vainely and wickedlie abuſe theſe holy ſcriptures. 1. Cor: 15. 47. He is the Lord from heauen. And Philip: 2. 7. He took on him the forme of a ſeruant, &c. And Rom: ch: 8. 3. He was in the ſimilitude of ſinneſull fleſh. For our Sauiour Chriſt is the Lord from heauen, not in regard of of his humanity, but rather of his Deitie. Neither do the words, forme of a ſeruãt, or ſhape of man, take away either truth of mãhood, or truth of ſeruice, & inferiority, in reſpect therof: no more thẽ do the words (forme of God) vſed in the ſame place, denie the truth of his Godhead. And it is to be noted alſo, that the Apo: ſpeaketh by cõpariſon, & in reſpect of that glorie, which either our Sauior had with God before his incarnation, or now ſince his aſcenſion: which was greatly obſcured as it were, & hiddẽ vnder the vail of the fleſh, while he was here on the earth, euen frõ his conception, &c: till he roſe againe, & aſcẽded vp to heauẽ. Onelie thoſe words (ſimilitude of ſinfull fleſh) are ſimplie to be vnderſtood, inſomuch as our Sauiour was neuer ſinfull indeed: ſaue onely by imputation of our ſinnes, which he tooke vpon himſelfe, on our behalfe, to ſatiſfie for them.

Like heretical, is the fancie of ſuch, as contend, that our Sauiour Chriſt had no ſoule giuen vnto him in the wombe of the Virgin: vnder this imaginarie pretence, that the Deitie it ſelfe, was in ſtead of a ſoule vnto the bodie. Wherfore, let vs in the feare of God, abandon all ſuch erroneous conceits, as being directly contrary to the truth of the conception of his humane Nature, muſt needes be contrarie to the truth of beliefe, concerning the ſame.

Thus much of the firſt point of the Anſwer.

Nowe touching the ſecond point, that the humane nature of our Sauiour Chriſt, was perfectlie ſanctified in the Conception: the wordes of the holie

Angel

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who was conceiued by the holie Ghost.

Angel to the virgin Marie doe plainely shewe it. Luke 1. 35. The holie Ghost shall come on thee, &c: therefore also, that holie thing that shall be borne of thee, shalbe called the Sonne of God.

And so it must needes haue bene, to the ende, that he might be the fulfilling of that which was prefigured by the sacrifices of the lawe, which must be all of them in their kinde, pure and without blemish: that is to say, that he might be that true vnspotted lambe of God, that should take away the sinne of the world. And how should that cleanse away the filth of another thing, that is not cleane it selfe? If a foule clothe should be washed in foule water, it would remaine foule still. Likewise, if our Sauiour Christ had not bene perfite holie, how could he haue bene our sanctification in the sight of God?

For these causes therefore, was it neeessarie, that our Sauiour should be conceiued by the holie Ghost of a virgine, and not be begotten by ordinarie generation of man. For all that are so begotten, are sinnefull and vncleane.

Euerie man must confesse with King Dauid, that hee was conceiued in sinne. Onelie our Sauiour Christ is of all men to be excepted, in that his conception followed not the ordinary race. Read Heb: 2. 11. & 4. 15. and ch: 7. 26.

Thus then was our Sauiour Christ in his humane nature most holie, by the sanctification of the holie Ghost: euen from the conception, according to the Prophecie of Daniell. chap: 9. 24.

The third point of the answere, is likewise manifest from the former speech of the Angel, saying: That holie thing which shalbe borne of thee, shalbe called the Sonne of God.

For euen therefore was it to be called so, because it should answere to the name, not in any bare likelyhood, or resemblance, but in verie truth. And in the same respect also, was he to be called Immanuel, God with vs.

The immediate worker of this Personal vnion of the humane and Diuine natures, and therewithall, of the perfect sanctification of the humanitie, was the holie Ghost: though it was the iointe-worke of the whole Trinitie.

For wheras the Person of the Father sent the Sonne, to take our nature, and the Sonne accordinglie did take the same, & vnite it to himselfe, the holie Ghost was that Person, by whose effectuall working, the Personal vnion was made, in the wombe of the Virgin, and by whome the humane nature was sanctified, to the perfect fulfilling of his office. And note wee also here-withall, that in so much as the humane nature is ioined to the diuine; that is, to the second Person of the holie Trinitie, which hath assumed, & taken it to the same his Person: therfore the denomination of the Personal vnion of both natures, is taken properlie from the Diuine nature assuming, and not from the humane nature assumed. So then, the Person of our Sauiour, is a Diuine Person, and not a humane Person, though it consist of either nature, through a most diuine coniunction.

Thus much concerning the meaning of this Article.

Question. NOwe in the next place, what promise haue you, that the Sonne of God our Lorde Iesus Christ, should be conceiued by the holie Ghost, of the Virgine Marie: and that the humane nature should be vnited to the Diuine, to our endlesse benefit and saluation?

Answere. In the 14. verse of the 7. ch: of the Prophecie of Isaiah, Behold (saith the Prophet) a Virgin shall conceiue, and beare a Sonne, and shall call his name Immanuel.

Explicatio & proofe. The same promise was also made, long before the time that Isaiah prophesied, as we haue seene before: to wit, euen from the beginning of the worlde, vnder the name of the seede of the woman, which should breake the serpents head: that is, the Deuils head, or strength, & kingdome, here in this sinfull world. And it hath bene after that, renewed to Abraham, as we read, Gen: 12. 13. & ch: 18. vers: 18. Likewise to Isaak, & in Isaak: ch: 21. 12. and ch: 22. 18. Ro: 9. 7. Gal: 3. 27. 28. Heb. 11. 18. And to Iakob, Gen: 28. 4. and verses 13. 14. 15. For all what-soeuer was promised and performed, rested vppon this promise, made in Chriſt, as the Patriarkes well vnderſtood, as our Sauiour himſelfe teſtifieth ſaying, Abraham reioyced to ſee my day, and he ſawe it, and was glad. Iohn. 8. 56. Thus, I ſaye, the Promiſe was made, and vnderſtood of moſt ancient time, though not ſo expreſſlie, that our Sauiour ſhould be conceiued of a Virgine, as the Lord reuealed and foretold by his Prophet Iſaiah afterward: yea ſo to be conceiued of a Virgine, that ſhee ſhould remaine ſo, without touch of man, notwithſtanding this conception. According to that of the holie Euangeliſt Matth: ch: 1. 22. 23. ſaying: All this was done, that it might be fulfilled, which was ſpoken of the Lord, by the Prophet, ſaying: Beholde a Virgine ſhall be with childe, &c. For if ſhe ſhould not haue remained a virgine, notwithſtanding this Conception, it could haue bene no ſuch ſtrange thing, that ſhe that was before a virgin, ſhould conceiue. Thus then we ſee, that this conception of our Sauiour hath bene from the beginning, both purpoſed, and promiſed by the Lorde to his Church.

Beleefe in God the Sonne who was conceiued by the holy Ghoſt.

The Promiſe.

The ſame may appeare alſo, by the often repeated promiſe, that a branche, or a bud, ſhould ſpring vp vnto Dauid, as it were out of a dead ſtumpe: as we read Iſai: 4. 2. & ch: 11. 2. & 53. 2. Ier. 23. 5. & 33. 15. Zech: 3. 8. & ch: 6. 12.

But that wee may proceede: the ſame promiſe was made more immediately; yea, & in the time moſt nearelie approching the conception it ſelfe, to the Virgin Marie, as was a little before touched. Let vs nowe come to that, where is it contained?

Queſtion.

Anſwere. The Euangeliſt Luke, doth plaine the report, and teſtifie it vnto vs at large, in the firſt chapter of the Goſpel written by him: from the 26. verſe to the 39. verſe of the ſame.

Queſtion. Hee doth ſo in deed. What are the wordes of the Texte?

Anſwere. 26 And in the ſixt moneth (ſaith the holie Euangeliſt) the Angel Gabriel, was ſent from God, vnto a Citie of Galile, named Nazareth.

27 To a Virgine affianced to a man whoſe name was Ioſeph, of the houſe of Dauid, and the Virgines name was Marie.

28 And the Angel went in vnto her, and ſaid, Haile thou that art freely beloued: the Lord is with thee: bleſſed art thou among women.

29 And when ſhe ſaw him, ſhee was troubled at his ſaying; and thought what manner of ſalutation that ſhould be.

30 Then the Angel ſaid vnto her, Feare not Marie, for thou haſt found fauour with God, 31 For loe, thou ſhalt conceiue in thy wombe, and beare a Sonne, and ſhalt call his name IESVS.

32 Hee ſhalbe great, and hee ſhalbe called the Sonne of the moſt high, and the Lorde God ſhall giue him the Throne of his Father Dauid.

33 And he ſhal reigne ouer the houſe of Iakob for euer, & of his kingdom ſhalbe no end.

34 Then ſaid Marie to the Angel. How ſhall this be, ſeeing I knowe not man?

35 And the Angel anſwered, and ſaid vnto her, The holie Ghoſt ſhall come vpon thee, and the power of the moſt high ſhall ouerſhadowe thee: therefore alſo, that holy thing which ſhalbe borne of thee, ſhalbe called the Sonne of God.

36 And beholde, thy couſin Elizabeth, ſhee hath alſo conceiued a Sonne in her olde age: and this is the ſixt moneth to her, which is called barren.

37 For with God ſhal nothing be vnpoſſible.

38 Then Marie ſaide, Beholde the ſeruant of the Lorde: be it vnto mee according to thy word. So the Angell departed from her.

Explicatiõ and proofe.

Here indeede is a plaine, & full report, or narration of the Promiſe of the Conception, made immediatlie to the bleſſed Virgin Marie: & the ſame repleniſhed with many excellent inſtructions, as was declared at large, in the Sermons made vpon that text, wherof we cãnot ſtand now to make any long rehearſall.

Brieflie two things are to be marked chieflie in theſe wordes, concerning the Promiſe of this holie Conception.

Firſt the efficient cauſe, which is God the Father, by the immediate working of the holie Ghoſt, as hath bene ſhewed before. But not by the holie Ghoſt, as doing doing the office of a father by generation, if we would ſpeake properly: but in ſtead of a naturall father of the bodie, exerciſing his diuine power of creation, though this his mighty working by creation, may be called alſo a kinde of begetting, in ſuch ſenſe, as God is called a Father, partly in regard of his works of creation, as hath beene declared heretofore.

Beliefe in God the Son, who was conceiued by the holy Ghoſt.

The ſecond thing to be obſerued in the report of this promiſe of conception: is the inſtrumentall, or materiall cauſe thereof, which was the Virgine Marie. So that the word, Conceiued, is to be referred, both to the holy Ghoſt, and alſo to the bleſſed Virgin: to him, as to the author of the conception: to her as to the inſtrument, miniſtring the matter of the conception.

The reuelation of this moſt extraordinary conception, thus promiſed to the Virgin Marie, is to be accounted of vs, a ſingular mercy and fauour of God: not only to the Virgin her ſelfe, but alſo to vs, & to the whole Church of God.

To Marie, becauſe otherwiſe ſhe could not haue poſsibly conceiued in her minde, that her body had beene conceiued by the holy Ghoſt, with the Sonne of God. She ſhould haue beene confounded, rather then reioyced, at this ſo ſtrange, and vnſearcheable a worke of God. Well might ſhe haue had peace in her conſcience, in that ſhe knew well, that ſhe had neuer diſhoneſted her ſelfe: but comfort of faith, how could ſhe haue had any, but by reuelation from God? The reuelation of this myſtery therefore, was a ſingular mercy of God to Marie her ſelfe, as was ſaid.

But not onely to her, but alſo to vs, and to the whole Church, as was further affirmed. And the rather, conſidering, as well the honourable Meſſenger, that was ſent, euen the holy Angell of God: as the notable manner of his doing of the meſſage, from the Lord.

Firſt, by an vnwonted ſalutation. verſe 28.

Secondly, by a ſweete and comfortable incouraging of the bleſſed Virgin againſt her feare, by reaſon of his ſodaine appearing to her being alone, and becauſe of the ſame his ſtrange and vnwonted ſalutation. verſe 30.

Thirdly, by a plaine narration of the whole matter vnto her: with an excellent deſcription of the childe, what maner of one he ſhould be. ver. 31, 32, 33.

Fourthly, by a notable deſcription of the manner of the conception, how it ſhould be wrought and effected in the wombe of the Virgin: for her further ſatisfaction, and confirmation, againſt all her doubtings, verſe 35. Yea ſo as the Angel would not leaue her, till ſhe was put out of all doubt. To the which end, he gaue her alſo, a very rare ſigne, and token, for the further eſtabliſhing of her faith. For he diſcouereth vnto her, the conception of old barren Elizabeth: and the time how long ſince, ſo that ſhe might perceiue that Elizabeth was then vpon her quickening with childe. verſes 36. 37. as Marie found it to be true ſhortly after, euen as the Angell had told. For ſhee going to Elizabeth: at her very comming to her, the childe did ſpring in the wombe of Elizabeth: and thereupon, Elizabeth moued by the holy Ghoſt reioyced, and ſaluted Marie, by the moſt honourable name of the mother of the Lord, and ſhewed her ſelfe thankfull to God. Whereupon Marie alſo brake forth in a very heauenly and propheticall thankſgiuing: as it followeth in the ſame chapter.

So then, from this notable meſſage of the Angel, the Virgin Marie being plainely informed, and obtaining victorie both againſt her aſtoniſhment, and alſo againſt all ſucceeding doubtings: it is ſo much the more vndoubted a confirmation to our owne faith, that ſhe was that Virgin, which God in his moſt holy prouidence, had ſet apart, and appointed thereunto.

To the which purpoſe alſo, the diligence of the holy Euangeliſt, yeeldeth a memorable furtherance: in that he certifieth vs of the time, when this bleſſed meſſage was ſent, to what place, & to what perſon, euen to this Marie, whom he alſo deſcribeth by as particular circumſtances as might be. verſes 26. 27.

Thus, the narration of this immediate promiſe of the conception of our Beliefe in God the Sonne, who was conceiued by the holy-Ghoſt.

Sauiour, by the holy Ghoſt: was a great mercie of God, both to the bleſſed Virgine Marie, and alſo to vs, and to the whole Church of God. The Comforts.

Queſtion. AND thus being aſſured of the promiſe, wee come to inquire of the Comforts, ariſing to our faith, from the aſſurance of the ſame. What may theſe comforts be?

Anſwere. This moſt holy conception of our Sauiour Chriſt is, as it were, the foundation of all our comfort, concerning his humane nature: in ſo much as if he had not been conceiued, he could neuer haue beene borne, nor haue wrought or ſuffered any thing at all for vs.

Likewiſe, the comfort is exceeding great, in that we are hereby aſſured, that hee in whom we beliene, is not only the true Chriſt, according to the propheſies of the holy Scriptures, fulfilled in his conception: but alſo that he was euen from his conception, perfectly fitted, to be a moſt worthie, & al-ſufficient mediator and Sauiour vnto vs, and for vs.

Moreouer, the vnion of our humane nature in him to the diuine, is generally the ground of all comfort: in ſo much as hereby, his humane nature is made the meanes, and as it were the condite-pipes, to cleanſe our filthy nature, and to conuay all graces, and euen the gift of eternall life it ſelfe vnto vs, from the diuine nature: which alone, is the euer-ſpringing, yea the euer-ouerflowing fountaine of the water of life.

Finally, this Perſonal vnion of the humane nature of our Sauiour with the diuine nature, is the very ground of our vniting, and eſpouſing with Chriſt: and ſo of our re-vniting to God, wherein ſtandeth all our happines.

Explication and proofe. It is very true. Our coniunction with God, is our happines: euen as on the contrary, it was from the beginning, our miſerie, that wee were ſeperated from him, through the fall of our firſt father Adam. For thereby, beſide the guiltines of his ſinne, wee haue in our ſelues, an originall fountaine of all ſinne: the which, of the owne accord, doth continually flow forth, to our eternall deſtruction, both of body and ſoule; vnles God ſhould be mercifull vnto vs. Ier. 6. verſes 7. 8. Now therefore, ſeeing, by our Sauiour Chriſt alone, wee are reconciled to God, and through him, reunited in a perfect league of peace and friendſhip, neuer to be diſſolued any more: yea, ſeeing we are in and by Chriſt, one with God, and he with vs: it is manifeſt, that herein reſteth all our happines, as vpon the onely ſure ground and foundation. So that whatſoeuer we loſt by Adams defection: that, yea a farre more excellent eſtate, is reſtored vnto vs by our Sauiour Chriſt, both for righteouſnes and holines, and alſo for happines and glorie: partly to be apprehended by faith here, and fully and really to be enioied for euer, in the kingdome of heauen. For our Sauiour Chriſt is made of God, to be vnto vs wiſedome, and righteouſnes, and ſanctification, and redemption. 1. Cor. 1. 30. Ye are of him in Chriſt Ieſus (ſaith the Apoſtle) who of God is made vnto vs wiſedome &c. That according as it is written, He that reioyceth, let him reioyce in the Lord. In which reſpect alſo, he is called our life, and the hope of our glorie. Coloſ. 1. 27. and chap. 3. verſe 4. When Chriſt who is our life ſhall appeare, then ſhall ye alſo appeare with him in glory.

This making of our Sauiour, to be a fit perſon, to theſe ſo great ends and purpoſes of Gods manifeſting of his rich and glorious grace: began euen by the moſt holy conception of his humane nature, in the wombe of the Virgin.

Whence it is alſo, that (as the Apoſtle Peter teacheth vs) God according to his godly power, hath giuen vnto vs all things, that pertaine to life and to godlines, through the knowledge of him that hath called vs vnto glory and vertue. Whereby (or as wee may reade rather) in ſo much as, moſt great and pretious promiſes are giuen vnto vs, that by them wee ſhould be partakers of the diuine (or godly) nature, (that is, of the renewing of the Image of God in holines and righteouſnes, as a fruit of this our ſpirituall communion with God, in and through our Lord Ieſus Chriſt) in that, (as it followeth in the Apoſtle) we flee the corruption that is in the world through luſt.

Read alſo to this purpoſe, Iohn ch. 14. v. 16, &c. 26. and ſo forth. For theſe are thoſe pretious promiſes, which the Apoſtle Peter ſpeaketh of; which are the the cause also of these so great effects, according to that of the Apostle Iohn 1. Epist. 1. 3. 4. and chap. 4. 16.

And all these haue their foundation in the conception and incarnation of Iesus Christ, the verie true Sonne of God our Lord. Yet so, as the confirmation and ratifying thereof, hath a necessary and further reference, not only to his birth and life, but also euen to his death: and thenceforth, to his sitting at the right hand of God the Father in his diuine maiesty and glory.

O most blessed and happy time therefore, that euer, in Christ Iesus, this only begotten Sonne of God, our humane nature was thus gloriously vnited to the diuine nature, by a most sacred bond, neuer thenceforth to be dissolued againe; that he might for euer be Immanuel, God with vs, and an euerlasting redeemer and Sauiour vnto vs.

Thus much concerning the Comforts of faith, in respect of this Article.

THe duties which ought to arise from the same Comforts, are in the next place, to be considered of vs.

Question. Which are they?

Answer. First, wee are to take diligent heede, that we doe conceiue nothing carnally or corruptly, but most purely and holily, of this conception of our Sauiour: the which, though it was very naturall in the effect, as touching the Virgin Marie, and the humane nature of our Sauiour: yet in the manner, it was most heauenly and diuine, in respect of the holy Ghost.

Secondly, it is our dutie, to esteeme most reuerendly of it, blessing God alwaies with most thankefull hearts, for his great mercie in reuealing this most secret and comfortable mystery vnto vs.

Thirdly, it may iustly admonish vs, to humble our selues, in the acknowledgment of our own natural, and sinfull corruption, in the ordinarie course of our conception.

Fourthly, hereby we may learne, that without our Sauiour Christ, our profane nature could by no meanes, haue beene perfectly sanctified to God.

We may learne also from this consideration, to beleeue in the holy Ghost, as in God our sanctifier: in so much as he had so diuine a hand, in the chiefe meanes of our sanctification, and whole redemption.

Finally, we may iustly put our selues in minde from hence, to seeke for our sanctification, and all increases thereof, by vsing those meanes onely, which the holy Ghost hath sanctified to that holy end and purpose.

Explicatiõ and proofe. We may well doe so indeede. But let vs see some particular proofes, from point to point, in order.

For the first point, that which wee reade, Iohn. 3. 6. may afford vs a good proofe, in that our Sauiour himselfe saith, That which is borne of the spirit, is spirit. For seeing he speaketh so of our spirituall regeneration, it may much rather be affirmed, that his conceiuing of our Sauiour, was euery way most spirituall, pure, and holy.

For the second, we haue Elizabeth for a notable example, in that she reioiced at the conception of our Sauiour, blessing the fruit of Maries wombe, and God for reuealing it vnto her, many months before it was borne. Wee haue likewise the example of Marie her selfe, who praiseth God, and reioyceth in her Sauiour, while yet he was in her wombe. And thus, from them, wee may perceiue, that we ought not to thinke, reade, or heare of the conception of our Sauiour, but it ought iustly to be a matter of great ioy, and thankfulnes, euen to this day, and for euer, so long as the world shall endure.

Touching the third. It is an euident conuiction of mans naturall corruption: seeing our Sauiour, who was to be pure from his conception, might not be conceiued by humane generation. For that which is borne of the flesh, is flesh: that is to say, it is corrupt and sinfull, as our Sauiour teacheth in the 3. chap. of Iohn, the former part of the 6. verse before alledged.

According to the fourth point, our Sauiour is called our holines, and so is made vnto vs, as it were by the hand of the holy Ghost; as wee saw it plainely teſtified before. 1. Cor. 1. 30.

For the fift point, reade Iohn, cha. 3. verſe 3. and 5. Except a man be borne againe of water, and of the ſpirit, he can neither ſee, nor enter into the kingdome of God. Reade alſo 1. Pet. 1. verſes 2. and 22. And 2. Theſ. 2. 12.

For the laſt point, reade forward in the 14. verſe of the ſame chapter. And 1. Cor. ch. 12. verſe 3. and 13. For the word and ſacraments, are ſpeciall meanes of our ſanctification. Reade alſo 1. Ioh. ch. 17. verſe 17. Eph. 5. 25, 26, 27. and Tit. 3. 5.

Hauing thus ſeene the ground of this Article, as alſo the meaning, the promiſe, comforts, and duties: the laſt thing to be conſidered, according to our order, is the danger of not beleeuing in our Sauiour Chriſt, conceiued by the holy Ghoſt, and thereby taking the true nature of man, of the ſubſtance of the Virgin Marie.

Queſtion. WHat therefore is the danger of it?

Anſwere. They that beleeue not in our Sauiour Chriſt conceiued, ſuch manner of one as he was, and of neceſsitie muſt be: can neither beleeue rightly in Ieſus Chriſt, either brought into the world, or liuing in the world, or going out of the ſame againe: and conſequently, can haue no fruit or benefit by him.

Explication and proofe. It is very true. The whole doctrine of faith, is ſo nearely knit and lincked together, in all the parts of it, as linkes in a golden chaine: that the latter is not perfit, and effectuall to the beleeuer, without the faith of the former, nor the former, but in reſpect of the latter. The diuine nature profitteth vs not to ſaluation, but by the humane: nor the humane, without the diuine, as our Sauiour himſelfe ſaith, Iohn, 6. 53. and verſes 61, 62, 63. The conception profiteth not, without the birth, nor the birth without the life, nor the life without the death, nor his death without his reſurrection, nor all that he did vpon earth, either before his reſurrection, nor in the forty daies after, without his aſcenſion vp to heauen. Neither doth his aſcenſion, or ſitting at the right hand of the Father, perfect our redemption and ſaluation, till he ſhall haue executed and performed his laſt iudgement. Reade Iohn, 16. 7. I tell you the truth, (ſaith our Sauiour) It is expedient for you, that I goe away: for if I goe not away, the Comforter will not come to you: but if I depart, I will ſend him to you. And verſes 12, 13, &c. Reade alſo Luke, 21. 27, 28. and Rom. 8. 23. Coloſ. 3. 1, 2, 3, 4. Philip. 3. 20, 21. and 1. Cor 15. verſes 12, 13, 14. and ſo forth to the end of the chapter.

In this reſpect alſo, it is ſaid of the Church of our Sauiour Chriſt, that they who were before his comming in the fleſh, were not perfect without vs, that haue followed them after his comming. Neither ſhall wee be perfect, till all ſhall be gathered into one fold. Heb. 11. 39. 40. Iohn, 10. 16.

But touching the Article of faith, now in hand. For any to beleeue in the obedience and death of our Sauiour, or in his reſurrection, &c. without beliefe in his conception: it were, as if one would build, without a foundation. For ſo our Sauiour Chriſt in regard of the coniunction of the humane and diuine nature, by this conception of the holy Ghoſt, is compared to the foundation of the Church: yea, to the whole and compleat building, ariſing from thence, in an alluſion to the holy temple of Ieruſalem, Hag. 2. ve. 3, 4, &c. Zech. 6. 9, &c. 15. and Iſai. 60.

The foundation of this ſpirituall Temple, may be ſaid to haue beene laid in the incarnation of our Sauiour, by the conception of the holy Ghoſt. By his birth, and by the obedience of his life and death, the walls were as it were raiſed and ſet vp, and by his reſurrection, &c. the roofe was laid ouer it, as it were, and fully finiſhed. Heb. 9. 1, &c. and verſes 11, &c.

Now though this houſe, (being well ſet forward in the building by God) was attempted to be pulled downe, by ſuch as were accounted in their time, chiefe & Maſter builders: yet in three daies our Sauiour built it vp againe: according as he had told thē before, that he would Ioh. 2. 19, Deſtroy this Temple, & in three daies I will build it vp againe.

The

Beliefe in God the Son, who was conceiued by the holy Ghoſt.

The danger of not beleeuing this Article.

The neceſſitie therefore of beliefe, concerning the truth of this Article of the conception of our Sauiour, is the cauſe why GOD hath ſo graciouſly reuealed, and confirmed it, together with the other Article of his birth, &c. by the teſtimonie, both of men, and women, and alſo of the Angels of heauen.

Now therefore, that we may growe to an iſſue, in this point, wee may iuſtly affirme, that they doe erre in the very foundation of our ſaluation: whoſoeuer doe not beleeue in our Sauiour Chriſt, according to the truth of this Article.

For it is no Chriſt, with an aierie body, or with a body from heauen conueied into the wombe of the Virgin, as ſome haue vainely fancied, whereby wee muſt bee ſaued: but by that CHRIST, who is the ſeede of Abraham, and Dauid, who tooke our true nature of the Virgin Mary, &c. as hath already beene declared.

Let vs therefore very carefully, euen as we tender our ſoules, auoid all erroneous and hereticall opinions and fancies, ſwaruing from the holy truth in this behalfe. The which, that wee may the better doe, it ſhall not be amiſſe for vs, to ſet downe a briefe collection of the manifold hereſies, of ſundrie ſorts of heretikes, miſled by the Diuel from the truth of this Article: that by other mens dangers, we may learne to beware.

Firſt, therefore, the heretikes called Carpocratiani are to bee vtterly condemned, who affirmed that our Sauiour Chriſt was conceiued after the carnall manner of the conception of other men.

Likewiſe, the Ebionites, Cerinthians, and Theodeſians, who held that hee was conceiued by the comming together of Ioſeph and Mary.

Theſe are directly contrary to the holy Scriptures, touching the conception of our Sauiour by the holy Ghoſt.

There haue beene diuers other heretikes, who haue partly denied the truth of the humane nature; and partly haue peruerted and ouerthrown the truth of the perſonall vnion of both the natures.

Againſt the truth of the humane nature.

Firſt the Valentinians, Secundians and Apollinariſtes doe deny that Chriſt tooke a body of Mary.

The Tatians and Manichæans deny Chriſt to be of the ſeede of Dauid.

The Ophites, Cerdonians, Marcionites, Apellites, Manichæans, and Antitactobites, deny CHRIST, that was borne of the Virgin Mary, to be true man, &c.

The Apellites ſay, that the body of Chriſt was compounded of the foure Elements and of the Starres.

The Armenij ſay, that the body, which was taken of Mary, was from the conception, ſuch as could not ſuffer any paine.

The Valentinians, and other heretiks, would make Chriſt to haue a heauenly and ſpirituall body, and not an earthly body, or like to the bodies of other men.

The Arians, and Eunomians, deny Chriſt to haue taken a humane ſoule, but onely a body.

The Apollinariſtes, grant that Chriſt tooke indeed a ſoule with the body, but yet a vegetatiue ſoule onely, and not a reaſonable ſoule.

Such are the wicked hereſies, imbraced of many, contrary to the veritie of our Sauiour Chriſts humane nature, both in body and ſoule.

Now, againſt the truth of the perſonal vnion of the humane nature with the diuine, there are many like wicked and fantaſticall hereſies.

Firſt, the Eutychians, Iacobites, and Armenij affirme that the humane nature of Chriſt, was abſorpt or ſwallowed vp of the diuine.

The Neſtorians, Seruetans, and Vbiquitarians, contend that the humane nature

Beliefe in God the Sonne, borne of the Virgin.

The ground of the article.

nature is deified (that is, as they say) changed into the diuine, and made equall vnto it.

The Eutychians say, that there is a third thing, made of a certaine mixture of the two natures in Christ.

This third thing, the Theodosians say, that it is mortall: but the Caians say, it is immortall.

The Manichees affirme that the Sonne of God, descended into the Sonne of Mary, at his Baptisme.

The Apollinarists say, that the word of God it selfe, was changed into the flesh.

The Theopaschites teach, that the diuine nature did suffer in Christ.

The Acephali and Severites, grant indeed, that both the diuine nature, and also the humane, do remaine in Christ: but they say with all, that their proprieties are confounded, and not distinct.

The Apollinaristes againe, they say, that Christ in that he is man, hath no will of his owne, because the humane nature is, by their false doctrine, confounded and changed into the diuine.

The Monothelites say likewise, that there is one onely will in Christ.

And thus, we seeing, how many and how wicked and damnable heresies, are taken vp and imbraced, against the holy truth of this Article: it may, and ought iustly, to stirre vs vp, to be both very diligent to ground our selues in the truth, and also to watch with great circumspection, that the Diuel doe neuer, by any of his wicked suggestions, or deceitfull instruments, drawe vs away, in one respect or other, either on the right hand, or on the left. And to this end, let vs all pray to God alwaies, with great instance, that it may please him, of his infinite mercie, euen for our Lord Iesus Christs sake, to teach, direct, preserue, and establish our hearts, in his holy truth. And so shall wee bee safe. Amen.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, borne of the Virgin Marie.

Question. LEt vs now goe forward. What followeth in the next place, in the Articles of our Christian Beliefe?

Answere. It followeth, that we professe our selues to beleeue, that our Sauiour was borne of the Virgin Marie.

Question. What ground of holy Scripture haue you, for the proofe and warrant of it?

Answere. The holy History of it, together with the report of those things, which are adioined to the further illustration of it, is contained in the 2. chap: of the Euangelist Luke, from the beginning of the chapter to the 20. verse.

And in the last verse of the first chap: of the Euangelist Matthew. And in the 2. ch. from the beginning of it, to the 19. verse of the same.

Explication and proofe. So then, we haue two things to obserue, concerning the Natiuitie and birth of our Sauiour.

First, the historie of the Natiuitie it selfe, in respect of the most neare circumstances of it.

Secondly, those things which followed after it, for the more full manifestation and confirmation of the certaintie of it.

Let vs therefore consider both of the one and also of the other of them.

Question. And first, what doth the holy storie teach vs, concerning the Natiuitie, or birth it selfe?

Answere. It reporteth those three things.

First, the time when our Sauiour was borne.

Secondly, the place where.

Thirdly, the manner how.

What

Beleeue in God the Son who was borne of the Virgin Mary.

The ground of the article.

Explicatio & proofe.

Qu. What doth it teach vs concerning the time of the birth?

Ans. The holy Storie teacheth vs in the first place, that it was shortly after the birth of Iohn the Baptist.

It is true. For so may it plainely be gathered, by comparing of the latter part of the first chapter of Saint Luke, from the 57. verse, with the beginning of the second chapter. For immediately after that the Euangelist hath recorded the birth of Iohn Baptist, and the memorable matters belonging thereunto: then he continueth the holy Storie thus, in the first wordes of the 2. chap: And it came to passe in those daies, &c. that is to say, the daies shortly following the birth of Iohn the Baptist. So that like as he had before annexed the Historie of the cōception of our Sauiour Christ succeeding the history of the cōception of Iohn, about sixt monthes after: so he doth now answereably note the birth of our Sauiour, as following the birth of Iohn, in the same proportion. And the rather are wee so to vnderstand the Euangelist Luke, because hee doth obserue the like course of proceeding afterward: treating of the Preaching of our Sauiour, after the Historie of Iohns Preaching & the apprehension & death of our Sauiour after the historie, of the imprisonment and beheading of Iohn. The which notation of the time, is agreeable to the holy Prophecie of Malachie, who forthwith vnder the name of Eliah: foretelling, that Iohn the Baptist should bee the forerunner of our Sauiour, and that then our Sauiour himselfe should follow shortly after: whereunto also the other Euangelists, as well as Luke, doe agree as touching the successiue Preaching of our Sauiour, after the Preaching of Iohn: though in the report of their successions, in conception and birth, Luke is alone.

Thus then we see in the first place, the first note concerning the description of the time.

Question. How doth the Euangelist note it else?

Answere. He telleth vs, that it was at such time, as Augustus Cæsar was Emperour of Rome, a time of famous note in all the world. At the which time also, as he further recordeth, Cyrenius was the Gouernour of Syria, a thing well knowne to the Iewes, and other nations adioined to the same.

They are the very wordes of the Euangelist indeed. So that the time of the natiuitie of our Sauiour, is described by such notes, as all both Iewes and Gentiles are plainely instructed, and certified of it, as of a truth vndoubtedly to be beleeued. And it standeth in certaine record among other the famous and well knowne workes of God, to the condemnation of all infidels, and athiests in the world, as a publike testimonie of the whole world against them, if so be they will not repent them of their grieuous sinnes of vnbeliefe and contradiction, and imbrace the truth of God to their saluation.

And this description of the time, is agreeable to the ancient prophecie of the Patriark Iaakob, Gen: 49. 10. by whom God foretold that the scepter (or tribe, for so the hebrewe word doth often signifie in the bookes of the Prophet Moses) should not depart from Iuda, nor a law-giuer from betweene his feete, till Shilo (that is, vntill his Sonne, to wit, Christ that promised seede and great Law-giuer and King) should come. Yea euen of that tribe of Iuda, to rule and gouerne all Israel, and the whole Church of God, both Iewes & Gentiles, for euer. As though Iaacob should haue said thus, albeit both distinction of tribe, and also the power of scepter and gouernment, shall be vtterly taken away after the birth or comming of Christ in the flesh: for so the word Shilo (signifying the after-birth) giueth to vnderstand, the continent being put for the thing contained or lapped vp in it: yet before this his comming, it shall not be altogether so, saith the holy Patriarke. And so it came to passe indeede.

Shebet.

For vnto the birth of our Sauiour (as Iosephus writeth in his Historie of the Iewes) this tribe had the gouernment of Sanhedrim, which was a senate of 72. persons, among whom no doubt, some were of the stocke and family of King Dauid. But Herod, not long after the birth of our Sauiour, maliciously caused those that were then of this Senate, to bee cruelly murthered.

So

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who was borne of the Virgin Marie.

The ground of the Article.

So that, though there continued a power of gouernment, among them after this, yet it was with great limitation and restraint, as appeareth Iohn. 18. 31. Where they themselues professe, that they had no authoritie to put any man to death: and it did waste away more and more, vntill the Scepter altogether ceased among them; yea and the distinction of the tribe also, by reason of that horrible destruction, which fell vpon many hundred thousands of them, and therewithall, a miserable dispersion of those that were left aliue. Thus the prophecie of the Patriark Iaakob, described the time of the birth of our Sauiour, by the continuance of the tribe and scepter till that day: insinuating therewithall, that thenceforth, they should not onely decay, but also cease, according as it came to passe. Hetherto therefore concerning the time.

Question. Let vs now come to the second point: that is, concerning the place of our Sauiours birth. Where was that?

Answere. At Beth-lehem in the tribe, or territory of Iuda.

Explicatiõ & proofe. So writeth the Euangelist Luke in the 4. verse of his second chapter. And so also, writeth the Euangelist Matthew, in the first verse of his second chapter.

It accordeth also with the prophesie of Micah, the Prophet in the 2. verse of his 5. chap. From whence it was likewise acknowledged, for a matter out of question, that Christ was to be borne there, by the appointment of God, the chiefe Priests and Scribes of the people themselues being Iudges: as wee reade Matth. 2. verses 4, 5, 6. though afterward, they proued the most malignant, and malitious aduersaries that our Sauiour Christ had.

Question. But how came it to passe, that Ioseph and Marie dwelling in Nazaret, a place farre remoued from Beth-lehem, and so remaining till neare vpon the time of her deliuerance: she should, this notwithstanding, be brought in bed, and deliuered of her child at Beth-lehem?

Answer. The Euangelist Luke sheweth, that God by his diuine prouidence brought it so to passe, in that neare vpon the same time, Augustus the Emperour of Rome, to whom Iudea was then subiect and tributarie, gaue out his edict and commandement, that all the world should be taxed.

Explicatiõ and proofe. The Euangelist Luke sheweth, that it came so to passe indeede by reason of a generall taxation of all the world by Augustus the Emperour: that is to say, of so much of the world, as was subiect to the Empire of Rome, which no doubt was a very great part, if not the greater part of the whole world.

And further also this we may easily conceiue, that by vertue of the same edict, euery one of any of the tribes of Israel, must personally appeare, and bee enrolled and taxed in his owne Citie. Whereupon Ioseph is constrained to goe vp from Nazaret, a Citie of Galile, to Beth-lehem in Iudea, which was the natiue Citie of King Dauid: there to be taxed, because he was of the house and linage of Dauid. And Marie also, goeth with Ioseph: whether taking the occasion to accompany her husband, that so she might visit her kindred with him: or minding to serue the holy prouidence of God, to the fulfilling of the holy prophecie of Micah, if happily by this occasion, God brought it to her minde: or rather was inforced to goe through the straitnes of the edict, specially touching those descended of the royall stocke of King Dauid.

But howsoeuer it was, whether purposedly on Maries part, or beside her purpose: this is certaine, that the matter was so ordered by diuine prouidence, as was answered: and namely by meanes of the Emperours edict (neither Ioseph nor Marie of themselues intending this long iournie) that the prophesie, touching the place of our Sauiours natiuitie, might be fulfilled, as was alledged before.

Question. Now in the third place: What was the manner of our Sauiours birth?

Answere. It was externally, euery way very poore and base, answerable to the place it selfe: which was not Ierusalem, nor any chiefe Citie aboue other, but poore Beth-lehem.

And in this poore Beth-lehem, not any cheefe dwelling house, meete for man to lodge in;

in: but in a ſtable, where Mary was thruſt aſide, becauſe Ioſeph could get no other roome in the Inne, in that time of ſo ſpecial reſort, and concourſe of people, as it may ſeeme.

So indeed doth Saint Luke report it, in the ſame his ſecond chap: verſes, 4. 5. 6, 7. Whereby it is euident, that our Sauiour Chriſt, though the onely right heire of all things, came into the world, in as poore a manner, as any the pooreſt childe that was borne of woman; ſpecially of any, of orderly and honeſt courſe of life, whoſoeuer.

The chamber of his birth, as wee ſee, was no better then a ſtable: his cradle but a trough or manger, wherein cattell vſed to eate their prouender. And I doubt not, but his ſwaddeling cloutes, and all other furniture, was anſwerable to them. So little was our Sauiour beholding to the world, for that entertainment, which it gaue him for his firſt welcome into it.

Thus farre of the holy hiſtory of the birth it ſelfe, concerning the time, place, and manner of it; anſwerable to the holy prophecies, giuen forth by the holy Ghoſt, of the ſame. For euen from his birth and ſo forth, he was in outward appearance, but as a roote out of a dry ground, and hauing neither forme nor beautie, like to any of the brauery of this world: as the Prophet Iſaiah foretold, as we read in his holy Propheſie, chap. 53. verſe 2.

Let vs now proceede to thoſe things, which are in the holy ſtorie adioined to the moſt neare circumſtances of the birth, for the more full manifeſtation and confirmation of the certaintie of it.

Queſtion. Which are they?

Anſwere. They were theſe which followe.

Firſt the teſtimonie of the holy Angels, to the Shepheards of Beth-lehem, the ſame day that our Sauiour was borne: firſt by one Angell alone, who was by and by ſeconded by the acclamation of many Angels, whom the Euangeliſt termeth to be a multitude of heauenly ſouldiers; giuing thereby to vnderſtand, that howſoeuer our Sauiour was borne, as a child deſolate vpon earth, yet he was garded with all the Angels of heauen.

Secondly, the Shepheardes themſelues were witneſſes of the birth of our Sauiour, thus teſtified by the holy Angels, ſo ſoone as they vſing great diligence, had found by experience and triall made, that all things were ſo, as the Angell had told them.

Thirdly, the circumciſion of our Sauiour Chriſt, following 8. daies after the birth, and the naming of him Ieſus, at the ſame time as the Angel had named him before he was conceiued in the wombe: they tend directly to the ſame ende.

Fourthly, hereunto alſo ſerueth the appearing of the Starre, to the wiſe men of the Eaſt, and their comming to make inquirie of his birth at Ieruſalem, making no queſtion but that he was vndoubtedly borne: and thereupon alſo, the going of the ſtarre before them, not circular wiſe, but in a direct courſe, from Ieruſalem to Beth-lehem, where they found him: both according to the direction of the holy Scriptures, and alſo of the extraordinarie ſtarre: and offered their gifts, in declaration of their ſpirituall homage vnto him.

Fiftly, that which is recorded concerning the preſentation of our Sauiour Chriſt according to the Law of Moſes, together with the memorable things which fell out at the ſame: ſuch as were the teſtimonie of Simeon, and his holy propheſie, cõcerning our Sauiour, in the Temple: and the teſtimonie of Anna a holy Propheteſſe, both in the Temple, and to all in the citie: they were ſo many teſtimonies of his birth.

Finally, the birth of our Sauiour Chriſt is manifeſted and confirmed, by that which is recorded concerning the malice of Herod; in that he moſt wickedly, and treacherouſly, intended the deſtruction and murther of our Sauiour, euen from his birth. And in that, to the ſame ende and purpoſe, he commanded a moſt cruel and barbarous infanticide, or murthering of all the young infants, that were male children in Beth-lehem, and all the places there about, from two yeeres of age, and vnder: though all in vaine, through the moſt watchfull prouidence of God, who preſerued our Sauiour from this vntimely death, that he might in due time, be a Sauiour by death, to giue vs euerlaſting life.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who was borne of the virgin Mary. Explication and proofe.

The meaning of the Article.

All these are indeed, very notable manifestations and confirmations, of the vndoubted certaintie of our Sauiour Christ, as the wordes of the holy Euangelists themselues, doe plainely declare.

Concerning the first whereof, wee read in the 2. chap: of Saint Luke from the 8. verse to the 15. in these wordes, And there were (saith the Euangelist) in the same countrie shepheards, abiding in the fielde, and keeping watch by night, because of their flocke. And loe, the Angel of the Lord came vpon them, &c.

Concerning the second, it followeth in the same chapter, from the beginning of the 15. verse to the end of the twentith, after this manner, And it came to passe, when the Angels were gone away from them into heauen, that the Shepheardes said one to another, let vs goe then vnto Bethlehem, and see this thing that is come to passe, which the Lord hath shewed vnto vs. So they came with hast, and found both Marie, and Ioseph, and the babe laid in the manger, &c.

Concerning the third confirmation, it followeth still in the same chap: from the 21. verse thus. And when the eight daies were accomplished, that they should circumcise the child, his name was then called IESVS, who was named of the Angel, before he was conceiued in the wombe.

By the which circumcision, our Sauiour made himselfe subiect to the Law, and to stand bound to fulfill the righteousnes of it for vs. So that he did not onely take our nature, but also set himselfe in our estate and condition, so farre as might be without sinne.

Concerning the fourth confirmation, we read, Mat: ch: 2. from the beginning of the ch: to the 12. verse, when Iesus then was borne, at Beth-lehem in Iudea, in the daies of Herod the King behold (saith S. Matthew) there came wise men from the East to Ierusalem, Saying, where is the King of the Iewes that is borne? For we haue seene his Starre in the East, and are come to worship him, &c.

Concerning the fift, returne againe to the second chapter of Saint Luke, and read in your Bible, from the 22. verse to the 39, as it followeth thus: And when the daies of her purification, after the Law of Moses were accomplished, they brought him to Ierusalem, to present him to the Lord, &c. By the which his presentation, he was dedicated to God, to minister in holy things, on our behalfe.

And concerning the last confirmation, wee read it thus testified by the Euangelist Mat: ch: 2. verses 16, 17, 18. Then Herod seeing that hee was mocked of the wise men, was exceeding wroth, and sent forth, and slewe all the male children that were in Bethlehem and in all the coasts thereof, from two yeere olde and vnder, according to the time which he had diligently searched out of the wise men. Then was that fulfilled, which was spoken by the Prophet Ieremiah, saying. In Rama was a voice heard, mourning and weeping, and great lamentation: Rachel weeping for her children and would not be comforted, because they were not.

Thus wee see, that wee haue a most sure and plentifull ground and stay, for the warranting of our beliefe, concerning the birth of our Sauiour Christ, of the Virgin Mary.

LEt vs therefore goe forward to the second point of our inquirie, concerning the meaning of the Article.

Question. What may that be?

Answere. The meaning of this Article is thus much, that the humane nature of our Sauiour Christ: being conceiued by the holy Ghost, of the very substance of the Virgin Marie, as touching the flesh, and continuing to receiue nourishment, and growth, in the wombe of the Virgin, after the naturall course and manner of the fruite of the wombe, in all other women: yea continuing in the wombe for so long a time, as women doe goe ordinarily with child; was also according to the same season, borne, and brought forth into this world, by the trauell of the Virgin, after the same naturall manner, that other children, are borne.

Explicatiõ & proofe. This is the trũe meaning of it indeed. Al things were as ordinary in the birth, as might be, cõcerning a child of so extraordinary cõception. And yet, that also was as ordinary, as was meet & cõueniẽt that it should be without al vnclean & sinful lust, yea euẽ as touching the holy vir: who was in this respect, sãctified of God,

Beliefe in God the Son, who was borne of the Virgin Mary.

God, aboue all other women. God would in the one, and in the other, auoide all miraculous dealing, as much as might be, that our Sauiour might not onely take our very true nature, but also that wee might knowe, and vpon certaine and cleare knowledge, beleeue it to be so.

To this very purpose it is, that in the ancient prophesie of the Patriarke Iakob (as was touched before) such a word is vsed, to signifie the humane nature of our Sauiour, as properly noteth the after-birth, which vsually attendeth vpon child-bearing. Shilo, 1. secunda eius, id in quo involuitur partus in utero existens. Metonymia rei continentis pro contenta vt inquit Trem.

And that by this word Shilo, the Messiah or Christ is meant, all Interpreters, both Iewes and others, doe consent, as the same Tremellius witnesseth.

To this purpose also, mention is made of the opening of the wombe according to that Law of God, touching the first borne, which should be presented to the Lord: Exod: 13.2. And so our Sauiour was, as we sawe before. Luke 2.23. Neither is the circumcision of our Sauiour, nor the purification of the Virgin Mary, impertinent herevnto.

And it is to very necessarie purpose, that wee should knowe these things to be so: to the ende wee might be euery way assured of the truth of the humane nature of our Sauiour, against all heresies contradicting the same. For otherwise surely, they should neuer haue beene thus plainely, and particularly expressed, in the holy Scriptures, both of the Law and of the Gospell.

Now it is time that we come to the Promise.

Question. What promise therefore, haue wee, that our Sauiour Christ should bee thus borne, and brought forth into the world to vs, and for our benefit?

Answere. All the former promises, and prophesies, concerning the conception of our Sauiour for vs and our benefit; they are likewise promises that he should be borne for vs, and our benefit; yea euen for the greatest benefit that might possibly be procured vnto vs.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is true. It could not possibly be, that our Sauiour should be conceiued by the holy Ghost, in vaine. His birth could by no meanes be hindred or defeated. And therefore the promise of this, may be said to be included in the promise of that.

Question. But haue we no speciall, or expresse promise, concerning the birth of our Sauiour, that it should be to our benefit?

Answere. Yes. The Lord did assure his Church of this singular mercie, by his holy Prophet Isaiah, long before it came to passe.

Explicatiõ and proofe. This also is verie true. For so we read in the 6. verse of his 9. chapter of his prophecie, where we finde it thus written, vnto vs (that is, to our singular benefit and comfort) a child is borne, and vnto vs a Sonne is giuen, and the gouernment is vpon his shoulder, &c. Read also, Ier: 23. verses 5. 6. Behold the daies come, saith the Lord, that I will raise vnto Dauid a righteous branch, and a King shall raigne and prosper, and he shall execute iudgement and iustice in the earth. In his daies Iuda shall be saued, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is the name whereby they shall call him, the Lord our righteousnes. And againe with some further amplification, chap: 33. verses 14, 15, 16. &c.

To this purpose likewise, serue the prophesies already mentioned, concerning the time, the place, and the manner of his birth, &c. Wherefore of this no more now at this time.

Question. WE hast to the Comforts of faith, which arise from the birth of our Sauiour. Is it not a matter of very great and singular comfort?

Answer. Yes verily. It both was, and is still, matter of great ioy and comfort to the holy Angels: much more ought it to be so to vs, and so is no doubt, to all true beleeuing Christians.

Explicatiõ and proofe. So indeede we reade Luke, chap: 2. that the holy Angels reioiced: that the Shepheards reioiced: that Simeon and Anna reioiced at the birth of our Sauiour Christ. And so ought we all to reioice, as hauing singular cause with them according to the speech of the Angel to the Shepheards, saying, Behold I bring you tidings of great ioy, that shall be to all people. That is, that vnto you is borne a Sauiour, &c.

Beliefe in God the Son, who was borne of the Virgin Mary.

The Comforts.

But of the duties more afterward. As touching the cause of ioy and comfort, which wee haue hereby, wee may conceiue of it the rather, if wee helpe our selues by a comparison not vnfit to be made in this cause. We knowe that great ioy ariseth to a nation, when the King hath an heire apparant borne to the crowne: by whom there is good hope, that the gouernment shall not bee deriued to a stranger, whereby vnnaturall oppression and tyrannous gouernment might easily take footing, &c. as we our selues haue lately very sensibly felt, to the vnspeakable ioy of our hearts, when after the dolefull decease of our blessed Queene Elizabeth, our gracious King Iames hath succeeded, whose entrance vpon his roiall throne and scepter among vs, was right ioious to all right English hearts: but so much the more, because hee bringeth with him, a young Prince, yea more then one, of a right princely seede. But the cause of ioy which now we speake of concerning our Sauiour Christ, is infinitely greater, not onely to vs, or any one nation, that should otherwise haue perished vnder the tyranny of the Diuel, sinne, death, and Hell: but to all nations vnder heauen: seeing the deliuerance and saluation of all people, dependeth vpon our Sauiour the onely heire apparant of the most high possessor of heauen and earth for euer and euer.

And seeing (as was said) the Angels of heauen were reioiced by the birth of our Sauiour, as is euident by their praising of God for it: as we haue seene Luk. 2.13.14. and namely for our sake, who haue the chiefe benefit of it: it followeth by good reason, that wee our selues, much rather haue principall cause of most aboundant reioycing herein.

Question. But in what respects, is the birth of our Sauiour, a matter of so singular and incomparable reioycing to vs, and to all people?

Answere. First, because hereby, the Lord our God, hath to the glory of his owne name, most graciously and comfortably manifested his diuine nature in the Person of his Sonne, so farre as it is meete for the same to be manifested to vs, here in this world.

Secondly, because he hath manifested his most gracious and Fatherly good will toward all sorts of men in euery nation of the whole world, whosoeuer shall thankefully imbrace that life and immortalitie, which he hath brought to light, and offereth in his Son.

Thirdly, because from hence ariseth vnspeakable peace, to the conscience of all true beleeuers, both in the vse of all present blessings, and also in the assured hope of the inheritance of all the blessings of the life to come: in that through him, we are adopted to be ioint heires with him.

Finally, the birth of our Sauiour is exceeding comfortable, because the world is as it were borne againe, and renewed vnto God in him: according as it is said, He is a light of the Gentiles, and the glory of his people Israel, as Simeon said of him, while yet he was newe borne. Yea because after a long time of calamitie, as it were of most gloomie darke and tempestous weather, hee is as the rising of the Sunne vpon the world, wonderfully clearing the whole face and compasse of it.

So indeed we reade from the 2. verse of the 9. chap: of the Euangelicall prophet Isaiah in that he propheſied thus, The people that walked in darknes haue seene a great light: they that did dwell in the land of the shadowe of death, vpon them hath the light shined &c. And the Apostle Paul saith, that in our Sauiour Christ all things are become new, 2. Cor: 5.17. Read also, Malachie, chap: 4.2. He is the Sonne of righteousnes, and health is vnder his wings.

But that we may proceede in some order.

Concerning the first branch of the answere, read, Heb: 1. verses 2, 3. This representation is much more gracious and comfortable, then was that sight of Gods glory, which Moses might be partaker of, Exod. 33.20 &c.

Concerning the second branch, read and consider the wordes of the holy Angels, Luk. 2.14. Glorie to God on high, in earth peace, and toward men good will. And 1. Iohn, 3. ye knowe that he (that is the Sonne of God our Lord Iesus Christ appeared, that he might take away our sins, and in him is no sin. And our Sauiour himselfe in the Gospell of Iohn, ch. 18.37. For this cause (saith he) am I borne, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should beare witnesse to the truth.

And

Beliefe in God the Son, who was borne of the Virgin Marie.

And the Apoſtle Paul, 2. Tim. chap. 1. verſe 10. Our holy calling to ſaluation, is made manifeſt by the appearing of our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt, who hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light, through the Goſpel.

And here note alſo, that it is no ſmall comfort to vs the Gentiles, that (as it is euident in the Genealogie of our Sauiour) hee deſcended on the mothers ſide, from ſome of the Gentiles: as from Rahab, and Ruth, and not altogether from the Iewes.

Neither is it to be neglected, that our Sauiour did not onely deſcend of the godly, but alſo of ſome wicked progenitours: that it might the more clearely appeare, that no ſinne of ours, could either ſtaine him, or hinder the ſanctification, either of Iew or Gentile, beleeuing in him.

Touching the third branch of the anſwer, adde vnto that parcell of the ſpeech of the holy Angells alledged before, (In earth peace) the ſaying of the Apoſtle Paul, Rom. 8. 17. If we be children, we are alſo heires, of God, and heires annexed with Chriſt, &c.

To conclude, in all theſe reſpects, worthily doth the ſame Apoſtle determine it to be a moſt great and gratious myſtery of godlines, that God is manifeſted in the fleſh: and thereby hath declared the light of his countenance, moſt clearely toward his people. It is a ioyous and comfortable thing, as we know, for any people to ſee the face of their earthly Prince, to looke chearefully vpon them. But all the comfort, ariſing from the chearefull face of earthly Princes, is a ſmall comfort, in compariſon of that which the chriſtian heart may take, from the light of Gods countenance ſhining vpon vs, in the moſt ſweete and amiable face of our Sauiour Chriſt, in whom he hath adopted vs to be children to himſelfe, and heires with our Sauiour, as was ſaid euen now. Wee may likewiſe conclude this point from the practiſe of the Prophet Iſaiah, who chap. 7. 14. and chap. 9. 6, 7. and chap. 11. 1. repeateth this as a ſpeciall comfort to the Church of God againſt all diſcouragements that may befall it. Behold (ſaith he) a Virgin ſhall conceiue and beare a Sonne, &c. And againe, For vnto vs a childe is borne, &c. And yet againe, But there ſhall come a rod forth of the ſtocke of Iſhai, &c.

Theſe comforts, haue indeede a further reſpect, or rather proſpect, as we may ſay, to our Sauiour Chriſt, not onely borne, but alſo dead & buried, and riſen againe, &c. Neuertheles, we cannot but deriue them from his birth, ſeeing they haue as it were their birth together with him.

Queſtion. AND thus frō the Comforts, let vs come to the Duties of faith, which ought to grow from the ſeedes of the ſame ſowen in our hearts by the preaching of the Goſpell. Which may, or rather, which ought theſe duties to be?

Anſwere. They may be conſidered of vs, as I haue beene taught, either more generally: Or——elſe ſomewhat more particularly.

Be it ſo. How therfore in the firſt place may they be more generally cōſiderd?

Firſt we may, yea we ought to learne, from the example of the Virgin Mary, to keepe in faithfull memorie, and diligently to ponder and weigh in our hearts, the nativitie it ſelfe, with all thoſe things, that are ſpoken and done, for the manifeſtation, confirmation, and illuſtration of the ſame.

Secondly, according to the nature of the myſtery of the birth and Perſon of him that is borne, and according to the bleſſed ends of his comming into the world, which are altogether moſt holy, ſpirituall, graue, and reuerend: ſuch alſo muſt be the nature and quality of all our ioy and reioycing concerning the ſame: that is to ſay, nothing carnall, wanton, or licentious, but altogether ſpirituall, holy, ſober, and heauenly.

And anſwerable to this kind and nature of our ioy, muſt be all the fruits and effects of the ſame continually.

Explicatiō and proofe. It is very reaſonable, and meet indeed, that they ſhould be ſo. And out of all doubt, vpon the due meditation and weighing of the birth, together with the moſt worthy things belonging therevnto: very excellent and holy effects will follow, through the bleſſing of God, euen according to the working of his holy Spirit, in the hearts of those whom he hath made and propounded to be patterns and examples vnto vs herein, both Angells from heauen, and also men and women on earth, such as we haue heard of before.

Reliefe in God the Son, who was borne of the virgin Mary.

It is our bounden duty therefore, euen to the same ends, so to meditate, as we must neuer cease pondering & weighing of this part of the mysterie of faith, vntil we haue preuailed with our harts, to draw thē to reuerēce, & admire at the most high & holy wisedom, & mercy, & goodnes of the lord our God, herein.

And in this respect, as was said in the first part of the answer, the example of the Virgin Marie is notable, as well for meditation, as for the holy & heauenly fruits therof. Luk, 2, 19. Mary kept al those sayings, & pondered thē in her heart, &c.

But as touching the popish, that is to say, the superstitious manner, or the profane and carnall manner which alwaies accompanieth superstition, in the remembrance & solemnization of the natiuitie of our Sauiour, by keeping of a good Chrismas vnto him, in inordinate and gluttonous belly cheare, with greater dispensation and licence to all kinde of reuell and disorder, then at any other time of the yeare; in dicing and carding, in masking and mumming, in setting vp Lords of mis-rule, as they are rightly tearmed: it will vpon due examinatiō be found, to be a most absurd, & abhominable kind of solemnizing: euen as farre remoued frō the due celebratiō of the memoriall of the holy birth of our Sauior, as it draweth more neare to the profane & superstitious festiuities, vsed at the birth daies of the heathē; such as was the more priuate solemnitie of Herods birth day, when Iohn Baptist lost his head, & the publike feasts of Bacchus, in the which the reines were laid loose to drunkennes, and all other filthines of the flesh.

The right way of celebrating the remembrance of the birth of our Sauiour, is cleane contrary to this. That is to say, It is not onely, for a few daies at one time or season of the yeare: but on euery day throughout the whole yeare, and all the yeares of our liues, to be more and more carefull, to deny all worldly lusts, and euery practise of vngodlines: and to set our hearts to lead our liues as righteously, soberly, and godly as we may, by all good meanes and helps sanctified of God, attaine vnto. According to the notable instruction of the holy Apostle. Tit. 2. 11, 12, &c. yea according to the teaching of the appearāce of the grace & mercy of God it selfe, being duly weighed & thought vpō.

The feasts of the Lord are al of them called holy conuocations, by his owne holy ordinance. Leuit. 23. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c.

Read also Eph. 5. 15, 16, &c. And Isai. ch. 2. verse 2, &c. And Psal. 122. 1, 2.

So that to speake generally and briefly in a word, the natiuitie and birth of our Sauiour, duly considered of vs, ought to set vs continually a worke, to minde our owne new birth and all prosperous growth and proceeding in the same. 2. Cor. 5. 17. Reade also Gal. 4. 19. And chapter 6. 15.

Neither may we, in this generall consideration of dutie, neglect to admonish our selues, to haue care to strengthen our faith, by the obseruation of the former propheſies, fulfilled in the birth of our Sauiour, both in respect of the time, place, and manner of it, &c.

Such then is the more generall consideration of the duties.

Question. Now, how may they be more particularly considered?

Answer. By the consideration of the time of the birth of our Sauiour, we may learne, that God is specially readie to releeue and succour his Church, with spirituall reliefe, at such time as it is outwardly in speciall distresse: and therefore that we are neuer to be out of heart, but to comfort our selues in the loue of Gods mercy.

The consideration of the place, as also the manner of the birth, in that it was very poore and base, as touching all outward and worldly glory: it teacheth vs, yea it sensibly representeth before our eyes, that our Sauiour Christ came not into the world, to bring vs earthly riches, but to make vs rich in spirituall grace, nor to set vs vp in worldly honour, but to aduance vs to the glory of his heauenly kingdome: and therfore that it is our dutie to minde and looke for these things from him, and to esteeme them to be riches and honour sufficient for vs, although we should want the other.

The same consideration teacheth vs furthermore, that they are not to estimate and measure the loue or displeasure of God, according either to abundāce or want of outward things:

Beleefe in God the Sonne who was borne of the virgin Marie.

things: but according to that sheere testimony, which it giueth of it self, frō the secret insinuatiō of the holy ghost, by whō God sheddeth the assurāce of his loue abroad in our harts.

Moreouer, we may iustly learne from the same, to beare all wants and disgrace in the world, humbly and patiently: and if worldly riches and honour increase, to beware of priding our selues in them: remembring that our Sauiour wanted them, euen from his comming into the world to his going out of the same.

Finally, it may be an euident admonition & warning vnto vs, that we be not at any time offended or caused to stumble, by occasion of any outward pouerty or debasement of the church of Christ, or of any true & faithful mēber, or mēbers therof, what soeuer they be.

Explicatiō & proofe.

These indeed are very meete and conuenient duties, or at the least a bounden dutifulnesse of the heart and minde, which will no doubt yeelde many singular duties, euen in the outward actions of our liues.

And that the Lord would haue vs learne, from the seasonable time of the birth of our Sauiour, that he hath a speciall care to releeue his Church, against the speciall calamities thereof, and at such times as it is so feebled, that it is readie as it were to totter and fall: we may euidently perceiue by that vse, which the holy Ghost taught both the Virgin Marie, and Zacharie also to make, euen in that respect. For so saith Marie in her thanks-giuing. Luke, 1.54. Hee hath vpholden Israel his seruant, being mindefull of his mercy. Ἀντιλαβέτο: that is, he hath as one would say, taken his Church by the hand, to lift it vp, being as it were ready to fall to the ground. And Zacharie verse 69. in his thanks-giuing, saith likewise, to the praise of God, in respect of our Sauiour, then shortly to appeare. He hath raised vp the horne of saluation vnto vs, in the house of his seruant Dauid, &c. He hath raised it vp (saith he) to wit, being at that time, as it were sunke downe, or broken off, as it were to the very head. This therefore ought to incourage vs to be of good comfort in the Lord, though it doe for any time goe hardly with the Church more generally, or with any of our selues in particular: seeing God is ready in due time, euen in trouble, to reach out his hand.

Secondly, that the poore and base manner of the comming of our Sauiour Christ into the world, altogether contrary to the glory and pride thereof, is a plaine demonstration, that he came not in worldly respects, but to erect a spirituall kingdome, and to inrich and beautifie his Church spiritually: it is of it selfe very cleare. And so the Apostle Paul vnderstandeth and interpreteth it 2. Cor. 8. verse 9. Ye know (saith he) the grace of our Lord Iesus Christ, that he being rich, for your sakes became poore, that yee through his pouertie might be made rich. This pouerty and abasement, beginning thus to shew it selfe at the birth, continued to the death: and therefore no part of it is to be excluded. Yea thus doth our Sauiour himselfe afterward interpret the same, to the Apostles hand: in that he assuring his Disciples of a kingdome, yet telleth them plainely, that they must looke for affliction here in this euill world. Luke, 12.32. And Ioh. 14.17. and ch. 16.33. Hence therefore it is plaine, that duty requireth, that we doe imbrace our Sauiour Christ for his owne sake, and for the hope of good things by him in the life to come: and not for the loue of any worldly thing here in this life, though godlines hath the promise of the things of this life also, so farre as God shall see them to be good and profitable for vs.

Thirdly, that the same base and poore manner of the comming of our Sauiour Christ into the world, ought to teach vs, that wee are not to measure the loue of God by outward riches, and worldly preferments, it is as cleare as the light of the Sunne. For whom did God, or whom could he possibly loue as he loued his owne onely begotten Sonne, for whose sake alone, and not otherwise, can any finde fauour with him? And yet behold, he is borne in a stable, &c. Let no man therefore imagine, that he is so much the better before God, by how much he hath beene more richly borne: yea, though he should haue beene borne after the manner of Princes children, in neuer so costly and decked chambers, wrapped vp in neuer so soft linnen, laid downe to sleepe in neuer so easie a cradle, nourced vp neuer so daintily, &c.

This should be but a deceitfull fancy. All are alike by nature, sinfull & base creatures: and as all are brought to the ſame baptiſme, ſo doe all ſtand in like neede to be waſhed and cleanſed from their ſinnes, by the blood of Chriſt, &c. without which waſhing away of ſinne, the children of Princes, as well as of the meaneſt ſubiects: yea euen Princes themſelues, for all their great riches & ſtately pompe, ſhal be cõdẽned frõ the glorious preſence of the moſt high god.

And therefore alſo, on the other ſide, no true chriſtian ought to be diſcouraged, although they be poorely borne, nor any chriſtian woman, though ſhee be poorely brought in bed, as if her childe were of leſſe account before God, becauſe of that. For doe we not ſee that Marie was ſo? yea like enough more poorely, then the poorer ſort of women are wont to be, and with leſſe comfortable helpers, and in a leſſe commodious and ſeemely place for ſuch a buſines, as the pooreſt chamber in a baſe cottage. But what ſhould we ſpeake of Marie, thus poorely brought in bed, in compariſon of the childe it ſelfe, that was borne of her? For the matter is infinitely more admirable, in reſpect of him the naturall Sonne of God, then of her by nature the daughter of Eue: yea it is not much admirable in reſpect of her, ſaue onely in regard of him.

Fourthly, who ſhall not be aſhamed to murmure at his wants: or on the other ſide to be prowd, when hee is in wealthie and honourable eſtate in the world, if he doe with a right and well aduiſed eye, looke vpon the birth of the Son of God: without whom it had bin vnpoſſible, but we muſt haue bin both borne in moſt extreame diſhonour, & alſo haue continued in miſery for euer.

Finally, how ſhould wee be iuſtly offended at any outward baſenes of the Church, or any true members thereof, if we do aduiſedly looke to the outward baſenes of the moſt glorious head, Prince and gouernour of them? Is it not meet that the Church here vpon earth, which are as the members of the body, ſhould be ſutable to the head, ſuch as it was while it remained here on the earth? It may ſuffice vs, that we know it is glorious with in, though it be outwardly ſomewhat browne or blacke. Pſal. 45. 13. Cant. 1. 4, 5.

Thus then we ſee, that many outward duties, from a great inward dutifulnes of heart, doe belong to the comfort of faith concerning the birth of our Sauiour Chriſt duly weighed & conſidered: both more generally, & alſo more ſpecially, as hath already bin laid forth, in diuers particulars, in ſuch ſort, as that which hath beene hetherto obſerued, might ſeeme to ſuffice.

Neuertheles for the further clearing of ſo worthy a point, it ſhall not be ſuperfluous for vs (as I ſuppoſe) to endeuour to gather a further direction herein, from the examples and practiſe of thoſe, to whom the birth of our Sauiour was firſt manifeſted: and whom we know, to haue beene guided by the holy Ghoſt therein, as hath beene obſerued at large, in the ſermons made vpon thoſe parts of our text.

Of theſe duties, I deſire that you doe as briefely as may be, make ſome rehearſall againe, according to thoſe examples, which God hath ſet before vs, to the ſame end. Which may they be?

Queſtion.

Anſwere. From the example of the holy Angels, we may iuſtly learne, that in ſo much as they, to whom the incarnation & birth of our Sauiour Chriſt did not ſo properly belong, and neuertheles, to the glorifying of God on our behalfe, moſt earneſtly bleſſe and praiſe the Lord: much rather ought we our ſelues to doe ſo: ſeeing for our ſakes it was, that the Son of God thus humbled and abaſed himſelfe.

From the example of the Sheepheards we are taught, that it is our dutie, to vſe all diligence, both in ſeeking after the knowledge of our Sauiour Chriſt borne into the world, and of the right ends and vſes of his comming and abiding in it: and alſo in mutuall exherting & incouraging one another thereunto. We may likewiſe learne from thẽ, that according as we our ſelues haue learned & found out Chriſt Ieſus in his word, & by the inſtructiõs therof: ſo it is our dutie, as much as lieth in vs, to make him known to al other.

And further, both from the example of the Sheepheards, and alſo of thoſe which heard the things which they reported vnto them concerning the birth of our Sauiour: we may well learne, that it is our dutie to eſteeme reuerently of the ſame things, and of all other of like holy record, and to praiſe and glorifie God therein.

What

Beléese in God the Son who was borne of the Virgin Mary.

What the dutie is, which the exãple of the vir: Marie teacheth vs, it hath bin answered before. Frõ the exãple of the wisemen, who came out of the East a long iourny to worship our Sa: Christ, we may profitablie learn diuers notable lessons of good christiã dutie.

First, that we ought to estéeme most highly and honourablie of our blessed Sauiour.

Secondly, that we ought to refuse no labour, or cost, in our seeking to know him.

Thirdly, that no feare of danger with-hold vs from diligent inquiring after him.

Fourthly, that we be in no wise offended at the basenes of his comming into the world: but on the contrarie, that wee doe reioyce in our Sauiour so much the more, as in him, that therby giueth vs so much the more assurance, that we shalbe aduanced through his abasing of himselfe so lowe for vs.

Fiftly, that we vse all good circumspection, that we giue no furtherance, or aduantage to the wicked, against our Sauiour, or his Church and Gospel.

Finallie, that wee doe most willinglie yeelde our selues, and all that wee haue, to his most honourable seruice.

From the example of Simeon, wee learne likewise, that it is our dutie to preferre the true knowledge of our Sauiour Christ made man, and sent into the world, before all things in the whole world, yea before our owne life and beeing in it. His doctrine also teacheth vs, that not all in the world, but they onely that doe truelie beleeue in him, and dutifullie obey him, shalbe partakers of his appearing.

Last of all, from the example of Anna, we are taught in like manner, that it is the dutie of one as well as of another, of women as well as of men, with all readines to acknowledge and confesse, that our Sauiour Christ, is verily & in truth come in the flesh.

Explicatiõ & proofe. These things which are lightsome in themselues, haue bene more fully laide forth, for a helpe to our weakenes, by the interpretation and opening of the text, in the Sermons made vpon the same.

First concerning the holie Angels, Luke 2.13.14. from these words, And strait way, ther was with the Angel a multitude of heauenly souldiers (that is, of other Angels, as it appeareth verse. 15.) praising God & saying: Glorie be to God, &c. And touching our owne dutie: Read Isai: chapter 12.

Secondly, concerning the Shepheards, as it foloweth in the same ch: vers: 13. 16.17.18.20. And it came to passe when the Angels (that is, the multitude of heauenlie souldiers before mentioned) were gone away from them into heauen, that the Shepheards said one to another, Let vs go then into Bethlehem, &c.

Thirdlie, concerning those that heard the Shepheardes make report of the birth of our Sauiour Christ, we read likewise in the same chap: verse 18. Of whom this is testified, that they did all wonder at the things which were reported by them. And verse 20. it is further testified concerning the Shepheards themselues, that they returned, glorifying and praising God, for all that they had heard and seene as it was spoken vnto them.

And concerning the blessed Virgine Marie, it is said, verse 19. That she kept and pondered all in her heart.

Moreouer, concerning the wise men, we read Matth: cha: 2. And not onely of their reuerend estimation of our Sauiour, as the whole history sheweth, but also of their great trauell, as we read in the latter end of the first verse. Of their boldnes, verse 2. Of their ioyfulnes, without all offence at the externall basenes of our Sauiours birth: and of their homage and worship done vnto him, verses 10. 11. And last of all, of their circumspection and care to performe their faithfull allegiance, verse 12.

Concerning the example of Simeon, wee read Luke ch: 2. verses 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. Hee tooke our Sauiour vp in his armes, and praised God and said, Lord, nowe thou doest let thy seruant depart in peace, according to thy word: for mine eyes haue seen thy saluation, &c. Read also verses 34. 35. Behold this child is appointed for the fall and rising of many in Israel.

Finallie, concerning the Prophetisse Anna, we read as it foloweth in the same chapter, verse 36. Ther was a Prophetisse one Anna, &c. And verse. 38. She comming at the same instant vppon them, confessed likewise the Lord, and spake of him to all that looked for redemption in Ierusalem.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who was borne of the virgine Marie.

The danger of not beleeuing this Article.

All which examples, no doubt, are recorded, not onelie for the discourse and explanation of the holie Storie: but also for our instruction, and like imitation vpon the same considerations, which moued them, both to thinke, speake, and doe, as they did.

THe duties therfore of faith, concerning this Article, beeing such as haue bene described: now in the last place of our inquirie, what is the danger of not beleeuing in our Sauiour Christ, the eternall Sonne of God, borne in due time, verie true man, of the Virgine Marie?

Question.

Answere. The holie Apostle S. Iohn teacheth, and verie earnestlie affirmeth, that euerie Spirit which confesseth not that Iesus Christ is come in the flesh, is not of God, but that this is the Spirit of Antichrist.

Explicatiõ and proofe.

Hee doth so indeede, as we reade in the 3. verse of the fourth chapter of his 1. Epistle. And there is verie good and necessarie reason, why he should teach so. For he that denieth the truth of the humane nature of Christ, denieth the comming of Christ, yea and all the fruites and benefits, both of his birth, and also of his whole life, and death. And therin he is an open aduersarie to God, and his Christ, as the word Antichrist it selfe, giuen for the title of such, plainly sheweth, according to the Greeke language.

And beside that, insomuch as it is a grace of the Spirit of God, to teach Christians to confesse, that according to this Article of the Christian faith, Iesus Christ is come in the flesh: as the Apostle saith in the former verse: it must needes be that all such as denie it, are of the Spirit of Antichrist, and be therein open aduersaries to God, who hath sent his Sonne in the flesh, trulie Conceiued by the holie Ghost.

Such Antichristes and aduersaries both to God and his Sonne our Lord Iesus Christ, were the Simonianites, Valentinians, Marcionites, Apollinaristes, and many other sortes of heretikes, as they haue bene rehearsed before, in the Article of his Conception by the holie Ghost, with their seuerall heresies, against the humane nature of our Sauiour. The beliefe of all which heretikes, was no doubte, nothing better then an aierie and vanishing beliefe, euen a shadow and spectrum, of faith, and no true faith in deede: euen answerable to that which they held, that our Sauiour had no true bodie, but onely an outward appearance of a bodie, and which as the Diuell bewitched them to thinke, was but a spirituall or aierie thing of some strange cõposition, & not like vnto ours, &c.

And thus by the goodnes of God, wee are come to an ende of our inquirie, concerning the Article of the birth of our Sauiour Christ, according to the propounded order of our course.

NEuertheless, vpon some good consideration, wee will yet more particularlie inquire (as in way of an appendix) why the name of the Virgin Marie is mentioned, in this Article of our beliefe.

For it is verie vnskilfullie, yea most wickedlie, and blasphemouslie misconstrued by manie, as though Marie herselfe, had bene such a one, as had bene conceiued without sinne, to the ende that in respect of her owne puritie of nature, our Sauiour might be borne, and brought forth of her, without all spot of sinne. Whervpon also haue followed these hereticall conclusions: that she is to be esteemed for our Ladie here on earth, and a Queene in heauen, & therfore to be pictured with a crowne vpon her head, & so painted in Church windowes, &c: with an opinion that shee hath power and autoritie to command her Sonne: and therfore is to be praied vnto, &c. But all these are false causes, coined in the deceiuable shop of mans superstitious and idolatrous braine: to be vtterlie condemned and abhorred of all true Christians, as intollerable blasphemies against God, and most hainous iniuries, done to the blessed virgin.

Question. I aske therefore, what be the true causes or reasons, which may be beleeued to be such indeed?

Answer. First, for the more full certaintie, or perspicuitie & plainenes of the holy history it selfe.

Secondly,

Beliefe in God the Sonne who was borne of the virgin Marie.

The Danger of not beleeuing this Article.

Secondlie, that our beliefe might be so much the more stable and vnfoulded, concerning the truth of the humane nature of our Sauiour.

Thirdlie, that (as hath bene said alreadie) seede might be had in memorial, for a notable example to vs of beleeuing in Christ, and of obeying his Gospel, and of blessing, praising, and magnifying the name of God, for our saluation, which is brought vnto vs by the incarnation and manifestation of him.

Explicatio & proofe.

These are the true causes indeed, as may be discerned, by that which hath ben set downe before. For how can God be sufficientlie praised, for this most gracious worke of his? And what place is ther left, for any doubting? seeing not onely, according to the prophecie of Isaiah, it is testified, that the Mother of our Lord was a Virgine, notwithstanding the conception and birth of this childe: but also seeing it is particularlie described vnto vs, who that holie Virgine was, by her name, by the place of her dwelling, by her parentage, in that shee was the daughter of Eli, by her husband, to whom she was first betrothed and afterward married, by her kindred in that Elizabeth the mother of Iohn Baptist, was her Cosine, &c. Luke chap. 1. 26. &c. and ch. 3. 23.

We cannot denie, but the Papists are ready to alledge other causes: & namelie because (as they teach) the blessed Virgin is to be honoured with a religious worship, as though the Angel should by his exaple & practise, teach vs that we are vsuallie to pray to her, & to praise her, saying, Haile Marie full of grace, &c.

But it is more then absurd, that the extraordinarie salutation of the Angel, fitted & appropriated to his present message, wherby he magnifieth the greatnes of Gods singular mercie, in vouchsafe to appoint Marie to so honourable a service, as no creature was euer worthie to be vsed vnto: it is more then absurd, I say, that it should be so superstitiously peruerted, to an vsuall praier, to be babled out of the mouth of euerie childe, and to be mumbled vpon the beades of euerie ignorant sotte, in wordes of a language vnknowen to the most of them that doe so vse it, and in a false translation and sense, by those that haue any vnderstanding of them.

But some will say, doth not the Virgin Mary her self, speaking by the holie Ghost, say, that all the nations of the earth shal call her blessed? It seemeth therfore that she prescribeth, or at the least prophecieth, that ther should a certain religious honor be yeelded vnto her, in the whole Church of God. May it not be thought so?

Question. Answer. It cannot be thought so, of any that do rightly vnderstand the meaning of the holy Virgin.

Question. Why? what was her meaning then?

Answer. She vnderstanding, by the salutation and speech of the Angel, what a singular blessing God of his free grace minded to bestow vpon her, in that he appointed her to be the Mother of our Lord Iesu Christ: yea she considering also & knowing by the Spirit of prophesie, that shee should in this respect, be accounted to be blessed aboue other women, in the whole Church of God, from generation to generation: shee doth from the same consideration, prouoke her owne heart, to be the more thankfull vnto God.

Explicatio & proofe.

It is verie true. The blessed Virgin, doth in no wise take vpon her to prescribe a lawe, which shee knewe well, she had no power to doe. Neither could it agree with that holie modestie, which was in the virgin so to do. And if God had minded to set downe such a lawe, as should haue prescribed anie religious worship, to be done to her, hee would haue commanded that by the mouth of any other, rather then by her owne: The truth therfore is this, that shee, from the most dutiful thankfulnes of her heart, doth iudge it verie vnreasonable, that she herselfe should be vnthankfull to God, when all other should be thankfull. Nay rather, shee considereth in her mind, that she herselfe ought to excell all other in thanksgiuing, and all the dayes of her owne age, to blesse the Lord for so inestimable a blessing bestowed vpon her: yea and to set downe a memoriall and monument of that praise, which God gaue her grace, most dutifullie to yeeld and ascribe vnto him.

We doe (as ye well know) vsually account those blessed and happie women, which bring forth such children, as proue good and profitable instruments, to glorifie God in his Church. And it is a great blessing of God indeede.

Much

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who led a most holy & iust life, full of tẽptations and sufferings.

The grieuous and bitter passion of our Sauiour.

Much more therfore, yea aboue comparison, must wee account the Virgine Marie, most blessed of God, in that shee was preferred before all other women, to be the Mother of that Sonne of God, who was not onelie an instrument of God, in that hee was man, but also the Diuine author and fountaine of saluation, and all blessing to the whole Church of God, in that being God, he assumed and tooke our humane nature of the Virgin Mary, to the same end.

And therfore also, to the ende we may vnderstand the thankf-giuing of the blessed Virgine the better, and therwithall in what respectes we are to esteeme and call her blessed: we are to consider, that she is not onely thankfull to God, for that it pleased him to make her the Mother of our Sauiour, but chieflie for that saluation, which he gaue her grace to apprehend by faith in him, as the words of her owne thankf-giuing, doe giue vs plainely to vnderstand.

And thus, I trust, wee haue simplie the true reasons, why the name of the Virgine Marie is mentioned in our Creed, agreable to that further declaration thereof, which wee haue in the holie Scriptures.

As for all popish fictions, like as they came into the Church, either by craftie conueiance, or else by violent intrusion, against the good leaue of the word of God: so haue we good leaue, yea a streight commandement from the word, not onely to leaue them, but euen with all the disgrace that may be, to thrust them out againe, as it were by the head and shoulders. And God himselfe, of his infinite mercie, by his owne scourge, vouchsafe to whip such intruders and deceiuers, out of his holie Temple for euer, euen for our Lord Iesus Christes sake. Amen.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who led a most holie and iust life, full of temptations and sufferings.

Question. THis thus obserued, in way of an appendix to the article of our Sauiours natiuitie and birth, of the Virgine Marie.

Answere. What followeth now in the Articles of our beliefe?

It followeth, that the same our Sauiour suffered vnder Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead and buried.

So it followeth in deed, immediatlie after the former words, Borne of the Virgine Marie.

Expheatiõ. Neuertheless, in so much as ther are three speciall things to be knowne and beleeued of vs, according as they are recorded in the holie Scriptures, betwixt the birth of our Sauiour, and his sufferings vnder Pontius Pilate. To wit, 1. his education and life. 2. his doctrine, and thirdly his miracles: the which, the articles of our Beliefe, in so great shortnes as was propounded in it, in regard of the common weakenesse of memorie, could not in any commodious manner set downe: it shall be therefore to good purpose, in this more large collection of the doctrine of faith, to inquire of them, before wee come to his sufferinges vnder Pontius Pilate.

Wherevnto, that wee may the rather perswade our owne heartes: Let vs I pray you earnestlie consider, that wheras the historicall reporte of the liues of other men, of anie speciall worth or note, in common account, are willinglie read and obserued, as it is meete they should: yea, and not onely the report of the liues of the holie seruantes of God, but also of many among the heathen, such as Plutarch, and other learned writers haue gathered together. Much more willing, yea aboue comparison more willing ought wee to be, to reade, heare, and continuallie to meditate of the most worthie and memorable life of our most blessed Sauiour, the onely true and perfect mirrour of all vertue, as we shall by the grace of God, from pointe to pointe obserue.

Ther are indeed, many excellent things set downe in the historicall narration of the liues of some among the heathen, for their ciuile iustice and liberalitie, for their bodilie chastitie and temperance, for their fortitude & stout courage in defence of the publique weale, &c: but all were in them, but shadowes of vertues, and no true and holie vertues indeed, if they be compared with the vertues, which God by his holie Spirit of sanctification, wrought in the hearts of manie of his people.

The ground and historie of it.

Neuertheles, albeit the liues of the holie seruantes of God, chieflie of them that are recorded in the holie Scriptures, be much more profitable to be read, & considered, then any of the heathen men: in so much as their vertues were in them, the fruits of the holie Ghost, as was said: and therfore the words & works done in truth, and not for ostentations sake, or in any other siniſter and fleshly respect, as were those of the heathen: yet their liues are not to be cõpared with the life of our Sauiour. For in reading the liues of the best of them, wee doe meete with manie vnworthie and vncomfortable declinings, both on the right hand, and on the left, which may iustly cause vs to blushe and be ashamed in beholding the corruption of our owne wicked nature, represented before our eyes in them. But the life of our Sauiour, from the beginning to the ende, is without anie the least blemish and staine.

Let vs therfore bend our mindes, with the best attention that we may, to inquire after this most holie and righteous life of our Sauiour. And the rather because whereas the vertues of other men are their owne praise, &c: the vertues of our Sauiour Christ, are not onely his owne praise, but also his merit and desert for vs, in the sight of God: as shall be hereafter, more fullie obserued, in the due place thereof.

In the meane while, we are to obserue, concerning the education and life of our Sauiour, that it is to be considered of vs, by certaine degrees, according to some commodious distinction of the yeares of his age: partlie concerning the time, wherin hee liued a priuate condition of life, and partlie concerning the time, wherin hee liued in a publike estate or calling.

And concerning the time of his priuate life, we are to consider of it, first of all from the time of his Presentation in the Temple, vntil about the fourth yeare of his age.

For of his Circumcision, and of the Presentation it selfe, wee haue considered alreadie, as more nearely appertaining to his Natiuitie and birth.

Secondlie, wee are to consider of it, from the fourth yeare to the twelfth of his age.

Thirdlie, of that which is recorded concerning the twelfth yeare.

Fourthlie, from the twelfth yeare, to the time that he was thirtie yeares olde: at what time his publike estate and condition of life began.

Fiftlie, from the thirtith yeare to the time of his Passion, which was about the space of three yeeres and a halfe, to be considered from the time of his baptisme, vnder the note or marke as it were, of foure seuerall Passeouers.

And herein (when once we shall come vnto it) we shal haue occasion to consider, after what manner our Sauiour was made knowne to the people, by the ministerie of Iohn the Baptist, who was, as the Lord said by the Prophet Isaiah, the voice of a Crier in the wildernes: by the voice of God the Father himselfe from heauen: by the descending of the holie Ghost, in the visible shape of a doue vpon him: and last of all by the execution of his owne most holie ministery: in preaching his heauenly doctrine, and in working his most mightie and gracious miracles. But of these also, more hereafter. It may suffice, for the present, that we haue an inckling concerning the order, wherin we shall by Gods good grace, proceed from pointe to pointe.

NOw therfore in the first place, that we may begin frõ the time of the Presentation of our Sauiour in the Temple, to the fourth yere of his age. And therin of his transportation or carying out of the land of Israel into Ægypt: of his abode there: and of his returne into Israel againe, and also of that which fell out in the lande of Israel in the meane time.

Question. What proofe of holie Scripture haue you, for the declaration of this parte of his education and life?

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who led a most holy and iust life full of tentations & sufferings.

The groũd and history of it.

It is notably (though briefly) described in the second chapter of the Gospel, written by the Euangelist Matthew, from the 13. verse to the ende of the chapter.

Quest. It is so indeede. In which of the verses is his carrying into Ægypt, and his abode there testified and described vnto vs, by the holie Euangelist?

Answer. In the thirteene, fourteene, and fifteene.

Rehearse the wordes of the Text.

13 After their departure (that is, after the departure of the Wise men of the East countrey) Behelde (saith the Euangelist) the Angel of the Lord appeareth to Ioseph in a dreame, saying: Arise and take the Babe, and his Mother, and flie into Ægypt, and be there till I bring thee worde: for Herode will seeke the Babe to destroye him.

14. So he arose, and took the Babe and his Mother by night, & departed into Ægipt.

15 And was there vnto the death of Herod, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the Prophet, saying: Out of Ægypt haue I called my Sonne.

Explicatiõ and proofe.

In these wordes is contained indeed the holie historie, both of the carrying of our Sauiour into Ægypt, and also of the recarrying, or bringing of him backe againe into the land of Israel, with some notation of that space of time wherin he was there. And all (as the holie Euangelist saith) that the prophesie which wee finde in Hosea the Prophet, chapter 11. 1. might be fulfilled. For seeing God had determined to call our Sauiour his Sonne out of Ægypt, it must needes be, that he should be first sent into Egypt.

And beside, wee haue in this Scripture, a further delaration of the cause of this transporting of our Sauiour: which was, for that Herod maligning him, minded to destroy him in his infancie: we haue also a declaration of the means and instrument, wherby God reuealed the same, and gaue direction and commandement to Ioseph and Marie, for the auoiding of his furie.

Moreouer, ther followeth in the same 2. chapt: of S. Matthew, a like holy declaration of the returne of our Saviour Christ out of Egypt, verses, 19. 20. &c.

But betwixt the connexion of this and the former part of the Storie, ther is inserted a narration of the lamentable euent, which fell out in Israel, while our Sauiour was in Ægypt: wherin the deepe dissembled, and most cruell malice of Herod against him, is notablie discouered.

Question. In which words of the text is this narration recorded?

Answer. Verses 16. 17. and 18. in these wordes.

16 Then (saith the Euangelist) Herod, seeing that hee was mocked of the Wise men, was exceeding wroth, and sent forth, and slewe all the male-children that were in Bethlehem, and all the coastes therof, from two yeere olde and vnder, according to the time which he had diligently searched out of the Wise men.

17 Then was that fulfilled which was spoken by the Prophet Ieremias saying:

18 In Rama was a voice heard, mourning and weeping, and great lamentation: Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they were not.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

Here, beside the singular prouidence of the Lord God our heauenlie Father, in defeating the most craftie and bloodie intent of Herod, against the life of our Sauiour: in that he gaue grace to the Wisemen to obey his cõmandement, & not to regard the dissembling request of the wicked Tyrant: we see also therin, his vigilãt care in watching ouer our saluation, seing he would by no means haue his propitiatorie death preuented. And further, cõcerning the Tyrant, his most dissembling & hypocriticall pretence, is notoriously discouered and laid open before the whole world: according to the holy prouerb: Hatred may be couered by deceit, but the malice therof shalbe discouered in the congregation. Prou: ch: 26. vers: 26. For being disappointed of his craftie designmẽt, he falleth into a notorious rage, cõmanding & perpetrating such a sauage, & more then inhumane massacre, of murthering of poore harmles infants, and tender babes & sucklings, as was neuer heard of, since the beginning of the world. For though in time of warre, & in hote blood as they say, both men & women and children are not seldome put to the sword: yet that anie in a time of peace, and in colde blood, as touching any cause of prouocation giuẽ by poore infants, should rage againſt them, and kill and ſlaye them, were it not recorded in the holy Scriptures of God, it might haue ſeemed incredible.

And therfore no maruel, though the execution of it, be deſcribed by a ſtrange kinde of effect, in that it is ſaide to haue cauſed Rachel: hauing lien dead ſome thouſands of yeares in the fieldes of that countrie, where it was done: after a ſorte to mourne and lament, without any admiſſion of comforte.

No doubt, the mothers of the children, repreſented vnder the perſon of Rachel: did moſt pitifully houle and lament, and wring the hands, &c. And thus (ſaith the Euangeliſt) muſt the Propheſie of Ier: be fulfilled in a like dolefull euent, to that which he did more directly propheſie of, concerning the ſorowfull captiuity of Iſrael in Babilon: yet ſo as like ſingular ioy was to folow vpõ it.

It foloweth nowe, that wee come to the returne of our Sauiour out of Egypt, into the land of Iuda and Iſrael. In which verſes of the text is that recorded?

Here indeede, we haue the returne of our Sauiour Chriſt, out of Egipt into Explicatiõ & proofe. Iſrael, plainelie recorded vnto vs. And that according to the expreſſe commandement and direction of God, by the miniſtrie of an holie Angel: with an incouragement alſo thervnto, in ſo much as Herod was dead.

And hereby alſo the time of our Sauiours abode in Ægypt, may be collected; inſomuch as by the teſtimonies of ſuch other hiſtories, as may not iuſtly be deſpiſed of vs, our Sauiour is ſaid to be borne in the 33. yeare of Herodes raigne, and that Herod died in the 37. yeare of the ſame. Wher-vpon it followeth, that the returne of our Sauiour out of Ægypt, was about foure yeares after the time that hee was carried thither. Wherby alſo, we cannnot but ſee, that the life of our Sauiour, was verie full of trouble, euen from the birth, in carying & recarrying, & in all the time of his exile (as it were) & the ſame alſo in an vncomfortable place among Idolaters, wher Ioſeph & his mother were vnacquainted, &c.

Moreouer, wee ſee in this Scripture, the obedience of Ioſeph and Marie, in their ſtaying ſo long, in this vncomfortable place, euen till he had a commandement from the Lord for his returne: like as Noah going into the Arke, at the commandement of God, ſtayed in it, till hee had another commandement; that is, a like warrant to goe out of it.

Thus Ioſeph attẽding vpõ God: mark alſo how he receiueth his further direction frõ him. For being in a great doubt, where he might ſettle himſelfe beſt for the ſafety of the educatiõ of the child, God himſelf aſſigneth him the place moſt fit to that end. So good a thing is it, for vs alwaies to waite & attẽd vpõ the will of God, in the care of all things, which he cõmitteth vnto vs from time to time.

Now as touching the place which God appointed Ioſeph, for the bringing vp of our Sauiour, the Euangeliſt ſheweth the reaſon why the place was appointed to that purpoſe: namely, that from the denomination of the place, our Sauiour might be known to be that branch, which ſprong vp from the ſtock of king Dauid, which is propheſied of, and foretold in the holie Scriptures.

For in ſo much as, from the name of the citie Nazareth wher our Sauiour was brought vp, and liued, euen till about the 30. yeare of his age, hee was called a Nazarite, or a Nazarenite: well may it giue vs an occaſion, yea direct vs as it were by the finger, to that which is propheſied of him vnder the word Netzar, which in the hebrewe language ſignifieth a branch or ſprought, to note, what a poore manner of comming hee ſhould haue into this world at the firſt, euen like to a ſprought out of a ſtock, which ſeemed to be dead: yet ſo as he ſhould mightilie growe vp and proſper, through the bleſſing of God, aboue all that the world ſhould be aware of.

There is indeede another reaſon alledged, concerning this denomination which we ſpeake of: to wit, becauſe our Sauiour (as ſome thinke) ſhould by the appointement of God, dwell in Nazareth, to the ende he might, by that occaſion, be knowen to be that chiefe and principall Nazarite, aboue all that euer were, moſt holilie ſeparated and ſet apart to any ſpeciall ſeruice, as Samſon was, Iudges. 13. 3. &c. or Iohn the Baptiſt, or any other.

But the former reaſon ſeemeth to touch more nearelie the pointe of the matter. For albeit in the ſcriptures of the old teſtament, the name of this citie Nazareth, is not mentioned by this name, no nor yet at all, by any word comming neare vnto it, among thoſe cities, which are rehearſed Ioſh: 19. 10. &c. to be in the lot of the tribe of Zabulon, wher this citie is ſituated: yet in the Hebr: writings of the ancient Iewes (as it is obſerued by ſundry of our learned writers, this name of the city Nazareth, & alſo of the citizēs therof, are writtē with the letter Tſadi, as Notzera or Notzerath for the city, & Notzerim or Notzerim for the citizēs: & not with zain, as the word which noteth one ſeperat to God, or a Nazarite according to the ceremonial preſcript of Moſes law, is alwaies writtē in the old Teſt. And it is the more likely alſo, becauſe it is certaine, from this place of Matth: & many other places in the new Teſtament, that our Sauiour hath this denomination from the citie, and not from the rite of Nazaritiſme. Matth: 21. 11. Mark: 1. 24. & Luke 4. 34. Iohn: ch: 19. ver: 19. Act. 10, 38. Read this point moſt exactly diſcuſſed at large, by M. F. Iunius in his 8. Paralell.

Hetherto of the education & life of our Sauiour Chriſt, for that time, wherin he ſucked the breaſts of his Mother, after the manner of other babes & ſucklings, according to that ſaying of the woman Luke 11. 27. Bleſſed are the pappes that gaue thee ſuck: & thenceforth, vntil he was about foure yeres old. And therwith all, of the place appointed by God himſelf for his further education, & leading of his life in ſubiection to his naturall Parents, I meane to Marie his naturall Mother, and to Ioſeph his Father in Lawe, as we vſe to ſpeake, vntill hee came to the age of thirtie yeares, as was ſaid before.

NOw it followeth, that we proceed from the fourth yeere, to conſider of the education and life of our Sauiour, till he came to be twelue yeeres olde.

Queſtion. What ground and warrant haue you for this?

Anſwere. The hole hiſtorie hereof is continued by the Euangeliſt Luke, chap: 2. verſe 40.

Queſtion. Which are the Euangeliſts wordes? rehearſe them.

Anſwere. And the child grewe (ſaith hee) and waxed ſtrong in Spirit, and was filled with wiſdome, and the grace of God was with him.

Explication and proofe. Thus indeed, is the holie hiſtorie to be continued, frō that which was before rehearſed, out of the Goſpell written by S. Matth. For howſoeuer in the former verſe, that is in the 39. of the 2. ch: of S. Luke, it might ſeeme, as if the returne of our Sauiour to Nazareth immediatlie after the Purification of the Virgin Marie his Mother, were there intended by the Euangeliſt: yet the light of the hiſtorie it ſelfe, ſheweth plainly, that the carrying of our Sauiour into Ægypt, & his returne backe againe into the land of Iuda and Iſrael, is to be interpoſed, and borrowed from the Euangeliſt Matth: as hath alreadie bene inſerted.

Now therfore, that we may proceed in the orderlie courſe of the holie Storie, as it is continued by S. Luke, we haue the report of the education and life of our Sauiour Chriſt, for the ſpace of about 8. yeere.

It is a verie briefe report in deed, but verie full of right excellent and worthie matter: aboue that which might be ſaid at any time, of anie other childe, concerning the like time of their childe-hoode. Yea ſo, that euen that which may ſeeme to be moſt vulgar and common, concerning the bodily and naturall grouth of our Sauiour, which is concerning all children, to be accounted a bleſſing: yet concerning our Sauiour, it miniſtreth a farre more bleſſed conſideration, in that it is moſt behoofull for vs, and the whole Church of God, to be perſwaded both of the truth of his humane nature, and of his being in our very naturall eſtate and condition in all things, ſinne onely and alwaies excepted. And beſide it doth by ſo much the more, magnifie the bleſsing of God in this reſpect, inſomuch as no toſsing to and fro, nor by meanes of diet, or any thing elſe, could hinder the ſame.

But beſide theſe obſeruatiõs belonging to the body, & bodily eſtate of our Sauiour: there are three other things, of ſpecial note, teſtified & reported vnto vs.

Firſt more generally, that he waxed ſtrong in Spirit.

Secondly, that he was filled with wiſedome.

Thirdly, that the grace of God was with him.

Here therfore let vs pauſe a little while, to examine theſe memorable points.

And firſt of all, it is meete, that wee ſhould thus conceiue in our mindes, that the moſt excellent things, which may be attributed to any childe of greateſt towardnes, yea or to any men of yeares, for the praiſe of Gods grace in them, are aſcribed here to our Sauiour Chriſt, while he was yet a childe, in a moſt excellent degree and meaſure. For euen to ſpeake of men, though other of the ſeruants of God adopted in Chriſt, the onely naturall Sonne, haue beene ſtrengthened in the Spirit, of weake being made ſtrong. Hebr. 11. 34. filled with the holy Ghoſt and wiſedome, as it is ſaid of Stephen, and other, Act. 6. 3. 5. and that God was with them, as it is written that he was with Moſes, with Ioſhua, with Dauid, &c. And though Ieremie the Prophet, and Iohn the Baptiſt, were ſanctified to their miniſterie, euen from the wombe: yet none were euer ſo ſanctified, and ſtrengthened in the Spirit, ſo repleniſhed with wiſedome, and all grace, as our Sauiour was, euen in his young and tender yeares, yea euen from the wombe and in the wombe, ſo farre as was meete to the perfitting of euery time of his age, and as might beſt agree to the preſent eſtate, and euery occaſion falling out therein.

The reaſon of which perfection, alwaies according to the encreaſe & grouth of yeares, yea of day after day, and of euery moment one after another, was the vnion of the diuine nature with the humane, in one and the ſame Perſon, after a moſt neare and vnſearchable manner. And yet ſo, as God would plainly let vs vnderſtand, euen by theſe increaſes of wiſedome and grace, that there was from the beginning of the vnion, a diſtinction of the humane from the diuine, which cannot admit any increaſe of wiſedome or ſtrength, or any other either bodily or ſpirituall, quality or grace.

The vſe of all, is this among other things, to teach vs to conceiue moſt honourably of our Sauiour, euen from his childhood, and throughout the ſame, yea euen from his infancie and birth: aboue all that reckoning, we may, or can poſsibly make of any the moſt honourable Perſons, Princes children, or Kings themſelues, the greateſt in the whole world.

NOw let vs proceede to that which is ſet downe for the declaration of his moſt excellent profitting in ſpiritual wiſedome, and in all heauenly grace, at the twelfth yeare of his age.

Queſtion. Where is that part of the holy ſtorie ſet downe vnto vs?

Explicatiō & proofe.

In this text we see many things recorded concerning Ioseph and Marie, whereby both their godly care of worshipping God themselues, and also of performing the dutie of godly Parents, in bringing vp their child with religious education: wherein they are most memorable examples to all Parents to put them in minde of their dutie, in that behalfe.

Yet, in so much as all that is recorded, doth principally respect our Sauiour himselfe, who was more willing and readie, euen from his youngest yeares of discretion, to practise euery good and holy duty, then they were to moue him vnto it: we will therfore principally cōsider all things, as they do concerne him.

And first of all, among the admirable things, recorded in the words of our text, let vs obserue his most willing readines to goe vp with his Parents to the Temple, according to the commandement of God, wherein he giueth streight charge, that euery male should doe so: yea euen children, so soone as they might be fit to endure the trauell of the iourney according to the nearenes or far remoued distance of their dwelling places, from the Temple of Ierusalem.

Wherefore our Sauiour most willingly taketh paines to goe a great iourney thither, with his Parents, at this twelfth yeare of his age. And as he went vp to Ierusalem at this feast, so no doubt he had ordinarily accompanied them to the Synagogue at home, from Sabbath to Sabbath. So that he is therein to be esteemed of vs, in his childhood for a most notable example to all children, how they ought euen from their first yeares, to settle their hearts to seeke rightly to know God, and accordingly to worship and serue him: and to this end, obediently to harken to the instructions and counsells of their godly Parents: and together with them gladly to frequent the house of God, the place of his publike worship, and in the priuate houses of their Parents, to delight in reading of the word of God, and in conferring and talking of it, as we may perceiue that our Sauiour did, being yet but a childe.

And secondly, let vs obserue from the effect, the admirable profiting of our Sauiour, vnder his domesticall education and gouernment: though it was not after the manner of Schollers set to schoole, or sent to the vniuersity, &c. but after the manner of the bringing vp of the poorer sort, who if they be taught at all, are taught at the leasure of their Parents at home.

For notwithstanding any defect in his education, through the pouerty of his Parents, he did neuertheles so behaue himselfe at the Temple in the exercise of conference and catechising, (which was euen then in vse among the Teachers of the word, an exercise allowed by God, and iustified by our Sauiour Christ in his ioining with them therein, and also by his expresse testimony, in that he calleth it by the honourable name of his heauenly Fathers busines) that all the Doctors and so many as heard his most wise questions and answers, were astonied thereat, and for a declaration of their admiration at his wisedome, the Doctors take him vp, and set him among themselues, as the Euangelist giueth plainely to vnderstand.

So that out of question, euen in the learned Doctors iudgement, our Sauiour cleared many things concerning the true doctrine of God, and the holy Prophesies concerning the Messias, &c. in such sort as was far aboue that which might be expected from a childe of his yeares, and from such kinde of education as he had: according to that which was afterward with a bad minde obiected against him, as we read Matth. 13. the end of the chapter. Herein therefore, ſeemeth to be performed (at the leaſt touching ſome excellent beginnings, and as a hand fell of that which followeth) that which the Prophet Iſaiah foretold ch. 50. 4. The Lord God hath giuen me a tongue of the learned, that I ſhould know to miniſter a word in time to him that is wearie: he will raiſe me vp in the morning: in the morning he will awaken mine eare to heare as the learned, &c. For no doubt, this ſingular meaſure of grace at this time of his age, which neuer diminiſhed but grew continually, declareth plainely, that our Sauiour was ſpecially taught of God, euen from the holy Ghoſt, immediately, rather then from any humane inſtruction, whereof to ſpeake ſimply, he ſtoode in no need, as we and all other doe from our childhood and thenceforth continually: ſaue that in all things, he would humble himſelfe to the vſing of the meanes, to the performance of all obedience, in our behalfe, and to leaue a moſt notable example to vs, what we ought to doe concerning the ſame.

The ground and hiſtory of it.

Thirdly, whereas it might be thought, that our Sauiour ſhould in this extraordinarie action of his, through that zeale he bare to the glory of God his heauenly Father, ſomething forget his dutie to Marie his naturall mother, and to Ioſeph his reputed naturall Father, (in which reſpect, Marie beginneth to charge him, and that with no ſmall appearance of reaſon, becauſe he put them to great griefe of minde and trauell of bodie, by reaſon of his conueying of himſelfe from them) let vs notwithſtanding dulie conſider the matter, from the defence of our Sauiour, and we ſhall finde all things ſo cleared, that all the blame (if there were any due) belonged to his Parents, and not to him.

For as our Sauiour giueth plainely to vnderſtand, the duties to God, who is the heauenly Father of vs all, but in ſpeciall manner the Father of his naturall Sonne; are in the ſeaſons thereof to be alwaies preferred before duty to earthly Parents. And chiefly when any haue their ſpecial calling therevnto, as our Sauiour had, aboue all other. The Leuites, in reſpect of a ſpecial ſeruice they were cõmãded to perform vnto god, were cõmended for this, that they neither knew Father nor mother: that is, they regarded nothing that might hinder their ſeruice: much more is our Sauiour to be cõmended, in the like reſpect at this time.

And now as touching Ioſeph and Marie, our Sauiour doth furthermore make it plaine, by his moſt wiſe and dutifull defence, (which it was meete he ſhould at this time make for himſelfe) that the failing was in them altogether, and nothing at all in him. For what reaſon had they to thinke, that our Sauiour, hauing beene alwaies a moſt dutifull childe vnto them, would at this time haue withdrawen himſelf from them, for no other cauſe, then to haue haſted homeward with the firſt of thoſe that returned from Ieruſalem? Nay rather, what reaſon had they, but that they ſhould haue thought thus with themſelues, vpon the firſt miſsing of him: Surely he is now gone aſide to ſome ſpeciall purpoſe, to the glorifying of God before his departure out of the City: or it is ſure, that if there be any holy exerciſe of religion in the Temple, hee is gone thither, &c. Such no doubt ought their thoughts to haue beene, as our Sauiour ſheweth plainely in theſe words of his holy defence, Knew ye not that I muſt be in my Fathers buſines? as though he ſhould put thẽ in mind, that he had ſignified ſo much vnto thẽ before, though either they did not mark it, as they ſhould haue done, or els forgat it again, though they might eaſily haue vnderſtood it from him.

Finally, let vs obſerue this notable hiſtorie, the moſt holy and excellent diſpoſition of our Sauiour in this his childhood: in that according as his Parents, at the laſt well bethinking themſelues, and going to ſeeke him in the Temple, found him there at the holy exerciſe of inſtructiõ or conference & catechiſme mentioned before. For no doubt the rare diſpoſitiõ of the child to all godlines, after they had well bethought themſelues, cauſed thẽ to think that it was moſt like they ſhould find him there. O that childrẽ would learn frõ this moſt excellent example, to loue their church as we vſe to ſpeake, & the holy exerciſes of religion, & namely this of catechiſing, to be willing to be asked queſtions, & to learne to anſwer them, according to the doctrine of the holy Scriptures.

But alas, if Parents now a daies miſſe their children on the Lords day, where ſhall they vſuallie finde them? In the Church at Sermons, thinke we. No but in the market places, playing or idely gazing, or if there be any other place of ſpeciall diſorder and vanity. The ſame may be ſaid of ſeruants, and many of elder yeares, yea euen of ſome Parents themſelues: (it is a ſhame to ſpeake) who may ſooner be found in the beere-houſe, &c. then in the houſe of God.

But of the duties more afterward.

NOw in the laſt place, let vs come to the latter part of the education and life of our Sauiour Chriſt, vnder the gouernment of Ioſeph and Marie: that is, from the twelfe yeare to the thirtith. In what part of holy Scripture is that recorded vnto vs?

It is briefly ſet downe in the two laſt verſes of the ſame 2. ch. of the Euangeliſt Luke: that is to ſay, in the 51. and 52. verſes.

Queſtion. Rehearſe the words, as they follow in the text. Which are they?

Anſwer. 51 Then (ſaith Saint Luke) he went downe with them, (that is with Ioſeph & Marie) and came to Nazareth, and was ſubiect vnto them: and his mother kept all theſe ſayings in her heart.

52 And Ieſus increaſed in wiſedome, and ſtature, and in fauour with God and men.

Explicatiõ & proofe. This alſo is a very ſhort, but yet in the wiſedome of God, a ſufficient and full deſcription of the life of our Sauiour, ſo farre as it is neceſſary for vs to know, for the ſpace of about 18. yeares; if that which is ſet downe ſhal be duly weighed and conſidered of vs. For by that which is ſaid here, if it be laid to that which we haue ſeene already, we may without any great or obſcure difficultie conceiue rightly, what manner of life he led: that is to ſay, a priuate and not as yet, nor for all the time mentioned, any publike eſtate and condition of life: not a wealthy and delicious kinde of life, but a poore and ſober life: not an idle or eaſie life, but a diligent and painefull life. Finally, a life in ſubiection and obedience to his poore Parents, and not the life of a Maſter of a family, to haue commandement and gouernment ouer any. Yea which is ſtrange to ſpeake of, and were it not teſtified by the holy Scriptures, incredible to be thought, (conſidering who he was) he led the life of an apprentice, or man of occupation, as we may ſay, working the Carpenters worke, and not a Students life, as was touched before. Matth. ch. 13. in the end, and as it may be further obſerued, from the Euangeliſt Mark. ch. 6. verſes 2, 3. And Iohn. 7. 15.

And let vs further marke, that ſtill this is not without cauſe repeated, that as our Sauiour grew in yeares, ſo he grew both in bodily ſtature, and alſo in all wiſedome and grace, vntill hee came to the full ſtature and perfection of both: of the bodie, according to a naturall courſe and proportion like to other men: of wiſedome and grace, without meaſure, infinitely aboue all other men.

Finally, let vs well obſerue, that as the Euangeliſt doth plainely teſtifie, ſo gratious was the whole conuerſation and behauiour of our Sauiour, that all men were drawne to a ſingular loue and liking of him: to wit, ſo many as had any grace, and true diſcretion, to perceiue the excellency of his rare wiſedome and all other vertues. The which were not excellent onely in appearance before men, who are not ſeldome deceiued in their iudgement: but alſo euen in the ſight of God, who in all things, doth at all times, iudge moſt true and righteous iudgement. And therefore it is expreſly teſtified by the Euangeliſt, that our Sauiour increaſed in fauour with God, as well as with men. That is, the fauour of God did ſhine forth more and more brightly in the moſt gratious effects and fruits thereof toward him, in ſuch ſort that it did euidently appeare to all that had eyes to ſee, that God did ſingularly loue and delight in him: and that thereby alſo, all might be effectually moued, to haue him in like ſingular regard.

Such is the holy hiſtory of the moſt holy & humble life of our bleſſed Sauiour, in his priuate ſtate and condition of life, euen from his infancy, euery way admirable to all that shall duly vnderstand and weigh the same: in that so high an excellencie should abase it selfe so lowe, and so obscurely: though it could not for all that, but it must needes breake forth like as the Sunne of the firmament doth, and in the darkest day casteth forth some light, through the thickest cloud thereof. Thus farre of the priuate life of our Sauiour.

NOw let vs likewise call to minde, and diligently consider the life of the same our Sauiour, in his publike estate and condition; that is, from the thirtith yeare of his age to the very time of his Passion vnder Pontius Pilate.

And first, let vs consider his manifestation by the publike testimonie, and whole Ministerie of Iohn Baptist: and then by the testimonie of God the Father, and of the holy Ghost, at his holy Baptisme: which was a publike warrant and most diuine testification from heauen, both of the most high person, and also of his calling to his most holy office appropriated therevnto. And last of all, let vs consider of his owne manifesting of himselfe, by the execution of the same his office, in his most effectuall preaching, praying, working of miracles, &c. euen to the last instant of his speciall sufferings, before the time of his death. All which may be distinguished, according to the seuerall Passeouers, from yeere to yeere, as was mentioned before.

Let vs therefore, as briefly, and as plainely as we can, seeke to informe and establish our faith in these excellent points, from the testimonies of the holy Scriptures.

And first of all, insomuch as the manifestation of our Sauiour, by the ministerie of Iohn the Baptist commeth to be considered of vs: let vs inquire after it in this order.

First, how he did it by his preaching of him being absent, as one specially appointed of God to goe before him to prepare the way for him after that manner: that is by stirring vp the hearts of the people, to a present expectation and desire after Christ, who was now to manifest himselfe. Secondly by the pointing of him out with his finger, being present among them, in such sort that they could not be ignorant who or which he was.

And both of these, by an often repeated testimonie and witnesse, the which he most plainely and constantly gaue of him, so long as he liued: and that not onely while he was at libertie, but also in the time of his imprisonment, euen to his very martyrdome and death, by the vniust and bloody hand of Herod, the brother of Philip.

All which things, that we may vnderstand the better, and to the ende they may be of the better credit and authoritie with vs, concerning this speciall and most worthy ministerie of Iohn the Baptist therevnto.

Question. What ground of holy Scripture haue you to this purpose?

Answer. We haue both speciall prophecies of it, from the mouth of God that it should be so: and also the written historie of the performance thereof, most notably described by the penne of the Euangelist Luke.

We haue so indeed. Wherefore let vs in the first place, call to minde the prophecies: and then proceede to the historie shewing the fulfilling of them.

Question. Which are those prophecies that you speake of?

Answere. First the prophecie of Isaiah chap: 40. verses, 3, 4, 5. Then the prophecie of Malachie, chap: 3. in the beginning of the first verse. And 4. verses 5. and 6. which are the last wordes of the old Testament.

Rehearse you the wordes of the Prophet Isaiah.

Question. Which are they?

Answere. 3. A voice cryeth in the wildernes, (saith the Prophet) Prepare yee the way of the Lord, make straite in the deserte, a path for our God.

That this prophecie was giuen forth concerning Iohn Baptiſt, the holy Euangeliſts doe plainly confirme. Mat. chap: 3. Mark chap: 1. Luk. chap: 3. and Iohn. chap: 1.

6. And hee ſhall turne the heart of the Fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their Fathers, leſt I come and ſmite the earth with curſing.

Explicatiõ and proofe. That theſe Prophecies of Malachie, were likewiſe giuen forth concerning Iohn Baptiſt: Read Luk: 1, 17. Mat: 11. verſes 10. 14. Luk. 7. 27. and againe, Mat: 17. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13. And Mark: chap: 9, 11, 12. 13. Where it is not onely teſtified to be ſo, by the Euangeliſt; but alſo by the Angel of the Lord, and by our Sauiour himſelfe.

Thus much concerning the Prophecies.

The hiſtorie, ſhewing the accompliſhment of theſe Prophecies, is next to be conſidered.

And firſt, concerning the preparation and appointment of Iohn Baptiſt, to this ſpeciall miniſterie and ſeruice.

Queſtion. Where is this recorded?

Anſwere. In the firſt chapter of the Goſpell according to the Euangeliſt Luke, from the 5. verſe to the end of the ſame chapter.

Explication and proofe. In reading of theſe parts of this chapter: we cannot but conceiue, from the accurate and exact report of the Euangeliſt: firſt, concerning the conception of Iohn, and then concerning his birth, that he is honoured of God, as a Perſon, whom he will haue to be of ſpeciall note; euen as one appointed from the womb, to a moſt notable and memorable ſeruice. For ſeeing he is the forerunner, and as it were the Herald, or Scepter-bearer before our Sauiour, who ought to be of more high reputation with vs, then any, yea then all earthly Princes: therefore it muſt needes follow, that we are to eſteeme of him, as of a more honourable officer, and accordingly of his office, to be more honourable then any of like place and ſtanding, before any earthly Prince, or King of this world.

Queſtion. What therefore (in the firſt part of the chapter) are thoſe things that the holy Euangeliſt recordeth concerning his conception, which may argue thus much vnto vs?

Anſwere. Firſt, he declareth both the time when, and alſo the place, whether God ſent his holy and mightie Angel Gabriel from heauen, to giue the knowledge of this gracious worke of God, to Zacharie a godly Prieſt of the Lawe; whom God appointed to be the Father of this Iohn the Baptiſt, by Elizabeth his wife, a like godly and ancient matrone in Iſrael.

Moreouer, the holy Euangeliſt ſetteth downe a full narration, of the whole comfortable meſſage of the Angel: containing a deſcription of the ſingular office, and miniſterie, whereunto it was the will of God, to ſanctifie this Sonne of Zacharie and Elizabeth, euen from the wombe.

And furthermore, Saint Luke reporteth, that the Angel foretold, what rare and mightie effects ſhould followe, vpon the miniſterie of this child: and alſo how he directed Zacharie after what manner, God would haue the child brought vp, and nouriſhed: to wit,

wit, after the manner of an holy Nazarite. The Euangelist sheweth also, that in this respect, the Angel prescribeth Zacharie, by the commandement of God, to call this his Sonne, by the name of Iohn, to signifie thereby, the great grace and mercie of God, not onely toward Zacharie and Elizabeth, but also to all Israel, in giuing him such a childe.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

These things indeed doth the holy Euangelist notably lay forth in the former part of the chapter, beginning at the 5. verse. and so forth to the 18.

Neither is it to be neglected, that moreouer and beside all the excellent things already mentioned, he declareth further, that in so much as Zacharie did not giue credite to the gracious message of the Angel, but after a sort reasoned against the possibilitie of it, in that, incredulously he demanded a signe for the proofe and confirmation of it vnto him: he was therefore iustly stricken with dumbnes, vntill the time that the child was borne, as we read from the 18. verse to the 26. Hetherto of the report which the Euangelist maketh, concerning the conception of Iohn, in the former part of that chapter.

Question.

Now, what are those other things, which he recordeth in the latter part of the same chapter, euen from the 57. verse, to the end thereof, concerning the birth of Iohn: whereby it may yet further appeare, that hee was appointed of God, to be a singular Person, for the execution of a most rare office and Ministerie?

Answere. They are these that followe.

First, the singular and vnwonted ioy of many, at his birth: according to the word of the Angel to Zacharie.

Likewise, the ioy of Zacharie himselfe, not onely at his birth, because a child of so gracious a promise was giuen him; but also, because at the circumcision of the same child, his speech was restored vnto him, and as it seemeth his hearing likewise; in so much as it is said, that in the time of his dumbnes, they made signes to knowe his minde, concerning the name of the child.

Thirdly, the Euangelist Luke recordeth the excellent prophetie, and thankesgiuing of Zacharias, whereby immediately after the restoring of his speech, hee praiseth God, and foretelleth the neare approaching of our Saviour Christ then shortly to followe: and the speciall office of his newe borne childe, in that hee was assured by the holy Ghost, against his former doubting, that according to the word of the Angel, hee should be the Prophet of the most high, to goe before the face of the Lord, to prepare his waies. And to giue the knowledge of salvation, vnto his people, by the remission of their sinnes: and so forth, as is followeth to the last verse of the chapter.

Fourthly, the Euangelist reporteth the extraordinarie education of the childe by his parents, and his religious obedience to them, according to the commandement of God, both for diete, and apparel, auoiding all delicacie and niceness in them both: according also as the Euangelist Matt: testifieth, chap: 3. verse 4. And the Euangelist Marke chapter 1, 6. And our Saviour Christ, Matthewe chapter 11. verse 8.

Finally, Saint Luke reporteth the extraordinarie growth of the childe, in all spirituall graces, meete for the furnishing of him, to the execution of his great office, against the time thereof: as we read in the last verse of the first chapter.

All these things, doe euidently declare, that the sending of Iohn the Baptist before our Saviour Christ was a very great, and memorable worke of God.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

It must needes be acknowledged to be so indeed: vnlesse we will shut our eyes, against the light of the cleare spring of the day.

The same also may be yet further manifest, by the speciall calling, whereby it pleased God to call him forth, so soone as the appointed time was come. Let vs therefore come to that.

Question.

Where is this speciall callinge foorth of Iohn, recorded vnto vs?

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who led a most holy and iust life full of tentations & sufferings.

The ground and history of it.

In the first two verses of the third chapter of the Euangelist Luke.

It is so indeede. And it is very carefully set down, as a matter of worthy moment. For the time and season thereof, is expressed by a manifold description of the date, and as it were the period, or full point of it. Namely in the 15. yeere of Tiberius the Emperour of Rome, and then when Pontius Pilate was vnder him gouernour of Iudea, &c. Rehearse the words of the text.

Question. How doe you read them?

Answere. 1. Now (saith the Euangelist) in the fifteenth yeere of the reigne of Tiberius Cæsar, Pontius Pilate being Gouernour of Iudea, and Herod being Tetrarch of Galile, and his brother Philip Tetrarch of Iturea, and of the countrie of Trachonitis, and Lysanias the Tetrarch of Abilene.

2. When Annas and Caiaphas were the high Priests, the word of God came vnto Iohn, the Sonne of Zacharias, in the wildernes.

Explicatiõ & proofe. The word of God: that is, the commandement of God came vnto Iohn; to wit, to his hearing and knowledge, commanding and authorizing him from heauen, to Preach and Baptize in the name of Iesus Christ, shortly to come after him. For, that this was the word of God, which came to Iohn: it is euident, by that faithfull obedience which hee yeelded to this word, in such an execution of his office, as not onely Saint Luke, but also all other of the Euangelists, haue diligently recorded the same; for the instruction of vs, and the whole Church of Christ, in this behalfe; whereunto also our Sauiour himselfe giueth witnes. Mat: 11.7. &c. chap: 21.25. and Iohn 5.33.34.35.

THus much obserued, concerning the calling: let vs proceed to the execution of his office, whereunto he was thus called forth.

In the which, because Iohn according to the most wise direction of the Spirit of God, proceeded by certaine degrees; let vs accordingly, follow him in his footesteps, as we shall find him to haue gone before vs.

First therefore, we finde that he began his ministerie, by conuincing the people of their owne most sinfull and damnable estate in themselues, that so hee might bring them to earnest and speedie repentance; and cause them to see the necessitie of Gods mercie to their saluation, the which was now shortly, in and by our Sauiour, to be more openly, and plainly reuealed, then yet it had beene. And herein did Iohn insist, vntill the time, that our Sauiour was manifested at his Baptisme.

Secondly, he giueth a more direct, and often repeated witnes of him, euen to the very time, that Herod beheaded him. And this did Iohn, partly when our Sauiour was Baptised: but much more, after his Baptisme. And that againe, partly while our Sauiour was tempted in the wildernes: and partly, after his returne. And then twice, by pointing of our Sauiour out by the finger, at such time as he was present: but much more often, doth he testifie of him, in his absence, labouring by all meanes to magnifie and aduance our Sauiour, in the hearts of his people: most humbly abasing himselfe in comparison of our Sauiour, that by no meanes, their hearts might be hindered from the imbracing, and acknowledging of him, to their saluation.

This being the course, which Iohn hath tracked by his holy ministerie: let vs accordingly followe him.

Question. And first, where is his more generall and preparatorie doctrine, accompanied with the Baptisme of the Gospell, set down vnto vs.

Answer. It followeth in the aboue-named third chapter of the Euangelist Luke, from the 3. verse to the 19. of the same chapter.

There it is very notably, and most at large, set downe indeede. In the reading whereof, specially if we call to minde the interpretation of it, as we haue heard it in the ordinarie course of Preaching vpon it: it cannot be, but we must needs perceiue, a wonderful spirit to haue bin in the seruãt of God: not onely touching the Doctrine, but also in respect of his most zealous accommodating,

The grond and history of it.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who led a most holy & iust life, full of tẽptations and sufferings.

ting, and applying of it, to all sorts of people, as might be most fit, and effectuall through the blessing of God, to the conuersion of all that belonged to the Lord.

Whereby also, wee our selues may iustly be put in remembrance, how wee ought to be prepared, and to prepare our selues continually, to receiue Christ into our hearts; yea, more and more fully, to entertaine him to our owne endles comfort and saluation. That is to say, we may hereby clearly perceiue, that we must admit the terrour of the threatenings of God, to chase away our security: that we must repent of our sinnes, denie all opinion of our owne righteousnes: and rest altogether, vpon the free grace and mercie of God, reuealed in our Sauiour Christ to saluation, through his righteousnes and redemption. Finally, that we must bring such fruits, as we may declare the truth of our repentance, and humiliation before God: euery one of vs, according to the duties of our seuerall callings. For so doth Iohn earnestly charge all those, to whom he preached publikely: and euery one of them that sought any more priuate, or particular direction from him: as appeareth at large, by the testimonie of the Euangelist Luke, in the chapter before alledged. The same doctrine of Iohn Baptist, recorded more largely by Saint Luke, is more briefly contracted by Saint Mat: chap: 3. from the beginning of the chap: v: 1. 2. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. And yet more briefly, Marke ch: 1. 4. 7. 8. Read also Iohn: ch: 1. verses 6. 7. 8. and Act: 10. 37. and chap: 11. 16. and chap: 13, 24: and chap: 19. 4.

SVch is the more generall, and preparatorie doctrine of Iohn, before the manifestatiõ of our Sauiour Christ at his Baptisme. We come now, to his more particular and direct testimonies.

And first, to that which he gaue of him at his Baptisme.

Question. Where is that recorded?

Answere. In the 13. and 14. verses, of the 3. chapter of S. Matthew, in these wordes. Then came Iesus from Galile, to Iordan vnto Iohn, to be Baptised of him.

But Iohn put him backe, saying, I haue need to be baptised of thee, and commest thou to me?

Explicatiõ & proofe. This indeede is the first more particular testimony, which Iohn gaue to our Sauiour: wherein, he acknowledgeth, as we see, his incomparable dignitie.

Let vs proceed to the rest. The next of those testimonies, which we find recorded, were they which Iohn gaue of our Sauiour, while he was tempted of the Diuel in the wildernes, whether he was led away by the holy Ghost, immediately after his Baptisme: as the Euangelists Mat: Marke and Luke, doe expresly witnesse.

Question. Now, there are two of this sort. Where is the first of them set downe?

Answer. It is set downe in the first chapter of the Euangelist Iohn, verse 15. after this manner, Iohn (to wit, Iohn the Baptist) bare witnes of him and cried saying, This was he of whom I said, He that commeth after me is preferred before me: for hee was before me.

Explicatiõ & proofe Here againe, doth Iohn the Baptist, giue a notable testimonie to the peerles excellencie of our Sauiour Christ; vnto whom all flesh ought to direct, not so much the eye of their head, as the eye, and hand, of their mind and heart: that happily they may see, and inioy the saluation of God, which is onely to bee found in him.

And thus no doubt, was Iohn earnest, al the time that our Sauiour Christ was in the wildernes, euen vntill the day before his returne out of the wildernes, to the place where Iohn continued his preaching, and baptizing: that is to say, in Bethabara beyond Iorden. Iohn. 1. verse 18.

Now as the Euangelist Iohn sheweth, in the very next verse: the day next before this returne of our Sauiour, Iohn the Baptist gaue an other most notable, and resolute testimonie of him: by occasion of an inquisition, that passed vpon him by certaine Priests, who were of the Pharisies, and that by the authoritie of a Councill, held at Ierusalem, to that ende.

Answere. Where is that notable testimonie recorded?

Beäese in God the Son, who ted a most hory and most itse ful of tentati- ons and sufferings.

The grou and histo- ry of it.

Ans. It followeth in the aforesaid first chapter of the Euangelist Iohn, from the 19. verse, to the 28. verse of the same.

Quest. Which are the wordes of the Euangelist?

Ans. 19. Then (saith the Euangelist) this is the record of Iohn, when the Iewes sent Priestes and Leuites from Ierusalem to aske him, who art thou?

20. And he confessed and denied not, but said plainely, I am not the Christ.

21. And they asked him, what then? Art thou Elias? and he said, I am not. Art thou the Prophet? And he answered: No.

22. Then said they vnto him, what art thou, that we may giue an answere to them that sent vs? What saiest thou of thy selfe?

23. He said, I am the voice of him that crieth in the wildernes, Make straite the way of the Lord, as saith the Prophet Esaias.

24. Now they that were sent (as the Euangelist saith further) were of the Pharisies.

25. And they asked him, and said vnto him, why baptizest thou then, if thou be not the Christ, neither Elias, nor the Prophet?

26. Iohn answered them, saying, I baptize with water: but there is one among you, whom yee knowe not.

27. He it is which commeth after me, who is preferred before me, whose shoo-latchet I am not worthy to vnloose.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

This verily is a notable testimonie indeede, most resolute and wise concerning himselfe, for the iustifying of his owne office and calling; and most dutifull, and honourable, concerning our Sauiour Christ.

This testimonie is so much the rather to be imbraced of vs, because it was giuen vpon so imperious & dangerous an examination. So that we may perceiue hereby, that Iohn was in no doubt, either of the truth which hee had taught, or of the office which he executed: neither that he feared any danger, whatsoeuer might growe vnto him thereby. He was not as a reede shaken with the winde, timorous and mutable, but a most valiant, faithfull and constant seruant of God. And such ought euery one of vs to be, in the profession of the name and truth of our Sauiour Christ, if euer wee should be called into question for it.

To this ende and purpose, all the testimonies, which Iohn gaue vnto our Sauiour Christ and his truth, are of exceeding good vse, for the confirmation of our faith. And euen for the same cause, let vs hold on our course to gather the rest.

Of the which, the next that do follow, are those wherein Iohn the Baptist did point out our Sauiour Christ with the finger. And of these also, there are two recorded. Which was the first of them?

Question.

Answere. It was that which followeth in the Euangelist Iohn, from the 29. verse of his first chapter, to the 35. of the same.

Question.

Answere. Rehearse the text. Which are the Euangelists wordes?

29. The next day (saith the Euangelist) Iohn seeth Iesus comming vnto him, and hee saith, Behold the Lambe of God, which taketh away the sinne of the world.

30. This is he of whom I saide, After me commeth a man, which is preferred before me: for he was before me.

31. And I knewe him not: but because he should be declared to Israel, therefore am I come, Baptizing with water.

32. So (as the Euangelist addeth) Iohn did beare record, saying, I saw the spirit come down from heauen like a doue, and it abode vpon him.

33. And I knew him not: but he that sent me to Baptize with water, he said vnto me, vpon whom thou shalt see the spirit come downe, and tarry still on him, that is hee, who Baptizeth with the holy Ghost.

34. And I saw and bare record, that this is the Sonne of God.

Explication and proofe.

In this testimonie, Iohn the Baptist doth not onely giue witnesse to the most high excellencie of the Person of our Sauiour, as he did before: but also to the most Teleſe in God the Son, who led a moſt holy & vnſpotted life of temptations and ſufferings.

The ground and hiſtorie of it.

moſt ſweet and comfortable fruites and effectes of his moſt holy office: that is, remiſsion of ſinnes, and ſanctification of life, through the blood of Chriſt.

This is the firſt teſtimonie, giuen by Iohn, of our Sauiour, when he was at the ſame time preſent, and in the viewe of the people.

The ſecond followeth, which was of like ſort; but not ſo publike, as the other. And it followeth in the next verſes after the former text: to wit, in the 35. and 36. verſes of the firſt chapter of Iohn.

Queſtion. Which are the wordes?

Anſwer. 35. The next day (ſaith the Euangeliſt) Iohn ſtood againe, and two of his Diſciples.

36. And he beheld Ieſus walking by, and he ſaid, Behold the lambe of God.

Explicatiõ and proofe. This then, as we ſee, is the ſecond teſtimonie, which Iohn gaue to our Sauiour, in his preſence. The vſe of which ſo particular and perſonall teſtimonies, as we may cal them, giue vs thus much to vnderſtand: that the very true Chriſt muſt be truly and particularly knowne, and diſcerned from all other, of euery one that ſhall be ſaued by him.

The which bleſſed effect, God gaue to the preſent ſpeech of Iohn, to his two Diſciples. For as it followeth in the next verſe, &c. The two Diſciples, to wit Andrewe, Simon Peters brother, and another not named by the Euangeliſt, vpon that teſtimonie of Iohn Baptiſt, followe our Sauiour, and become his faithfull Diſciples.

NOw after theſe teſtimonies, giuen by Iohn in the preſence of our Sauiour; there followe other giuen in his abſence, according to the vſuall courſe of his moſt holy and zealous miniſterie, wherein he was moſt conſtant and painfull. A particular example whereof, the Euangeliſt Iohn ſetteth downe, in the 3. chapter from the 25. verſe to the end of the chapter. The which teſtimonie, as the Euangeliſt doth furthermore obſerue, was giuen by Iohn Baptiſt at Enon, beſides Salim, where he baptized, becauſe there was much water. And he gaue it alſo for the further inſtruction and admonition of his Diſciples, who were not yet perſwaded by his former and often repeated teſtimonies. So hard a thing is it, to ſetle in the heart, true faith in the true Chriſt.

Let vs therefore, for our further helpe, hearken to this teſtimonie of Iohn alſo.

Queſtion. What are his wordes? ſpecially from the 28. verſe. Rehearſe the text.

Anſwere. 28. Ye your ſelues (ſaith Iohn Baptiſt to his owne Diſciples (are my witneſſes, that I ſaid, I am not the Chriſt, but that I am ſent before him.

29. He that hath the bride, is the bridegroome: but the friend of the bridegroome, who ſtandeth & heareth him, reioiceth greatly, becauſe of the bridegroomes voice. This my ioy therefore is fulfilled.

30. He muſt increaſe, but I muſt decreaſe. He that is come from on high, is aboue all, &c.

Explication and proofe. Iohn wee ſee, is alwaies like himſelfe: a moſt excellent paterne, and preſident, to be imitated and followed, of all faithfull Preachers of the Goſpell, in their Preaching: to wit, that their care ought to be altogether, to make Chriſt knowne to the people, that they may truly beleeue in him, and aboue all, to reioyce in him: and not to reſt in any vaine admiration of the great learning, or zeale, or any other gift, or gifts, of their preachers.

And hence alſo, may all hearers receiue an excellent inſtruction howe to heare, and whom they ought to heare, and receiue; namely, thoſe that Preach Chriſt, and not themſelues. Conſidering, that this is the ſcope and aiming point, of all both hearing and preaching: yea and of reading, conferring, and meditating, and whatſoeuer beſide.

I cannot ſpeake now, of this teſtimonie, as it deſerueth: for that were to make many Sermons of it againe, as we haue done heretofore: It may ſuffice now, that wee doe briefly call to minde, and thinke more fully of the reſt by our ſelues, as God ſhall giue vs remembrance and a fit opportunitie to the ſame.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who led a most holy and iust life full of tentations and sufferings.

The groũd and history of it.

Onely let vs not forget, that this was the last recorded testimonie, which Iohn gaue of our Sauiour, in the time of his libertie: and that also, not long before he was cast into prison, as we haue an inckling giuen vs, in the 24. verse of this 3. chap: of the Euangelist Iohn, which now we speake of.

The last recorded testimonie, is now onely behind: to wit, that which this excellent Minister of God, gaue of our Sauiour Christ, while he was vniustly imprisoned by Herod, that tyrannous and fox-like Tetrarch, as our Sauiour himselfe did afterward terme him.

Question. Where is this last testimonie recorded?

Answere. It is recorded in the 11. chapter of Saint Mathew, verses 2, 3. And in the 7. chap. of Saint Luke, verses 19. and 20.

Explicatiõ and proofe. In these places, both the Euangelists alledged, doe indeede record, that Iohn being in prisõ, sent two of his Disciples to our Saui: to know whether he were the Christ that should come, or whether they should looke for another, or no.

Question. But how may this be accounted a witnes, giuen of our Sauiour Christ: and for a confirmation that he is the true Christ: when as it may seeme rather, to be a recalling, or recanting of all his former ministerie and testification, into question and doubt?

Answere. That Iohn was in no doubt at all himselfe, but remitted the same man in prison, that he was before in the time of his libertie: our Sauiour Christ doth plainely confirme, as it followeth in the same places of holy Scripture.

Explication and proofe. Our Sauiour doth so indeede. For as he saith, euen to preuent this doubt, Iohn was no reed shaken with the wind, but a Prophet, yea greater then a Prophet, &c.

These words make it plaine, that Iohn sent his Disciples to our Sauiour, with such a message, not for that he himselfe was in any the least doubt of it: but for their confirmation whom he sent, and for the confirmation of many other, from that answere, which our Sauiour should giue.

This doubtles, was the holy and wise purpose of Iohn, in this practise of his. And he taketh a very fit occasion giuen him vnto it, by that report which his Disciples brought vnto him, of the great works which our Sauior wrought.

And beside, what more excellent way might he haue taken, being shut vp himselfe, then to direct his Disciples, to vse their libertie in making resort to him, by whom onely all true libertie, redemption, and saluation, is to be found: and who alone was able to put them out of all doubt, and to establish them in the true faith?

Thus therefore, the holy deuise of Iohn, in sending his Disciples to our Sauiour: was not of doubtfulnes in himself, but to deliuer thẽ frõ their doubting.

In which respect, it is worthy to be marked of vs, how our Sauiour did most excellently fit his answer: and how God also, by his diuine prouidence, so disposed, that at the very time, when Iohns Disciples came to our Sauiour: they found him working many and great miracles. Luke. 4. 7. 21. Then the which, nothing could be more auailable to perswade them of that truth, whereof they were in doubt: according to that which we reade, Iohn, 10. 41, 42. Many resorted to our Sauiour, and said, Iohn did no miracle: but all thinges that Iohn spake of this man, were true. And many beleeued in him there.

And thus, we haue by the grace of God, collected & gathered together, the manifold testimonies of Iohn the Baptist: tending all to the manifestation of our Sauiour Christ, at the time of his entrance into his publike estate, and condition of life. The fruit also whereof, was mentioned euen now: in that they acknowledging all things to be true, which Iohn spake of our Sauiour, they beleeued in him, and were no doubt thereby induced so to doe, as were many thousands more.

From this whole discourse, concerning Iohn the Baptist, and his ministery, we may iustly conclude now (as was affirmed at the first) as well from the prophecies which went before of him, as by the historie shewing the accomplishment thereof: that he was in speciall manner, ordained and prepared, sanctified furnished and authorised by God himself, to be a most notable & honourable instrument

Beliefe in God the Son, who led a most holy and iust life, ful of tentations and sufferings.

The ground and historie of it.

instrument of his, to this excellent end and purpose, that he might be a speciall witnes of the comming of the true Messiah, our Lord and Sauiour, into the world: according to that which we reade in the Euangelist Iohn, ch. 1. verses 6,7,8. who writeth thus of him.

There was a man (saith he) sent from God, whose name was Iohn. The same came for a witnes, to beare witnes of the light, (that is, of Christ) that all men through him might beleeue. He was not that light, but he was sent to beare witnes of the light.

So that now there remaineth nothing to be said further of Iohn, in this our exercise: but that he, who was so famous and faithfull a witnes, to and of our Sauiour Christ in his life time, was honoured of God, with the crowne of martyrdome by his death: in that he died a most constant, & holy witnes, both of the iustice of the law, in that speciall reproofe of Herod, for the which hee was put to death, and also of the righteousnes of faith in Christ, to whom hee sent his Disciples, as vnto the onely true Messias and Sauiour, not long before the same his death. Reade Matth. 11.2, &c. And somewhat more fully Mark. 6.14, &c.

But touching our selues, and all other, this addition we may make, and truly affirme, that in so much as God hath sent so singular a witnes, to the appearance of his Sonne: whosoeuer doe not beleeue in that Christ, to whom Iohn the Baptist gaue testimonie, cannot possibly beleeue in the true Christ.

And not onely so, but this also may we truly affirme, that whosoeuer will not be carefull, more and more to confirme and strengthen their faith in the true Christ, from the same testimony of Iohn the Baptist, they doe neglect a fundamentall prop and stay thereof: as may be euident, both by the diligent record of it, by euery one of the Euangelists, as we haue seene: and also by the often repetition thereof in the sermons and speeches of the Apostles, as wee may reade Act. 10.37. and ch. 11.16. and ch. 13.24.25. and ch. 19.4. Yea so, that ch. 1. verses 21.22. when an Apostle was to be chosen in the roome of Iudas; such a one onely, is prescribed to be eligible, and as we may say, capable of the holy office of Apostleship, as had bin acquainted with Iohns ministery.

To God therefore, be all singular praise, and honour, and glory, from vs, and his whole Church, for this so excellent a witnes and Martyr of his, and of our Lord Iesus Christ. And he vouchsafe also, to giue vs the right vse of this so worthie a testimony, among other of his holy Prophets, and of the Apostles of our Sauiour Christ, that our weake and doubtfull hearts, may be more and more established in the faith of the same our onely true and alone Sauiour: to whom with the Father, and the holy Ghost, be all honour and glory now and for euer. Amen.

AND thus, from the discouerie and manifestation of our Sauiour Christ, at the time of his entering vpon his publike estate and condition of life: we come to inquire of this most excellent part, and remainder of the same his life: as of that whereunto all the former discourse, and preparatorie ministerie of Iohn the Baptist, tended. For albeit, euery part of the life of our Sauiour (as hath beene already declared) is reuerendly, and religiously, to be regarded of vs, euen from the time that he was first put into swadling clothes: yet most of all, is the latter part, to be chiefely pondered and weighed, as that wherein hee executed and performed in speciall manner, all the parts of his most holy office of his Kingdome, Prophetship, and Priesthood: according to that which our Sauiour, neare the time of his death, said to Pilate, Iohn, 18. 37. For this cause am I borne, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should beare witnes vnto the truth.

Now in this part of our inquirie containing many things, we must proceed, as it were by certaine degrees, or steps, in as plaine an order, as God shall giue vs grace to attaine vnto. And that also, to the further establishing of our faith: while we doe throughly behold that faithfull record, which is set before vs, concerning his owne most gracious manifesting of himselfe, by his owne preaching,

Beleefe in God the Sonne, who led a most holy and iust life, full of tentations & sufferings.

ching, and working of miraculous workes, and by his familiar and daily conuersation among his people, from Passe-ouer to Passe-ouer, and through the whole course of the yeares, one after another; euen from his baptisme, to the time of his chiefe passion, and death, a few daies onely excepted, by reason of his speciall tentation in the wildernes, immediately after his Baptisme.

This Baptisme of our Sauiour, and those daies of his Tentation, doe minister vnto vs, two things necessarily to be considered, before wee come to the preaching of our Sauiour, &c. What may these two things be?

Question. Answer. The first, is the most high and honourable externall calling of our Saviour Christ, to the execution of his most high and excellent office.

The second thing, is his most difficult and hard entrance thereunto.

Question. It is true that you say. But, where are these things testified and recorded vnto vs?

Answer. The first is set downe in the end of the 3. ch. of the Euangelist Matthew, verses 16, 17.

The second is written in the 4. ch. of the same Euangelist, from the beginning of the chapter, to the 12. verse of the same.

Explicatiõ and proofe. The same things are likewise recorded by the Euangelist Luke. The first in the 3. ch verses 21, 22. And the 2. in the 4. ch from the beginning to the 14. verse. And more briefly by the Euangelist Marke, chapter 1, verses 9, 10, 11, 12, 13.

Rehearse now the words of the Euangelist Matthew concerning the first thing: to wit, the honourable externall calling of our Sauiour Christ, to the execution of his most holy & high office. What are the words of the Euangelist?

Question. Answer. 16 Iesus (saith he) when he was baptized, came strait out of the water. And lo, the heauens were opened vnto him, and he (that is, Iohn) saw the Spirit of God descending like a Doue, and lighting vpon him.

17 And lo, a voyce came from heauen, saying, This is my beloued Sonne, in whom I am well pleased.

Explicatiõ & proofe. The Euangelist Luke (as was alledged before ch. 3. 21.) expresseth further, that our Sauiour Christ, after he was baptized, did pray, and that then the heauens were opened: the Lord thereby giueth plainely to vnderstand, that his prayer was effectuall with him, euen to the opening of heauen, for the benefit of sinfull men.

And the Euangelist Iohn, for a further interpretation of the words of Saint Mathew, witnesseth expressly, that Iohn the Baptist, saw the Spirit come downe from heauen, which the prayer of our Sauiour had opened.

Thus then, our Sauiour Christ, being appointed a most high office, aboue all that might agree to any creature, whether man or Angel, answerable to the most high excellency of his Person: he hath likewise a most honourable and high calling, by a most high and heauenly testimonie giuen of him. For to whom, or of whom, did God euer speake thus from heauen, This is my beloued Sonne, &c. Neither can these words possibly agree to any creature, but onely to our Sauiour Christ, in such sense as God speaketh them of him, as being his onely begotten and naturall Sonne, and as one, in whom he is well pleased, not by grace and fauour onely, but euen for perfect worthines. Yea so pleased, as for his sake, he was willing to be reconciled to most vnworthy sinners.

The like may be said, concerning the descending of the holy Ghost, in a bodily shape visibly vpon him. For neuer did he, nor neuer will he descend so vpon any. Neither euer was, or shall be any, so repleat with all grace without measure, as our Sauiour was; whereof this discension of the holy Ghost, was a visible and publike testimony and confirmation, according to that of Iohn Baptist, in the Gospel of Iohn the Euangelist, ch. 3. 34. God giueth him not the Spirit by measure.

Now the end, why our Sauiour was thus proclaimed to be the Sonne of God, and declared to be thus repleni shed with all heauenly grace: is for that all may know; that they stand bound to heare him, as it was said likewise from heaheauen at his transfiguration. Matth. 17.5. though not so publikely, as it was at his baptisme. But this hearing of the Sonne of God, is not onely to yeelde him audience while hee speaketh: but also with attention of the eare, to yeelde all obedience of the heart, and life, to his most holy and heauenly doctrine.

The ground and history of it.

Thus much therefore, concerning his externall calling.

IT followeth next, that you doe likewise rehearse, that which is recorded, concerning that most difficult and hard entrance, which, as was said in the second place, our Sauiour had vnto the execution of the offices and duties of his calling.

Question. Where find you any record of this?

Answere. This (as was alledged) is that which is written by the Euangelist Matthew, in the former part of his fourth chapter, from the first verse, to the 12. concerning the leading of our Sauiour aside into the wildernes: yea concerning his driuing thither, as the Euangelist Marke writeth, (to wit, by the mighty motion and earnest instigation of that Spirit, which was immediately descended vpon him) to the end he might in that solitarie and most vncomfortable place, among the wilde Beasts, encounter with the tentations of the Diuel, who had full leaue and libertie permitted vnto him so to doe.

Explicatiõ & proofe. So indeed doth the Euangelist Marke, in these points, make the matter more plaine, then the other Euangelists doe, ch. 1. verses 12. 13.

And this verily, was a very hard, and vncomfortable entrance (if any thing might be hard and vncomfortable at the first on-set) that he should be driuen from all societie of men, to be without all foode, and without commodious lodging, and that among wilde sauage beasts: and most of all, that the most vnwelcome Diuel, should haue free accesse to molest his holy minde, with wicked suggestions and tentations, and to haue power ouer his bodie, to carry it from place to place, to the troubling of his senses, and peruerting of his mind, if by any meanes, he might possibly haue preuailed against him.

We would haue thought, that our Sauiour being so solemnly proclaimed, to be the Sonne of God, and the great Prophet of the Church; should forthwith, haue gone forth to declare his mighty grace, and power, both in word and deede aboue Moses, and all that euer were. But behold, the matter is strangly carried, if it be weighed, in the vneuen balance of humane reason. Neuertheles, so it seemed good to the diuine wisedome of God, euen at the first, to humble his owne Sonne, by such a strange triall. Yea and thus would our Sauiour, the Sonne of God, humble and abase himselfe, that by his entrance, or rather euen in his preparation to his most holy office in our behalfe; it might appeare vnto vs, that we could not by him be brought to glory, but he must be euery way humbled for vs.

And yet againe, this humiliation, was not without glory, in that as Moses was susteined 40. daies and 40. nights in the mount without foode, so was our Sauiour: in that the wilde and sauage beasts durst not approach to hurt him: but most of all, in that, though the Diuel himselfe, was let loose as it were, to haue his full scope, to vse all his serpentine subtiltie and craft, to tempt our Sauiour, as he had done Adam in the garden of Eden, and that with as much dis-aduantage to our Sauiour, as might be: yet he could not, in the least iote preuaile against him, but contrariwise, was altogether foiled. Whereat, as the holy Angels were reioyced, and ministred to our Sauiour: so ought wee to reioyce at this beginning of his holy victory.

But touching this incounter of our Sauiour Christ with the Diuel, to the end, we may consider of it to our profit, in some order: two things are of most worthy obseruation.

First, what the most dangerous tentations of the Diuel were, to the end we may take our warning to watch against them.

Secondly, by what meanes our Sauiour ouercame them, that wee

Beleefe in God the Sonne, who led a most holy and iust life full of tentations & sufferings.

The ground and history of it.

may learne from him, what course we are to take, as it were vnder his cõduct, that we also may ouercome. For as he would not simply, and by an absolute power, ouercome the diuel, by restraining him from tempting, but by resisting and reiecting of his tentations, framed as cunningly as might be: so must not we looke, to be freed from the temptations of Satan: but wee must arme our selues to resist them, in a wise and lawfull course, that so by striuing through the power of the grace of our Sauiour Christ, we may at the last, though with much a doe, happily ouercome.

Let vs therefore stay awhile, to consider of these points, most worthy our obseruation, as was said euen now.

Question. And first, which were the tentations of the Diuel, such as he assaulted our Sauiour withall; and are for our admonition and warning against them, mentioned by the holy Euangelists?

Answere. The first tentation was vnto distrust in the fatherly prouidence of God: yea to the discrediting of that expresse word, and testimony, which God the Father gaue from heauen, of our Sauiour, that he is his Sonne.

The second was to the contrary presumption, and tempting of God, without warrant of his word.

The third was to ambition, and couetous desire after the riches, and vaine-glorie of the world: and for the loue thereof, to the worship and seruice of the Diuel, in stead of the true God.

Let vs heare the text, and so shall all things be the more cleare and manifest vnto vs. Question. How reade you? What are the Euangelists words?

Answer. The Euangelist Matthew reporteth the history thus from the beginning of his 4. chapter.

1 Then (saith he) Iesus was led aside of the Spirit, into the wildernes, to be tempted of the Diuel.

2 And when he had fasted forty daies and forty nights, he was afterward hungry.

3 Then came to him the tempter, and said, If thou be the Sonne of God, command that these stones be made bread.

Deut. 8.3. 4 But he answering, said, It is written, Man shall not liue by bread only, but by euery word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

5 Then the Diuel tooke him vp into the holie Citie, and set him on a pinacle of the Temple.

6 And said vnto him, If thou be the Sonne of God, cast thy selfe downe: for it is

Psal. 91.11. written, that he will giue his Angells charge ouer thee, and with their hands they shall lift thee vp, lest at any time, thou shouldest dash thy foote against a stone.

Deut. 6.16. 7 Iesus said vnto him, It is written againe, Thou shalt not tempt the Lorde thy God.

8 Againe the Diuell tooke him vp into an exceeding high mountaine, and shewed him all the kingdomes of the world, and the glory of them.

9 And said vnto him, All these will I giue thee, if thou wilt fall downe & worship me.

Deut. 6. 13. & chap. 10. 20. 10 Then said Iesus vnto him, Auoid Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him onely shalt thou serue.

11 Then the Diuel left him: and behold, the Angels came and ministred vnto him.

Explicatiõ & proofe. Here we see the temptations of the Diuel, which were mentioned before, plainely laide before vs, and the answeres of our Sauiour to the same. Wee read them recorded likewise, by the Euangelist Luke, chap: 4. verse, 1. &c. to the 14. as was noted before: though in a diuerse disposing of the temptations, he rehearsing the last of Mathew, in the second place. But we will follow Mathew his order, without any preiudice to Luke, knowing that they doe not so much stand vpon the order, where it is not necessarie, as vpon the things themselues: which they alwaies faithfully report, and wherein, they doe in this historie, iointly accord.

In this their ioint report, beside the temptations themselues, their are diuerse circumstances, or rules, profitably to bee obserued, as you haue beene

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who led a most holy & iust life, full of tentations and sufferings.

The ground and history of it.

bene taught, the which serue well, to the discouering of the Diuels notable craft and malice practised in them.

Question. Which are the circumstances?

Answer. First, wee are giuen to vnderstand, that the Diuel is readie, chiefly to assault those that are in speciall callings, and are most like to be the speciall instruments of God, to ouerthrowe his kingdome.

The second circumstance is, that hee watcheth to take the most dangerous occasion and opportunitie thereunto, that may be.

The third is, that he tempteth to contraries: that is, when he seeth that he cãnot prenaile, to turne aside on the left hand, he will labour to draw vs aside, on the right hand.

Moreouer, when he cannot prenaile vpon special occasions: then hee fleeth to those, which doe commonly most earnestly affect all flesh.

Finallie, we must consider, that the tentations of the Diuel, are not bare and naked motiues, as if a yong childe should wantonlie mooue his mother, to giue him some thing which she knoweth to be verie hurtful to him: but he cometh with strong delusions, if they may be admitted: and he is armed with fierie dartes, which will mightilie and dangerouslie pierce, except the parties assalted, be defended, as it were, by armour of proofe.

Explicatiõ and proofe.

The circumstances, or rules, and obseruations, are euident by the practise of the *D*iuel, in that course which he tooke in tempting our Sauiour, as we see it after a sorte, before our eyes.

For first of all, in so much as hee assalteth our Sauiour Christ, the Sonne of God, with all the craft he can, and without all dread or shame, &c: who may looke to escape his wicked and dangerous assalts? Let therfore both King and Prince, ministers of the word, and euery good Christian, looke diligentlie to themselues, and stand watchfullie vpon their garde. And so much the more, ought euery one to doe it, by howe much his fall may be the greater, and more hurtfull, not onely to himselfe, but also to many other.

Secondly, that the Diuel doth most narrowly watch the occasion, it is plaine likewise, in that he tempteth not our Sauiour Christ, to make proofe, whether he were the Sonne of God, by trying whether he could turne a stone into bread, vntill our Sauiour was verie hungrie.

This which he did at this time, in his dealing with our Sauiour, in obseruing the occasion: is his vsuall practise, with euerie of vs, and all other. And it is so much the more dãgerous, in respect of vs, because he hath the aduãtage against vs, by one sin to make way for another. For when a man is in his angry moode, then doth he tẽpt him, or rather push him forward, to vse reprochfull speeches, &c. When a man hath intemperatelie filled himselfe with daintie meates, and strong drinks, apt to prouoke lust; then he tẽpteth to fornication, &c. When a man is in want, he tempteth to distrust in the prouidence of God. And if he be discontented, & giue place to murmuring: then doth he tempt him further, to speake, &c. He taketh the aduantage against vs in all things, both from the excesse of naturall corruption, to this or that euill; and also from the weaknes of grace, toward this or that good dutie.

Thirdly, as he attempted to deale with our Sauiour, so doth he vsuallie with all other: that is, to draw them aside on the right hand, if he cannot on the left. And seeing he doth so vsuallie preuaile, as he hath had experience, from the beginning of the world, to this day, in that he hath drawne thousands to be prodigall, when he hath not found them to be pliable to be couetously sparing: & others againe, to be miserably sparing & couetous, when they were not so apte to prodigall and wastefull expences: yea, seeing he hath preuailed so strangelie with many, that of couetous, he hath made them prodigall, & other againe, of prodigall, couetous: of Atheists, hypocrites: & contrariwise, of hypocrites atheists, &c. by a change of one sinne for another. It is therfore the lesse maruell, that he doth in this wise set vpon our Sauiour Christ, in hope at the least, that peraduenture, he might preuaile to peruert him, one way or other, as he had preuailed with Adam and Eue in the beginning.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who led a most holy and iust life full of tentations and sufferings.

The ground & historie of it.

But the Deceiuer is here deceiued, and altogether frustrated of his hope, to the great glorie of God, and to the singular reioicing of our hearts: in that wee haue in the conquest of our Sauiour, the assured hope of our victorie, and preuailing against him.

Fourthlie, the Deuil is so expert, that when he wanteth speciall occasions, yet hee is neuer destitute of matter to worke vpon: seeing he hath alwaies at hand, the common and continuall corrupt disposition of mans nature, howsoeuer he was disappointed in our Sauiour. For he knoweth well, that self-loue, and the loue of this world, with ambition, and pride, &c. are naturallie, borne and bred in euerie man: Yea so, as that which is bred in the bone, will hardlie out of the flesh, as the common prouerb is. Euery man is desirous of worldlie riches, and preferment, &c. In these respectes therefore the Deuill neuer wanteth worke: though he haue not alwaies those speciall occasions, which he hopeth for, and taketh hold of, whensoeuer they come in his way.

Finallie, that the Deuil is no weake and trifling Tempter, after the manner of a wanton childe, &c. it is euident from that wee read, 2. Thes: 2. 9. 10. 11. &c. 2. Tim: 2. 26. and Reuel: 12. 9. For he is mightie against the wicked, yea sometime against the poore children of God: though we see no powerfull effect, against our Sauiour: blessed be God for it.

Such therefore, were the temptations of the Deuill, against our Sauiour: the which also, are his daylie tentations, and the verie manner of his tempting: which he doth most cunninglie practise, with newe deuised plottes and stratagemes against vs all. For this we must vnderstand, that the tẽptations mentioned by the Euangelists, are not all, wherwith the Deuill assaulted our Sauiour, in the tentation of fourtie daies. Neither did he leaue our Sauiour, but onelie for a season, when those daies were ended: as Saint Luke certifieth vs, cha: 4. 13. Onely these few are mentioned, which it concerneth vs speciallie to know: and that from those instances, wee might be made warie and watchfull against these, and all other like vnto them, whatsoeuer we shall be tempted vnto, contrarie to the holie will and commandement of God: as it is our dutie, and doth stand vs most necessarilie vpon, to watch alwaies most earnestly against them.

Now therfore, from the temptations themselues, and the circumstances, or rules, for the discerning of the craftie trade of the Deuill therin: let vs come to see, howe our Sauiour did repell, and beat back the tentations offered vnto him. For this also, is verie behooffull to practise, after the example of our Sauiour himselfe: to the ende, wee may through his grace, ouercome.

Question. What course therefore, did our Sauiour take, to repell the tentations of the Diuel?

Answere. By the right vse, and application of the holie Scriptures (the which are rightlie termed the Sword of the spirit) our Sauiour did cut asunder, and vtterlie frustrate all the Diuels tentations: though he had euerie way, most subtilie contrined them, and that euen vnder colourable abuse of the holie Scripture it selfe.

Explication and proofe. Herein therfore, let vs for our imitation, obserue this excellent wisedome of our Sauiour: that wee rightlie vnderstanding the holie scriptures, may rightly vse them, to the discouering, and repelling of the Diuells abusing of them. By cleauing to the truth of the scriptures, let vs reiect all his forgery and lies, which he shall goe about to countenance, and impudentlie to face out by them. For so we see plainly, that our Sauiour did. As for example, wheras in the first tentation, the Diuel sought as cunninglie as he could, to discredit the word, and testimonie of God the Father, vttered in his most solemne proclaiming of him, to be his Sonne: our Sauiour doth contrariwise, vphold the truth of the word of God, by the word: that is, the truth of the word latelie vttered, by the word long before written. Yea for answere of all the tentations, hee saith. It is written. It is written. It is writtẽ. Wherfore, for the answering of tentations, if we wil take the speeding course, wee must not betake our selues to reuelations from heauen, nor to carnal and earthlie reasonings, wherin the Diuel will easily goe beyond beyond vs: but to the written word of God, which God hath established, for a most sure and infallible refuge, and direction vnto vs.

And hereby, it may euidentlie appeare, how necessarie a dutie it is, for euerie Christian, euen to his owne safetie, and as the onelie preseruatiue against his vtter ouerthrow, yea against his eternal destruction: to be well acquainted, and stored with the word of God, that wee may therby discerne aright, which are the temptations of the Diuell. For otherwise it is an easie matter for him, to delude vs, when the Diuell shall tempt vs to steale: if wee haue not the 8. commandement in a readines to replie against him, and say in our heartes, and in the feare of God. It is written, Thou shalt not steale. Nothing else, shalbe a sufficient counterpoison against the tentation. And the same is true, cōcerning all the rest: when any of vs shall be tempted to vncleannes, to reuenge, to contempt of our gouernours, to profanesse, to swearing, to idolatrie, &c. Assuredlie, if we haue not the word written in our hearts, to alledge, It is written in the booke of God, Thou shalt not commit aculterie, Vengeance is mine, Honour thy Father, and thy mother, &c: ther is no sufficient helpe, for resistance, but wee shall fall downe like wounded men before the Diuell.

Finallie, seeing as was said before, the Diuel is continuall in temptation, (though God will not suffer him to be alwaies alike vehement and pressing) therfore let vs be continuallie in our watch & ward against him: & especiallie then, when anie pricke in the flesh, the messenger of Satan, as the Apostle Paul speaketh, shall be neare at hand, soliciting vs, as it were, to anie speciall sin, either secrete, or open, of the flesh, or of the Spirit, of what sorte so euer it be.

And alwaies, let vs haue in minde, this incouragement, which the Lorde, himselfe geueth vs to vnderstand, by his Apostle Iames, that if wee resist the Diuel, he shall flie from vs. chapter 4. 7. The ground of which comfort, is this, that our Sauiour Christ hath vanquished the Diuel on our behalfe: as is most cleare, by this historie of his tentations.

Thus much therfore, concerning the hard entrance, or preparation of our blessed Sauiour, vnto the execution of his most holie and happie publike ministerie for vs, according to the will of God, and according to his owne voluntarie good will toward vs: that hereby it might appeare, euen from the beginning, that the Diuel must be vanquished by him, or else we could not be saued, but must abide for euer, most miserable and slauish vassalls vnto him, and so to lye eternallie vnder the wrath of God, together with him.

LEt vs now goe on, and see how our Sauiour Christ doth publikely execute his most gracious and high office and ministerie, wherevnto he was thus most sufficientlie called, and euery way fitted and prepared.

Wee will consider of this publike ministerie of his, from the more neare beginnings, both for doctrine, and also for miracles: and so forth to the further proceeding of it.

The which beginnings, though they may seeme to haue bene in weakenes, at the first, as the Sun in the rising: yet they shalbe found to gather strength, as it were with a swift course, of the wings therof, and waxe brighter & brighter, vntill the high noone of the day.

Question. First therfore, what ground of holie Scripture haue you, for the declaration of the beginnings of the doctrine of our Sauiour, which is that whereof we are first to inquire?

Answere Wee haue these beginnings, faithfullie set down and recorded, in the first chapter of the Euangelist Iohn, as it followeth after that, wher we left, concerning Iohn the Baptistes pointing out of our Sauiour with the finger, from the 37. verse, to the end of the chapter.

Question. Let vs heare the words of the Euangelist. Read, or rehearse them, out of your book. How doth the holie Euangelist record, & report these things vnto vs?

Answer. 37 It followeth thus. And the two Disciples heard him (that is, they heard) Iohn the Baptist their Master) speake (that is, vsing these wordes, concerning our Sauiour

51. And he ſaid vnto him, Verily, Verily, I ſay vnto you, hereafter ye ſhall ſee heauen open, and the Angels of God aſcending and deſcending vpon the Sonne of Man.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

Here are the beginnings of the doctrine of our Sauiour Chriſt, verie faithfullie recorded vnto vs: ſmall indeede in outward appearance, but great and mightie, and moſt gratious in effect; as they will appeare to all that ſhall duelie conſider them.

They haue ben, by preaching, laid open to you at large, as you know. Now we can but curſorilie call to minde, a briefe ſumme of theſe excellent things.

And firſt, concerning the entertainment which our Sauiour gaue to Andrew, & his companion, whether it was Iohn the Euangeliſt, (who vſeth to conceale his owne name) or any other: it was kinde indeed, but verie ſimple and plaine, in theſe words, Come and ſee. Neuertheleſſe, this is wonderfull, that theſe two, tarrying with our Sauiour but one night, ſhould ſee & heare thoſe things from him, whereby they were for euer confirmed, to beleeue the teſtimonie, which Iohn the Baptiſt gaue of him, to be vndoubtedlie true: namelie, that he was, as he had ſaid the day before, the Lamb of God. Yea, they were ſo perſwaded, that they doe not onely beleeue themſelues: but they are carefull alſo, to bring others to Chriſt, that they might likewiſe beleeue. For Andrewe finding Peter his brother, he reporteth to him with great ioy, that they had found the Chriſt, or anointed of God: and in this perſwaſion, he did leade his brother vnto him. Our Sauiour, by telling Peter his name, as ſooneas he came vnto him, & whoſe ſonne he was, and what was his naturall timorouſnes, in the profeſſion of the name of God, though otherwiſe of courage enough, and too much: and likewiſe propheſying further, or rather of his diuine grace, promiſing him the gift of true ſpirituall fortitude: our Sauiour doth hereby, worke the like effect in Peters heart.

The next day, as we ſee, it followeth in the text, our Sauiour going into Galile, and finding Philip a ſtranger to him, in reſpect of humane knowledge or acquaintance, and onely ſaying to him, Followe thou me: forthwith Philip moſt willingly willingly folowed him, and became his Diſciple, & beleeued in ſome meaſure, though (yet in much imperfection) that our Sauiour Chriſt was he of whom Moſes wrote in the law. And his heart was in like māner ſo reioiced that meeting Nathanael, he leaueth him not, till he haue brought him to our Sa: Chriſt.

Heerevpon, our Sauiour ſo entertaineth Nathanael, that he perceiueth by that ſpeech which he vſed to him at his firſt comming, that he knewe the verie inward & ſecret diſpoſitiō of his heart, which God had wrought in him by his holy ſpirit. And therwithall he perceiueth alſo, that while he was yet out of the view of the natural eye of our Sauiour, he was neuertheles, in the ſight of his diuine prouidēce. For our Sauiour telleth him plainlie, that he ſaw him vnder the fig tree. The which things, ſo wrought in the heart of Philip, that by the grace which our Sauiour gaue him: he was brought immediately to beleeue, that hee was the Sonne of God, the king of Iſrael. And thervpon, our Sauiour promiſeth, (as we haue ſeene in the ende of the chapter) that both Nathanael, and the reſt, thus apprehending ſome ſmaller beginnings of faith, ſhould in time to come, ſee greater thinges, for their further confirmation. For this he meaneth, by the opening of the heauen, and the Angels of God aſcending and deſcending vpon the Sonne of Man.

The ground and hiſtory of it.

The ground and hiſtory of it

Theſe were the firſt beginnings, euen as it were the ſeede time of the holie doctrine of our Sauiour: whereby he began to manifeſt, and make himſelfe knowne, though yet ſomewhat more priuatelie.

The which beginnings, though they were ſmall in outward ſhewe (as was ſaid) yet they were ſo mightie and effectuall, that our Sauiour is acknowledged of his diſciples, though verie Nouices as one may ſay, to be in reſpect of his Perſon, the Sonne of God: and in regard of his office, the Meſſiah or anointed of God, the Prophet of whom Moſes wrote, & the verie true King of Iſrael: according to the Promiſe, which God had made to the ſeede of Dauid. For ſo no doubt Nathanael meant.

LEt vs now, from the beginnings of the doctrine, proceed to conſider likewiſe, what manner of beginning our Sauiour made, concerning his Miracles: which ſerued for the confirmation of the ſame his doctrine, & alſo of the truth of his diuine Perſon, and likewiſe of his moſt holie office annexed therevnto, as will hereafter better appeare.

Queſtion. What therfore, was the beginning of his working of Miracles? Where are they recorded vnto vs?

Anſwer. The record hereof, foloweth from the beginning of the 2. chapter of the ſame Euangeliſt S. Iohn to the 12. verſe of the ſame.

Queſtion. Let vs here the wordes of the Euangeliſt. How doe you reade?

Anſwere. 1 His words are theſe. And the third day, there was a mariage in Cana (a towne of Galile, and the Mother of Ieſus was there.

2 And Ieſus was called alſo, and his Diſciples vnto the mariage.

3 Now when the wine failed, the Mother of Ieſus ſaid vnto him, they haue no wine.

4 Ieſus ſaid vnto her, Woman what haue I to doe with thee? mine howre is not yet come.

5 His Mother ſaid vnto the ſeruants, Whatſoeuer he ſaith vnto you, doe it.

6 And ther were ſet there, ſixe water-pottes of ſtone, after the manner of the purifying of the Iewes, containing two or three firkins a piece.

7 And Ieſus ſaide vnto them, Fill the pottes with water. Then they filled them vp to the brimme.

8 Then hee ſaid vnto them, Drawe out nowe, and beare vnto the gouernour of the feaſt. So they bare it.

9 Now when the gouernour of the feaſt, had taſted the water which was made wine, (for he knewe not whence it was: but the ſeruants which drewe the water knewe) the gouernour of the feaſt, called the Bridegroome.

10 And hee ſaid vnto him, All men at the beginning ſet forth good wine, and when men haue well drunke, then that which is worſe: but thou haſt kept backe the good wine vntill nowe.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who led a most holy and iust life, full of tentations & sufferings.

The ground and history of it.

11 This beginning of miracles did Iesus (saith the Euangelist Iohn) in Cana of Galile, and shewed forth his glorie: and his Disciples beleeued in him.

Explication. Here wee haue, as it is plainelie testified, a verie notable and right gratious beginning, of the miraculous workes of our Sauiour: to the making of his diuine Person knowne, by this effect of his diuine power, like as before he shewed some tokens of his Propheticall Spirit.

NOw if you go forward, to read wher you left: that is, from the beginning of the 12. verse, to the end of the chapt: we shall see the same things, yet more clearelie, and more publikelie, manifested and confirmed vnto vs.

For our Sauiour Christ by his Diuine power, & Regall autoritie, came into the Temple of Ierusalem, as the Soueraigne Lord, into his owne house, according to the Prophesie of Malachie, chap: 3. 1. & reformed the abuses therof.

And besides that, the holie Euangelist testifieth, that our Sauiour, did both knowe the thoughts and intents of his aduersaries, euen from the first peeping out of their malice against him: and also the false hearts of all hypocrites, who made a shewe of beginning to beleeue, and of bearing heartie good will toward him, when as they did neither of them from anie, either soundnesse of iudgement, or truth in affection.

Read the texte attentiuelie, and you shall easilie perceiue it to be so.

Question. Howe doth the holie Euangelist continue the historicall narration therof?

Answer. 12 It followeth thus. After that (saith the Euangelist) hee went downe to Capernaum, Hee and his Mother, and his Brethren, and his Disciples, but they continued not long there.

13 For the Iewes Passe-ouer was at hand. Therefore Iesus went vp to Ierusalem.

14 And hee found in the Temple, those that solde Oxen and sheepe, and doues, and changers of money sitting there.

15 Then hee made a scourge of small coardes, and draue them all out of the Temple, &c. And verses, 23. 24. 25.

23 Now (as the Euangelist writeth further) when he was at Ierusalem, at the Passeouer in the feast, manie beleeued in his name, when they saw his Miracles which he did.

24 But Iesus did not commit himselfe vnto them, because he knewe them all.

25 And he had no need, that any should testifie of man, for he knew what was in man.

Explication. May wee not see plainlie nowe, euen by the reading of the text, as was said, that our Sauiour commeth into the Temple, with all autoritie, as the soueraigne Lorde, into his owne house, &c.

And doe we not see likewise, how he plainely espieth and discerneth at the verie first, both the hidden malice of his aduersaries, & also the hypocrisie and dissimulation of his hollowe hearted friendes?

These things are verie euident, to euerie one that hath an eye of iugdement to see withall.

And thus we see plainelie, the beginninges of our Sauiour his manifesting of himselfe to be the Messiah: both by his doctrine, and also by his Miracles, from the end of the fourtie daies temptation, to the end of the first Passe-ouer, next after that he was baptized.

And herewithall, wee may perceiue likewise, in what manner of conuersation our Sauiour carried himselfe, among the people of God: to wit, with singular vprightnes toward all, with great gentlenes toward those that shew themselues teachable, and with as great autoritie and Maiestie, to the reproofe of the rest: according to the testimonie of this same Euangelist. Iohn ch: 1, 14. The word was made flesh, and dwelt among vs, and we sawe the glorie thereof, as the glorie of the onely begotten Sonne of God, full of grace and truth.

But it would be very long to prosecute all things, concerning the orderlie, and successiue proceedings, of the life, doctrine, and miracles of our Sauiour Christ. This were to make a full Commentarie, and not to vse any conuenient expedition in our propounded course of Catechizing.

Wee

The meaning of it.

Beliefe in God the Son, who led a most holy & iust life ful of temptations and sufferings.

Wee will therfore henceforth, onelie inquire briefelie of the life of our Sauiour, in a generall consideration: and after the heads or chiefe pointes of his doctrine, and after the kindes of his Miracles, in some plaine and familiar order, pointing to the places, where we may read them fullie.

Question. In the first place therefore, what are you taught to beleeue, concerning the life of our Sauiour, in a generall consideration of it.

Answer. The holy Scriptures teach me, and euery Christian to beleeue, yea they doe plainely describe, and lay before our eyes as it were, that the life of our Saviour Christ, was a perfit mirrour of all true vertue and godlines.

And namely, that he was in all holy duties, both to God and man, vpright and entire, diligent, and painefull, faithfull, constant, and vnweariable, euen from the first time that he had any discretion, to the end of his life: notwithstanding all temptations, and afflictions, whatsoeuer he met withall.

Explicatiõ & proofe.

It is true. The life of our Sauiour, as it standeth recorded in the holie Gospel: but much more plentifullie, as hee led it: is a most perfect mirrour of all true holines and righteousnes, in euerie parte of it: according to that which wee haue alreadie seene concerning the whole priuate estate of it: hee therin increasing more and more, in wisedome, and grace, before God and men, we haue seene it also, in the beginning of his leading of it, most worthilie, in his publike estate.

The proceedinges of it, were answerable to the beginninges, so that in nothing, it was wanting. For herein was it fulfilled, which is written, that he was full of grace and truth. Iohn 1. 14. God gaue him not the Spirit by measure. chap: 3.34. And that in him are hidden all the treasures of wisedome & knowledge. Coloss: chapt: 2. verse 3.

For his zeale of the glorie of God, read Ioh: 2.17. The zeale of thy house hath eaten me vp. And chapt: 4. 31. &c. He preferred the doing of the will of his Father before the taking of his meate, though he were verie hungrie.

For his hatred against sinne, read Marke 3. 5. See his earnest rebukes, and threates against obstinate sinners, Matth: 11.20. &c. and chapt: 18.6.7. 8.9. and chapt: 23.

For his pittie and compassion, ouer poore penitent sinners, read Matth: 9. 36. and chapt: 11.28. Come vnto me all ye that are weary, &. and chapter 18. He came to seeke vp the lost sheepe. And againe, He was so tender, that he would not quench the smoking flaxe, nor breake the bruised reede.

And for his compassion, ouer the outward necessities of men: read Matt: ch: 14 verse 14. and ch: 15. 32. I haue compassion on this multitude.

For his humilitie, read againe Matth 11. verse 29. and Iohn 13. He washed his Disciples feete. Hee was more readie to serue, then to be serued. Suffer little children to come to me, saith our Saviour. Marke: 10.

The particulars of the obedience and righteousnes of our Sauiour are infinit: according to all the commandements, as hath bene more fullie set down, at the ende of euerie commandement, in the former parte of the Treasurie, to shewe, that our Sauiour hath fulfilled the law for vs, aboue that we can stande to rehearse now.

Onely let vs see some proofes, for the vertues expressed in the answere: seeing they containe the grounds of all the rest. For in so much as he was, in all things. vpright, and entier, diligent, and painefull, faithfull and constant, without any wearines and fainting: what might be further required of him?

First therefore, for his vprightnes, read, 1. Pet: 2. 22. There was no guile in his mouth. No, nor in his heart neither. He would by no meanes exceed the limites and bounds of his calling: as Luke 12. v. 14. who (saith our Sauiour) made me a deuider of inheritance? He refused to be a ciuill King or ruler, &c.

Concerning his great diligence and paines-taking, and that also constantly and vnweariably: consider it in his Preaching, Matth: 4. 23. chap: 9, 35. and chap: 26, 55. Luke 4. 43, 44. cha: 8. 1. ch: 13, 22. and ch: 22, 53. Heb: 3, 1, 2. &c.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who led a most holy & iust life, full of tentations and sufferings.

The ground and history of it.

It is thus often mentioned, becausе it is a matter verie worthie to be diligentlie obserued.

Consider the like diligence, and painfulnes of our Sauiour, without wearines in prayer. Luke 6. the whole night in renewing of his supplications. And vsuallie, and verie often, by himselfe, Mark, 1. 35. Luke 9. 18. chapt: 11. 1. Matth: 14. 23. Marke. 6. 46.

And that no discouragement could daunt our Sauiour, or ceasе his most holy course: no though he was requited with all euill dealing, it is many waies euident. The peoples attẽpting, to throw him down headlong, from the top of an hill, could not do it, Lu: 4. 29. Their lying in wait to intrap him in his speach, Matt: 22. 15. & Luk. 11. 53. 54. Their attempting to stone him, could not doe it. Iohn: 8. 59. & ch: 10. 21. The most blasphemous reproches, which they and their rulers, raised vp against him, could not doe it. Math: 11. 19. and ch. 12. 24. No other grieuance, or vndutifull dealing of the part of any, could doe it, as it is notablie testified in the holie Gospel.

If we would haue any further proofe, of the most perfect constancie of our Sauiour: his death was the full sealing vp, and confirming of all, as we shall see further, when we come to inquire of it. And in the meane while, we may take a taste, from his most resolute setteling and preparing of himselfe, to the enduring of it Matt: 16. 23. & 26. 53. 54. and Lu: 12. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53.

Question.

BVt now, that we may proceede to the rest of those things, which are to be obserued, concerning the life of our Sauiour. Haue we any promise recorded in the holy scripture, that our Sauiour should be thus holie, and righteous, in the perfit obedience of life, as well as that he should be perfitlie holie by Conception and birth, to our benefit?

Answer.

Yea, God made a promise of it to his Church, as it is euidẽt, Isa. ch: 11. v: 1. 2. &c. And ch: 50. 8. & ch: 53. 9. Likewise Ier: 23. 6. They shal cal him the Lord our righteousnes.

Explicatiõ. & proofe.

These Prophesies haue indeed, the nature of promises, & were giuen forth no doubt, by the commandement of God, for an assured testimonie, that hee should be such a one, as he was by the holie Prophets, described to be.

Herevnto also, tende those allegoricall, and pathetical loue-descriptions of our Sauiour Christ, by the Church, in the Song of Songs, where hee is set forth, to be most comely and beautifull, from the toppe to the toe: yea altogether delectable, matchles, and incomparable.

And thus the Promise being comfortable of it selfe, may well drawe vs to a further consideration of the comfortes, that faith findeth in the perfit holines, and righteousnes of our Sauiour Christ.

Question.

What may these be?

Answere.

All doe rest in this one: in so much as hereby we are assured, that he hath fulfilled the lawe for vs: and that he is a fit Person, to stand betwixt God and vs, and to offer vp that onely propitiatorie sacrifice, which is auailable to take away our sinnes, and to reconcile vs for euer to God.

Explicatiõ and proofe.

All resteth in this indeed. For insomuch as he was to die for our sinnes, it was necessarie that hee should liue without sinne. And so it is testified of him, that he knew no sinne. Otherwise, he could not haue taken away our sinnes. But now, that we knowe, he was perfitlie righteous, euen that holie and righteous one, so appointed and approued of God; there is nothing wanting, that wee can desire more, to the comfort of our consciences, in this behalfe.

Question.

NOwe therfore, what dutie belongeth herevnto?

Answer

The holie Scriptures doe teach vs, in this respect, that our Sauiour Christ hath not onelie fulfilled the perfect righteousnes of the lawe for vs: but also that he hath therwithall giuen vs an example, how we our selues, and all Christians, ought, trusting in his grace, to indeuour more and more, to serue and obey God, our heauenlie Father, in all righteousnes, and true holines, all the dayes of our liues.

The

The danger of not beleeuing.

Beleefe in God the Son, who led a moſt holy and iuſt life, full of tentations and ſufferings.

The holy Scriptures doe teach vs ſo much indeede, according to that which we reade, Iohn, chap. 13. verſes 12, 13, &c. 1. Cor. 11. 1. Epheſ. 5. 2. and 1. Pet. 2. 12.

And it ſtandeth with all good and holy reaſon, that it ſhould be ſo. For ſeeing our Sauiour humbled himſelfe to walke in all good dutie both to God and toward all men, neither refuſed the dutie belonging to euery age, nor the labour of his hands in a poore eſtate: yea though he was the Sonne of God: who can, without ſhame and bluſhing, goe about to draw his necke out of the yoake. Nay, who can but acknowledge, that it is his bounden dutie, after the example of our Sauiour Chriſt, to endeuour after all vprightnes, and integritie, after all diligence and painefulnes, after all faithfulnes and conſtancie, in the diſcharge of the duties of our callings, wherein the Lord hath ſet vs.

Queſtion. TO conclude this point. Is there any danger, in not knowing, nor beleeuing the perfit holines and righteouſnes of the life of our Sauiour, as well as the holines of his nature? and in not endeauouring to obey God, according to his example in all things, wherein it is meete for vs, to be imitators and followers of him?

Anſwer. They that doe not know and beleeue this, cannot beleeue in our Sauiour Chriſt, as in a meete and ſufficient Perſon, to be a mediator to ſatiſfie Gods iuſtice for our ſinnes, and to make an euerlaſting reconciliation, and attonement with his diuine Maieſtie for vs.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is very true. Neither can any ſuch, reape any profite, or benefit by his death. This therefore, is carefully to be auoided, as a very great danger, and as rocke that would cauſe ſhipwracke of faith. For if our Sauiour Chriſt had beene a ſinner himſelfe, (which God forbid we ſhould once thinke, though his aduerſaries did ſo blaſpheme, as our Sauiour himſelfe complaineth, Matt. 11. 19.) how ſhould we haue any comfort, that he ſatisfied for our ſinnes, and not rather for his owne? But for the remouing of this ſo dangerous and vncomfortable a doubt, hee doeth elſe-where very earneſtly reply againſt all theſe, and all ſuch ſlanderous calumniations, to iuſtifie the righteouſnes of his life. And namely, Iohn ch. 8. verſe 28. I doe nothing of my ſelfe, &c. and verſe 29. I doe alwaies thoſe things that pleaſe my Father. And verſe 48. Which of you can rebuke me of ſinne? And whereas they feare not to blaſpheme moſt wickedly, and to ſay, that he had a Diuel: our Sauiour anſwered them, I haue not a Diuel: but I honour my Father, and ye haue diſhonoured me. And I ſeeke not mine owne praiſe: but there is one that ſeeketh it and iudgeth. And verſe 55. I know God, and keepe his word. And ch. 10. 32. When the Iewes went about to ſtone our Sauiour: Many good works (ſaith he) haue I ſhewed you, from my Father: for which of theſe works doe ye ſtone me? As though he ſhould ſay, If ye will needes ſtone me, it muſt be for well doing, and not for any euill, which ye can iuſtly charge me with. And he proceedeth further, to iuſtifie himſelfe againſt their reply, in the ſame place. Read alſo ch. 12. 49. 50. and ch. 14. 31.

Hetherto of the life of our Sauiour. Onely this reſerued, that we are hereafter, to inquire more fully, of the laſt part and concluſion of it: wherein, the perfection of all his moſt holy vertues, doe moſt brightly ſhew themſelues, as then we ſhall by the grace of God, make it very plaine, from the holy hiſtory thereof.

Beliefe in God the Son, who taught a most holy and perfect doctrine.

The ground and history of it.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who taught a most holie and perfit Doctrine.

IN the meane season, his doctrine is next to be considered of vs.

Question. How are wee to beleeue in our Sauiour, in respect of that?

Answer. We are to beleeue that our Sauiour Christ, taught a most perfect doctrine; containing both the grounds, and also the sealing vp, or ratification of the whole truth of God, necessarie to be beleeued and obeied of vs, and the whole Church for our direction in the way of saluation, euen to the end of the world.

Explicatiõ and proofe. It is very true. For in this respect, as we haue alreadie seene, wee are to beleeue in our Sauiour, as in the great Prophet sent of God, whom all stand most strictly bound to heare and obey. Act. 3.22.23. Heb. chap. 1. verses 1,2. and ch. 12.25.

And that our Sauiour, hath taught a most perfect doctrine, we may easily shew it in way of induction, by collecting of the heads or chiefe points thereof, set downe in the holy history of the Gospel, written of him. And that also, so exactly and perfectly from his owne sacred mouth, may iustly and as it were vpon a sure ground and foundation build our faith thereon. For whereas the whole doctrine of God, is comprehended either in the law, or the Gospel: our Sauiour hath taught all things most perfectly, concerning both of them.

And first concerning the Law, that is to say, the morall law, which hath a perpetual vse and authority in the Church: though the ceremonies, and many politicall ordinances of the law are ceased by our Sauiours comming.

First, he teacheth the perpetuitie of it, and therewith also, the perfection of it, to all such ends, as God appointed it vnto: in so much as, If any shall breake the least of the commandements, and teach men so, our Sauiour affirmeth, that he shall be least in the kingdome of God. Matth. 5.17.18,19,20. Read also ch. 19.16,&c. Where he telleth the rich young man, that this law of God, is a perfect rule of mans life. Thou knowest the commandements (saith he) Thou shalt not commit adultery, &c. Luke, chap. 18. verse 18, &c. Reade also chap. 10. 28. and ch. 16. verses 29,31.

Secondly, our Sauiour distributeth the law most perfectly, according to the seuerall contents of either table: vnder the name of the first and second Commandement. Matth. chap. 22. verses 36,37,38,39. The first and the great Commandement (saith our Sauiour) is this, Thou shalt loue the Lord thy God, with all thy heart, &c. And the second (as he saith further) is like vnto this, to wit, Thou shalt loue thy neighbour as thy selfe. On these two Commandements hangeth the whole law and the Prophets: saith our Sauiour, the Prince of all Prophets, and he by whose spirit they spake and wrote all that is written of them. Reade also Mark. chap. 12. verses 28. and 34. And after this (saith the Euangelist there) no man durst aske him any question: to wit, with any vaine confidence, or bold conceit, that they might put him to silence. For they were conuicted in their consciences, of his most perfit knowledge, according to that testimony which the expounder of the law, gaue to this his answer, made vnto him.

Thirdly, as in the same place he maketh it cleare who is the true God, euen the God of Israel, one onely God: so Luke, chap. 10. 29,30,&c. 37. he doth by a notable parable declare, whom God in his law, would haue vs account to be our neighbour. And Matth. 5. 43, &c. It hath beene said, Thou shalt loue thy neighbour, and hate thine enemies. But (saith our Sauiour) I say vnto you, loue your enemies, &c. Where he includeth them, vnder the word neighbour, against that Beliefe in God the Son, who taught a most holy and perfect doctrine.

The ground and history of it.

that former blinde distinction. Reade also ch. 7, 12.

Fourthly, our Sauiour Christ doth most purely, and faithfully cleare the right interpretation, and scope of the law, against the corrupt and defectiue glosses, wherewith the Scribes and Pharises had obscured, and peruerted the same. This he doth by giuing particular instances, in diuers of the commandements: the sense whereof, they had curtailed, as one may say: as we reade, Matth. 5. verses 22, 23, &c. In which words he giueth instance concerning the 6. Commandement. And verses 27. 28, &c. concerning the 7. Commandement. And verses 33. 34, &c. concerning the third commandement. And againe, concerning the same, chap. 23, 16, &c. And against cruelties, forbidden in the 6. Commandement.

Likewise also, at another time, concerning the seuenth Commandement, ch. 19. 3, &c.

Moreouer, concerning the 5. Commandement, chap. 15. 3, 4, 5, 6, &c. Yea and generally against their tradition, verse 11. shewing that the heart is principally to be cleansed, or else all is to no purpose. And againe concerning the 5. Commandement, ch. 22. 18, &c.

Yea, in that one most notable, and large Sermon of our Sauiour vpon the mountaine, recorded in the 5, 6, and 7, chapters of matthew: if we shall marke it well: it will appeare, that he speaketh of all the principall duties, commanded in the whole decalogue, or ten Commandements of the morall Lawe: though not in the order of the Commaundements, which was not necessarie.

And concerning the 4. Commandement, verie often doth our Sauiour Christ both by doctrine, and also by practise, cleare the right vse of it; and so deliuereth it from all pharisaicall, and superstitious abuse. Matth. 12. 1, &c. Luke, 4. 16, &c. And chap. 6. 1, &c. And chap. 13. 10, &c. And Iohn, chap. 5. 9, &c. and verses 16, 17, &c. and chap. 7, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24. Didnot Moses giue you a law? &c.

The sum ne of all, concerning the interpretation, which our Sauiour giueth of the Law, is this, that the whole Law, and euery commandement thereof, both pertaining to God, and also to man, doth not onely binde the outward man, as the hand and tongue, &c. to obedience: but euen the most inward and hidden man of the heart, touching the most secret thoughts, motions, and intents thereof. So that, not onely by the prescription of the Law of God, are good actions to be done, but it is also required by the same Law, that they be done in the right manner: without all hypocrisie, without vaine glorie, without bitternes, without flattery, without enuie, without desire of reuenge, &c. Yea, and on the contrary, in all vprightnes of heart, and with a good conscience, from faith and loue vnfeined: euen to our enemies, as in the sight of God, in pure zeale of his glorie, &c. to the end that all our actions may be pleasing vnto God.

In this wise, doth our Sauiour make it cleare, how the law of God is rightly to be vnderstood and interpreted, against the corrupt glosses of the Pharisies. Neither is there any speciall vertue, commanded by God, in his holy Law, which our Sauiour doth not earnestly commend, and exhort vnto: nor any vice of speciall note, which he doth not zealously reproue, and dehort from; as also from the inward thought and motions thereof.

And to this purpose, according to his speciall kinde of teaching, he doth very elegantly, and plainely, fit many notable similitudes and parables. As for example, by the parable of a certaine Lender, who had two debtors, Luke, 7. 39, &c. he reproueth the rash and vnaduised iudgement of a Pharisie. By a parable of the Plough-man, looking backe, he reprouth lightnes and inconstancy, chap. 9. 62. By the parable of a certaine rich man, he reproueth couetousnes & trust in riches, ch. 12. 15, &c. Likewise 16. 13. by a parable of one that should take vpon him to serue two Masters, he reproueth the same, and sheweth the Beleefe in God the Sonne, who taught a most holy & perfect doctrine.

The ground and history of it.

impossibility of it. And chap. 13.6,&c. by a parable of a barren figtree, he reproueth all vnfrutfulnes, in those which do professe the name of God: as also that hainous abuse, which all such doe make of Gods long sufferance, and patience toward them. And ch. 16, verse 19,&c. by a parable of the rich man and Lazarus he doth reproue, and condemne vnmercifulnes, in all rich men. And ch. 18.9,&c. he doth by a parable of the Pharisie, and Publicane, reproue and condemne likewise, the prowd opinion of iustification, by mans owne works.

Contrariwise, by a parable of guests bidden to a wedding, he teacheth and exhorteth to humilitie, ch. 14.7,&c. And likewise by a parable of a Master and his seruant, ch. 17.7,&c. To continuance and watchfulnes in good duties, our Sauiour moueth and perswadeth, by a parable of men waiting to light their Masters home, in the night from a marriage feast, ch. 12, 35,36,37,38. And againe, ver. 39,40,&c. by a parable of the Master of a family, who watcheth against the comming of a theefe.

By the parable of a certaine warie and prouident Steward, he commandeth and exhorteth all christians, to mercifulnes and liberality to the poore, ch. 16. 1,&c. And ch. 12,58,59. he exhorteth to speedie reconciliation, from a similitude of one, that hath gotten out an attachment for his debtour, and hath already done him the arrest,&c.

These are part of the parables, whereby our Sauiour Christ hath partly giuen admonition and warning, against vice: and partly, hath exhorted to godlines and vertue. We haue alledged them out of the Euangelist Luke, because he is most plentifull in this kinde of record.

Yet we must in no wise thinke, that our Sauiour exhorteth thus, to the duties of holines and righteousnes, commanded in the law: as though any might obtaine righteousnes thereby, to their iustification before God: (for that is contrary to his expresse doctrine, according to that parable of the vnprofitable seruant, Luk. 17.10.) but onely to declare our thankfulnes to God, for his free grace, and mercy toward vs, by all good fruits of obedience, so farre forth, as by his grace, we may attaine vnto.

As touching our iustification before God, our Sauiour teacheth vs plainely, that Moses the immediate giuer of the Law from the hand of God, and all the holy Prophets, who were the faithfull interpreters thereof, doe in that respect, direct all to looke vnto our Sauiour Christ himselfe: according to that of our Sauiour, Iohn, 5.46. Had ye beleeued Moses, ye would haue beleeued me, for he wrote of me,&c. And verse 39. he saith more generally of the holy Scriptures, They testifie of me. And Luke, ch. 24.44. All things must be fulfilled, which are written of me in the law of Moses, and in the Prophets, and in the Psalmes. Reade also Iohn, 3.14,15. and ch. 8.24.

Thus much therefore, for a taste of the most excellent, and perfect doctrine of our Sauiour Christ, concerning the law of God.

WEe come now to giue a like taste, of his most holy and perfect doctrine, concerning the Gospel.

And herein, first more generally, concerning Faith and Repentance: and then more particularly, concerning euery Article.

Secondly, concerning Prayer.

Thirdly, concerning the Sacraments.

Fourthly, concerning the externall ecclesiastical gouernment of his Church. For if we shall see plaine and full grounds for these things, in the doctrine of our Sauiour: wee shall haue sufficient ground to beleeue and acknowledge, the perfection of his doctrine, such as is recorded in the historie of his Gospel.

First therefore, more generally concerning Faith: our Sauiour Christ doth notably describe the nature of Faith: and therewithall teacheth also,

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who taught a most holie and perfit doctrine

The ground and historie of it.

also, the necessitie of it, in so much as without faith none can be saued, no more then a man can be nourished without bodily foode. Iohn 3.18. and chap: 6. 37. &c. in a large disputation with the Iewes, by a comparison taken from Manna, and vnder the tropicall speeches of eating his flesh: and drinking of his blood.

Secondly, he teacheth the excellencie of faith, as of that grace, which is specially well pleasing vnto God, Iohn chap: 6. verse 29. This is the worke of God (saith our Sauiour) that yee beleeue in him whom he hath sent. And chap: 5, 14. 15. 16. 17. the excellencie of it is noted, in that this grace alone apprehendeth saluation. And chap: 7, 50. Thy faith hath saued thee. Moreouer it is through faith that our praiers are auailable with God Mark: 11. 24. And ch: 9, 23. To him that beleeueth (saith our Sauiour) all things are possible.

Thirdly, to the end he might the rather stirre vp all to a carefull seeking after this grace, and to continuance and abiding in it: he telleth vs that it is rare, and shall be found nothing so common, as men in outward profession, doe make shewe of it. Luke chap: 18. 8.

The doctrine of our Sauiour concerning Repentance is, first, that it is a grace, arising from the apprehension of Gods comfortable grace, and mercy, through our Sauiour Christ, as it may appeare, Matth: 4, 17, Amend your liues (saith he) for the kingdome of God is at hand. Wherein also our Sauiour giueth to vnderstand, that it is a necessarie grace, as it were the pathway to the kingdome of heauen. And Luke 13. 3. 5. Except yee repent, ye shall all perish. Wherefore, as our Sauiour teacheth further, it was a special end of his comming, to call sinners to repentance. Mat: 9. 13. And chap: 18. 11. &c. where he laieth it forth, by a parable of the Shepheard, who is exceedingly carefull, to seeke vp his sheepe, which he hath lost. In which respect also, our Sauiour preferreth most grieuous sinners, repenting them of their sinnes, before the goodliest hypocrits, that are in the world, as we read Mat: chap: 21, verse 28, &c. where our Sauiour laieth it forth, in the parable of the two sonnes. And chap: 25. 10, 11. 12. 13. by the parable of the fiue foolish Virgines. He preferreth them also, before all secure and negligent rude-bies: such as we spake of before from the Euangelist Mat: chap: 22. 12. In the which part of the parable, our Sauiour seemeth to allude to some such custome, among the Iewes, as is among vs in giuing bride-laces or bride-gloues, or some other thing, whereby the guests of the bridegroome are for the time, knowne from other.

Finallie, for the incouragement of sinners to repentance, our Sauiour teacheth, by many parables, one after another, howe singularlie well pleasing it is vnto God, that Sinners should repent: and how readie hee is, to accept of such as doe so. Luke chapt: 15. from the beginning to the ende of the same. Yet with this condition, that it be in truth, and that there be no generall relapse, and falling away to sinne againe: because then all is lost, yea a more woefull estate attendeth all such; as our Sauiour admonisheth, and warneth vs, Matth: 12. 41. 42. 43. 44 45.

Thus farre concerning the doctrine of Faith more generallie, and also concerning repentance, arising from, and with the same, as our Sauiour taught it.

Wee come to his doctrine, concerning the seuerall Articles of our Faith, or Beliefe.

And first concerning the vnitie of the Godhead, he teacheth plainelie, that there is one onely God: as we read: Mark, chapt: 12. 29. Wherevpon as it followeth, verse 32. Well Master (saith the Scribe) thou hast said the truth, that there is one God, and that there is none but hee. Our Sauiour Christ teacheth also, this one onely God, is all onely goodnes, so that none is good but hee, as touching both the originall, and also the perfection of goodnes. Matth: chapt: 19, 17. and Luke 18. verse. 19.

Hee teacheth also, that this one onelie true GOD, is of a Spirituall nature, infinite, inuisible, and incomprehensible: and that therefore he requireth, that such as worship him, should performe it in spirit and truth, Iohn ch: 4. verse 24 God is a spirit, &c. Let this suffice for a tast of the most excellent doctrine of our Sauiour Christ concerning the Vnitie of the Godhead.

Let vs proceed to his doctrine, touching the distinction of Persons, the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost. And first, that our Sauiour distinguisheth the Persons in the Deitie or Godhead, it is euident, in that hee saith, that hee came from the Father Iohn: 6. 29. and chap: 10. 36. And likewise, in that he saith, that the holy Ghost proceedeth, and is sent both from the Father, and the Sonne, Iohn chap: 14. 26. and chap: 15. 26. and chap: 16. 7. But most plainely in the forme of Baptizing into the name of the Father, and also of the Son, and of the holy Ghost, instituted by the diuine authoritie of our Sauiour himselfe, Mat: 28. 19.

Now let vs briefly obserue his doctrine, concerning euery person distinctly.

And first, concerning the Father, he teacheth that he is the almightie God, Iohn: 10. 29. My Father is greater then all, &c.

That hee is a Father, most properly, in respect of our Sauiour himselfe, he teacheth plainely, Iohn: 5. 28. For he saide, that God was his own Father: yea and that also, with an equalitie of Person, as the Iewes did truly, though not obediently vnderstand him, as it is euident in that place.

Yet he doth not teach, that God is so his naturall Father onely, but that hee is a Father to all the elect through him, by adoption and grace: according to that, Iohn: chap: 20. 17. I ascend to my Father, and to your Father: and to my God, and your God. And as he doth likewise cal him our Father, in many other places of the Gospell: and namely, where he teacheth vs, and all Christians, together with these, which were his choise Disciples at that time, to pray to God, as to our heauenly Father, Mat: 5. 45. 48. and ch. 6. verses 9. 14, 15.

Our Sauiour teacheth vs also, that God the Father, is the maker of heauen and earth. Mat: 19. 4. For in that he alledged Moses, as a true and faithfull historiographer, in one point of the Creation, he confirmeth the whole historie thereof, as it is recorded by the same Prophet.

He teacheth also, that God the Father, is the most wise and prouident ruler and gouernour ouer all; yea so that, a sparrowe falleth not to the ground, nor one haire from the heades of Gods children, without his Fatherly prouidence. Mat: 10. 29. 30. The which most holy, and comfortable doctrine, hee doth most earnestly teach and affirme, in the 6. chap: of the same Gospell. Read also, chap: 7. verse 11. and chap: 26, 53. The Angels are vnder his Fathers gouernment. Yea the calling, and saluation, and whole gouernment of the Church, is in his Fathers hand, Mat: chap: 11. 25. 26. The same is likewise euident, from his most diuine and heauenly prayer. Iohn: chap: 17.

Thus much for a handfull of the doctrine of our Sauiour, concerning the first Person of the holy Trinitie, God the Father.

Secondly, touching himselfe, the second Person of the holy Trinitie, he teacheth first, concerning his Person, that he, who was from all eternity, very God, and in that respect equall with the Father, as we sawe euen now: is also, euer since his incarnation very man, and so in one Person both God, and man. Yea our Sauiour taught this so plainely, that as true beleeuers were confirmed by it, to beleeue in him accordingly, Iohn: chapter 16. 29. 30. so the vnbeleeuing, and contradicting Iewes stumbled at it more and more: Iohn 5. 28. as was also alledged a little before, as we may read further, chap: 10. 33. But for the further confirmation, that this doctrine was taught by our Sauiour, read ch: 14. 7. &c. in the same Euangelist: and chap: 10. 30. I and my Father are one.

Moreouer, for the proofe of his diuine prouidence, and gouernment, together with his Father ouer all things, both naturall in the world, and namely touching the bodies of men: and also ouer all spirituall things in the Church of God, and specially concerning mens soules, we read his plaine doctrine generally nerally affirmed. Iohn, 5, 17, My Father worketh hitherto, and I worke: And verse 19 20 &c Then answered Iesus, and saide vnto them, verily, verily, I say vnto you, The Sonne can doe nothing of himselfe, saue that which hee seeth the Father doe: for whatsoeuer things he doth, the same doth the Sonne also. For the Father loueth the Son, and sheweth him all things, &c.

And now touching his office, he taught with like plainenes, while he was here on earth, that he was the Messiah and annointed of God. Luke 4. 17, &c. 21. And Iohn 4, 25. 26. He said to the woman of Samaria, I who speake vnto thee, am he. And chap: 6. 27. he affirmeth to the same ende, that God the Father hath sealed him. And ch: 8. 12. and ch: 12. 35. 36. and againe, verse 46. I am the light of the world, &c.

Concerning his Priest-hood, and the sacrifice thereof, in that he was to offer vp himselfe, to the death of the crosse, our Sauiour foretold it, that it should so come to passe: and also what should be the mightie and wonderfull effect of it; in that by the vertue thereof he would draw all men to himselfe: that is, so many as were giuen him of God, for whom he died, &c. Iohn 12. 23. 24. and verses 32. 33. But of this more, when we come to the doctrine of his death.

Now concerning his kingdome, he professed plainely, that it is not of this world: that is, after the manner of the earthly and transitorie kingdomes thereof, Iohn 18. 36 And therefore it was, that he frustrated the vaine attempt of the people, at such time as they would haue made him their king: chap: 6. 15. And therefore also, euen then when it pleased him to make some declaration of his kingly authoritie concerning his spirituall soueraignetie ouer his Church: to wit, when as he rode to Ierusalem, to reforme the abuses of his Temple the second time, he did it in a manner altogether vnlike to the statelines and pompe of ciuill Kings and Princes: that is to say, he did as much come short of their pompe in worldly shewe, as he exceeded them in spiritual maiestie and power, as the most strange effect thereof declared Mat: 21. verses 1. 2. 3. &c. 17. And Luke chap: 19. verse 27, &c.

And answerable to this profession, and practise of our Sauiour, concerning his kingdome, was his vsuall description of it. The which we will now henceforth briefly touch.

To this purpose, he vseth many very notable parables and similitudes: the which sort of parables, the Euangelist Matthew doth most fully record vnto vs. And therefore we wil take them from his hand especially, as we did another sort of them before, concerning the doctrine of the Law, from the report of the Euangelist Luke, who is most plentifull in that respect.

First therefore, to beginne with all, we haue euen in one chapter, to wit, the 13. of Saint Mathew, the record of seuen diuerse parables, vsed by our Sauiour, to lay forth the nature, or estate of his kingdome thereby: and to shewe what manner of one it is to be here vpon the earth.

Among all which, the first is of seede sowen in foure sorts of grounds: of the which one sort onely brought forth increase. Wherein our Sauiour admonished his Disciples, and in them al other, that it is not enough for any, to heare the word preached, which is the Scepter of his kingdome, vnlesse we doe heare it with honest and dutifull hearts, and with care and conscience to practise and obey it: According to that vse which Saint Luke noteth from the wordes of our Sauiour himselfe, chap: 8. 18. And by this parable also our Sauiour preuenteth that offence, which might otherwise haue arisen, when the vnprofitablenes of many hearers of his word, should be obserued: as though he should haue said, doe not looke that all will submit themselues to my word and doctrine. The state of my kingdome here in this world, shall be such, as I haue described vnto you in this parable, Mat: chap: 13. verse 3. and so forth to the 23. verse of the same.

And secondly, hee saith to the same ende, and therewithall to stirre vp all (whom he calleth the children of the kingdome) to watchfulnes: that his kingdome dome is like to a man which ſowed good ſeede in his field, But while men ſlept, there came his enemie and ſowed teares among the wheate, &c. Mat: 13, 24, &c. 31, whereby our Sauiour giueth plainely to vnderſtand, as he himſelfe afterward interpreteth, as we read in the ſame chapter, verſes 36, 37, &c. to 44. that the Diuel will vſe his inſtruments, euen men of peruerſe mindes, ſuch as are heretikes and others, to ſowe falſe and erroneous doctrine: and accordingly, that he himſelfe will doe what he can by his wicked ſuggeſtions, to peruert the liues of many profeſſors, and by all meanes to hinder the good ſucceſſe of the Goſpell, and of the bleſſed kingdome of our Sauiour here in this world, where the Diuel alſo hath his kingdome. We muſt not therefore looke for a perfect eſtate of the Church here. That is reſerued till the end of the world, when our Sauiour ſhall come againe to iudge the ſame.

Neuertheles, for the comfort of all that ſhall ſubmit themſelues to our Sauiour, as dutifull and obedient ſubiects in his kingdome, he ſheweth by a third parable of the graine of muſtard ſeede, that howſoeuer the ſpirituall graces and gifts of the kingdome, may ſeeme very ſmall and weake in the beginning, yet they ſhall growe and proſper with mightie encreaſes, through his diuine and ſecret bleſsing, as it followeth verſes. 31. 32.

To the ſame end tendeth the fourth parable of the leauen verſe, 33. vnleſs we may extend the meaning of our Sauiour in them both, to expreſſe not onely the mightie and ſecret worke of his grace, in euery member or true ſubiect of his kingdome, for the preſent: but alſo the ſpreading of his Goſpell, farre and neare, from time to time notwithſtanding all reſiſtances whatſoeuer.

The fift parable is of the treaſure hidden in the field, verſe 44. And the ſixt is of the precious pearle, verſes 45, 46. both of them, tending to ſet forth the excellencie of the kingdome of our Sauiour, aboue all worldly riches whatſoeuer, whether wee reſpect the glory of it in the life to come, or the preſent graces thereof, while we liue here.

And herewithall our Sauiour admoniſheth, that his kingdome is diligently to be ſought after, of all thoſe that would finde it indeed, ſeeing it is a thing hidden: yea that no coſt of diligence and labour, nor of goods, or life be ſpared, to the obtaining of it, ſeeing it is moſt precious aboue all things in this tranſitorie and baſe world.

In the ſeuenth parable, our Sauiour compareth his kingdome to a drawe-net, which catcheth both good and bad fiſhe, verſe, 47. 48. 49. 50, the ende and vſe of which parable is like to that which was ſet downe concerning the teares ſowne among wheat: leaſt that any ſhould be offended and ſo cauſed, either through pride, or of vniuſt ſcruple to forſake the outward ſocietie of the church, when they ſhould ſee many wicked perſons to be found therein: but rather to be ſo much the more carefull, to looke to their owne ſtanding, and to yeelde ſo much the more diligence, euery one in his place, wiſely and with all diſcreet patience to hinder the ouerflowings of iniquitie. Theſe are the ſeuen parables contained in one chapter, namely in the 13. of the Euangeliſt Matthew. All of them expreſſing, as was ſaid, the eſtate of the kingdome of our Sauiour here in this world: farre otherwiſe then we of our ſelues would haue conceiued of it: had not he ſtored vs with this his excellent and manifolde inſtruction.

Vnto theſe ſeuen, wee may adde two other, recorded by the Euangeliſt Marke, chap: 4. 21. &c. and verſe 26. &c. The one of a candle, to ſignifie that all things in the kingdome of our Sauiour Chriſt ſhall be made manifeſt, and therefore that euery one is to beware of hypocriſie and of negligent profeſsion of the Goſpell: according to that of Saint Luke chap: 8. 18. Take heede therefore how ye heare, &c.

The other is of corne, which groweth in the field, aboue that the owner can diſcerne, how it groweth at euery inſtant thereof: to ſignifie the ſecret bleſsing of the kingdome of our Sauiour, in the hearts of the true ſubiects thereof. For ſo

The ground and history of it.

so is the kingdome of God (saith our Sauiour) as if a man should cast seed in the grou̇nd, And should sleepe and rise vp night and day, and the seede should spring and growe vp, he not knowing how, &c.

Yea, many other parables, doth our Sauiour vse, to expresse the estate of the same his kingdome here in euery other respect. As for example, he vseth the parable of the King, calling his seruants to an account, to declare both the mercie and iustice thereof. Matth: 18.23.&c. The kingdome of heauen (saith our Sauiour) is likened to a certaine King, who would take account of his seruantes.

Likewise he vseth the parable of the housholder hyring labourers into his vineyard. Matth: chap: 20.1.2 &c. to giue to vnderstand, that no man is of better reckoning with God, for their long continuance, vnder the profession of the Gospell, specially if they presume of any merit or worthines aboue others in that respect: but rather according to his diligence & faithfulnes in the labour of Christianitie, and according to that humble trust which he hath in the free grace and mercy of God. And to this ende he concludeth the parable with this sentence, The last shall be first, and the first shall be last: for many are called, but few chosen.

Moreouer, by another parable, of the vine-yard let out to vnfaithfull husbandmen, our Sauiour describeth the reiection of the Iewes, for their treacherous stubbournes and crueltie againſt him: and on the otherside, the calling of the Gentiles, through the free grace and mercie of God, Mat: chap: 21, verse. 33 &c.

And chap: 22, 1, &c, he doth to the same end vse another parable concerning the mariage of the Kings Sonne, and the contempt thereof, by the first bidden guests which were the Iewes: and also by the example of that speciall rudesby; that thrust in himselfe, without his mariage garment.

And chap: 25. verse 1. &c. by the parable of the fiue wise, and fiue fooliſh Virgines, our Sauiour doth likewise admoniſh vs to take heede, that we do not securely rest in an outward profession of the Gospel, without inward truth of the heart, which is a thing abhorred of God.

And verses, 14. and 15. of the same chapter, by the parable of the talentes, which a certaine Maister going into a farre countrie, deliuered to his seruants, &c. Our Sauiour teacheth plainly, that he will looke to haue all the spirituall gifts and graces of his kingdome, to be industriously imploied in euery mans calling, and according to the diuerse measure of them, specially in the calling of the ministerie of the Gospell, to all those profitable ends wherefore he hath giuen them. Or otherwise, that fearefull vengeance is to be looked for, from his hands, against euery vnprofitable seruant.

Such was the doctrine of our Sauiour, concerning his spirituall kingdome here on earth, the which he calleth the kingdome of heauen, because it is from heauen by the speciall ordinance of God: likewise, because the gouernment of it is most spirituall and heauenly: and also because it prepareth and fitteth all the elect of God, who as we saw before are called the children of the kingdome, to be partakers of heauenly glory.

Now let vs proceed, according to the order of the articles of our beliefe.

The next doctrine therefore, of our Sauiour is that which concerneth his own conception and birth. Of the, which he saith thus before Pilate. For this cause am I borne, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should beare witnes of the truth.

Next to the birth of our Sauiour, are his sufferings. Of the which he did verie oftentimes foretell his Disciples, to the end they might be the lesse troublesome or vncomfortable to them, when they should fall vpon him: as Luke ch: 9, 44 45 And Mat: 17.12.13.&verses 22.23. And Mark. 9.12. And more particularly he foretold his betraying, as we read, Iohn chap: 13, v. 18. &c. The which our Sauiour did, as he saith in the same place, to the establishing of their faith, when it should come to passe. Of his crucifying, he spake likewise beforehand, Iohn ch: 12.32.33.

Beliefe in God the Son, who wrought most miraculous and diuine works.

The ground and history of it.

Of his buriall, by occasion of that costly ointment which Mary powred on him. Mat: 26. 12. Iohn, 12. 7.

Of his continuance in the graue, answerable to the type of Ionas, abiding so long in the Whales belly, Mat: 12. 39. 40.

Of his resurrection also, he vsually spake, adding the prediction thereof, to the foretelling of his sufferings, to mitigate the discomfort of that part of his speech: as Iohn 2. 19. 20. 21. Mat: 16. 21. ch: 17. 9. and verses 22. 23. And ch: 20. 17. 18. 19. This thing (as the Euangelist Marke saith) our Sauiour spake plainely. And ch: 10. 32. 43. 34. And all this, according to the former prophecies, of the holy Prophets, as the euangelist Luke obserueth. And that also in a mercifull regard of his Disciples, lest they should be ouerwhelmed, & confounded with excessiue sorrow; as we may perceiue plainely Iohn, ch: 14. 1. &c. and ch: 15. and ch: 16. and by his most sweete and diuine praier in the whole 17. chapter.

Our Sauiour being risen againe, as he had often said that he would: he then foretold his ascension, to Marie Magdalene, Iohn, 20, 17. I ascend to my Father, &c.

That hee should sit at the right hand of God, and come againe to iudge the world, our Sauiour boldly professed before the chiefe Priest, Mat: chap: 26. verse 64. Hereafter (saith our Sauiour) shall yee see the Sonne of man sitting at the right hand of the power of God, and come in the cloudes of heauen. Moreouer, touching his comming againe to iudgement, hee had spoken before that time, Iohn 5. 22. and verses 27. 28. 29. But yet more fully and plainely, Mat: 25. 31. &c. The precedent signes of which time of his comming, our Sauiour hath also declared, Matth: 24. And before this, chap: 13. 39. &c. in the parable of the tares. And againe, verses, 49, 50. in the parable of the drawe-net.

We are come now to the doctrine of our Sauiour, concerning the holy Ghost. Of whom he speaketh most comfortably, as of the onely comforter of all the Elect, distinct in Person from the Father and the Sonne, and yet one with them both, euery where present, of equall power and dignitie with them, &c. Iohn chapters 14. and 15. and 16. Which also our Sauiour maketh very plaine in that forme of Baptisme which hee instituted after his resurrection. Mat: 28. 19.

Concerning the catholike Church, the doctrine of our Sauiour is this, that it consisteth both of Iewes, and Gentiles, and that he himselfe is the onely vniuersal Pastour and shepheard thereof, Iohn 10. verses 14, 16. Read also Luk. 13. 28. 29. 30.

Touching the Communion of Saints: and first in respect of their vnion with himselfe, and so by him among their owne selues, our Sauiour teacheth it plainely, Iohn ch: 15. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. &c. And ch, 17. 22. &c.

What his doctrine is, touching the forgiuenes of sins, and namely that there is mercie with God to forgiue them, and what course wee are to take, that wee may attaine to the comfortable assurance thereof: we read, Mat: 6. v. 12. 14. and chap: 9. 6. and chap: 18. 21. 22. 27. and Luke 7. 48. and chap: 15. 1. 2. 3, &c. and verse, 20. &c.

Concerning the resurrection of the dead, we read that our Sauiour doth confirme it, Iohn. 5. 28. 29. and Mat: chap: 22. verse 23. &c. where he confuteth the heresie of the Sadduces against this article.

Likewise, he assureth al that shall beleeue in him, of euerlasting life, not onely in those places now last alledged, but in many other not easily to bee numbred.

And thus we see, that the doctrine of our Sauiour is entire and perfect, concerning all the articles and grounds of our Christian beliefe.

As for praier, it is familiarly knowne to euery one of vs, that he taught vs a most perfite rule and direction of it, as wee finde it recorded, Matth: chap: 6. 9. &c. and Luke chapter 11. 2. &c. And againe, Matth: chapter. 7.

The ground and historie of it.

verse 7. &c. we read how our Sauiour incourageth all faithfull Christians to this dutie, as to a speciall fruite and exercise of faith. Read also, Iohn 14. verses 13, 14. and chap: 16, 26, 27. Likewise Luke, chap: 11. 5. &c. Moreouer, ch: 18. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8. he exhorteth to constancie in praier without fainting.

Likewise, as our Sauiour was the ordeiner of the Sacraments, both of Baptisme and the Lords supper; so he hath with the institution of them, plainely set downe the doctrine and instruction, concerning the right manner of the administration, and also the endes and vses, wherevnto he hath appointed the same, Mat: chap: 26. verse 26, &c. and chap: 28. 18. 19. 20.

Last of all, concerning the externall gouernment of the Church of God, such as he would haue to be in perpetuall vse, for the well ordering thereof, that offences might be auoided, and al disorders rebuked and censured: we haue the expresse grounds of it, deliuered and taught by our Sauiour, Mat: ch. 16. 19. And ch: 18. verses 19. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. Read also Iohn ch: 20. verses 22, 23. But of these things more afterward.

In the meane season, it may suffice vs, that from this briefe collection, and suruaie of the doctrine of our Sauiour Christ, we see that he hath set it downe, most holily and perfitly in all points: and therefore, that he is worthy to be acknowledged, and beleeued in, as being a most faithfull Prophet, yea greater then any Prophet, yea euen as in the author of all holy doctrine together with the Father and the holy Ghost, to guide vs in the perfit way to his euerlasting and glorious kingdome.

It is true, that the whole body of the holy Scriptures, is the onely entire doctrine of our Sauiour Christ, by what instruments soeuer the same was spoken or penned. For they both spake, and also wrot, as he directed them by his holy Spirit. But in this our present discourse, we haue spoken onely of that his doctrine, which he vttered by his owne most holy and sacred mouth, while he abode here vpon the earth.

Question. NOw therefore, that (this discourse being ended) we may goe forward. Did God euer make any promise to vs, and his Church, that our Sauiour Christ should be so perfit a Teacher vnto it?

Answere. Yea. For in this respect, the Lord by his holy Prophet Isaiah, long before the comming of our Sauiour, calleth him wonderfull, and Counseller - as one that should in most excellent manner, declare the high counsells of God, to his Church and people, Isaiah, chap: 9. 6.

He declareth also, that our Sauiour should, to the same ende, be indued with the manifold, and most excellent giftes and graces of the holy Spirit of God, in that he was to come in the nature of man, chap: 11, 2. 3. 4. 5.

Likewise he declareth further, that he should haue the tongue of the learned, & know to minister a word in due time, to him that is wearie, chap: 50. 4.

Finally he prophecieth, that by his knowledge he should iustifie many, ch. 53. 11.

Explicatiõ These prophecies, vttered and set downe, in the name of the Lord, doe containe euident promises from the Lord. For as our Sauiour testifieth, All things must be fulfilled that were written of him, Luke 22. 37.

And touching the speciall manner of his teaching by parables, as wee haue obserued, and set them down before, that was therein fulfilled which was prophecied, Ps. 78. I will open my mouth in parables, &c. according to the testimonie of the Euangelist Mat: ch: 13. 34. 35. And accordingly, are we to hearken to the same his speciall kind of teaching, with speciall reuerence agreeable to the exhortation and example of the holy Psalmist, Ps. 49. 1. 2. 3. Heare this all yee people, &c. I will incline mine eare to a parable, &c. But of the duties more afterward.

THe comfort of the doctrine is first to be considered.

Question. What is that?

Answere. It is euen the same, which was declared to the comfort of faith, concerning the spirituall annointing of our Sauiour Christ to be a most high and perfect Prophet vnto vs.

Behefe in God the Sonne, who taught a moſt holy & perfect doctrine.

It is the ſame indeed. That is to ſay, it is a very great and ſingular comfort, that we haue ſo perfect a doctrine, deliuered vnto vs by our bleſſed Sauiour, that we may ſafely and vndoubtedly reſt in it, as in the very truth indeede: yea as in the whole truth of God, which it behoueth vs to knowe. For as the doctrine of Moſes, and all other the Prophets, which were before our Sauiour, pointed on ſtill to looke toward our Sauiour then to come, ſo our Sauiour being come, the Euangeliſts and Apoſtles point vs backe to him, and to that doctrine which he preached and taught himſelfe, and which he commanded them (as they acknowledge) to preach in his name, as the onely true doctrine of God. And ſo doth our Sauiour himſelfe profeſſe, ſaying, Iohn 7.16. My doctrine is not mine, (to wit, in ſuch ſenſe as the malignant ſort tooke it) but his that ſent me. That is, no otherwiſe mine, but as it is his alſo. And then it followeth, If any man (ſaith our Sauiour) will doe his will, he ſhall knowe of the Doctrine whether it be of God, or whether I ſpeake of my ſelfe. He that ſpeaketh of himſelfe ſeeketh his own glorie: but he that ſeeketh his glory that ſent him, the ſame is true, and no vnrighteouſnes is in him. And th: 8.31.32. If yee continue in my word (marke that he calleth it his own word, ſpeaking to the teachable & beleeuing Iewes) ye are verily my Diſciples. And ye ſhall know the truth, & the truth ſhall make ye free.

And for all other, whoſoeuer they be, which teach not this doctrine of our Sauiour, they are falſe Prophets: they haue not entred in by the doore, but they haue climbed vp ſome other way, and ſhew themſelues to be thieues & robbers come in to ſpoile, and not feed & cheriſh the flocke Iohn: 10.1.&c. So that we may boldly reiect al other doctrines of Antichriſt, and of euery ſtrang teacher, whatſoeuer agreeth not with the moſt holy doctrine of our Sauiour. We may boldly ſay to all ſuch, both Pope and Prelate, popiſh Prieſt, and Seminarie Ieſuit, Depart from me ye workers of iniquitie, Pſal: 6.8. For ſo will our Sauiour ſay to them at the laſt day, Mat: 7,23.

Thus therfore, it is a ſingular comfort, & bringeth vnſpeakable peace to our conſciences, that we haue ſo perfect a doctrine, deliuered vnto vs: according as our Sauiour admoniſhed his Diſciples, Mat: 13,16,17, ſaying, Bleſſed are your eyes, for they ſee; and your eares for they heare. For verily I ſay vnto you, that many Prophets, and righteous men, haue deſired to ſee thoſe things which yee ſee, and haue not ſeene them, and to heare thoſe things which ye heare, and haue not heard them.

THe comfort being thus great, the duty ought to be as great in al thankfulnes to God, and our moſt gracious Sauiour to be bleſſed & praiſed for euer.

Queſtion. What therefore is our dutie, whereby wee are to declare our thankfulnes to God, and the ſame our bleſſed Sauiour in this behalfe?

Anſwere. This likewiſe is the ſame which was obſerued before, to be our dutie in regard of his moſt holy and perfect prophecie. That is to ſay, it is our moſt bounden duty, with all readines, diligently to learne the doctrine & in all faithfulnes conſtātly to obey it our ſelues: and as much as lieth in vs to inſtruct others alſo therein, and to call vpon them for like dutifull obedience.

Explication and proofe. Such indeed is our moſt bounden duty, according to that ſaying of Peter, Ioh: ch: 6.v.68, Maiſter to whom ſhall we goe? Thou haſt the words of eternall life, and we beleeue and know that thou art the Chriſt the Son of the liuing God. Here alſo call againe to mind the ſaying of our Sauiour himſelfe, Iohn 7:17. & ch: 8.31.32. alledged before in the comfort. Where, as we then ſaw, our Sauiour requireth obedience, yea euen entire & conſtant obedience, at the hands and hearts of all thoſe, that would attaine to the moſt ſweete and conſtant comfort of his moſt holy and perfect doctrine.

Thus much therefore concerning the Comfort and dutie.

Queſtion. NOw for the concluſion of this part of our inquirie, cōcerning the doctrine of our Sauiour Chriſt: What is the danger of not beleeuing, and of not obeying it, as a moſt holy and perfect doctrine?

Anſwer. Whoſoeuer doe not beleeue, nor obey the doctrine of our Sauiour Chriſt, as a moſt holy and perfect doctrine; they cannot poſſibly, either truly know, or rightly beleeue, and obey our Sauiour himſelfe.

Nay

Beliefe in God the Son, who taught a most holy and perfect doctrine.

Explicatio and proofe.

The danger of not beleeuing and obeying it.

Nay on the contrary, they are in the very beaten high way, to be drawne and carried aside to harken to all false doctrine and lies: and so to become the vassalls of the Diuel and Antichrist that great false Prophet, or of some other Master heretike: in stead that they ought to be the onely teachable schollers, and obedient seruants of the Lord Iesus Christ, our heauenly Teacher and Master.

It is very true. And the danger is most wofull, yea rather it is presently an euill in it selfe most miserable: and therefore with all care, to be most earnestly shunned. For euen hence it was, that all obstinate Iewes, fell away from God, and are left euen to this day, in their damnable vnbeliefe, and most blasphemous contradictions to our Sauiour and his doctrine. To whom our Sauiour himselfe saide, while hee taught among them, Because I tell yee the truth, yee beleeue mee not. Which of you can rebuke mee of sinne? And if I say the truth, why doe yee not beleeue me? Hee that is of God, heareth Gods words: ye therefore heare them not, because yee are not of God. Iohn, chap. 8. 45, 46, 47. And yet againe, chap. 10. 26. Ye beleeue not, for yee are not of my sheepe as I said vnto you. My sheepe heare my voyce, and I know them, and they follow me, and I giue vnto them eternall life.

And chap. 12. 14, &c. If any man heare my words and beleeue not, I iudge him not. For I came not to iudge the world, but to saue the world. He that refuseth me, and receiueth not my words, hath one that iudgeth him, the word that I haue spoken, it shall iudge him at the last day.

Wee may euidently see therefore, that the neglect of hearing and obeying the doctrine of our Sauiour Christ is very dangerous: yea so dangerous, that it maketh way to all false and erroneous doctrine, as was answered: according as our Sauiour doeth giue plainely to vnderstand, Iohn, chap. 5. verse 43. Where he saith thus, I am come in my Fathers name, and ye receiue me not: if another shall come in his owne name, him will ye receiue. And so it came to passe, with these disobedient Iewes.

This also made way, for that false Prophet Mahomet, to be receiued among the Turkes. And likewise, hence it is, that the Antichrist of Rome, hath so mightily preuailed with his deuoted Papists, that they dare receiue nothing for truth, vnles he and his Prelates allow it: and that on the other side, they doubt not credulously to receiue any thing for truth, which is authorised by them, be it neuer so contrary to the truth and doctrine of our Sauiour Christ.

The same neglect, hath betraied a number, and made them as a prey to the lying allegories and hereticall speculations of H. N. and to be incorporated into his schismaticall Familie of false and counterfet loue, as if his doctrine did now in this last day, perfit and accomplish the doctrine of our Sauiour: and as if he did in the stead of our Sauiour, execute the last and generall iudgement here on earth. So greatly doth the wicked hereticke blaspheme.

Let vs therefore, in the feare of God, take warning from the wofull examples of these and all other Apostatаes and backe-sliders from the true doctrine of our Sauiour, that we doe in no wise, neglect to imbrace and loue it, and to hold it so fast, that we neuer suffer our selues to be remooued from it. That henceforth (as the Apostle Paul admonisheth, Ephes. chap. 4 verses 14, 15.) Wee be no more children, wauering and carried about with euery wind of doctrine, by the deceit of men, and with craftines whereby they lie in wait to deceiue. But let vs follow the truth in loue, & in all things grow vp into him, who is the head, that is, Christ, &c. For otherwise, as the same Apostle writeth 2. Thess. chap. 2. verses 10, 11, 12. the danger which wee speake of, is at hand, yea to eternall damnation.

Thus much therefore it was necessary, that wee should adde to all other things concerning the doctrine of our Sauiour, for our instruction and admonitions sake, lest we should by any meanes neglect it, to the hazard of our saluation, wherevnto this doctrine onely, and no other is able to make vs wise. God therefore of his infinite mercy, euen for our Sauiours sake, giue vs grace with all holy care to attend vnto it.

The ground and history of it.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who wrought most miraculous and diuine workes.

THe miraculous works of our Sauiour, are next to be considered of vs.

Question. What therefore are we to beleeue concerning them?

Answer. We are to beleeue, that the miracles which our Sauiour Christ wrought, are perfit declarations and confirmations, that he both was, and is for euer, the Sonne of God, the onely true Messiah, and Sauiour of the world: and also, that the doctrine which hee taught, was and so is still, and shall remaine to the end, the verie true doctrine of the kingdome of God, and euen the power of God to saluation, to all that doe, or shall hereafter truly beleeue.

Explicatio & proofe. It is true that you say. For so the Euangelist Iohn teacheth, chap. 2. 11. The verie beginnings of the miracles of our Sauiour, shewed forth his glory: and his Disciples (as the Euangelist saith) beleeued in him. That is, they were better confirmed in their faith thereby.

This glory of our Sauiour, thus beginning to breake forth, by the beginnings of his miracles: did shine out more and more brightly, in the proceedings thereof. It was no doubt, part of that glorie, which the Apostles saw: according to the testimonie of the same Euangelist Iohn, ch. 1. 14. Wee saw his glorie, &c.

Yea our Sauiour himselfe teacheth vs, that these were the ends, wherefore he wrought his great works, as the same Euangelist witnesseth further, in sundry places of the Gospel written by him. As chap. 5. 36. I haue greater witnes (saith our Sauiour) then the witnes of Iohn, for the works which the Father hath giuen me to finish, euen the same works which I doe, beare witnes of me, that the Father sent me. And chap. 10. verses 24, 25. The Iewes (saith the Euangelist) came round about (our Sauiour) and said vnto him, How long doest thou make vs doubt? If thou be the Christ, tell vs plainely. Iesus answered them, I told ye, and ye beleeue not: the works that I doe in my Fathers name, they beare witnes of me. And therefore he blameth them the rather, for their vnbeliefe. And yet more earnestly, verses 37, 38. saying, If I doe not the works of my Father, beleeue me not, yet beleeue the works, that ye may know and beleeue that the Father is in me and I in him.

And chap. 11. verse 4. This sicknes (saith our Sauiour, speaking of Lazarus the brother of Marie and Martha) it is not vnto death, but for the glorie of God, that the Sonne of God might be glorified thereby. And verses 41, 42. After that our Sauiour had made his prayer to God, that he would shew his glory in raising of Lazarus from death to life: I know (saith our Sauiour to God his Father) that thou hearest me alwaies, but because of the people that stand by, I said it, that they may beleeue that thou hast sent me.

And chap. 14. verse 11. Beleeue mee (saith our Sauiour to Philippe) that I am in the Father, and the Father in mee: at the least beleeue mee for the verie workes sake. Reade also chap. 20. verses 30, 31. Manie other signes did Iesus (saith the Euangelist) in the presence of his Disciples, which are not written in this booke. But these things are written, that yee might beleeue that Iesus is the Christ the Sonne of God, and that in beleeuing, ye might haue life through his name.

This often repetition, sheweth that the miraculous workes of our Sauiour Christ

Beleefe in God the Son, who wrought most miraculous and diuine works.

The ground and history of it.

Christ, were of very notable and necessarie vse, to the manifesting and proouing of himselfe to be the Christ, and that his doctrine was the true doctrine of God: and all this for a helpe to the weaknes of his people.

Now as these were the ends, which our Sauiour propounded to himselfe, in the working of his miracles: so through the blessing of God, they attained to the same blessed ends and effects in the hearts of the children of God. As for example, the place first alledged, chap. 2. verse 11. argueth that it was so. For the Disciples seeing that miracle: are saide to beleeue in our Sauiour. And chap. 4. verse 35. That Ruler, whose sonne our Sauiour deliuered from a deadly feuer, was confirmed thereby to beleeue in him, (yea and as the Euangelist testifieth) all his houshold with him. And chap. 6. verse 14. They which had seene the miraculous feeding of multitudes of people with so few loaues & fishes, said, This is of a truth the Prophet, that should come into the world.

Likewise chap. 9. verse 17. The blinde man to whom our Sauiour gaue sight, was induced by the miracle, wrought on him, to beginne to beleeue in our Sauiour, that hee was a Prophet. And verses 35, 36, 37. after that the Iewes had excommunicated him, for this his profession: our Sauiour then finding him, and saying vnto him, Doest thou beleeue in the Sonne of God? Hee answered and saide, Who is hee Lorde that I may beleeue in him? Wherevpon, so soone as our Sauiour answered him, Both thou hast seene him, and he it is that talketh with thee: the man was confirmed to beleeue in him, and said, Lord I beleeue, and worshipped him.

And chap. 11. verse 15. I was glad for your sakes (saith our Sauiour, speking of the death of Lazarus) that I was not there, that yee may beleeue: but let vs goe vnto him. And verse 45. Many of the Iewes (saith the Euangelist) seeing the things which Iesus did, and namely this, that hee had raised Lazarus from the dead, they were moued thereby to beleeue in him. And whereas (as it followeth in the text) that some of the people went away to the Pharisies, and told them what things Iesus had done. Then (as the Euangelist sheweth further) the high Priests and the Pharisies gathered a Councill, and said, What shall we doe? For this man doth many miracles. If we let him alone, all men will beleeue in him, &c. verses 46, 47, 48.

And in the next chapter, verses 10, 11. The high Priests consulted that they might put Lazarus to death also, because that for his sake, many of the Iewes went away, and beleeued in him. And verses 17. 18. 19. The people that was with him, did beare witnes that he called Lazarus out of the graue, and raised him from the dead. Therefore met him the people also, because they heard that he had done this miracle. Wherevpon (as it followeth in the Euangelist) the Pharisies said among themselues, Perceiue yee not how yee preuaile nothing? Behold the world goeth after him.

Yea these wicked aduersaries themselues, howsoeuer, through obdurate malice, they would not be brought to beleeue in our Sauiour: yet were they conuicted in their consciences, to acknowledge among themselues, that he could not haue done such works as he wrought, vnles he had beene a Teacher sent of God; and vnles God had beene with him: as Nicodemus a fellow Ruler, and one conuersant among them, did before this time, bewray to our Sauiour: as we reade Iohn, chap. 3. verse 2. Rabbi (saith he) we know (that is, we Pharisies know) that thou art a Teacher sent from God: for no man could doe these miracles which thou doest, vnles God were with him. Reade also Act. 2 22. Ye men of Israel, heare these words. Iesus of Nazaret, a man approued of God among yee, with great works, and wonders, and signes, which God did by him, in the midst of you, as yee your selues also know.

Finally, the works of our Sauiour Christ, were so wonderfull, that (as the Euangelist Luke reporteth) all were amazed at the mightie power of God, declared by them, chap. 9. 43. And chap. 7. 16. Feare (saith hee) came on all people, and they glorified God, saying, A great Prophet is raised vp among vs, Beliefe in God the Son, who wrought most miraculous and diuine workes.

The ground and history of them and God hath visited his people. And this rumour (as he reporteth further) went forth throughout all Iudea, and through all the region round about. At what time also, as it followeth in the same chapter, verses 18, 19, &c. the answer of our Sauiour to the Disciples of Iohn Baptist, sheweth plainely that such as haue beene alreadie declared, are the vses and ends, why he wrought so many miraculous works. For thus he said vnto them, Goe your waies, and shew to Iohn what ye haue seene and heard: that the blinde doe see, the halt doe goe, the leapers are cleansed, the deafe here, the dead rise againe, and the poore receiue the Gospell. And blessed is he that shall not be offended in me. As if our Sauiour had said, These things are sufficient confirmations, that I am the true Messiah, and that no other is to be waited for: as Iohn well knoweth, and hath alreadie most faithfully and plentifully testified vnto you, though you and many other, are yet offended in me, and haue not receiued his testimony. Reade also Matth. 14. 33. They that were in the Ship, when our Sauiour stilled the tempestuous Sea, worshipped him saying, of a truth thou art the Sonne of God. And Marke 1, 27. by occasion of casting out of an vncleane Spirit, out of a man of Capernaum, the people were amazed so, that (as the Euangelist saith) they demanded one of another, saying, what thing is this? what new doctrine is this? For he commandeth the foule spirits with authority, and they obey him.

Thus then it is euident, that as our Sauiour intended, by his miraculous works, to make himselfe knowne to be the Christ, the Sonne of God, and the true Prophet sent of him, &c. so they had the same effect, in the hearts of many of those, among whom he wrought them, who obserued his diuine power therein.

But for our more full instruction in this point: I will aske you this one question.

Question. Was not the doctrine and testimonie of our Sauiour, of sufficient credit in it selfe, to make him knowne to be the Sonne of God, and the true Messiah: and so consequently, that his doctrine is the true doctrine of eternall life? Was it not, I say, of it selfe sufficient, but hee must also worke great and strange works, for the proofe thereof?

Answer. There is no doubt to be made, but that the doctrine, and testimony of our Sauiour Christ, was fully worthy, and ought to haue beene sufficient, in, and of it selfe alone, to these ends.

Neuertheles, for a helpe to our weaknes, and for the more cleare manifestation of his diuine glory, as was said, it pleased him of his speciall goodnes and mercy, to make this addition of his miraculous works.

Explicatiõ & proofe. So it was indeede, as the former testimonies haue giuen vs plainely to vnderstand. And namely, Iohn cha. 11. verse 15. Whence we may well remember here againe, that our Sauiour professed, that he was glad of the occasion which hee had to worke that great worke of his, in raising Lazarus from the dead, to the end his Disciples might thereby be confirmed to beleeue in him. And hee vseth the like words againe, verses 41, 42. to shew his like gratious desire, that the weaknes of the people, might be holpen by their beholding of the miracle. To this end also, may the consideration of that reproofe well serue, which our Sauiour giueth the people, for not attending to the right vse and end of his miracles, Iohn, 6. 26. Matt. 16. 8, 9, &c. and Mark. chap. 6, 25.

And thus the good and mercifull affection of our Sauiour, is clearely manifested vnto vs.

But that his doctrine and testimony, ought of it selfe to haue beene of sufficient authoritie: it is plaine by that other reproofe which our Sauiour giueth, in respect of them that looked too much after miracles, Iohn, chap. 2. 48. saying, Except ye see signes and wonders ye will not beleeue. Of which sort were those mentioned after this, cha. 6. 30. Who ouer boldly asked our Sauiour, What signe shewest thou, that we may see and beleeue thee? What doest thou worke?

And

The ground and history of them.

The fe in God the Sōne, who wrought most miraculous and diuine workes.

And againe, Matth: 12. 38. Master, wee would see a signe of thee. To whom our Sauiour answereth, in the verse following, An euil and adulterous generation seeketh a signe, but no signe shalbe giuen vnto it, saue onely the signe of the Prophet Ionas. And againe chap 16. verses 1. 2. 3. 4.

On the other side, it is set downe to the praise of the worke of Gods grace, in the Samaritans, who beleeued our Sauiour for his wordes sake; though hee wrought no miracles among them: but only heard the woman say, that he had told her all things that she had done, as we read, Ioh: 4 40. Wherevpon they desired our Sauiour to tarie with them. The which when he had yeelded vnto, for two daies, Many more (saith the Euangelist) beleeued because of his owne word. And they said vnto the woman, Nowe we beleeue, not because of thy saying: for wee haue heard him our selues, and knowe that this is indeed the Christ, the Sauiour of the world.

Moreouer, many were brought to faith and repentance, by the preaching of Iohn the Baptist, though he wrought no miracle, Matth: 21, 32. Iohn 10. 41. Much rather ought our Sauiour to haue bene beleeued, for his owne sake, although God would haue so appointed, that hee should haue wrought no such great works as he did. Thus much for the confirmation of the former answer.

But yet one question more, for the further clearing of this matter.

Question. Be it granted, that the miracles, which our Sauiour wrought, were necessarie for those, who at that time were the beholders of them, to the ende they might be confirmed by them to beleeue in him: are they likewise as necessarie for vs?

Answer As the working of them was necessarie to helpe the weakenesse of the faith of them, that then liued, and might see and beholde them with their bodilie eyes: so it is necessarie for vs, that liue at this day, to reade, heare, and meditate vpon the same miraculous works of our Sauiour, to the same endes, wherevnto the beholding of them was necessarie for those that liued then.

Exhortatiō & proofe. They are so indeed. And euen for this purpose is it, that God of his great mercie, tendering our weakenes, which is nowe as great as theirs was then: hath caused them to be faithfullie set downe in the holie Gospel, for a perpetuall memorial of them: according to that notable testimonie of Iohn, the holy Euangelist, and Apostle of our Lord Iesus Christ, chap: 20. verses 30. 31.

Read also Luke, chap: 24. 19. and Acts chapt: 1. verse 1. For wheras, not onely the words and doctrine of our Sauiour, but also his workes, were of necessarie vse, to be knowne, for the confirmation of Faith, to the ende of the world: by the manifesting of the glorie of the Sonne of God: the holie Euangelistes, as we see, were carefull, according to the commandement of God, to recorde them both. That thus it might come to passe; that as they were blessed, which saw them, & beleeued, as our Sauiour said to all his disciples, Matt. 13. 16. 17. so they also might be blessed, that should at any time beleeue (euen by the faithfull testimonie of the Euangelist) though they neuer saw with their bodilie eyes, as our Sauiour said more particularlie to Thomas, Iohn 20. 29. in these wordes, Because thou hast seene me, thou beleeuest: blessed are they that haue not seene, and haue beleeued.

These things being so, according as we haue alreadie taken a viewe, of the doctrine of our Sauiour, (which vsuallie hee preached, before he wrought his miraculous workes, because his doctrine was, as it were, the life of them, as they againe were a kinde of vnderpropping of the doctrine, in regard of the weakenes of the people) so let vs make some like collection of the miracles, hoping that this also, shalbe a labour profitable vnto vs. And wheras we cannot in this our exercise, stand to treat of euerie one at large, let vs at the least, gather together the diuers sorts and kindes of them, in some familiar order, fit for some help to our memorie, that so our faith may therwithall, be the rather succoured and holpen, answerable to the vse and ende of our Sauiours working of them.

Beliefe in God the Son, who wrought most miraculous and diuine works.

The ground and history of it.

This therfore wee will by the grace of God, doe in this order following.

Firſt, wee will make the beginning of our rehearſall, according to that beginning, which our Sauiour made of his Miracles: concerning the water, and thoſe other creatures, which doe belong to the ſame.

Secondlie, we will gather together thoſe Miracles, which he wrought, concerning the earth, and the fruites therof.

Thirdlie thoſe, which concerne the perſons of mankinde.

Of the firſt ſorte were theſe next following.

Firſt, touching the water it ſelfe, our Sauiour, as wee knowe, at the mariage feaſt in Cana of Galile, alledged before, turned water into wine. Iohn, chap: 2. verſ. 6. &c.

Likewiſe he made the waters ſolide and firme, fit to be walked vpon, as if it had bene firme land, whereſouer hee was to ſet his foote, chapt: 6. verſe 19. of the ſame Euangeliſt. At which time alſo he cauſed Peter to walke on the Sea. And when by reaſon of a mightie gale of winde, Peter fainting in faith, began to ſincke, our Sauiour by his diuine power, ſaued him from drowning. And forthwith alſo, ſtilled the bluſtering wind, & troubleſome waues of the Sea, by his word and commandement. And the ſhippe alſo, was by and by, at the land, whether they went, as we read in the 21. verſe. And likewiſe Matt: 14. verſe 24. And againe at another time as we read, Luke 8. 22. 23. 24. 25. And yet againe Matth: 8. 26. 27. Our Sauiour rebuked both the windes and the Sea, and they obeyed him. Thus therfore, it is euident, that our Sauiour hath power by Sea, as well as by land, as it followeth to be conſidered further: according to that Reuel: 10. 1. 2. 3. wher he is deſcribed, to ſtand with one foote in the Sea, & with another on the earth. Thus much therfore concerning the water it ſelfe.

Nowe ſecondlie, as touching the fiſhes of the ſea, our Sauiour declared his power ouer them, by cauſing an exceeding great draught to come into the net of Simon Peter, Luke chapt: 5. verſe 6. And that alſo, at ſuch a ſeaſon, as hee and his companie, had trauelled all the night, and could get nothing. The like to this our Sauiour did likewiſe after his Reſurrection, Iohn 21. 6. Moreouer Matth: ch: 17. verſe, 27. he cauſed a fiſhe to come to Peters angle, yea & that fiſh among all other, which had a piece of coine of twentie pence in the mouth of it, to pay that polle-money which was at that time demanded.

Such were the Miracles which our Sauiour wrought concerning the waters, and the creatures belonging vnto them. Whervnto we may well ad, the miraculous augmentation, and increaſing of thoſe two fiſhes, in the diſtribution of them, wherof we read, Matt: ch: 14. verſe. 17. &c: and likewiſe of thoſe fewe little fiſhes, chapt: 15. verſe 34. &c: to the feeding of multitudes of people. But herewithall, he did to the ſame end, encreaſe the vertue and ſubſtance of the fiue loaues, at the firſt time, ſo that ther was left of the fragments, twelue baskettes full: that is, more at the laſt, by a great deale, then was at the firſt. And at the ſecond time alſo, hee ſo encreaſed the ſeuen loaues, that after foure thouſand men, beſide many women and little children were fullie ſufficed, there remained ſeuen baskettes full.

ANd thus, with the ende of the firſt ſort of our Sauiours miracles, concerning the waters, we hauing made an entrance into the ſecond ſorte, which is, concerning the earth, and the fruites therof: let vs nowe proceede to the collection of them.

Among the which, we may reckon that for one, that our Sauiour made clay, contrarie to the nature of it, medicinable, to the reſtoring of ſight to a man that was borne blinde. Iohn. ch: 9. verſes 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7.

And on the contrarie, Marke chapt: 11. verſes, 12. 13. 14. And verſes, 20. 21. we read, that our Sauiour curſing a figge tree, it loſt forthwith, the naturall force and life of it, and ſo withered away, and neuer after bare any fruite.

Theſe, and if there be anie like to them, they are of this ſecond ſorte of the Miracles.

We

Beleefe in God the Sonne, who wrought most miracu-lous and diuine workes.

The ground and history of them.

Wee come to the third ſorte of our Sauiours Miracles, which it pleaſed him to worke, for the benefit of the Perſones of mankinde. The which as they were moſt in number, ſo were they more gratious then the reſt, to declare thereby, that ſpeciall good will and pitifull compaſſion which our Lord and Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt hath ouer vs, aboue any other of his creatures. Let vs therfore make our collection of them alſo, with a minde to ſtirre vp our ſelues therby, to be in ſpeciall manner thankfull to our Sauiour for the ſame. And firſt, let vs gather together them that reſpect the bodies of men: and ſecondly them that reſpect their ſoules.

Touching mens bodies, ſome miracles which our Sauiour wrought, were concerning their outward parts, and ſome were more inward.

The outward alſo, were either concerning particular members, or the whole bodie.

Such as concerned the outward partes, or members of the bodie: (that we may beginne with the head, and ſo goe to the inferiour partes) they were, firſt, the curing of the eyes of ſuch as were blinde: as Matth: 9. 27. &c. Our Sauiour opened the eyes of two blinde men, who beſought him to ſhewe this great mercie vpon them.

And againe, ch: 20. verſe 29. &c. He touched the eyes of other two blinde men, who with like inſtance, craued this mercie of him, and immediatly reſtored their ſight. The Euangeliſt Marke telleth vs that the name of the one of theſe was Bartimeus the Sonne of Timeus. ch: 10. 46.

The Storie is notable, in reſpect of that man. If you remember it not, read it, and you ſhall finde it to be as I ſay.

And chapter 8. 22. the ſame Euangeliſt teſtifieth that at Bethſaida, our Sauiour reſtored ſight to a blinde man that was brought vnto him, by moiſtening his eyes with his ſpittle. Yet ſo, as he reſtored his ſight by little and little, as it were by degrees: that the man might the rather be moued to conſider the greatnes of the benefit, while he did more ſenſiblie feele, as it were, and plainlie diſcerne the diuine power of our Sauiour therin.

And Iohn: chapt: 9. 1. &c. 6. 7. our Sauiour healed the eyes of a man that was borne blinde, by laying claye moyſtned with ſpittle vpon them, as appeared plainelie, ſo ſoone as the man had by the appointment of our Sauiour, waſhed it of againe, in the poole of Siloam: as was mentioned before.

Moreouer Matth: chap: 21. 14. Blind men (ſaith the Euangeliſt) and ſuch as halted, came to our Sauiour, being in the Temple at Ieruſalem, and he healed them.

Finallie, he healed that miſerable blinde man, of whom we read in the ſame Euangeliſt, ch: 12. verſes 22. 23. who beſide that he was dumbe, and ſo could make no requeſt for himſelfe, by anie word of mouth to our Sauiour: he was alſo poſſeſſed with a Diuell. Yea our Sauiour healed him ſo, that hee both ſpake, and alſo ſawe: in ſo much that all the people were amazed.

This was that miracle, that the wicked and malignant Phariſies, moſt malitiouſlie blaſphemed, as it followeth recorded in the ſame chapter.

Likewiſe, that nowe (by occaſion of this laſt blinde man, who was alſo dumbe) wee may proceede: let vs from the cure of the eyes, come to conſider thoſe like miraculous cures, which our Sauiour wrought vpon dumbe men. And firſt, Matth: ch: 9. 32. 33. 34. Wee read, that after our Sauiour had healed the two blind men mentioned out of this chapter before, they brought to him one that was dumbe, who was alſo poſſeſſed with a Diuell, like as that other man was, of whom we ſpake a while ſince. Our Sauiour therfore, caſting the diuel out of this mā likewiſe, gaue him alſo the gift & power of his ſpeech.

At the working of which miracle, The multitude (ſaith the Euangeliſt) marvelled, ſaying, The like was never ſeene in Iſrael, But the Phariſies ſhewed themſelues like to themſelues. That is, they blaſphemed this miracle alſo ſaying: He caſteth out Deuils through the Prince of Deuils. And ch: 15. v: 30. 31. He healed manie at once, both halte, blinde, dumbe and maimed, as the ſame Euangeliſt teſtifieth.

In

Beleefe in God the Sonne, who wrought most miraculous and diuine workes.

The ground and history of it.

Insomuch that the multitude wondered to see the dumbe to speake, the maimed whole, the halt to goe, and the blinde to see: and as hee obserueth further, they glorified the God of Israel.

Moreouer, as we read Mark: 7. 31. 32. &c Our Sauiour healed one, that was greatlie stammering in his speech: for he loosened the string of his tongue, so that he spake as expeditelie and plainelie, as any other man. The same man was also deafe, of the which infirmitie, our Sauiour likewise healed him. For as the holie Euangelist reporteth the historie, our Sauiour did put his fingers in his eares: and looking vp to heauen, hee sighed and said vnto him, Ephphatha, that is, be thou opened. And strait way his eares were opened. &c. Wherat (as the Euangelist testifieth) the people were beyond measure astonied, saying, he hath done all things well: he maketh both the deafe to heare, and the dumb to speak.

Herevnto may wee ad, that other miraculous worke of our Sauiour Christ, which the same Euangelist recordeth, chapt: 9. 17. &c. 25. For he deliuered the sonne of a man, which from his childhood, had ben both dumbe and deafe. The work was verie great, and gracious, as it canot but be acknowledged from the reading of the holie historie thereof: whether we read it in the Euangelist Mark, now recited, or in Matth: ch: 17. 14. &c. or in Luke, chap: 9. 38. &c. For the people were all amazed at the mightie power of God, euidentlie shewing it selfe therein.

And thus we see, which were that kinde of Miracles; which our Sauiour Christ wrought vpon the eares of men, and therewithall, vpon the tongues of manie. Among the which we haue heard also, the cure of those reckoned vp, who halted of their legges. For seeing they were ioyned together in one text, wee could not thinke it meete to sunder them, though our order is something broken thereby.

But that wee may holde on our course, as orderlie as we can. We come now to the rest.

And herein, the cure of the man, who had his hand dried vp, and withered, may well be first remembred. For the historie of it, is very memorable, as we read, Marke. 3. 1. &c. and Luke, chapt: 6. verses 6. 7. &c. It was the mans right hand, which our Sauiour restored, & made as sound as the other. Wherat (as the Euangelist Luke sheweth further) the vnreasonable aduersaries of our Sauiour were filled with madnes, in stead that they ought to haue giuen great glorie and praise to God, and our blessed Sauiour.

Neither may we passe ouer in silence, that our Sauiour healed the right eare of the seruant of the high Priest, which one of his Disciples, in zeale of his Masters defence, as he intended in his own rashnes did cut off with his sword, Luke 22. verses, 50. 51. The name of him which made the maime, that is, Peter, and also the name of him, to whom our Sauiour restored the eare, that is Malchus, they are both mentioned. Iohn chap: 18. 10. 11.

Hitherto concerning the sundrie sortes of miracles, which our blessed Sauiour wrought externallie vpon the particular members of the bodies of men.

NOwe more generallie, concerning the cures of the bodies of men, wholie infirme and diseased.

And among these, he that commeth first to our remembrance, is that poore creeple, who had bene diseased 38. yeares, whom our Sauiour made perfitlie well and wholle: as we read Iohn chapt: 5. verses. 5. 6. 7. 8.

Likewise Matth: 9. 2. &c. And as the same is more fullie recorded, Mark 2. verses. 3. 4. &c. 12. And Luke chap: 5. 18. &c. Our Sauiour Christ restored one that was whollie taken with the numme or dead palsie, so that he could not goe, but must be carried in his bed. This worke of our Sauiour was so reuerend and gracious, that the people were amazed at it, and praised God (as Saint Luke reporteth verse 26.) and beeing filled with feare, they said, Doubtles we haue seene strange things this day. And Mark: ch. 2. 12. Wee neuer saw such a thing.

More-

The grou and history of them.

Teheseis God the Sone, who wrought most miraculous and diuine workes.

Moreouer, Luke chap: 13. 10. 11. Our Sauiour of great compassion, loosed a woman from her disease, who had a spirit of infirmitie eighteene yeares, and was bowed together, so as she could not in any wise lift vp her selfe. For (as the Euangelist saith) our Sauiour seeing this pittifull creature, called her vnto him, and said vnto her, Woman thou art loosed from thy disease. And he laid his hands on her, and immediately she was made straite againe, and she glorified God. The which gratious worke of our Sauiour, when it was reproued by the vngratious Ruler of the Synagogue, vnder this pretence that it was vnlawfull to be done on the Sabbath day: our Sauiour doth so gratiously defend it, that hee put his aduersaries to shame: and all the people reioyced, at all the excellent thinges that were done by him.

Of this sorte also, were those mercifull cures which our Sauiour did vpon manie Lepers. As Luke, chapter: 5. verses 12. 13. Hee healed one that was full of leprosie, that is, one that was, as wee would say, in our language, a fowle leper. Such a one as was also, that Simon of whom wee reade, Matth: 26. 6. who for the memoriall of that gratious cure which our Sauiour wrought on him, did beare the name of Simon the leper: as though it should be said, This was hee who beeing a verie leprous man, was by the fauour of our Sauiour Christ cleansed of it.

And againe, Luke chapt: 17. 12. 13. &c. He healed tenne lepers at one time. Of whom it is said to their reproofe, that although all were cleansed, yet onely one returned to giue thankes to our Sauiour, for this great benefit.

Such therefore, were the miracles, which our Sauiour wrought, for the helping of the bodies of men, in regard of their bodilie diseases, more externallie apparant to the eyes of men.

NOwe concerning more inward diseases and sicknesses: wee reade first Iohn: 4. 50. &c, that our Sauiour healed the Rulers sonne, who was sicke of a burning ague, euen neare vnto death.

Likewise Marke chapt: 1. 30. 31. he healed Simons wiues mother, who lay sick of a feuer. For as the Euangelist reporteth, Our Sauiour came, and tooke her by the hand, and lifted her vp, and the feuer forsooke her by and by, and shee ministred vnto them.

Hee healed the Centurions seruant also; who was sicke vnto death, Luke 7. 3. 4. 5. 6. &c.

Of this sorte of miraculous cures, was the healing of the woman troubled greatlie, by the space of twelue yeeres together, with an issue of bloode, who had spent all her substance vpon Phisitions, but could not be healed, by the skill of any of them. This woman did our Sauiour heale, Luke: chapter. 8. 43 &c. 48.

Of this sort also, were those inward & dolorous gripings, by collicks & conuulsions, &c. Of the which our Sauiour healed many. For so we read, Matth: ch: 4. 24. They brought vnto him all sicke people, that were taken with diuers diseases, and grivings, &c. and he healed them. And Mark chap: 1. 34. He healed manie that were sicke of diuers diseases. And likewise Luke. 4. 40.

Yea our Sauiour did not onely heale many that were sicke of diuers inward diseases, euen to the pointe of death: but for a further declaration of his diuine power, hee restored diuers of those to life, whom diseases and sicknesses had depriued of life.

These therefore wee will, in way of an addition to the former, here call to mind, as a further amplification of the diuine power of our Lord Iesus Christ.

Of these, wee haue three recorded, euerie one more notable, and admirable then the other.

For first, our Sauiour restored the daughter of Iairus, a childe of the age of twelue yeeres, her life beeing newe gone out of her bodie, Marke chapt: 5. 21, 22. &c.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who wrought most miraculous and diuine workes.

The ground and history of them.

Secondlie a widowe of Naines onely sonne, he being not onely laide forth by the walles for dead, but also layd vpon the beare, yea carried on mens shoulders, onward to the place of buriall, Luke chap: 5. 12. &c. This corse did our Sauiour restore to life.

Thirdlie, hee restored Lazarus to life, after that he had beene dead by the space of fower dayes, and so had layen buried in the graue, Iohn chapter 11. verse 39. &c.

Hitherto of the two former sortes of our Sauiours Miraculous workes, in their seuerall kindes.

NOwe the third and last sorte of those mentioned in the beginning of this our collection, was concerning the soules of men. Let vs henceforth call them also to minde.

Of these there are two sorts, or rather two degrees of one, and the same kind. For our Saiour did not onelie restore those to their right mindes, who were Lunatike, that is to say, either sicke of that disease, which we doe call the falling sickues, or otherwise frantike and mad at certaine times and seasons of the yeere: but also he changed the heartes of great sinners from their sinnes, to the faith and obedience of God, by the speedie, and as one would say, extemporall power of his diuine word and commandement.

Of the first sorte we reade Matth: 4. 24. Where it is written that our Sauiour healed the Lunatike. And chapt: 17. 14. &c. the mans sonne whom our Sauiour healed of his deafenes, and dumbnes, as S. Mark writeth, ch: 9. 25. was also Lunatike, as the Euangelist Matthewe testifieth reporting the Fathers words thus, Master haue pitie on my sonne, for he is lunatike, and sore vexed: for oftentimes he falleth into the fire, and oft times into the water, &c. This childe, our Sauiour healed of his lunasie, as it followeth verse, 18.

To this sorte belongeth the deliuerance of those that were possessed of Diuels. Of which most miserable persons, our Sauiour deliuered some who were possessed of one: as Marke chapt: 1. verse 23. &c.

Vpon the sight wherof, the people (as the Euangelist obserueth) were all amazed, so that they demanded one of another, saying, What a thing is this, &c?

And verse, 34. He cast out many Diuels, and suffered them not to say they knewe him. Our Sauiour did likewise cast a Diuell out of the Canaanitish womans Daughter. Matth: 15. 22. &c. 28. Thus our Sauiour deliuered manie, that were possessed, onely with some one Diuel a piece.

But out of some other, he cast out manie Diuels, which had taken possession of one. For out of Marie Magdalene he cast seuen, as we reade, Luk: 8. 2. and Marke 16. 9. And out of the man that kept among the graues, whom no fetters or chaines could holde, our Sauiour cast out verie manie Diuels. For as we read Marke: ch: 5. 2. 3. 4. &c. when our Sauiour demanded the Diuels name (not that he was ignorant, but that heereby might be knowen to vs the greatnes of this work) the Diuel answered that his name was Legion: for saith one of them, as if he were the chiefe among the rest, we are manie.

These were those Diuels, who beeing cast out of the miserable captiue, did by the permission of our Sauiour, for the further manifesting to vs, howe malitious and mischieuous they are, enter into the heard of the Gadarens swine, in number about two thousand, and carried them all with violence into the Sea, and so drowned them euerie one.

FInallie, touching the miraculous conuersion of poore sinners, from their sinnefull estate, with the gift of grace, to minde the holie waies of God: these alreadie mentioned, who were deliuered and set free from that bodilie possession, which the Diuels had of them, may be notable examples.

For this I doubt not, but that our Sauiour did magnifie his mercie, from one degree to another, as was said before.

But

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who wrought most miraculous and diuine workes.

The Comfortes of them.

But beside theſe, the admirable grace and power of our Sauiour, was extraordinarilie manifeſt, in the calling of his diſciples: ſome from fiſhing and mending of their netts: & Matthew from the cuſtome table to his miniſterie. And by the conuerſion of the thiefe hanging vpon the croſſe. &c.

Theſe, (and if there be any other ſuch like beſide them) are the ſundrie ſortes and kindes of thoſe miracles, which our bleſſed Sauiour wrought, to declare himſelfe to be the onlie true Meſſiah, ſent of God: & that the doctrine which hee taught was the doctrine of his heauenlie kingdome. The particulars of which miracles, were infinit as the Euangeliſt Iohn witneſſeth, chap: 21. verſ. 25, in the laſt words of the Goſpell: which hee affirmeth to be verie true, by this word of holie aſſeueration. Amen. Of the which truth, it is both our dutie and our bleſſing, to be vndoubtedlie perſwaded: yea, and alſo of euerie other thing which is written by him, and other Euangeliſtes concerning our bleſſed Sauiour.

Thus farre concerning thoſe miraculous and diuine works, which our Sauiour Chriſt did in due time performe, to the ende hee might make himſelfe knowne to be the true Meſſiah, and the great Prophet ſent of God.

Queſtion. BVt was there anie former promiſe made to the Church of God, that the Meſſiah ſhould worke ſuch great and admirable workes, when hee ſhould come?

Anſwere. Yea. God promiſed of olde, that he ſhould be a Prophet like to Moſes: that is to ſay mightie both in word and alſo in deede, as Moſes was.

Explicatio & proofe. It is true: according to that we read Deut: chapt: 18. verſe 15. &c. And that Moſes was mighty in word and deed, the hiſtorie of Exodus &c. is a plaine and plentifull proofe of it. And ſo is it worthilie teſtified by Stephen, that notable Martyr. Act: 7. 22.

Moreouer, there are ſundrie other prophecies, which doe not obſcurelie point vs herevnto: as namelie Iſai: 35. verſes. 5. 6. &c. The eyes of the blinde ſhalbe lightened, and the eares of the deafe ſhalbe opened. Then ſhal the lame man leape as an Harte, and the dumb mans tongue ſhall ſing, &c. And ch: 62, 1, &c. compared with Luke, chap: 4. 18. 19. 20, 21. And Ioel, 2. 28. &c. compared with Act: 2. 14. 15. 16. &c. For all thoſe graces and giftes, depended vppon the appearing of our Sauiour, and were giuen by him vnto the Apoſtles, according to that Prophecie of Ioel, and ſuch other like.

Queſtion. NOwe from the Promiſe, let vs come to the Comfort, wherevnto the Promiſe alwaies leadeth faith, as it were by the hande.

What therefore may that Comfort be which faith laieth holde of, from theſe miraculous workes of our Sauiour?

Anſwer. Much euerie way, while we conſider, and beleeue that the moſt gracious and ſauing power of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, extendeth it ſelfe both to ſoule and bodie, to euerie faultie and power of the one, and to euerie parte and member of the other, both inwardlie and outwardlie, yea and to all creatures elſe both in the Sea, and on the land, and in the aire: for our preſernation againſt the Diuel, and all calamities or moleſtations of this life, that they ſhould be no way pernicious, and hurtfull vnto vs: but chieflie, for the furtherance of the eternal ſaluation, both of our bodies and ſoules in the kingdome of heauen.

Explicatio & proofe. Great indeede, is the comfort hereof, to all true beleeuers; in that the due conſideration of all the gratious and mightie works of our Sauiour cannot but exceedinglie relieue and ſtrengthen the imbecilitie and weakeneſſe of Faith. Be of good comfort, ſay the people to blinde Bartimeus. For ſay they, Hee calleth thee. Wherefore Bartimeus threwe of his cloake, and ranne to our Sauiour, as we read, Marke 10. 49. 50. Much more may we comforte our ſelues, to hope for good things from our moſt bleſſed Sauiour, conſidering his owne wordes to ſome other: as Matth: 9. 22. Daughter be of good comfort, thy faith hath made thee whole.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who wrought most miraculous and diuine workes.

The Comfortes of them.

And further, that it was the purpose of our Sauiour, by all his miraculous workes to comfort vs, from the beholding of his mercifull affection, to hope for all the good things from him: it may be obserued from the Prophecie of Isaiah chap: 53. 4. as it is applied by S. Matthew, chapt: 8. verse. 17. in these wordes, That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the Prophet, saying, Hee tooke on him our infirmities and bare our sicknesses. Yea our Sauiour himselfe testifieth expresselie, that he wrought his great workes to comfort our faith in the hope of saluation by him. And therfore, at such time as the scribes cauilled in their hearts against him, because he had said to the sick of the palsy, Thy sinnes are forgiuen thee. Our Sauiour rebuked thē. But for the comfort of those of the companie, that were teachable, he saith, That ye may knowe that the Sonne of man hath auteritie in earth, to forgiue sinnes, he said to the sick of the palsie, (saith the Euangelist) Arise, take vp thy bed, and goe to thine house.

Now this we may assure our selues of, that our Sauiour hauing this power, and therwithall this mercifull affection, while he was on earth, hath not laide it downe or diminished it, by his Ascension vp into heauen.

O therefore howe preciouslie ought we to esteeme of all the gratious miracles of our blessed Sauiour, as beeing verie necessarie, beneficiall, and comfortable helpes to the strengthening and chearing vp of our feeble faith!

Verilie, if we would diligentlie, and reuerendlie read, heare, meditate, and ponder them in our hearts, as we ought: we should assuredlie find them exceedinglie comfortable to vs, euen in the times of our greatest distresse: They would surely raise vp our heartes, to the cheerefull hope of all meete succour from him here, and of eternall saluation by him, in his heauenlie kingdome, in the life to come.

Thus then, as was answered, wee mãy iustlie affirme, that the comforte is euerie way verie great.

Question. ANswerable therefore to the Comfort, ought the dutie to be.
Answere. What say you to that?

We ought indeede, to be as earnestlie affected to giue glorie to God, in the reading, hearing, and meditating vpon them, as anie euer were, or ought to haue bene, in the present beholding of them, when they were wrought before them.

Wee ought likewise, from them, to comfort and strengthen our faith, that our Sauiour is the verie true Sonne of God, the promised Messiah, &c. Yea, and so to rest satisfied, in the confirmation therof, by his miracles: that henceforth wee desire no more, for anie further confirmation thereof.

Wee ought accordingly more and more, to submit our selues vnto him, and his holie doctrine, euen as we would gladlie be more and more partakers of the fruit and benefit of his most gratious, diuine, and all-sauing power.

Finalie, wee ought to take incouragement from hence, to seeke vnto our Sauiour Christ, for helpe and succour in all our necessities.

It is verie meet indeed, that wee should doe so.

Explicatiõ & proofe. And herein, as touching the first branch of the Answer, wee haue manie of the beholders of the working of these miracles by our Sauiour, verie worthie examples, as may appeare from their speeches rehearsed not long since. The which also, we may easilie call againe to minde, if we shall turne to these and such like places of the historie of the Gospell, Matth: 15. 30. 31. Mark. 7. 37. Luke 5. 25. 26. and ch: 7. 16. and ch: 13. verses 13. 17. and Iohn 6. 14.

Touching the second branch of the Answer, that the Miracles of our Sauiour, are sufficient to confirme our faith: the testimonie of S. Iohn the Euangelist alledged likewise before is plaine, chapt: 20. 30. 31. For as a lease or a deede of gifte, beeing once sealed, is as firme at the last, and for the last yeere, as it was for the first: so it is in this case. The Apostle Paul alledgeth the miracles which he wrought among the Corinthians, for the proofe of his Apostleship, 2. Epist: chapt: 12. verse 12.

Much

Beliefe in God the Son, who wrought most miraculous and diuine works.

The danger of not beleeuing.

Much rather then may we reason from the miracles of our Sauiour, to make proofe of his calling, &c. Away therefore with all the patrie miracles of poperie, to confirme any doctrine contrarie or not agreeing with the least point of the Gospel. Away I say, with all their lying Legends, &c. For they hinder and destroy faith: but no way helpe and establish it.

The third branch is of it selfe so cleare, that we neede vse no proofe for it. And so is the last branch also to euerie teachable Scholler. For seeing our Sauiour hath healed all kinde of diseases: the due consideration hereof doth notably discouer the wicked vanitie of all superstitious ones, who seeke to themselues so many Patrones, as the seuerall members of our bodies, &c. are subiect to diuers and sundry maladies.

Question. To conclude all that we haue furthermore to obserue, concerning the miraculous works of our Sauiour: Is there any danger in not beleeuing that our Sauiour Christ hath wrought them, as they are recorded by the holy Euangelists?

Answer. They that will not beleeue the miracles to be wrought by our Sauiour, according to their testimonie, will neuer truly beleeue in him to be the true Christ, nor that his doctrine recorded by them is the onely true doctrine of saluation.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is very true. For the doctrine of our Sauiour Christ, is in maiestie and strangenes to humane and carnall reason, like to his workes. That is, the doctrine is as much aboue carnall reason, as the works exceeded common sense. This is as strange to the carnall eare, as they were in the eye of flesh.

Moreouer, this is certaine, that such as will not beleeue the true miracles of our Sauiour Christ, they are in very great and speedie danger to be deceiued by false miracles in time of tentation: and so to be led to imbrace lying doctrines, as our Sauiour giueth to vnderstand concerning all such, Matth. chap. 24. verses 23, 24, 25. And so doth the Apostle Paul, 2. Thes. 2. verses 9, 11. And Iohn, Reuel. ch. 13. verses 13, 14.

Let vs in this behalfe, take warning from the heauy iudgement of God vpon the prowd Pharisies. For they blaspheming the miracles of our Sauiour, were giuen vp to the hardnes of their hearts, and to beleeue lies.

Let vs also admonish our selues, from the fearefull example of the foolish Papists euen to this day, who for want of due regard of the miracles of our Sauiour, haue suffered themselues to be blindely led and confirmed in false doctrine, by euery fabulous report or superstitious beholding of lying miracles, which were no better then iuggling trickes of deceiuers, such as were the sweating of the crucifixe, and the weeping of their Ladie, &c.

Finally, let vs be admonished from the words of the Euangelist Iohn, chap. 12. verses 37, 38, 39, 40, 41. Though (saith he) our Sauiour had done so many miracles before them, yet beleeued they not in him. That the saying of Esaias the Prophet might be fulfilled, that he said, Lord who beleeued our report? &c. And from the words of our Sauiour himselfe, chap. 15. verse 24. If I had not done works which no other man did, they had not had sinne: but now they haue both seene, and haue hated both me and my Father. And Finally from the wordes of the Apostle, Hebr. chap. 2. verses 3. 4. How shall we escape, if we refuse so great saluation as hath beene both preached by the Lord, and also confirmed by signes and wonders, and with diuers miracles and gifts of the holy Ghost, according to his owne will?

Beliefe in God the Son, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and history more generally.

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

HAuing thus interposed our inquirie, concerning the life, doctrine, and miracles of our Sauiour Christ, betwē the birth and the time of his principall sufferings vnder Pontius Pilate, the which were approching the time of his death. Let vs now proceede to consider of these his sufferings, as they follow mentioned in the Articles of our beliefe. Rehearse ye therefore the words againe. Which are they?

Question.

Answer. They are these, He suffered vnder Pontius Pilate, was crucified, dead, and buried, he descended into hell.

Explicatiō & proofe.

In these words, the Articles of our beliefe doe shew vs, how after that our Sauiour Christ had performed his office of Prophetship, in teaching the doctrine of the Kingdome of God, and also giuen forth such a glimse of his kingly dignitie and gouernment as was meete, the time of his humiliation yet continuing: they doe shew vs now in these words, how he performed his office of Priesthood, and therein his most deepe sufferings and humiliation, in that he offered vp himselfe a sacrifice to God, for our eternall redemption, and prayed for his Church in most earnest manner, &c.

It is true indeede, that our Sauiour Christ was from his conception anointed of God, to be both a Prophet, high Priest, & King to his Church, and people: and so is to be accounted of vs, euen from the first moment of his conception, to the last breath, and so remaineth for euer, as we are hereafter to consider. Neuertheless, as he began not his publike Prophetship, till he was about thirtie yeares of age, so he began not the publike execution of his office of high Priesthood, vntill neare the end of his life: like as also: albeit he gaue forth some glimse of his kingly dignitie. Matth. 21,5,6,7,8,9. Luke 19. 35, 36,37, &c. And Iohn chap. 12. verses 12, &c. Yet he was not fully blazoned as we may say, and publikely proclaimed, crowned King and Prince ouer his people, vntill he was risen againe, according to that, Act. 5. 30,31. The God of our fathers, hath raised vp Iesus, whom ye slew, and hanged on a tree. Him hath God lifted vp with his right hād, to be a Prince & a Sauiour, to giue repentance to Israel, and forgiuenes of sinnes. And we are his witnesses: saith Peter and the rest of the Apostles. And according to that, Rom. 1. 4. Whereof the Apostle Paul testifieth, that he was declared mightily to be the Sonne of God, by the resurrection from the dead. And Phil. 2. 9. That since that time, he hath a name giuen him aboue euery name, &c.

Moreouer, it may not be denied, but that our Sauiour Christ abased and humbled himselfe and suffered all his life time, euen from the wombe: yea we may say euen in the wombe of his mother, in that he tooke our base nature: and in that it could not otherwise be, but troublesome, both to Marie, and also to the blessed fruit of her wombe, to trauaile so long a iourney as Bethlem was from Nazareth, when she was great with childe, euen neare vpon the time of her deliuerance. Likewise, it must needes be troublesome to the childe, after that he was borne, and that so poorely, circumcised on the tender part of the flesh: and a few daies after, carried a further iourney into Ægypt, and there to remaine with hard education, some three or foure yeares, as it seemeth: and further, in that as the childe grew to strength, so he gaue himselfe to a labourSome and base course of life, induring paines, wearines, hunger, and thirst, working with his hands for his liuing: euen such works, as Ioseph wrought, vnto whom he was, in all duties of seruice, willingly subiect, till the time was come, that he must leaue all other works, to doe the will of his heauenly Father, in the publike duties of his heauenly calling. But from that time also, it was not lesse troublesome and painefull, but full of humiliation to him, in respect

Reheſe in God the Son, who ſuffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and hiſtory more generally.

ſpect of humane infirmity and paſſion, euen from his enterance thereinto, as it appeareth in that he was forth-with carried into the ſollitarie and vncomfortable wildernes, to be among the wilde beaſts tempted of the Diuell, without lodging, without foode, ſuffering hunger. And likewiſe in the time following, when he came and preached among the people, great was his paines in going about from place to place, finding oftentimes very hard entertainement, yea being ſometimes refuſed and reiected, and many times reproched and cruelly laid in wait for, with violent attempts againſt his life: namely at Nazareth, where they offered, and for their parts, did what they could to haue throwne him downe headlong from that ſteepe hill whereon their Citie was built. Luke 4. 29. And afterward in Iudea, the Iewes went about to ſtone him. Iohn 8. 59. And againe chap. 10. 31. and chap. 11. 8. And thus it was with our Sauiour, euen to the time of his laſt moſt low humiliation, and moſt bitter ſufferings, which were vnder Pontius Pilate, approching the time of his death, as was obſerued of vs.

Of theſe laſt ſufferings therefore, and of this moſt low humiliation, (the which as they were to the ſpeciall debaſement, and in a great part of them, moſt bitter and dolefull to our Sauiour Chriſt: ſo were they, and be they ſtill, moſt beneficiall and comfortable vnto vs) we will by the grace of God, with ſpeciall diligence inquire, as after a ſpeciall ground and portion of our chriſtian beliefe. According to that of the Apoſtle Peter, 1. Epiſt. ch. 5. 1. Where profeſſing himſelfe a ſpeciall witnes of Chriſt, he giueth the inſtance concerning the ſuffering of Chriſt, as being a matter worthy to be in ſpeciall manner teſtified and confirmed to the Churches of God: in ſo much as our Sauiour Chriſt, by the ſacrificing of himſelfe, hath vtterly remoued and taken away the guiltines and wrath due to ſinne, &c. Heb. 9. 26. The ſame his ſufferings, being alſo the perfect ſealing vp, and as we may ſay, the crowne or garland of his obedience, and of his expiation, or ſatisfaction made for our ſinnes. Col. 2. 14. 15. and finally, the onely way whereby hee was, on our behalfe, to obtaine all the glorie which followed after: according to that, Luk. ch. 24. ver. 25, 26. and Iohn 12. 23, 24, 25, 26. and 1. Pet. 1. 11. and 2. Tim. 2. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12.

Queſtion. BVt that we may proceed in order. Firſt of all, what ground of holy Scripture haue you, for the teſtimony or declaration, and warrant of theſe ſufferings, and of this ſpeciall humiliation vnder Pontius Pilate, in the execution of his moſt holy office of Prieſthood: to wit, in that he was crucified, &c. to ſuch ſingular ends and purpoſes as hath beene ſaid? Where are they moſt faithfully, and fully reported vnto vs?

Anſwer. They are at large and with all faithfulnes recorded vnto vs, as it were in a perfit harmonie by all the foure Euangeliſts.

Explicatiõ & proofe. It is very true: as we reade Matth. ch. 26. and ch. 27. Mar. ch. 14. and ch. 15. Luke ch. 22. and 23. and Iohn ch. 18. and ch. 19. And they are thus diligently and fully ſet downe, by all the Euangeliſts, and commended to the Church of God, as being a moſt worthy part of the moſt holy hiſtorie of our Sauiour Chriſt, moſt diligently to be read, heard, meditated, and conferred vpon, of all chriſtians, all the daies of their liues. And that, to many the moſt excellent ends & purpoſes, as was ſaid, & as by the grace of God, ſhall hereafter be declared.

But before we come to inquire of thoſe excellent ends, or any other of thoſe excellent things, which are to be conſidered concerning the chiefe humiliation and ſufferings of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: let vs inquire of the ſufferings themſelues, and of the ſame his humiliation: and that alſo, in as commodious an order, as we may, for the helpe both of our vnderſtanding, & alſo of our memorie, touching ſo great and memorable a matter, as this is. How therfore may they be diſtinguiſhed, as may beſt ſerue to ſo good ends and purpoſes.

Queſtion.

Anſwer. The chiefe ſufferings of our Sauiour Chriſt, may not vnfitly be conſidered vnder theſe heads or ſeuerall branches following.

Firſt, thoſe that belong to his preparing of himſelfe to the enduring of his ſufferings, at ſuch times as he entered into the moſt ſerious thought and meditation of them.

Beleefe in God the Sonne, who ſuffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and hiſtory of his preparation.

Secondly, they that belong to his betraying into the hands of his wicked and malitious aduerſaries.

Thirdly, they that belong to his apprehenſion.

Fourthly, they that belong to his examination, or arraignment, and inditement: and that in diuers branches. Firſt before Caiaphas the high Prieſt, then before Pilate in the cõmon hall, & after that, before Pilate without, in the hearing of the chiefe Prieſt, & the reſt of the Iewes: & after this, before Herod: & laſt of all, before Pilat againe, & againe.

Fifthly, thoſe things that belong to his iudgement and condemnation.

Sixtly, they that belong to the execution of the ſame iudgement, or ſentence of condemnation Which was giuen againſt him.

Finally, his buriall, and the continuance of his bodie, as it were vnder the power and dominion of death, ſeperated from his moſt holie ſoule, vntill the third day after the ſame his buriall, was a part of his loweſt humiliation, yea and alſo of his holy ſufferings, though not to be reckoned among thoſe, that were painefull and dolorous; but onely in the iudgement of his aduerſaries, diſhonourable and reproch full vnto him.

Explicatiõ. Vnder theſe heads or branches, we may indeede, not vnaptly conſider of all the principall ſufferings and humiliation, or abaſement of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Let vs therefore accordingly, make our inquirie into them: and that alſo in the ſame order, wherein you haue rehearſed them.

And firſt, of thoſe which do concerne our Sauiour, his preparing of himſelfe by the ſerious meditation of them. The which as they were either a little more remoued, or more nearely approching to his betraying, and the troubles therof, ſo let vs inquire of them.

Queſtion. Firſt therefore, What ground or teſtimonie of holy Scripture haue you, for thoſe ſufferings, which were ſomething more remooued from the time wherein he was betraied?

Anſwer. In the 27. verſe of the 12. chap. of the Euangeliſt Iohn, we reade it teſtified, that our Sauiour Chriſt, in ſpeaking and forethinking of his death, breaketh forth very pathetically into theſe words: Now is my ſoule troubled: and what ſhall I ſay? Father ſaue me from this houre: but therefore came I to this houre.

This was fiue daies before that Paſſeouer, at the feaſt whereof, he was crucified, and put to death.

Explicatiõ. Read alſo Luke, ch. 12. verſe 50. I muſt be baptized, (to wit, of a moſt bitter death. and how am I greeued till it be ended? Of the which words, thus writeth a learned Interpreter Conſideranda hîc eſt cauſa cur Chriſtus ſupplicium quo ſe afficiendum nouit, tantopere exhorruerit, &c. Cauſa (inquit interpres) fuit, non tam metus cruciatuum corporalium, quàm metus ſpiritualium: quia ſciebat oportere ſe in cruce guſtare iram Dei aduerſus peccata electorum, ac proinde ſentire cruciatus infernales: quales cruciatus reprobi in Gehenna in æternum ſenſuri ſunt. That is, Here is to be conſidered the cauſe, why Chriſt did ſo much feare the puniſhment, which he notes ſhould be laid vpon him. The cauſe (ſaith the interpreter) was not ſo much the feare of bodily torments, as of ſpirituall: becauſe he knew that vpon the Croſſe, he muſt taſte the wrath of God againſt the elect, & ſo feele the paines of hell: euen ſuch as the reprobate ſhall feele in hel for euer.

And that our Sauiour Chriſt vttered theſe words in Iohn, of exceeding dolour and heauines, with a certaine confuſion and aſtoniſhment, at the ſodainnes of it, falling vpon him from the hand of God, while he did earneſtly thinke of his moſt horrible and fearefull death: it is alſo euident, both by that which goeth before in the ſame chapter, ver. 23, 24. and alſo by that which followeth after, verſes 32, 33. This trouble of ſoule fell vpon our Sauiour Chriſt, ſhortly after the raiſing vp of Lazarus from the dead, and that the glory of his kingly dignity began to breake forth: the which is worthy the noting, in ſo much as our Sauiour Chriſt, knowing that he muſt ſuffer, he did according to his excellent wiſedome, neuer bend his mind more earneſtly to think thereof, then when the glory of God did ſhine moſt brightly vpon him, as beſide this time, we may take another ſpeciall inſtance from the time of his tranſfiguration, Mat. 17. verſes 9, 11. And againe ch. 25. 31, &c. compared with ch. 26. 1, 2.

Neither

Iesus the Son of God the Son who suffered vnder Pōtius Pilate

The ground and history of his agonie in the Garden.

Neither is it to be neglected, that as the glory of his kingly dignitie, shined forth, when our Sauiour Christ was neare to the going downe of the mount of Olives, as the Euangelist Luke recordeth, chap: 19. 37. so this trouble mentioned, Iohn: chap: 12. fell vpon his soule, if not at the same time, yet shortly after, as it might be from the admonition of the place, where hee was within a while, to feele the renewing of the trouble in greater measure, as it were by the croched arrowe of the Lord, shot into the middest of his soule so as it could not be pulled out so soone as this, which being as it were more smothly headed, was taken away. But of this more hereafter. Let vs in the meane while come to those testimonies of holy Scripture, which declare vnto vs, the trouble of soule, or inward passions and sufferings of our Sauiour, which fell vpon him from the hand of God, at such time as his betraying was euen at hand, and more nearely approaching. These were either in the chamber, where our Sauiour Christ did eate the passeouer with his Disciples at euen: or else the same night, a few howers after in the garden in the declining, or valley of the mount of Olives: euen in Gethsemane the valley of fatnes, a place likely where they pressed ther oliues, to make their oile, &c.

Question. IN the first place therefore, what testimonie haue you to the inward passion and suffering of the soule of our Sauiour Christ in the chamber?

Answere. In the 31. verse of the 13. chap: of Saint Iohn, thus we read, when Iesus had said these things, he was troubled in spirit, and testified: and said; verily verily, I say vnto you, that one of you will betray me.

Explication This Testimonie, as we see, is not onely the testimonie of the Euangelist Iohn: but also from the mouth of our Sauiour himselfe. And in that he bewraieth, and vttereth this trouble of his spirit, the which it was behooffull for his Disciples and the whole Church to know, as he had done before: we may iustlie conceiue, that it was no small or light perturbation, but a verie heauie presing and perplexing trouble, aboue that hee did expresse it vnto them. Some cause of it was the deepe thought of Iudas his intended and plotted treason against him (intended I meane, sixe daies before this time,) and that vpon a very vncomfortable, and most vnworthy occasion, euen for that our Sauiour defended the fact of the woman, that powred the costly ointment vpon him, against the vniust and hypocriticall murmuring of Iudas; according to that which we read Iohn, ch: 12. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8.) The which treason of Iudas, vpon that most vnworthy occasion, so intended & plotted, our Sauiour Christ speaketh of againe, foure daies after. Mat: 26. verses 1. 2. where also the Euangelist Matthew, doth in the verses following, record the same wicked occasion that Iudas tooke, and testifieth further, and that from that time he sought opportunitie to betray our Sauiour: he euen therin, (as the Diuel would haue it) fitting the malitious desire of the chiefe Priests, the Scribes and Elders of the people, who consulted before, how they might take him by subtiltie, and kill him, so as they might best auoid the vproare and tumult of the people, verses 3. 4. 5. &c. 14. 15. 16. and Luke ch: 22. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Thus, I say, the thought of the indignitie of the most wicked intent, and diuelish practise of one of his owne Disciples, with whom he had alwaies dealt louingly and kindly, &c. was some cause of this trouble, to the spirit of our Sauiour Christ. But this was little in comparison of the chiefe cause, which was, that most heauie trouble which he did see by this occasion, and with the occasion, to hast on a pace to the most deepe piercing and wounding of his soule: as we shall see further, according as the time of the practising, or executing of the treason intended and plotted already, approched more neare, and grew as it were to the maturitie and ripenes of it.

Question. What ground, or testimonie haue you, for the declaration of this?

Answere. In the 26. chapter of Matthewe, thus we reade from the beginning of the 36. verse.

36. Then went Iesus with them into a place, which is called Gethsemane, and saide to his Disciples: sit ye here, while I goe and pray yonder.

37. And he tooke Peter, and the two Sonnes of Zebedeus, and began to wax sorowfull and grieuously troubled.

38. Then said Iesus vnto them, My soule is very heauie, euen vnto the death: tarrie ye here and watch with me.

39. So he went a little further, and fell on his face and praied saying, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cuppe passe from me: neuertheles, not as I will, but as thou wilt. And verse 42.

42. He praied the second time, saying. O my Father, if this cuppe cannot passe away from me, but that I must drinke it, thy will be done.

44. And yet againe we read, verse 44. He praied the third time, saying the same wordes.

Explication This third spirituall trouble, and agonie, fell vpon our Sauiour Christ in Gethsemane, as the Euangelist Matthew testifieth: the which place as appeareth before in the 30. verse of the same chapter, and Luke ch: 22. 39. was a part of ground, of, or belonging to the mount of Olives, the which also, was on the other side of the brooke Cedron, distant from Ierusalem some good space, a mile or two. And it was also a garden, or Ortchard, either of Olive trees, or some vineyard: as the Euangelist Iohn, doth more particularly record, and describe the place. Iohn chap: 18. 1. where also it is very likely, there were some dwelling houses, as euery where there is, on euery side of great cities: at the least, for the dressing, and looking to the Gardens there about, as may appeare by that which the Euangelist Marke writeth, ch: 14. 51. 52.

The vnspeakable greatnes of the trouble, and agonie of our Sauiour Christ in this place, at this time, and that for a long time, as may be gathered (the greatnes of the sorrowe, and anguish considered) it may be in some good measure conceiued of vs, if we will duly consider that which the Euangelist saith (guided by the holy Ghost) that our Sauiour Christ began in this place, euen while he was with his Disciples, to waxe sorrowful and grieuously troubled. The Euangelist vsing such wordes, as note an astonishing and amazing, or confounding sorrow and distresse, or a perplexitie of mind, such as no humane succour or solace, can mitigate or asswage.

But it may be more liuely discerned from our Sauiour himselfe, partly by his behauiour, and partly by his speech. By his behauiour, first, in that albeit hee tooke three of his Disciples with him: to wit, Peter and Iames and Iohn, as Marke more expresly nameth them: euen such, as hauing seene his glorie before, at his transfiguration, might haue beene most fit, to be eye witnesses of his humiliation, and abasing: yet his sorrowes increasinge exceedingly, much more then the sorrowes of the woman going to her trauell, and seeing them vnfit to be very neare beholders, or hearers of them: he giueth them their charge, that they pray to God for grace that they should not be led into temptation: and sodainly breaketh from them, as one violently pulled away, the space of a stones cast, as the Euangelist Luke describeth it, chap: 22. 40. 41. that so he might without their vtter discomfiture, the more freely humble himselfe, and most lamentably bemone his distressed estate before his heauenly Father, the bitter cup of whose wrath, bent against that sinne of ours, which our Sauiour Christ had vndertaken to beare the punishment of, and to satisfie for, was euen now put neare as it were to his mouth, to the end he should drinke it vp for vs.

Herevpon therefore, he falleth down vpon his face, groueling to the earth: not satisfying himselfe, to kneele vpon his knees, Marke 14. 35. And afterwards, through the vehemencie of the agonie, and conflict of his soule, his sweat was like drops of blood, trickling downe to the ground. Luke 22. 44. A most strange sweate, both for the matter vnheard of before in any, neuer so grieuously tortured, and also for the quantitie, it being so aboundant, and that from

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate

The ground and history of his agony in the garden.

from so thinne, and spare a body, as wee may conceiue the body of our Sauiour to be: which no doubt was not grosse and corpulent, as the bodies of many full fed and pampered are.

Thus, by the behauiour of our Sauiour Christ in this time of his trouble, and dolour, we may perceiue, that it was exceeding vehement and bitter: and the rather, if we doe consider the most perfect patience and magnanimitie of our Sauiour Christ, whereby he was able, as afterward he did, to passe through all the externall vexations, that man could possibly proucke him with.

The same extremitie, of the most grieuous sorrowe of our Sauiour Christ, may be yet further discerned, from his owne speech: partly by those wordes which he spake to his three choise Disciples, while yet he was with them: My soule is heauie euen vnto death. The which no doubt, if it had beene vpon any of vs sinfull wretches, it would not onely haue taken away all naturall life, out of our bodies, but haue pressed our soules downe for euer vnto the bottome of Hell. But yet more fully, may it bee discerned, by the wordes of his most lamentable prayer. O my Father, if it bee possible let this cuppe passe from mee. Yea, in that he insisteth so vpon the almightie power of God, ioined with his infinite mercy, as it is further expressed by Saint Marke, chap: 14. 36. Abba Father, all things are possible vnto thee: take away this cuppe from me &c. And yet againe: the same may be further argued, both from the increase of the vehemencie of our Sauiours praier, as the Euangelist Luke reporteth, that he being in an agonie, when the Angell came from heauen to strengthen him, he praied the more earnestly to God, who alone was able in that his distresse to support and relieue him. And also it may be argued from the repetition of the same prayer: for the repetition of the same prayer sheweth plainely, that there was a continuance of the same griefe: so that, as was saide, this arrowe of Gods vengeance, bent, yea shot forth against our sinne, and lighting vpon our Sauiour, pierced so deepe, and grappled so fast, that it could not be pulled out easily, but with greater wrastlings, then were the wrastlings of Iacob, with that Angell, with whom, yet at the last, he preuailed. All which things, duly considered, and laied in equall balance: and considering that it is a familiar phrase in the holy Scriptures, to expresse great afflictions and sorrowes, by the name of the sorrowes of hell. What should hinder, why we should not esteeme the sufferings of our Sauiour Christ in his soule, which are aboue all humane estimate, and not possibly to haue beene indured by any meere humane strength: to bee such as may iustly beare the name of hellish sorrowes, as beeing comparable to those torments of Hell, which wee should iustly haue suffered there for euer, if hee had not suffered them for vs, for that time which God sawe it meete, that hee should indure them? And if hee had not by the propitiatorie prayers, and sacrifice of his most holy Priesthood, obtained and purchased deliuerance from the same? For whereas some feare, least when we doe so speake, wee doe impute that to our Sauiour which is impious, and blasphemous, once to be thought or spoken: to wit, that hee should loose all faith, be vtterly reiected of GOD, and that hee must consequently remaine in finall dispaire and torment: this feare, or any such like, it is altogether needelesse, in so much as these things could not possibly fall into Christ, seeing they are partly sinfull, and cannot touch the holines of his humane nature, and partly of weakenesse, implying such a contradiction, as can by no meanes stand with the Deitie of his person. For, that GOD should finally reiect and forsake his sonne, (yea in that he hath assumed and taken mans nature to the diuine, by personall vnion) it is as vnpossible, as that God should deny, or reiect himselfe. Besides it is one thing, to be without the comfort of faith for a while and another to be without faith it selfe. Likewise to be forsaken of GOD, as touching present comfort and to be for euer cast off in the counsell and purpose of God.

These

The ground and history of his betraying.

These latter, are proper to the reprobates; the former may betide the elect children of God: and were in peculiar manner in Christ, and that in such measure and degree, as they cannot befall any other. Moreouer, we may iustly distinguish betwixt the torment of the reprobate, and their wicked and sinfull qualities, the which are in them either causes of their torment: as their infidelitie, and all other their sinnes, and impenitencie, while they liued in this world: or else they are such, as their torments doe augment, by reason of their wicked dispositions; such as are impatience, cursing, and blasphemie. Our Sauiour Christ therefore, might and did indure the curse and torment which is due to our sins, though he was perfitly free from euery action, or thought of sinning. And whereas he indured the punishment of our sinne, but for a short time: This doth not disanull the paine it selfe, in so much as the eternitie of the paine, is but a circumstance, and not the essence or nature of it. Finally, the excellencie of the Person, of him that suffered, euen the Sonne of God, God and man, hath in a short time satisfied for, and swallowed vp, or disanulled the eternitie of the punishment of vs all, as the punishment it selfe, that it cannot rest vpon, no nor attach and arrest the elect of God, whom he hath redeemed and purchased from it. Wherefore, if reason will be more curious, to prie into this mysterie then is meete, and not content it selfe with that, which the holy Scriptures shewe vs, to be the truth of God: Let vs not yeelde to make reason to be a wanton, but let it suffice our faith, that the sufferings of our Sauiour Christ are a mysterie, and farre aboue the reach of humane reason, grounded and built vpon the groundes and principles of GODS most high and diuine wisedome.

And therefore also, whereas the shallowe conceite of mans reason, stumbleth at the prayer of our Sauiour Christ, as if it could not stand with obedience to the will of God, or with that constancie, which ought to haue beene in Christ: we are to beleeue, as the truth is, that it is a most holy prayer, most perfectly beseeming the present estate of our Sauiour Christ, both thereby to expresse the extremitie of his inward distresse and horrour, and therein the infirmitie of his humane nature, vnable of it selfe to indure it, and also to shewe forth the fruite of his inuincible patience and faith, in that hee praieth to his heauenly Father, onely for reliefe and succour, submitting his owne humane will and desire, to the good pleasure of his diuine will: which is a more perfite confirmation of the most perfit obedience of our Sauiour, then if he had yeelded to drinke the bitter potion of Gods wrath, without any such grieuous, and sore temptation to the contrarie. So then, our Sauiour Christ was tempted in the infirmitie of mans nature, like as men are tempted, yea aboue all temptation of men, but yet without sinne, as the holy Apostle truly teacheth, in that he neuer yeelded to any sinne, through any temptation, and therein is vnlike to all mē, & is alone, the onely perfit & vndefiled one. But of the vertues of our Sauiour Christ: shining forth in all perfectiō, in the whole time of his chiefe sufferings, and perturbations, both of soule and body, we shall haue another occasion euen of purpose to inquire more fully hereafter, Hetherto of the sufferings of our Sauiour, in his preparing of himselfe to his sufferings, by the serious thought and meditation of them, specially of those that were to fall vpon him, most neare vnto death. The premeditation and thought of which cuppe, being so sharpe and bitter in the tast and sippe of it; how sharpe and bitter may we suppose the whole draught, euen the drinking of it, dregges and all, to haue beene vnto him?

LEt us now proceed to the second branch of the sufferings of our Sauiour, which concerne the act of Iudas his prodition or betraying of him into the handes of his malicious aduersaries, most sinfull and wicked men.

Question. What testimonie and declaration haue you for this?

Answere, In the 26 chap: of the Euangelist Mat: beginning from the latter part of the 45. verse, thus it is written.

Behold

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate

The grond and history of his betraying.

Behold (saith our Sauiour to his Disciples) the houre is at hand, and the Sonne of man is giuen vnto sinners.

46. Arise let vs goe: behold he is at hand, that betraieth me.

47. And while he yet spake, loe, Iudas one of the twelue came, and with him a great multitude with swordes, and staues, from the high Priests, and Elders of the people.

48. Now he that betraied him, had giuen them a token, saying, whomsoeuer I shall kisse, that is he, lay hold on him.

49. And forthwith, he came to Iesus, and saide, Haile Rabbi, that is according to our phrase of speech: God saue thee Maister, and kissed him.

50. Then Iesus said vnto him: Friend wherefore art thou come?

Explication

We haue seene before, the plot and compact of this treason by Iudas, who therein greatly gratified the wicked Priests, and Rulers of the people, according as it is the manner of the wicked, to reioice greatly in the successe of their wicked deuises to their owne wellaway, and vtter destruction, in the ende. Here wee haue the practise, and execution of it, according to the traiterous fidelitie of wicked Iudas: a most vnthankefull and graceless seruant, against a most gracious, kinde, and beneficiall Lord and Maister. And hee performeth his treason to his newe couenanted Maister the Diuel, and his instruments, very substantially: and against his Maister renounced, most hypocrytically. For he hasted a little, before the company, to salute and kisse his olde maister, according to the signe, which hee had giuen his newe maisters, that they might not in any wise take their markes amisse, in the darke of the night, and so apprehend one in stead of an other. God saue thee (saith he) when (wicked caitiffe as he was) he sought his life. And not content with this, he returning backe to the company, inciteth his maisters, who were too forward, and eager of themselues, that they should lay hold on him, whom they might see to bee of his owne accord comming toward them. Yea as the Euangelist Marke writeth, chap: 14,44. so carefully, that they might not in any wise, let him escape. Take him (saith the traitor) and leade him away safely; that is: very diligently, and circumspectly, as it is in the Syrian translation. And (that there might be no defect in this seruice, he did all, with great diligence, and expedition, as it followeth in the next wordes of the same Euangelist.

But in this part of the narration of the betraying of our Sauiour Christ we may not omit, that which the Euangelist Iohn declareth, concerning our Sauiour Christ in that to the conuincing of the euill conscience, both of Iudas, and also of the rest, in seeking his life, without cause on his part giuen to them, or to any other in all the world: hee causeth them to fall downe backward, at his first meeting of them. And also, he doth by name reproue Iudas, for his wicked treacherie against him, which could not but be grieuous vnto our Sauiour: as we may perceiue, by that report which the Euangelist Luke maketh in this behalfe.

Let vs therefore, here call to minde, the further testimonie of either of these Euangelists. And first of Iohn, as it is written in the 18, chap: from the beginning of the chapter.

Question. What is that which he hath written?

Answer. 1. After that the Euangelist hath described the place where our Sauiour was betraied, as we haue heard before: then it followeth thus.

2. And Iudas who betrayed him, knewe also the place: For Iesus oftentimes resorted thither, with his Disciples.

3. Iudas then, after hee had receiued a bande of men, and officers of the high Priests, and of the Pharisies, came thither with lanternes, and Torches, and weapons.

4. Then Iesus, knowing of all things, that should come vnto him, hee went forth, and saide vnto them, whom seeke yee?

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who ſuffered vnder Pontius Pilate

The ground and hiſtory of his apprehenſion.

5. They anſwered him, Ieſus of Nazareth, Ieſus ſaid vnto them, I am he. Now Iudas alſo, who betraied him, ſtood with them.

6. Aſſoone then, as he had ſaide vnto them, I am hee, they went backward, and fell to the ground.

7. Then he asked them againe, whom ſeeke yee, and they ſaid, Ieſus of Nazareth.

8. Ieſus anſwered, I ſaide vnto you I am he: therefore if yee ſeeke me, let theſe goe their way.

He meaneth his Diſciples. And then it followeth in the next verſe. This (ſaith the Euangeliſt) was, that the word might be fulfilled, which he (that is Chriſt himſelfe ſpake: to wit, in his prayer, as we read in the 12. verſe of the former chapter) of them which thou gaueſt me, haue I loſt none. And it was indeede a great deliuerance, as we ſhall ſee more fully by the ſequell, in that euery one of the eleuen eſcaped the furie of this band, though Peter, by his raſh attempt, had generally indangered, both himſelfe, and all the reſt: and in that they were all reſerued, to ſerue afterward in the office of Apoſtleſhip. To the which very ende indeede our Sauiour did principally worke the former great worke: as it may well be conceiued of vs. Thus much, out of the Euangeliſt Iohn, concerning the diuine power of our Sauiour Chriſt.

Now let vs likewiſe ſee, how the Euangeliſt Luke reporteth the reproofe, which our Sauiour Chriſt gaue Iudas.

Queſtion. What are the words?

Anſwere. In the 22. chap: verſes 47. 48. thus we read.

47. And while he yet ſpake (that is, while our Sauiour ſpake to his Diſciples, exhorting them to prayer) behold, a company, and he that was called Iudas, one of the twelue, went before them, and came neere vnto Ieſus to kiſſe him.

48. And Ieſus ſaide vnto him, Iudas, betrayeſt thou the Sonne of man with a kiſſe?

Explicatiõ. A ſharpe rebuke no doubt, a iuſt reward of his wicked forwardnes: a coroſiue meete to be laid to his hart, if he had had any deſire of recouering his deſperate health. For the height of his moſt heynous ſinne in his treaſon, together with his moſt deepe hypocryſie, and diſſembling, in the manner of his perpetrating, and cõmitting of it, is as quickly laide before him, as he was expedite, and ſpeedie in the bold and ſhameleſſe working of his miſchiefe. So that, hee might eaſily haue perceiued by a ſhort viewe, that he had to deale with him, before whom, all things are naked and bare: and to whom, he muſt at the laſt, giue an account of this his villanous treacherie. At what time, all his newe maiſters the Diuel and his inſtruments, ſhall not be able to beare, neither him, nor themſelues out, in that, which they had ſo boldly and impiouſly taken in hand.

And thus we ſee how vnworthily, our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, the king of kings and Lord of al Lords, by the right of his moſt holy annointing, was in this time of his humiliation betraied. The which, though he did moſt patiently indure, yet the indignitie of it, ſpecially from the hand of Iudas, one of his choiſe Diſciples, as touching the externall choſing, and calling, and to whom he had ſhewed equall kindnes with the reſt: it could not, but be grieuous and troubleſome vnto him, as that, which beſide other things, inboldened all the reſt of his aduerſaries, in their moſt malitious and diſpitefull courſe againſt him.

IT followeth now, that from the betraying of our bleſſed Sauiour, we proceed to his apprehenſion: and therein, to his pinnioning, or binding.

Queſtion. In what words of the Euangeliſt Matthew, is that recorded?

Anſwer. It followeth thus, in the latter part of the 50. verſe of the 26. chapter.

50. Then came they, and laid hands on Ieſus, and tooke him: wherein, the Euangeliſt Iohn is ſomething more full, chap: 18. 12. in theſe words. Then (ſaith he) the band and the Captaine, and the officers of the Iewes, tooke Ieſus and they bound him.

Thus then, according to the manner of their comming forth againſt our Sauiour Chriſt, ſo doe they deale with him, as if he had bin ſome notorious malefactor.

But

Entrie in God the Son who suffered vnder Pontus Pilate

The ground and history of his apprehension.

But before this, as the same Euangelist Iohn testifieth in the 12. verse of the same 18. chap: 22. 49. 50. there arose a newe trouble, very dangerous, and vncomfortable: yea troublesome, and grieuous to our Sauiour Christ concerning the same his apprehension.

Question. What doe the Euangelists write of this?

Answere. The Euangelist Luke reporteth it thus. Now when they which were about him, sawe what would follow, they said vnto him, Lord shall wee smite with the sworde? And one of them smote a seruant of the high Priest, and strake of his right eare.

Explicatiō and proofe The Disciples did well, in that they did aske our Sauiour, whether they shall smite with the sworde. But in that one among the rest, doth forthwith, not tarying to heare the answere of our Sauiour) let driue at the partie mentioned, euen with a downe right blowe, as it might be to cleaue his head, this was very rashly, and very ill done of him. The which fact, in so much as the Euangelist Iohn doth more particularly report, then any other of the Euangelists: let vs heare his words.

Question. Which are they?

Answere. Then (saith he) Simon Peter: hauing a sword, drew it, and smot the high Priests seruāt, & cut off his right eare. And he addeth further, that the seruants name was Malchus.

Explication and proofe. In these wordes, we see indeede, that for the more full clearing of the historie, the Euangelist nameth both the partie that rushed into this vnaduised, and dangerous attempt: and also the partie that was thus sodainely wounded and hurt.

How euill and dangerous, this rash attempt of Peter was, it may easily bee discerned, not onely in respect of Peter himselfe, but also in respect of our Sauiour Christ and all the other tenne. Yea so: as it will be euident, from the due consideration of it, that it was (as we may say a stratagem, which the Diuel for his part, had most subtilly contriued; and that in Peter, it was a fruite of his former drousines, and neglect of prayer, notwithstanding our Sauiour Christ had admonished him, and the rest, to watch and pray, by reason that dangerous temptations were at hand. For if our Sauiour Christ had not in his most excellent wisedome, euen in that he was man, and by his diuine power concurring therewithall, presently espied, and with admirable dexteritie preuented that mischiefe: the Captaine of the Romanes, and the officers of the Iewes, might haue had great colour to haue accused & cōdemned our Sauiour Christ, as a seditious, and rebellious person, in gathering together vnto him, a mutinous and rebellious companie to resist the authoritie of the ciuill Magistrate, vnder whose gouernment they liued: the which was not lawfull for them to doe. And they might likewise haue indited and condemned all his Disciples vpon the same crime. The which deuise of the Diuel, if it had taken such effect: we should not haue beene able so clearly to haue discerned, the innocencie of our Sauiour Christ for the comfort of our faith. And as for the Disciples of our Sauiour, they should haue beene cut off from spreading the light of the Gospell of saluation ouer the world. Yea and it is a wonder that presently the band of souldiers did not fall vpon them, and slay them all, in a rage. This then the danger of Peters attempt was as great, as great might be, and very euill: what faire pretences soeuer the Diuel, might vpon the sudden, suggest vnto him, as that it was in the defence of his most worthy master, and that he had promised him a little before that he would rather dye with him, then forsake him, &c.

Question. But how may we perceiue that it was grieuous and troublesom, to the righteous, and peaceable soule of our Sauiour Christ.

Answere. This is very cleare and euident, by that earnest and sharpe reproue which he giueth Peter, & therwithal, both by the most graue & weightie reasons which he vseth to the same end; and also by his gratious act in the miraculous healing of the eare which was cut off.

It is very true: All these considerations doe make it very cleare that our Sa did vtterly mislike this fact of Peter, and that his whole soule was greatly grieued for it.

Lelusa in God the Son who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and history of his apprehension.

To this end therefore, let vs come to the reproofe which our Sauiour gaue to the reasons which he vsed; and to the cure which he wrought.

Quest. And first, which were the wordes of reproofe?

Ans. Iesus said vnto him. Put vp thy sword into his place. Mat: 26. 52. And according to the Euangelist Iohn, chap: 18, 11. Then said Iesus to Peter, put vp thy sword into the sheath.

Explicatiõ These indeede, are wordes of earnest rebuke. For in that our Sauiour commandeth Peter to put vp his sword, hee condemneth the drawing of it, to be vnlawfull. But this will further appeare, by the reasons which follow.

Question. Which are they?

Answer. In the first place, we may well rehearse that, which the Euangelist Iohn setteth downe, in the verse before alledged, which is this: Shall I not drinke of the cup, which my Father hath giuen me?

Explicatiõ This reason must needs, euen at the first, as it were pierce Peter to the heart, so soone as he heareth, that by his venturous rashnes he went about, though at vnawares, to frustrate, or at the least, to hinder the holy counsell and appointment of God. In these wordes also, let vs obserue to our comfort, the perfect victorie of our Sauiour Christ ouer the most horrible temptation which he incountred withall, a little before, in the garden: whereby he was prouoked to pray, that he might not haue drunke of this cuppe, if so it had beene possible. But let vs hast forward, with as much speede as conueniently we may.

Question. What be the other reasons, which our Sauiour vseth?

Answere. They are those which the Euangelist Mathew recordeth in the 26 chap: of his Gospel: verses 52. 53. 34. And they be three in number.

Question. Rehearse the wordes of the Text: which be they?

Answere. Then saide Iesus vnto him, put vp thy sword into his place: for all that take the sword, shall perish with the sword. Esther thinkest thou, that I cannot pray to my Father, and he wil giue me more then twelue legions of Angels. How then should the Scriptures be fulfilled, which say, that it must be so?

Explication The first of these reasons, is taken from the danger of the attempt, against Peter himselfe: it proceeding of his owne priuate motion, and therein presuming against publike authoritie. In which respect our Sauiour Christ telleth in the hearing of the whole companie, that by the sentence and decree of God himselfe, he had runne himselfe into a capitall crime. For (saith our Sauiour) all that take the sword, shall perish with the sword: to wit, vnles they be called of God, and haue the sword put into their hands by his appointment.

The second reason of our Sauiour to the reproofe of Peter, is for that his enterprise was as vaine and needles, as it was euill and vnlawfull. For (saith he) thinkest thou, that I cannot now pray to my Father, and hee will giue me more then twelue legions of Angells; that is, many thousands, yea many times tenne thousand. For euery legion containes diuers thousands. And therefore Peters attempt was meerely vaine.

The third reason, is the same in effect with that which we haue seene alreadie recorded by the Euangelist Iohn: yet so, as hee doth furthermore amplifie it, from the reuelation of the counsell and will of God in this behalfe, in the holy Scriptures: as our Sauiour himselfe had often tolde his Disciples before. And therefore hee saith, if either Peter, or the Angels, or any other, should haue restored and deliuered him: that he should not be apprehended, &c. How then should the Scriptures be fulfilled which say that it must be so?

These so many and so waightie reasons, doe plentifully declare, in very deed and truth, that the fact of Peter, was exceedingly disliked of him: and that his soule was greatly grieued at it. Yea, & therewithall, so euidently doe they cleare the innocency of our Sauiour Christ: that none of his aduersaries could take exceptiõ against it, but rest satisfied: as it is plaine, in that they make no complaint of it, to colour any inditement against him afterward. And the rather also, were

God the Son, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and history of his apprehension.

were these reasons, a clearing of him in their consciences, because vnto these gratious words and reasons of his earnest reproofe, hee addeth his most gratious working, in healing the wound that was made, and so saluеth the whole matter, as if it had neuer bin. Where is this gratious and miraculous worke of our Sauiour recorded?

Question. Answer. This we reade in the 22. chapter of the Euangelist Luke, verse 51. Iesus (saith the Euangelist) answered, and said, Suffer them, (that is, my Disciples) thus farre: to wit, though they haue dealt disorderly: and then he touched the eare of the man and healed him.

Explicatiõ Here indeed is a very gratious and miraculous worke of our Sauiour Christ, not onely in healing the eare, but also in that by his authority, he limiteth and boundeth the rage and furie of the whole company: so as they are content, to be prescribed and ordered by him, in this difficult and prouoking fact of Peter, together with the buskling of the rest of his Disciples.

The which authority of our Sauiour Christ, doth furthermore appeare, in that which followeth by his reproofe which he giueth, not onely to the whole multitude, as the Euangelist Matthew reporteth, but by speciall direction to to the high Priests themselues, and to the Captaines of the Temple; and to the Elders of the people, for their causelesse and vniust manner of pursuing of him.

Question. What are the words of this reproofe?

Answer. In the 57. of the forenamed 22. chapter of St. Luke, thus we reade: Then Iesus said vnto the high Priests and Captaines of the Temple, and the Elders which were come to him. Be ye come out as vnto a thiefe, with swords and staues? When I was daily with you in the Temple, ye stretched not forth the hands against me: but this is your very houre, and the power of darknes.

And in the 26. of Matth. verses 55, 56. thus we reade. The same houre, said Iesus to the multitude, Ye be come out as it were against a thiefe, with swords and staues, to take me. I sate daily teaching in the Temple among you, and ye tooke me not.

But all this was done (as saith the holy Euangelist) yea our Sauiour Christ himselfe (as St. Marke seemeth to report) that the Scriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled.

Explicatiõ That is to say: all was ouer-ruled by the supreame, most holy, and diuine prouidence of God. And as euery one of vs may see, our Sauiour himselfe vttered this his reproofe against the high Priests, Captaines, and whole band of men, with more then humane authority, to the conuincing of them of their vniust course, in their proceeding against him: and giueth them plainely to vnderstand, if they had had any grace to vnderstand, that they were set a worke by the Diuell, and that if God had not thus farre giuen leaue vnto the Diuell, they could not haue thus preuailed against him.

The issue therefore of this branch of the sufferings of our Sauiour Christ is this, that he willingly, of himselfe, and by no compulsion on their parts, yeelded himselfe to be apprehended, and bound of them, according to the good will and pleasure of God, and according as he had foretold in the holy Scriptures: not only as Isaak was bound, when Abraham his father intended at the commandement of God, to offer him vp in sacrifice to God, but euen as the figuratiue Sacrifices of the Law, which were bound first, and then slaine and offered indeede. As Abraham also afterwards, bound the Ramme and offered him instead of Isaak. The truth of all which sacrifices was euen then shortly fulfilled in, and by our blessed Sauiour thus taken and bound by them.

Whereupon also, as the Euangelist Matthew immediately obserueth: All the Disciples forsooke our Sauiour Christ, and fled. And so was fulfilled, that which our Sauiour had fore-tolde them, verse 31. And Iohn, chap. 16. verse 32. Behold, the houre commeth, and is alreadie come, that ye shall be scattered, euery man into his owne, and shall leaue me alone. But (as our Sauiour Christ saith, for the comforting of himselfe, and to testifie that comfort which hee had aboue all causes of discomfort) I am not alone,

Beliefe in God the Son, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and history of his examination and inditement before Caiaphas.

for the Father is with me. And thus was it not onely necessary, but also behoofull, that our Sauiour Christ should be left alone, to the working and perfiting of this worke of our redemption, and eternall saluation.

Hetherto of the apprehension and bonds of our Sauiour Christ, and of the troubles and afflictions, belonging to them.

THe sufferings belonging to his examination, and therein to his arraignment and inditement, are next. And that at sundry times, he being carried from place to place: not so much bound in bodie, as in some respects spiritually streighted and distressed, as being all the while, vnder the heauie iudgement of God, for our sinnes: though he did with inuincible patience beare it out. But first of all, he was led bound to Annas: for so the Euangelist Iohn testifieth, chap. 18. 13, 14. They led him away (after they had taken and bound him, as it is in the former verse) vnto Annas first, (for saith the Euangelist) he was father in law to Caiaphas, who was the high Priest that same yeare. And this Caiaphas, (as the Euangelist recordeth further) was he that gaue counsell to the Iewes, that it was expedient, that one man should die for the people. And therefore, was no doubt, ready enough to serue the turne of the rest, or rather to goe before them, in furthering the death of Christ.

But the Euangelist reporteth nothing of Annas his dealing with our Sauiour Christ, though it was like inough, he spake his pleasure to him. Only he saith, that Annas sent him bound to Caiaphas the high Priest, verse 24. that by the cõtinuance of his bonds & pinioning, it is euident, that Annas shewed him no fauour. And no maruel, for as they were more nearly allied: so they were of like wicked mind. Let vs therefore proceed, to see the dealing of Caiaphas.

Question. What doth the Euangelist Iohn set downe concerning this?

Answer. It followeth from the beginning of the 19. verse, thus;

19 The high Priest then (that is Caiaphas) asked Iesus of his disciples, & of his doctrine.
20 Iesus answered him, I spake openly to the world: I euer taught in the Synagogue, and in the Temple, whither the Iewes resort continually, and in secret haue I said nothing.
21 Why askest thou me? aske them which heard me, what I said vnto them: behold, they know what I said.
22 When he had spoken these things, (as the Euangelist further reporteth) one of the officers which stood by, smote Iesus with his rod, saying, Answerest thou the high Priest so?
23 Iesus answered him, If I haue euill spoken, beare witnes of the euill: But if I haue spoken well, why smitest thou me?
24 Now Annas (as the Euangelist writeth further) had sent our Sauiour bound vnto Caiaphas the high Priest.

Explicatiõ This indeede, doth the Euangelist adde by recapitulation, as it were, or by an Epanalepsis, to shew at the last, something more plainely, after a long parenthesis, that the examination of our Sauiour Christ, repeated immediately before, was made by Caiaphas: though it was not so expressly mentioned. Neuertheles, in some bookes these words; (And he sent him bound to Caiaphas the high Priest:) they are set downe for text, in the latter part of the 13. verse, namely, in the translation of Beza, who also sheweth, that Cirill, a Greeke interpretor of speciall good credit, doth so reade that 13. verse, and vseth sundry reasons, why he is of this iudgement, that they should be read there, for the words of the Euangelist himselfe.

But leauing the order or placing of the words, let vs come to the matter.

So soone as Caiaphas had gathered together a solemne Councill, and that our Sauiour Christ is brought as a malefactor bound before him: he examineth him very strictly, and imperiously of these two points, to wit, concerning his Disciples, and of his doctrine: with a minde no doubt to charge him with two notorious crimes, sedition and false doctrine. That is to say, with a minde to charge the Prince of peace with rebellion, and the Prince of all Prophets, yea euen the truth it selfe, with false & lying doctrine: as if he were a deceiuer, and a false Prophet. For so doth Caiaphas, and also the rest of the wicked Councill, discouer the wicked malice of their hearts, as we shall see more fully hereafter.

Our

Feleſe in God the Son, who ſuffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and hiſtory of his examination & inditement before Caiaphas.

Our Sauiour Chriſt therefore knowing their malice, and that the high Prieſt ſought not to be informed of the truth; but to get further pretences, to colour their vniuſt, and on their parts, cauſles proceedings, againſt him. Inſomuch alſo, as it was too generall an inquirie, vnles he had particularly articled againſt him. He doth moſt wiſely (all things conſidered) referre the high Prieſt to his hearers, of whom he might know what his doctrine was: our Sauiour himſelfe, knowing that his doctrine was not preached without good effect vnto them. Proteſting therewithall, for the remouing of all vniuſt ſuſpition of treaſon or ſedition, that he neuer taught any thing in ſecret to his Diſciples, as touching the ſubſtance and ſcope of his doctrine, the which he did not teach publikely, in the Synagogues, and euen in the Temple of Ieruſalem: where they themſelues were, or might haue beene ordinary and daily hearers. This was the moſt wiſe anſwer of our Sauiour, to the examination of the high Prieſt: the which might iuſtly haue ſatisfied him and all the Councill in the generall, or in genere as we may ſay, to his generall and large inquiſition.

But that it might be euident, that there was no regard of iuſtice, nor any iuſt forme of dealing intended among them: the Euangeliſt recordeth, that immediately vpon this anſwer, ſo wiſely and diſcreetly deliuered, a baſe fellow ſtanding by, one of the Bailies, or Sergeants, or Apparitors, or howſoeuer we may call him, diſdainfully ſmote our Sauiour Chriſt with his rod, and that with no gentle blow, as we may well conceiue: ſaying alſo tauntingly to him, Anſwereſt thou the high Prieſt ſo? Of whom we may iuſtly ſay (wicked ſycophant that he was) that he had deſerued by this diſordered fact of his, to haue been commanded to the Gaole. Yea, conſidering the perſon, whom he ſtrooke, to haue loſt his hand by the iudgement of a righteous Iudge here vpon earth. Yea, to be condemned for euer to hell, from the iudgement ſeate of God. But the high Prieſt, with all this vnequall aſſembly, like well enough of it. There is no reproofe giuen, but they are content rather to laugh in their ſleeues. Our Sauiour Chriſt therefore, patiently bearing the indignity offered, with the ſmart of the blow, he doth yet ſo ioyne the wiſedome of the Serpent, with the ſimplicity of the Doue, that in the ſilence of all other, hee doth reproue it himſelfe: though in a moſt milde and patient manner, ſaying. If I haue ſpoken euilly, that is, otherwiſe then I ought, then beare witnes of the euill: he giueth to vnderſtand, that it is a very vnequall courſe, to doe execution before iudgement be giuen: and then it followeth, But if I haue ſpoken well: that is, no otherwiſe then might well beſeeme me: why ſmiteſt thou me? For herein, his ſinne was doubled, firſt that he did ſmite him having no authority at all: ſecondly, in that he ſmote him hauing no cauſe at all. Thus much concerning the firſt Act of this Seſſion, againſt our Sauiour Chriſt.

Queſtion. LEt vs come to the ſecond Act: How is that recorded vnto vs?

Anſwer. In the 26. chapter of the Euangeliſt Matthew, we reade it deſcribed from the 59 verſe to the 69 in theſe words.

59 Now the chiefe Prieſts and the Elders, and all the whole Councill, ſought falſe witnes againſt Ieſus, to put him to death.

60 But they found none: and though many falſe witneſſes came, yet they found none: but at the laſt came two falſe witneſſes.

61 And ſaid, This man ſaid, I can deſtroy the Temple of God, & build it in three daies.

62 Then the chiefe Prieſt aroſe and ſaid to him, Anſwereſt thou nothing? What is the matter that theſe men witnes againſt thee?

63 But Ieſus held his peace. Then the chiefe Prieſt anſwered and ſaid to him I charge thee by the liuing God, that thou tell vs, if thou be the Chriſt, the Sonne of God.

64 Ieſus ſaid vnto him, Thou haſt ſaid it. Neuertheles, I ſay vnto you, hereafter ſhall you ſee the ſonne of man ſitting at the right hand of the power of God, and come in the clowdes of heauen.

65 Then the high Prieſt rent his clothes, ſaying, he hath blaſphemed: what haue wee any more neede of witneſſes? behold, now ye haue heard his blaſphemie.

66 What thinke ye? They anſwered and ſaid, He is worthy to die.

67 Then spate they in his face, & buffetted him: & other smote him with their rods.
68 Saying, Prophesie to vs, O Christ, who is he that smote thee?

Expli. In these words, the which, as was said, do conteine as it were the second Act of the hastie proceeding of the early Session of this most wicked Councill: it consisting of such as the Prophet Isaiah describeth, ch. 59. 7. Whose feete runne to euill, who make haste to shed innocent blood. Yea and that with an extreame thirst like vnto the thirst of them, whom the same Prophet reproueth, chap. 5. 11. for their early rising to follow drunkennes, &c.

We haue, I say, in these words, containing the second Act; first of all, to marke the most vnconscionable practise of the whole Councill, in seeking by all meanes, to oppresse our Sauiour Christ by false witnesses. To the which end, liberty was granted to euery one to say what they could: yea they were no doubt earnestly incited and suborned vnto it. Neither wanted there readines in many that were present, as the holy history doth make it plaine. For many false witnesses stood vp to depose against our Sauiour. But as the Euangelist Matthew testifieth: though many came, yet they could finde none. That is to say, they could finde none, of any validity; no not in their owne corrupt iudgements, to beare the ground of any inditement against our Sauiour. The reason whereof, the Euangelist Marke expresseth: which was this, that their Testimonies were like vnto vntempered morter, not fit to botch vp the most base building, which now the rude builders had in hand. Their witnesses (saith the Euangelist) agreed not together, chap. 14. verse 56. They were like greasie peeces of wood, which no glew could hold together: or like drosse mettall, that would take no sodder. That which one said, could not stand with the deposition of another. So great was that babilonish confusion that was iustly vpon them. And it may well be to our singular comfort, in that we may the more clearely behold the most perfect wisedome and righteousnes of our Sauiour Christ, which by the brightnes of it, so dazled and confounded them.

And that wee may conceiue the greatnes of their confusion, so much the better, in the testimonies of those that were so friuolous, that the Euangelist would not once mention them: let vs consider a little of that one, which both Matthew and Marke doe expresse, as being the most colourable and weighty among the rest. And we shall finde, that besides the grosse falshood of it, there was exceeding disagreement in the deponents. For as the Euangelist Matthew reporteth, and giueth his euidence, that our Sauiour should say: I can destroy the Temple of God, and build it in three daies. The other, as we reade in the Euangelist Marke, accused our Sauiour, that he should say, I will destroy this Temple made with hands, and within three daies I will build another made without hands. Thus the disagreement of the allegations of these their most substantiall witnesses, was very great. The falshood was as palpable; in so much as their witnesse was not onely more differing from the words, which our Sauiour spake, then their owne were each from other: but also, most of all, contrary to the intent and meaning of our Sauiour. But how shall we know this? The Euangelist Iohn is a most faithfull witnes thereof. For he doth of purpose set downe, both what were the very words, and also, what was the true meaning of our Sauiour Christ, vttered three yeares before this false calumniation was framed. The words, as St. Iohn writeth, ch. 2. 9. were these, Destroy ye this Temple (said our Sauiour to the wicked gouernors of the Iewes, whose deadly malice he saw from the beginning) and in three daies I will raise it vp againe. He neither said, I will, nor I can destroy: but, Doe ye destroy: shewing that he knew what was already in their wicked hearts. Neither did hee speake of any making with hands, or without hands, but of raising vp. Neither did he name the Temple of God: that is, the Temple of Ierusalem: but this Temple, pointing as it were to his owne bodie, and spake onely of the resurrection thereof, after they should crucifie and slay him, as the Euangelist Iohn doth in the same chapter furthermore open and expound the same.

And

Beleefe in God the Sonne, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and history of his condemnation by Caiphas

And thus, the insufficiencie, yea the meere vanitie, and fals-hood of this Testimonie, is most plaine.

And therefore the vnreasonable impietie of the high Priest is manifest, in that he doth so earnestlie vrge our Sauiour Christ to answer so light and vniust a slander. Answerest thou nothing (saith he?) what is the matter that these men witnes against thee? As though there were so great honestie in the men, that they would not haue accused our Sauiour Christ, vnlesse hee had bene worthie of blame. The high Priest might with as great reason, haue bene both accuser and iudge: as he beganne at the first, if he had had anie iust cause, as nowe (hee most absurdlie pretendeth occasion) to vrge a false Testimonie against an innocent and guiltles man.

What doth our Sauiour answere to this? verilie nothing at all: Neither to the false witnesses: Nor yet to the high priest, though hee prouoketh him therevnto. But he continueth in holie silence, not a little grieued no doubt, in his righteous soule, to see such an vniust and vnconscionable course of their proceeding against him. And this is the second thing, that wee haue to obserue in the second Act of their proceeding.

Thirdlie, the high priest, and the whole Councill, beeing as we say, at a non plus, for all that help and furtherance, that their witnesses could helpe forward their bad enterprize: he falleth from witnesses to a vehement adiuring of him, in the name of the liuing God, as it were vpon an oath, to the ende hee might drawe out some thing from his owne mouth, which they might take aduantage of, that they might pretend some cause of death. For that was already determined by them, and it was the verie cause of their comming togither, as the Euangelist Matthew noteth in the beginning. I charge thee by the liuing God (saith the high priest) yea, euen as it were vpon the religious regard of an oath, & as thou wilt answere before God (for such is the force of the word Exorcizo, which hee vseth) that thou tell vs if thou be the Christ, the Sonne of God: whom for the further colouring of his pretended zeale, he calleth the blessed God. Mark. 14. 61.

Vnto the which vehement adiuration of the high priest, we are fourthlie to obserue, that albeit our Sauiour Christ, knowing his wicked drifte, continued his silence for a time: & as the Euangelist Luke recordeth, rendered these reasons of his silence, (If I tell you, ye will not beleeue it: And it also, I aske you, ye will not answere me, nor let me goe,) yet seeing it was a materiall point, for the Church to be perswaded of our Sauiour Christ, (knowing as well when to answere, as when to be silent) he answereth directlie, though he knewe that it should cost him his life, Thou hast said it, saith our Sauiour, that is, it is as thou hast said it, I cannot, neither may I denie it. And that this was the meaning of our Sauiour Christ, the Euangelist Mark maketh it plaine, chapt: 14. 62. For he addeth that our Sauiour Christ said further, I am hee. Yea, and notwithstanding he saw himselfe most extreamly despised and abhorred of the high priest, & the whole Councill: Neuertheles (saith our Sauiour) I say vnto you, hereafter shall ye see the Sonne of Man, (that is to say, the Sonne of God, euen my selfe, in that I am the Sonne of man, euen in my humane nature) aduanced to sit at the right hand of the power of God, and come in the clowdes of heauen.

In the which words, our Sauiour doth notablie, euen vpon the danger of his life, testifie and confirme all the Articles of our Christian faith, concerning his whole Exaltation, and diuine glorie, in his humane nature, in regarde of the humiliation, wherof they so vilelie accounted of him.

Herevpon, in the fifte place we haue to obserue the counterfet, or blinde & malitious zeale of the high priest, ioined with most currant & exquisite malice, in his extream detestation of the most holy & reuerend answer of our Sauiour. And so the venemous spider sucketh poyson out of that sweete flower, from whence euerie true Christian gathereth plentifull store of honie, to the replenishing of the hiue of his faith, &c.

He blasphemeth (saith the blasphemous & lying high priest) & rent his clothes, as an effect of his malitious detestation of that, which hee ought most thankfullie, Beliefe in God the Sõne, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The groũd and history of his condemnation by Caiphas fullie, and dutifullie, to haue imbraced: and at the hearing wherof, hee ought to haue fallen downe moſt humbly before our Sauiour Chriſt: & to haue craued mercie of him, whom he moſt ſinfullie blaſphemeth. But in ſteed of this, he goeth on inſulting vpon our Sauiour ſaying. What haue wee any more neede of witneſſes: Beholde now yee haue heard his blaſphemie. What thinke ye? Thus as wee are to obſerue in the firſt place, hee who ought to haue bene the chiefe in giuing glorie to the Sonne of God, is the principall blaſphemer of him: and as the bellows of the Diuel, to inflame the rage, and blaſphemie of the whole Councill againſt him.

Nowe therefore in the ſixte place, we haue in a ſhort viewe, th'acclamation of the whole Councill. They are all birds of a Fether. With one conſent they giue their voices, that he is worthie to die. A moſt ſtrange ſpectacle, or moſt helliſh conſent, euen a work, fit indeed, to be wrought in the bower of the power of darknes, as our Sauiour himſelfe ſpake of it.

And finallie, that nothing might be wanting in this wicked Seſſion, to make vp the full meaſure of all the iniquitie that might poſſiblie be practiſed in it, againſt our bleſſed Sauiour, the Lord of life and glorie, moſt worthie of all, and aboue all to be reuerenced and honoured: both in regarde of the excellencie of his Perſon, and alſo of the holineſſe of his office, & of the righteouſnes of his life: wee are to conſider, and in conſidering, iuſtlie to tremble, in thinking of the moſt Barbarous and Diuelliſh practiſes of thoſe that were the keepers or garde of the poore bound Priſoner, as alſo of the Sergeants and many other of the companie, to the moſt vile diſgrace, and moleſtation of our moſt bleſſed Sauiour, that poſſiblie might be: both by worde and deede, aboue all reproch and diſgrace that euer was done to any priſoner, yea, to the moſt wicked malefactor, that euer was, in any examination before any commiſsion, or Councill, from the beginning of the world.

Their moleſting of our Sauiour Chriſt, by their moſt vile and reprochfull actions and deedes, was practized fower waies; firſt they ſpit in his moſt pure and holie face: and that we may iuſtlie thinke, with no ſmall quantitie of ſpawlings among them, as we would not vſe a dogge. The which alſo, muſt needs be the more greeuous & vncomfortable to our Sauiour, becauſe being bound, he could not wipe it of againe: but muſt ſtand and goe ſtill thus dreuelled, and defaced, for anie help that he could yeeld to himſelfe.

Secondlie, they blind-folded him, as we read Mark: 14. 65. and Luke. 22. 64. as though he that is the onely true and glorious light of the world, had ben vnworthie to ſee the light. And that they might make way for that ſporte, and paſtime, which they intended to make themſelues, hereby.

For their third practiſe was, that they did beat him thus blind-folded, vpon the face, with their fiſts: as wee read in the places of Marke, and Luke, before alledged. And as Mark addeth further, for a fourth practiſe: becauſe the ſergeants could not come at him, to ſtrike him with their fiſts, they reache ouer the heads of the reſt, and ſtrike him with their roddes. And thus was fulfilled, that of the Prophet Iſaiah: chapt: 50. 6. that our Sauiour Chriſt gaue his backe to the ſmiters, and his cheekes to the nippers: and that hee did not hide his face from ſhame and ſpitting. Theſe were their moſt wicked, and vile diſgraces, done to our Sauiour Chriſt, by actuall practiſes.

Their ſpeeches were euerie way ſuteable to their deedes. For they hauing blind-folded our Sauiour, they mocked him, as the Philiſtims mocked Samſon. Yea, they moſt ſcornfullie derided his holie and heauenly Propheſie, ſporting themſelues thereat, ſaying: Prophecie to vs ô Coriſt, who is hee that ſmote thee?

Thus, they feared not to play blinde hobbe, as it were, with the Lorde of eternall life and glorie.

And not contenting themſelues with this: they ſpake manie other thinges blaſphemouſlie againſt him: as the Euangeliſt Luke teſtifieth: ch: 22. verſe. 65. Behold therfore, a ſpectacle, for the time, no leſſe horrible then lamentable.

The

Beleefe in God the Sone, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground & historie of his leading before Pilate.

The Sonne of God standeth bound, as a malefactor, before most sinnefull and wicked men: a a Soueraigne Prince, accused of Treason, by rebellious subiectes: he that is the glorious Truth, accounted a blasphemer: he that is innocent, is smitten: the Light of the world, is blindfolded: the Lord of Glorie, is most vilely disgraced, they most shamefully spit vpon his face, who were vnworthie to kisse his feete: he that was, and is, and shall be for euer, most reuerend, is derided, & scorned. Finally, he that had the right of all iust iudgement, and the power of life and death, he is condemned as vnworthie to liue, &c.

Now moreouer and besides all these griefes, and forcible causes thereof, falling out in this second Act (for we may not but think, that our Sauiour Christ, not onlie beholding, but euen feeling this extreame wickednes, and sustaining so great reproch at the hands of his owne people: yea and that also, vnder the managing of the high priest of God, who by dutie, ought to haue shewed himselfe a dutifull type and figure of Christ, in all holines and righteousnes, and to haue laied downe his miter, and all his glorious robes, before him) we may not think, I say, but he was exceedinglie grieued at so extreame an impietie, in his most holie and righteous soule, farre aboue that Lot was vexed, in beholding the vncleanlie conuersation of the Sodomites. But yet, moreouer and beside all this, as wee beganne to say: the fall of his owne deare Disciple Peter, yea his great downfall, whereinto he threwe himselfe, in the time of this our most blessed Sauiour his dolefull and confused examination, and sifting: it was not the least part of his sorrowe, as it appeareth by his turning backe, and mindefull and admonitorie looking vpon Peter, while he himselfe was in the middest of his trouble: as we read Luke 22. 61. And in verie deed, the historie of Peters fall, was verie lamentable, as the holie Euangelistes doe describe the same, as it followeth in our Text, Matth: 26. from the 69. verse to the end of the chap: And Marke 14. from the 66. verse to the ende of that chapter. And Luke 22. from the 54. verse to the 63. And Iohn chapt: 18. verses 15. 16. 17. 18. 25. 26. 27. But it is not our purpose to stay vpon the particulars of this parte of the Storie, but onely to touch this point of the increase of the sorrow of our Sauiour Christ, by occasion of the same: because wee hast to the rest of the sufferings of our Sauiour, the which are th'argument of our inquirie at this time.

Thus much therfore, shall suffice, concerning the explication of the second Acte of this wicked Session of the Councill of the Iewes, against our Sauiour Christ, with the appurtenances thereof.

THe third Acte is yet remaining, as it followeth in the beginning of the 27. chapter of Matthewe, vnlesse wee shall call it a newe Session, according as the Euangelistes Marke and Luke, seeme more plainely to distinguish the same, from the former, as if there had beene some intermission, for a while, after they had wearied themselues, in labouring a good parte of the night, all that they could, to tyre and weary our Sauiour Christ.

To the which ende, let vs heare, and compare the words of the holy Euangelistes together.

Question. And first, howe writeth the Euangelist Matthew?

Answer. His wordes are these. When the morning was come, all the chiefe priests and Elders of the people, tooke Councill against IESVS, to put him to death.

And ledde him away bound, and deliuered him vnto Pontius Pilate the Gouernour.

These are the wordes of the Euangelist Matthewe: Let it not be tedious to you, to rehearse likewise, the wordes of the Euangelists Marke, and Luke.

Question. Which are they?

Answere. Thus writeth th' Euangelist Saint Marke, in the first verse of his 15. chapter.

And anone in the dawning of the day, the high priestes held a Councill with the Elders, and the Scribes, and the whole Councill, and bound IESVS, and led him away, and deliuered him to Pilate.

And

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate. Expucatio.

The grond or historie of his examination or arraignment before Pilate

And the words of the Euangelist Luke, are these, chapt: 22. verse 66. And assoone as it was day, the Elders of the people, and the high Priests, and the Scribes, came together, and led him into their Councill, &c. And ch: 23. the first verse. Then (saith the Euangelist) the whole multitude of them arose, and led him vnto Pilate.

Thus then, by the comparing of the Euangelists together, it may seeme that the high Priest, and the rest of the Councill, made a new Session, and consultation, after some intermission. And it may be after that they had cheared themselues to their mischiefe, by eating some spiced cakes of wickednes, and by taking a morning draught of the wine of violence: according to that which we reade in the fourth chapter of the Prouerbs, while their rude companie abused our Sauiour Christ.

And therewithall it may appeare also, by that which the Euangelist Luke seteth downe, verses 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. that they renewed the former adiuration of the high priest, in the examination of our Sauiour Christ, whether hee would stand to his former asseueration, that he is the Christ, the Sonne of God: to the end they might make their euidēce the more strōg in their accusing, & inditing of him, before Pilate, vpon some capitall crime. For as it is furthermore euident by the Text: this was the drifte of this last consultation, added to the former. And so the effect it selfe doth plainlie euicte. For insomuch as they themselues, had no power to giue capitall iudgement, in matters of life and death: therfore, after they haue made sure in binding our Sauiour more strenglie, then before: they arise with one consent, and being inuironned with the whole multitude, they led him away, and deliuered him to Pilate, then chiefe Gouernour, and Lord President among them, vnder the Romane Empire, Tiberius beeing then Emperour.

AND thus, wee are come from the sufferings of our Sauiour Christ, belonging to his examination before the high priest, and the Gouernours of the Iewes: and therwithall, of his condemnation, so farre as they might condemne him: vnto those that belong to his examination before Pontius Pilate. Whervpon, foloweth his indirement, and condemnation before him: but not vntill he was sent also to Herod, to be examined of him, &c. Wherfore, let vs nowe proceed to inquire of the ground, and interpretation, of these partes of the holie Storie.

Question. And first, howe doe the Euangelists describe vnto vs, the examination of our Sauiour Christ, before Pilate.

Answere. It followeth thus, in the Euangelist, Matthewe, chapt: 27. verses 11. 12. 13. 14. in these woraes.

11 And IESVS stood before the Gouernour, And the Gouernour asked him, saying, Art thou the king of the Iewes?

12 IESVS said vnto him, thou saiest it.

And when he was accused of the chiefe Priestes and Elders, hee answered nothing.

13 Then said Pilate vnto him. Hearest thou not, how many things they lay against thee?

14 But hee answered him not one worde, insomuch that the Gouernour marueiled greatlie.

Explicatio. Thus indeed, it followeth in the Euangelist Matthew, concerning the proceeding and course of the sufferings of our Lord Iesus Christ: Neuertheles, we may not altogither neglect that which he inserteth betwixt the condemnation, which passed vpon our Sauiour Christ, by the iudgement of the Councill of the Iewes, so farre as they might proceede against him (that is, to conclude, and set downe an Acte in register, as it were, that they iudged him worthie to dye, to wit, as a blasphemer) and betwixt the first examination before Pilate: that Iudas who had betrayed our Sauiour Christ, seeing him to be condemned; repented himselfe: that is to say, beeing now conuicted in his conscience, that his fact was damnable, because he had betrayed innocent blood: is swallowed vp with a despairing sorrow, and therfore bringeth againe the money, that he had receiued of the chiefe priestes and elders, for the rewarde of his iniquitie, and confesseth confesseth his sinne, not with godlie sorrowe, but in a seruile terrour, and confusion of his soule, a iust reward for so horrible a Traytour: and most desperately and wofully hangeth himselfe, Matth: 27. 3. 4. 5. For casting himselfe downe head-long, with great violence from that gibbet, as it were, which he had chosen to dispatche himselfe withall, he burst in sunder in the middest, so that his bowells gushed out: as wee read, Acts, 1. 18. But of the particulars of this heauie iudgement of God, and all things to be considered therein: as also how the Scriptures were fulfilled in this wrath, which fell vpon Iudas, and in those thinges which followed vpon the restoring of the money, in that the chiefe priestes &c: bought a potters field therewith, as it followeth, Matth: 27. verses, 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. wee will not stay nowe: because the sufferinges of our Sauiour Christ requireth all the time that wee may well spare, at this present, for the more thorough opening of them. But in the meane while, the Testimonie of a chiefe aduersarie, to the clearing of our Sauiour Christ, and that with the condemning of himselfe, as hauing no cause at all, wherfore he should be moued to deale treacherously against him, as if he had bene worthy to haue bene deliuered as an offender to the sworde of the magistrat: and the same testimonie also, confirmed by most heauie punishment, and vengeance of God, vpon the Traitour: it may iustlie be of no small weight with vs, to confirme th'innocencie of our Sauiour Christ, euen from heauen it selfe. The which iudgement against the traitour, was likewise an euident declaration of the singular loue, which God the Father did beare to our Lord Iesus Christ, his Sonne, euen in that hee was the Sonne of man: although, he setting himselfe in the stead of vs sinners, did beare the hatred and curse of our sinnes. For it was vnpossible, that the Father should not most perfitlie, and most constantlie, loue his Sonne: yea euen in respect of his humane nature, in that he was therin perfectlie holie and righteous, and in all things obedient to the Father, and chiefflie, because of the most neare vnion therof, vnto the diuine nature. It was vnpossible also, that God, though in his diuine iustice permitting, yea ordayning and appointing, that all these things should be thus disposed, to these most holie endes, which hee of his infinit wisedome and mercie intended: should not therwithall, most perfectly hate and abhorre, all the malitious enemies & persecutors of our Sauiour Christ, and all their wicked and vniust proceedings against him: Whereof, this one iudgement against Iudas, was a shewe-token, portending like heauie iudgement against them all, in due time, whosoeuer should not by another manner of repentance, then was the repentance of Iudas, preuent the same.

The ground and history of his first examination or arraignment before Pilate

These things therefore, thus obserued, in way of an interim: let vs nowe returne to goe forward, to inquire of the rest of the Sufferinges of our most blessed Sauiour.

Wherin, because the Euangelists Mathewe, and Marke, are very briefe, as touching those that belong to his examination before Pilate; and also doe altogether omit his examination and sufferings before Herod: we wil repaire to th'other Euangelistes Luke and Iohn, for our further supplie in this behalfe: and that, euen to th'end wee may so neare as we can, consider of all things in such order, as they fell out against our Sauiour.

Question. Howe may wee orderlie proceede?

Answer. In this parte of the Storie, th'Euangelist Iohn is first: as wee read chapt: 18. verses, 28. 29. 30. 31. 32.

Question. Rehearse the wordes of the Euangelist. Which are they?

Answere. 28 His wordes are these. Then ledde they Iesus from Caiaphas into the Common hall. Now it was morning, & they themselues went not into the Common hall, lest they should be defiled, but that they might eate the Passeouer.

29 Pilate then went out vnto them, & said, what accusation bring ye against this man?

30 They answered, and said vnto him, if hee were not an euill doer, wee would not haue deliuered him vnto thee.

31. Then saide Pilate vnto them. Take yee him, and iudge him according to your owne lawe, Then the Iewes said vnto him, It is not lawefull for vs to put anie man to death.

32 It was (saith the Euangelist) that the worde of Iesus might be fulfilled which hee spake signifying what death he should die.

Explicatiõ.

In these wordes the Euangelist S. Iohn repeateth, that the chiefe priestes, and the Elders hauing condemned our Saviour Christ, in their owne Councill, and proceeded so farre as they could, by their owne ecclesiasticall iurisdiction: they do thenceforth deliuer him ouer to Pilate, as it were to the secular power. But they themselues hauing very ranke malitious, and murthering hearts: they will not forsooth, go into the common hall, the place of ciuill iustice, lest they (being verie deuoutlie minded, to eat the Passeouer, in th'euening of this day: by the religion, or rather licentious tradition of their owne custome: the which by the law of God, they should haue eaten th'euen before, as our Sauiour Christ, obeying the law, had done with his Disciples) should be defiled. Pilate therfore, as the Euangelist writeth, veeldeth so farre, as to goe forth vnto them. And carrying our Saviour Christ with him, he requireth (as good reason led him to do) what they had to say against him, before he should giue any sentence. Wherevnto (as the Euangelist sheweth) the Iewes answere in generall termes, that it our Sauiour had not bene an euill doer: or in more plaine speache, in th'vse of our language, a malefactor, they would not haue deliuered him vnto Pilate: presuming belike, that Pilate should by and by haue approued of their proceeding, and of the decree of their Councill, without any further question.

But Pilate, as one discontented (and loath also, to meddle in the cause) would haue returned him back againe to themselues, and to their owne iudgement, so farre forth as it was lawfull for them to proceed: and therein to rest. Wherevnto they replie so (as the Texte sheweth,) that they professe plainelie, that as they had alreadie iudged him worthie to die: ther was no want at all of will, and resolution in them, but onlie want of power, that they did not without seeking to him, put him to death. The which becaus they might not do of themselues, therefore they required that hee would confirme their sentence. And this, saith the Euangelist, was thus ouerruled by the prouidence of God, that the word which our Sauiour had spoken before to his Disciples, and euen the counsell of God himselfe, to th'effecting of our redemption, might be fulfilled, concerning that kinde of death, which he should die: to wit, not by stoning, as Stephen was afterward tumultuouslie, but by the death of the Crosse, according to the manner of the iudgement of the Romane gouernour. Concerning the which words of our Sauiour, Read Ihon, ch: 12. 32. And I, if I were lifted vp from the earth, will drawe all men vnto mee. Thereby signifying (as the Euangelist saith, in the next verse) what death he should die. And yet more fullie and plainely, Matth: chapt: 20, 18, 19. Iesus (saith the Euangelist, in that place) tooke the twelue Disciples aparte in the way, and said vnto them, Beholde wee goe vp to Ierusalem, and the Sonne of man shalbe deliuered to the Chiefe priestes, and to the Scribes, and they shall condemne him to death, And they shall deliuer him ouer to the Gentiles, to mocke, and to scourge, and to crucifie him. &c.

The Iewes therfore, for want of power in themselues, vrging still their plea against our Sauiour: Pilate not satisfied with their generall accusation, nor minding without further examination, to confirme their decree, hee putteth them to some particular information.

Heerevpon therfore, aptlie may that seeme to followe, which wee read recorded by the holie Euangelist Saint Luke, chapt: 23.

Question. What are his wordes?

Answer. They beganne (saith the Euangelist) to accuse him, saying, wee haue found this Man perverting the people, and forbidding to paye Tribute to Cæsar, saying, that hee is Christ, a King.

This

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate, Explicat ō.

The ground & history of his examination or arraignment before Pilate

This indeede, may well seeme to follow in th'orderlie course of the Storie: wherein the wicked men, shewe themselues like themselues, or if it might be, worse then themselues. For wheras before, in their owne Councill they had suborned false witnesses, but could not with any colour proceede against our Sauiour Christ, vpon their dis-agreeing allegations, but insist, and make their decree, onely vpon a forged accusation, of (pretended) blasphemie, in their owne hearing. That is to say, from the wordes of our Lord and Sauiour himselfe, whereby in truth, he gaue God the greatest glorie, that might be, in acknowledging himselfe the Sonne of God, according to the same ende, wherfore hee was sent into the world, by God himselfe, yet nowe before Pilate, in this first accusation, they omitting their former blasphemie till afterward, doe playe the false witnesses themselues, in charging our Sauiour, with other false matter, of sedition and treason.

The falshood wherof, is euident, by th'open and direct practise, and doctrine of our Sauiour himselfe, cleane contrarie therevnto, as Matth: 17. 27. and chapt: 22. verse 21. For he both payed tribute himselfe, and also taught the people so to doe. Neuertheles in omitting the forged crime of blasphemy against God, and by their taking vp of this slaunder of sedition and treason against Cæsar: they take the most dangerous and speeding course that might be, against our Sauiour. For they knew well, that Pilate would be more easilie vrged, vpon this accusation concerning Cæsar, and his vsurped right, then concerning any dishonour done to God, although th'accusation had bene iust and true.

WEll then, that we may now proceede: Pilate hearing thus, the matter wherevpon they principallie stood: he leaueth the Iewes, and goeth back againe, into the common hall, and taketh our Sauiour with him. For so followeth the Historie, as it is continued by the Euangelist Iohn, chap: 18. verse 33. &c.

Question. What are the wordes of the holie Euangelist?

Let vs heere them.

Answer. 33 Pilate (saith the Euangelist entered into the Common hall againe, and called Iesus, and said vnto him, Art thou the King of the Iewes.

34 Iesus answered him, saiest thou that of thy selfe, or did other tell it thee of mee.

35 Pilate answered him, am I a Iew? Thine owne nation, and the high priest haue deliuered thee vnto mee, what hast thou done?

36 Iesus answered, my Kingdome is not of this worlde, if my Kingdome were of this worlde, my seruants would surely fight, that I should not be deliuered to the Iewes: but nowe is my Kingdome not from hence.

37 Pilate then saide vnto him, Art thou a King then? Iesus answered, Thou saiest that I am a King: for this cause was I borne, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should beare witnesse vnto the Truth, euerie one that is of the Truth, heareth my voice.

38 Pilate said vnto him, What is Truth? And when hee had said that, he went out againe vnto the Iewes, and said vnto them, I finde in him no cause at all.

Explicatiō In this Scripture, we see how after Pilate had vnderstood the chiefe pointe of the accusation of the Iewes against our Sauiour: that hauing gotten some ground, hee proceedeth iudiciallie to examine him. And this is his first examination by Pilate. In the which wee haue to consider fowre questions, that Pilate made: and three answeres which our Sauiour gaue.

The first question of Pilate was asked in hypocrisie, or more particularlie thus, Art thou the King of the Iewes?

The second & third are demanded in thesi (as we may say) that is, more generallie, after this manner, in the second place, What hast thou done? And in the third place, Art thou a King? that is, Dost thou professe thy selfe to be a King at all: if not of the Iewes, or any other people ciuillie, yet any other way, or in any other manner? For thus farre doth this question of Pilate extend.

Beheſe in God the Sone, who ſuffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground & hiſtorie of his 2. examination, or arraignmẽt before Pilate.

The laſt queſtion is onely by occaſion, and in Pilates raſh and haſtie conceit not to be ſtood vpon: though it was indeed moſt pertinent, if he had had the grace to haue conſidered, and accordingly to haue ſtayed for the anſwere of our Sauiour. For what might be more meete, and neceſſarie for a Iudge in anie caſe to vnderſtand, then the truth of that which is called into queſtion before him? And ſpecialliе for Pilate in the preſent cauſe, which was the moſt graue and weightie, that euer came before anie Iudge, ſince the beginning of the worlde: or ſhall be to the end of the ſame.

But becauſe hee ſtaid not to heare the Anſwere, hee loſt the knowledge of the truth: and ſo damnified himſelfe, no man knoweth howe much. And thus it came to paſſe, that to foure queſtions of Pilate, wee haue but three anſweres of our Sauiour. The firſt whereof, is not direct and plaine, for holie modeſties ſake: or leſt he might ſeeme to a profane Ethnike ouer light, and in his conceit verie ridiculous, in taking to himſelfe, that great and ſtately name of a King, hee ſtanding before Pilate, in a poore and baſe eſtate.

So that wee may call it an anſwere, in way of a modeſt demurre, vntill the occaſion ſhould waxe more preſſing, and growe to ſome further maturitie and ripeneſſe: our Sauiour alſo hereby preparing Pilate to conſider, that he had a more weightie matter in hand, then all the dayes of his life, hee was in all his politike wiſedome aware of.

The ſecond anſwer of our Sauiour, containeth a deſcription of the nature and qualitie of his Kingdome: wherein alſo, is implied a more direct anſwere to the firſt queſtion, then was made before. And ſo did Pilate vnderſtand it, as appeareth by his third queſtion.

Wherevpon, in the third Anſwer, our Sauiour doth furthermore render a moſt graue and weightie reaſon of the ſame profeſſion of his: to the further remouing of that appearance of vanitie, and lightnes, which Pilate no doubt, would eaſilie haue imputed vnto him, as was mentioned in the firſt anſwere, if it had not bene moſt prudentlie preuented by the wiſedome of our Sauiour. And ſo might haue bene, as a rocke to the profane and ignorant man, who had not learned to diſtinguiſhe betwixt an earthlie and a heauenlie kingdome: euen at once, to haue made ſhipwracke of an equall proceeding in the examination of this innocent cauſe of our Sauiour.

But this beeing preuented, at the verie firſt: our Sauiour taketh the fit occaſion, which hee had thus prepared for himſelfe, verie notablie, though briefelie, to deſcribe, who and what maner of ones they be, who are right and kindelie ſubiectes of his kingdome.

All which Queſtions of Pilate, and Anſwers of our Sauiour Chriſt: the three former Euangeliſtes doe verie brieflie contract, according to that of S. Matthew, who is in this matter, the largeſt of them, chapter 27. verſe 11. in theſe wordes.

And IESVS ſtoode before the Gouernour, and the Gouernour asked him, ſaying, Art thou the King of the Iewes? Ieſus ſaid vnto him. Thou ſaieſt it.

Of theſe things therefore, let vs heere ſtay a while to conſider, for our better vnderſtanding, according to the full reporte of the holie Euangeliſt Saint Iohn.

And firſt, the moſt wiſe and holie modeſtie of our Sauiour is diligentlie to be weighed of vs, from his firſt Anſwer. Wherin, hee hath clearelie ſhewed himſelfe to be of a cleane contrarie diſpoſition, to our moſt vaine and corrupt nature. For euery one of vs, is ready to vaunt and boaſt our ſelues, to the vttermoſt, yea vnasked, though we heare that all fleſhe is graſſe: and though in truth, we haue nothing of our ſelues worthy to be gloried in. But behold, our Sauiour Chriſt (though he was moſt worthy of all glorie, and had all excellencie of graces, moſt iuſtly to be reioiced in) yet he moſt wiſelie, and with all holy modeſty, auoydeth euen the appearance of vaine boaſting. The which, as he did at this time before Pilate, beeing examined of his Kingdome: ſo did he before in the working of his miracles. For though they could not be hidden, yet he shewed plainely, that hee did not by them seeke any vaine applause of men: as that charge, which hee gaue to diuers of those, in whom he shewed his gratious power, doth declare. See thou tell it to no man, saith our Sauiour. See that no man know it, &c. Mat. 9. 30. Mark. 5. 43. And againe, ch. 8. 26. Read also Matt. 17. 9. and ch. 21. 5. And so was the prophesie of Isaiah fulfilled in this behalfe, as the same Euangelist St. Matthew declareth at large, vpon the like occasion, ch. 12. verses 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20. Our Sauiour Christ therefore, is herein, a most notable example, and paterne vnto vs, both to teach vs true and discreete modesty, and also to reprooue and condemne the extreame vanity and folly of that arrogancy, which is seated in our light and hauty nature.

Secondly, from the description of the nature and quality of the kingdome of our Sauiour Christ, conteined in his second answer: we haue to consider, first the meaning of the words, and then the vses which we are to make of the same. And so also concerning the third answer of our Sauiour.

In that therfore he saith, My kingdome is not of this world: the meaning of our Sauiour, is not to exempt (no not the wicked, which be thick & threefold in it) frō his regency & gouernment: as touching their restraint frō much mischief, which otherwise they would surely practise against his Church here in this world. Nor yet to exempt them, or any kingdom of this world, from his iudgment, and vtter destruction at the last: whosoeuer should rebell against him. Onely his meaning is, that his kingdome, being of another nature, then are all or any of the kingdomes of this world: is to be erected and administred, whersoeuer it shall please him to rule and reigne among his subiects, after another manner, then the kingdomes of this world, are begunne at the first, or afterward vpheld and maintained. That is to say, the kingdome of our Lord Iesus Christ, being a spirituall kingdome: all his subiects are ruled and gouerned spiritually, and they doe yeelde him a spirituall obedience, &c. And for the same cause it is, that our Sauiour Christ doth not say, My kingdome is not in this world: but thus, My kingdome is not of this world. The which words also, are so to be vnderstood, as they may no way debase the kingdome of our Sauiour: but so as may serue best for the aduancing of it, infinitely aboue all the vaine and transitory kingdomes, of this fading and decaying world. For of the kingdome of our Sauiour Christ, there is no end: but it shall put an end to all other kingdomes, and remaine it selfe alone, in all perfection of eternall blessednes and heauenly glory, for euer and euer. Luke. 1. 32. 33. and chap. 19. 27. 1. Cor. 15. 24, 25, &c. Reuel. 19. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16. And all this, according to the former propheſies, which we reade Psalm. 2. 8, 9. and Psalm. 110. 1, 2, &c. Dan. 2. 34, 35, 36. a part of the dreame of Nebuchadnezzar: and verses 44, 45. which is the Prophet Daniels interpretation of the same.

Such is the meaning of the most wise and graue answer of our Sauiour Christ to Pilat, concerning his kingdome: by an excellent and lightsome distinction of his spirituall and eternall gouernement, and the temporall and worldly gouernment of all worldly Kings and Rulers. Wherein also, he giueth Pilate plainely to vnderstand, that his kingdome was such a one, as was no way preiudiciall to the kingdome or Empire of Cæsar, nor to any other kingdome of the world, that should be subiect vnto it: but that they may well stand together, yea that his kingdome shall cause them to flourish and prosper. And so Salomon, a most wise and prosperous King, testifieth of this our King and Sauiour: that by him Kings reigne, and Princes decree iustice. That by him, Princes doe rule, and the Nobles, and all the iudges of the earth. Pro. cha. 8. 15. 16. Neither did euer any Cæsar of the Roman Empire, prosper so blessedly, as did that most noble Constantine, who first submitted himselfe, and his worldly gouernment, to the spirituall gouernment of our Lord Iesus Christ, and those other Cæsars likewise, who were the most kindly and christian imitators, and successors of him. The same experience, haue many other kingdomes had:

Beliefe in Iesu the Son, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and history of his second examination or arraignment before Pilate.

& namely the prosperous gouernment of the Constantina of England, I meane our late most gratious & constant christian Queene, (most honourable in her owne name Elizabetha) is a mirror hereof, neuer to be forgotten: but to be alwaies, of blessed remẽbrance to all posterity, throughout all christiã Churches.

The Popes kingdome indeed, falsly boulstered & borne out, vnder the most sacred name of our Sauiour Christ, though in truth it is meerly Antichristian: it cannot (as the world hath now had long experience) stand with the kingdomes of the world, and least of all with any right christian kingcome: but it will either ouer-dreep it so, that it shall not grow vpward, or vndermine it so, that being growne vp, it can haue no firme and peaceable continuance, further then it pleaseth God our Sauiour, to restrain that his double sworded & triple crowned power which he vsurpeth. But concerning the kingdom of our Lord Iesus Christ, as he himselfe, (who knoweth his own kingdom & gouernment best) hath plainly and truly testified before the Roman Gouernour: that it is no way, in the least point, preiudicial to the lawful & iust gouernmẽt of any Cæsar, King, or Prince in all the world: but that they may stand entirely, the one with the other, & either of thẽ be mutually helpfull to the prosperous successe of thẽ both. But chiefly, his kingdom to all other kingdoms of the world, which shal at any time submit thẽselues vnto it, & to the spiritual laws & ordinãces therof.

For the confirmation of the which answer, our Sauiour Christ addeth further, in his owne defence, against the false accusation of the slanderous Iewes a notable reason, from his owne former and constant practise, in all his behauiour. As Pilate himselfe, no doubt, did know and obserue: or else hee for his part, neither would nor durst haue suffered him to continue his course as hee did. In which respect no doubt, our Sauiour said to Pilate before, appealing as it were to Pilates conscience: Saiest thou that of thy selfe, or did another tell it thee of me? Our Sauiour by the latter, disanulling the former; as he knew Pilate himselfe could not deny.

Let vs therefore now come to the reason, whereby our Sauiour Christ doth notably cleare himselfe, from the malitious slander of the Iewes. If (saith our Sauiour) my kingdome were of this world, my seruants would surely fight, that I should not be deliuered to the Iewes. But seeing they did not once attempt that course, neither did he euer teach them so, but the contrary: & of purpose withdrew himselfe from the Iewes, when they inclined to such an attempt: yea so that when Peter rashly began to resist, he sharply rebuked and suppressed his attempt, as we haue seene before: whereof also it is like that Pilate might haue intelligence: neither would our Sauiour vse his owne diuine power, nor the ministery of Angells to that end: therefore he concludeth, But now is my kingdome not frõ hence. As though he should say, By this may it be euidently perceiued, that my kingdom is neither of, nor frõ this world. So that as I neuer sought or minded it, so cã it not be iustly laid to my charge. This is the meaning of the 2. answer of our Sauior to Pilate the gouernor. As for the vses which we are to make, both for the cõfort of our faith, & also to the informing of vs in our duty frõ this answer, & the rest: we shal haue cause to obserue what they be hereafter.

Let vs proceed to the third answer of our Sauiour. For Pilat vnderstanding, in some sort, the distinction of kingdome and gouernment, which our Sauiour Christ made: and therefore standing no longer vpon the crimination of the Iewes, but (as was mentioned before) asked more generally, whether hee did professe himselfe to be a King, in respect of any princely gouernment, of what kinde soeuer: our Sauiour prudently shunning still the name of King, which would easily haue seemed ridiculous to the profane cõpany about him, and to Pilat himselfe, (our Sauiour standing before him as a prisoner, pinioned and bound) he did neuertheles acknowledge the truth of the thing, and answereth Pilat thus, Thou saiest that I am a King. As though he should say, it is enough that thou hast spoken it, though I do not rehearse the words againe. And then he annexeth a very graue and sufficient reason, why, though he vsed as excellent modesty as might be, hee did neuertheles acknowledge the truth of the mat-matter, in such sence as he had cleared the same. For saith our Sauiour, For this cause am I borne, & for this cause came I into the world, that I should beare witnes vnto the truth. As though he should say, I may not in any wise, frustrate the counsell and purpose of God, who hath sent me to testifie his whole truth, concerning the redemption and saluation of all his people: and namely, this speciall point of truth, that God hath for the same cause ordeined me to come into the world, and to doe the office of a spirituall King and Sauiour vnto them. And that is the cause, as our Sauiour giueth Pilate plainly to vnderstand, why hee standeth vpon those termes with him: and not of any vaine glory, as one arrogating that, which did not in truth belong vnto him.

Finally, as was said in the last branch of this third answer, our Sauiour Christ describeth vnto Pilate, not so much for Pilates sake, who despised that which he said: but for the sake of all true beleeuers, who cannot but reuerendly regard this part of the answer, as well as all the rests he describeth I say, who and what manner of ones, the subiects of his kingdome are: namely such, as being of the truth, doe also heare and obey his voice. In the which words, he describeth them from the cause, which is before, and aboue, and without themselues: that is, from their election, according to the eternal good will and pleasure of God. For to be of the truth, as our Sauiour saith in this place: and to be of God, as he saith otherwhere, and namely Iohn, 8.47. He that is of God, heareth Gods word, &c. these two kindes of speeches, they are in sense all one. Likewise, to heare Gods word, & to harken to the voice of our Sauiour Christ, they are also one and the same. For the voice of Christ, is not only that word & doctrine, which he vttered by his owne sacred mouth, while he was here on earth: but also, that which he hath spoken by the ministery of his seruants, the Prophets, from the beginning of the world, till his comming: and from the time of his ascension vp into heauen, by his holy Apostles, Euangelists, Prophets, Pastors, and Teachers, euen to this day, and so forth to the end of the world, euen by all whosoeuer haue, doe, and shall preach his word and Gospel faithfully: according as it written: Iohn, 7.15.16. My doctrine is not mine, (that is, not mine alone) but his that sent me. Also, If any man will doe his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speake of my selfe. And Ioh. 10.27.28. My sheep heare my voyce, & I know thē, & they follow me. And I giue vnto thē eternal life, &c. And 13.20. Verily, verily, I say vnto you, if I send any, he that receiueth him receiueth me, & he that receiueth me, receiueth him that sent me. Read also Eph. ch. 4.10, &c. And Mat. 23.37.

But insomuch as there be diuers kinds of those, which heare the voyce of our Sauiour Christ, (as our Sauiour himselfe hath taught and declared by the parable of the sower, whose seed fell into diuers kinds of grounds: Matth. 13. and Pilate himselfe heard the sound of the voyce of Christ, though he was neuer the better for it) let vs for our parts therfore, labour that we may be of those, that do heare the voyce of our Sauiour, to our eternall saluation. Of the which number, we shal know our selues to be, if we heare the voyce of Christ, speaking to vs in his Gospel, by the ministery of his faithfull seruants, with a minde constantly to beleeue and obey the same: according to that saying of our Sauiour himselfe, to those that beleeued in him. Ioh. 8, 31.32. If ye continue in my word, ye are verily my disciples. And ye shal know the truth, & the truth shal make ye free. For as he saith further, Ioh. 14.6. I am the way, & the truth, & the life. No man cōmeth vnto the Father but by me. And as S. Paul truly testifieth, Eph. 4.20.21, where remēbring to the christian Ephesians, the vaine & wicked thoughts, and works of other Gentiles not yet cōuerted vnto God, writeth thus: But ye haue not so learned Christ. If so be ye haue heard him, & haue bin taught by him, as the truth is in Iesus, &c.

Thus thē we see, how we are to vnderstād the most wise & graue answers of our Sauiour to the examinatiō of Pilate. And this is that good cōfession, which the Apostle so solemnizeth. 1. Tim. 6.13, where he maketh it a speciall clause, in that zealous contestation and charge which he giueth Timothew that he doe obserue, (and as much as lay in him, to cause to be obserued) the precepts conteined in that his epistle, without spot, and vnrebukeable, vntil the appearing of our Lord Iesus Christ. I charge thee (saith the holy Apostle) in the sight of God, and before Iesus Christ, who vnder Pontius Pilate, witnessed a good confession; That thou keepe this Commandement without spot, &c.

The ground and history of his second examination or arraignment before Caiaphas.

And herewithall, we see how that which Pilate scornfully reiecteth, asking What is truth? and so turneth his backe vpon our Sauiour Christ, is a matter of most worthy and reuerend regard.

Now therefore, that we may say something concerning Pilate, in his dealing with our Saniour Christ, we may perceiue by his questions, (the which beginning with more Candor or ingennitie and equity of minde, as a man may say, by and by sauoured of pride, and afterward ended in open contempt) that howsoeuer his course is to be preferred before the proceeding of the Iewes, yet he is not simply to be cõmended. For in this beginning, he sheweth himself to be a very wicked mã, hauing more care to please the wicked humors of men, thẽ to obey the holy wil of God. And afterward, as we shal see further, euẽ against his own cõscience, he groweth in cõclusion as corrupt in his dealing, as the Iewes thẽselues, in satisfying their wicked desire in cõdẽning of him, yea & more thẽ they desired, for he caused him to be scourged, & most reprochfully abused.

To this end and purpose, let vs goe forward to trace out the vnconscionable dealing of this euill and corrupt Magistrate. For not able to resist the answers of our Sauiour Christ, but holding them in conscience, for a iust Apology and defence: he goeth forth againe vnto the Iewes, as the Euangelist Iohn declareth, and saith vnto them, I finde in him no cause at all. Here is therefore a plaine iustifying of our Sauiour, by the verdict of Pilates owne conuicted conscience; whom yet afterward he condemneth, to satisfie the rage of the Iewes: though he found then no more cause then he did now, but still pronounced him innocent againe and againe, as we shall see further, in the times and places thereof.

In the meane season, that we may vnderstand what followed vpon the first clearing of our Sauiour Christ by Pilate: we are to resort to the Euangelist Luke, as we reade chap. 23. ver. 4, 5, &c.

First therefore, Which are the words of the Euangelist in those two verses?

4 Then said Pilate to the high Priests, and to the people, I find no fault in this man.

5 But they were the more fierce, saying. He moueth the people, teaching throughout all Iudea, beginning at Galile, euen to this place.

This indeed is the holy History continued by S. Luke. But yet for a further supply, touching this point: we must here take in that, which the Euangelist Matthew writeth, ch. 27. 12, 13, 14. And the Euangelist Marke, ch. 15. 3, 4, 5.

Which are the words of either Euangelist in those places?

The words of the Euangelist Matthew are these.

Matth. 27. 12 And when he was accused of the chiefe Priests, and Elders, he answered nothing.

13 Then said Pilat vnto him, Heerest thou not how many things they lay against thee?

14 But he answered him not a word, insomuch that the Gouernour marnelled greatly.

The words of the Euangelist Marke, are like to these of Matthew.

Marke 15. 3 And the high Priest (saith Marke) accused him of many things.

4 Wherefore Pilate asked him againe, saying, Answerest thou nothing? Beholde how many things they witnes against thee.

5 But Iesus answered no more at all, so that Pilate marnelled.

Thus then, all the Euangelists laid together, the narration of this second examination of our Sauiour Christ by Pilate, in the presence of the Iewes, is this: that Pilate iustifieth our Sauiour Christ, vpon his first examination: the Iewes accuse our Sauiour Christ of many things, yea they are the more fierce, by occasion of Pilates clearing of him, as one minding to haue dismissed him: Pilate prouoketh our Sauiour to answer to the accusations of the Iewes: but our Sauiour is altogether silẽt, vnlesse we admit here, that at this time Pilat asked him again, Art thou the king of the Iewes? to whom our Sauiour said only, Thou saiest it. Mat. 27. 11. & Mar. 15. 2 the which yet is more likely to be the same which hath bin set down already by the Euangelist Iohn, as was obserued before.

Cõcerning the silence of our Sauiour, we haue seene the reasons of it before,

Luke

Feteſein God the Sonne, who ſuffered vnder Pontius Pilate

The ground and hiſtory of his examination & accuſation before Herod.

Luke 22.67.68. for the ſame cauſes moued him thereunto at this time, wherewith he was moued then? And the rather now at this time, becauſe he had ſufficiently cleared himſelfe, in the former examination of Pilate before he came out this ſecond time to the Iewes. Wherefore though Pilate maruelled greatly, we will not thinke it ſtrang that our Sauiour ſhould be ſo ſilent as he was, ſeeing wee vnderſtand from our Sauiour himſelfe, the excellent reaſons and cauſes thereof. But all this is but a continuance of the trouble and ſorrowe of our Sauiour Chriſt to ſee the renewed fruits of the malice of the Rulers of the Iewes, and to continue thus in his bonds.

And this alſo is ſpecially to be obſerued, from the Euangeliſt Luke, that they accuſe him, as of a great and capitall treſpaſſe, for that he tooke moſt diligent and vnweariable paines in preaching the Goſpell of the kingdome of God: in reſpect whereof, no thanks which may be giuen to God, or praiſe to our bleſſed Sauiour, can be ſufficiēt. For ſay they. He moueth the people, teaching throughout all Iudea, beginning at Galile euen to this place: that is to the chiefe citie Ieruſalē. But in the heat of this raging & vnreaſonable accuſatiō, they had almoſt mard all. For Pilate vpon the mention of Galile, taketh aduantage to pick an occaſion to rid his hands of the whole matter, or at the leaſt to breed delay. For ſo the Euang: Luke proſecuteth the ſtory, as it followeth in his 23.ch, in the 6.&.7.v.

Queſtion. What are the Euangeliſts words? let vs heare them.

Anſwer. 6. Now when Pilate heard of Galile, he asked whether the man were a Galilean.

7. And when he knewe that he was of Herods iuriſdiction, he ſent him to Herod, who was alſo at Ieruſalem in thoſe daies.

Pilate indeed ſeeketh thus, (at the leaſt for a while) to reſt himſelf: & it may be to gratifie Herod, & ſomwhat to trouble the Iewes, who had begun to trouble him, about the matter more then he would. But howſoeuer Pilat eaſeth & pleaſeth himſelfe, by his politike deuiſe: the trouble of our Sauiour goe on, and is multiplied by this toſſing, as it were from poſt to pillar, as one may ſay.

THe which part of the holy ſtorie is continued by the Euangeliſt Luke, as it followeth from the beginning of the 8 verſe to the end of the 12.

Queſtion. Which are the wordes of the Euangeliſt? Rehearſe them.

Anſwere. 8. They are theſe. And when Herod ſaw Ieſus, he was exceeding glad: for he was deſirous to ſee him of a long ſeaſon (ſaith the Euangeliſt Luke) becauſe he had heard many things of him, and truſted to haue ſeene ſome ſigne done by him.

9. Then queſtioned he with him of many things: but he anſwered him nothing.

10. The high Prieſts alſo and Scribes ſtood forth, and accuſed him vehemently.

11. And Herod with his men of warre deſpiſed him, and mocked him, and arrayed him in white, and ſent him againe to Pilate.

12. And the ſame day ſaith the Euangeliſt) Pilate and Herod were made friends together, for before they were enemies one to another.

Thus then, we are come to new examination of our Sauiour Chriſt before Herod, and the ſufferings belonging to the ſame, by occaſion of Pilates ſending of our Sauiour vnto him, vpon the ſight of whom, as the Euangeliſt writeth, Herod was exceeding glad: and that for two cauſes. Firſt, becauſe vpon former & famous reports of great works done by him, he had of a long ſeaſon bin deſirous to ſee him: and ſecondly, becauſe he conceiued hope, that he ſhould now at his pleaſure, procure our Sauiour to worke ſome miracle before him. For it ſeemeth, the profane man thought, that he ſhould haue found our Sauiour Chriſt, like to ſuch as are ready to play their iuggling trickes, or other ſtrange feates, to ſatisfie the vaine humors of their beholders. And the rather did the proud man perſwade himſelf, that he ſhould haue had our Sauiour at his beck, becauſe he was brought as a priſoner before him: and in that reſpect, might by his power and authoritie, be either greatly hindered, or furthered, in his cauſe brought before him.

To this end, he is very inquiſitiue with our Sauiour Chriſt, cōcerning many things (as S. Luke writeth) & therewithal no doubt, partly by faire & flattering ſpeeches, & by threatnings (as the maner of ſuch men is) to frame our S: Ch. to his minde, and to get something from his owne mouth, whereby he might take some aduantage against him. But Herod is deceiued in his expectation. All the vaine hope, wherewith he fed himselfe a while before, is frustrate. For our Sauiour Christ in his excellent wisedome and vpon waightie considerations, as wee shall consider by and by, answereth the vaine man nothing at all.

Beliefe in God the Son who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The groũd and history of his examination & accusation before Herod.

Yea, though, as the holy Euangelist recordeth, the high Priests also, and Scribes, stood forth and accused our Sauiour vehemently, according to such things as Herod obiected against him: Yet our Sauiour Christ was moued, neither by the one, nor by the other, to answere any thing at all at this time for himselfe, but let them talke to themselues, and so answereth them in the best manner, by patient silence.

Herevpon, Herod being greatly disappointed, and no lesse discontented, despiseth our Sauiour Christ in his heart; and accordingly, both he himselfe, and his souldiers also, who were as forward as their maister (for like maister, like seruant) they fall to open deriding and scorning of our most reuerend and blessed Sauiour. And that especially, vpon the false accusation of the Iewes, that he affected a worldly kingdome, and gouernment, ouer them. As it appeareth by their kind of mockerie, in that they cast some white peece of cloth about him, as if he were some Candidatus, or competitour for the kingdome, after the manner of such as stoode for offices in their solemne elections at Rome, for they mocke him most contemptuously, as being a goodly man to bee a king, &c.

Thus they sport themselues in their owne most wicked and blasphemous follie. The conclusion of all was this, that Herod being soone wearie of his part, he returneth our Sauiour backe againe to Pilate: so that as he had begun, so he might make an end, for all him. Yet in such friendly manner, and holding himselfe so singularly gratified by Pilate, that the same day, he and Pilate being enemies before, are now made friends. This is the summe of this answereles examination of our Sauiour, and of the sufferings accompanying the same, by the continuance of his bondes, and the tedious molestations of his aduersaries, sundrie waies.

But it shall be profitable for vs, to consider somewhat more fully, of some of these points at the least.

And first, concerning the exceeding gladnes of Herod, vpon the sight of our Sauiour Christ: it shall be to good purpose, to consider what manner of gladnes it was, from the causes and grounds thereof. Wherevpon also, other things will be made more cleare and lightsome vnto vs.

Answer. Quest. What manner of gladnes therefore was that, wherewith Herod was affected?

It was not of any holy loue, and desire, that he bare to our Sauiour Christ, or to his doctrine, or to his miracles: but altogether of a prophane curiositie, he reioycing rather to see our Sauiour apprehended and brought before him as a prisoner, then in any other respect.

Explication It is true indeede, as the effects of this ioy, doe open both the nature of it, and also of the causes and grounds therof. And in very truth, how could it be, that Herod a man of most wicked and incestuous life and of a most guiltie conscience, imbrued not onely with the imprisonment of Iohn, but also with his innocent blood aboue all other his sinnes (he of an hypocrite becomming a hard hearted sinner) seeking also (as it is likely, by that we read, Luke 13.31.) the life of our Sauiour as may appeare further, by that answere which our Sauiour sendeth, at the same time, saying; Goe ye, and tell that Foxe. Behold I cast out Diuels, and will heale still to day and to morrowe, and the third day I shall be perfected: that is, I shall continue yet a while longer and doe the workes of God, and Herod shall not be able to interrupt me: Herod also being the wicked sonne of that most wicked Herod, who euen from the natiuitie of our Sauiour sought to destroy him, and to that end murthered the children of Bethlehem, and the places ces there about, as we haue seene more at at large before: how therefore could it be, I say, that Herod being such a one, should in any godly manner desire after our Sauiour, and ioy to see him? specially to see him in such a plight as hee was brought before him. Verily, if he had loued him, he would rather haue beene striken with sorrow, to see our Sauiour so pitifully abused, and defaced, as he was by former spittings and buffettings, &c. And besides, if Herod had had any true desire to haue seene our Sauiour Christ: or to haue heard his doctrine, or to haue beheld his miracles, he might long since this time, haue seene, and heard, both him and them, many a time and often, For our Sauiour Christ both preached, and wrought miracles daily, in all parts of Herods iurisdiction, euen in Galile. He that heard Iohn willingly, though he wrought no miracles; would much rather haue heard our Sauiour, who was mightie in deede, as well as in word. The truth is plaine therefore, that Herod had noe good affection toward our Sauiour. All his desire, was of a profane curiositie: and his gladnes, a reioycing in our Sauiours outward calamitie, he thinking this to be a fit occasion, to make our Sauiour seruile to his proud humour.

But our Sauiour knowing the wicked minde of this profane and vngodly man, he doth disapoint him as much as possibly might: and thereby sheweth himselfe, to be altogether an other manner of man, then Herod tooke him to be. That is to say, he sheweth himself a most wise & discreet man, of inuincible patience, ioined with singular valour, and holy fortitude of mind: knowing most perfectly, when to be silent, as well as when to speake.

The which, that we may more clearly see into, we are to call to mind, the former reasons alledged, concerning our Sauiour his silence. And beside those, to consider of two more speciall, vpon the present occasiō. First, as we haue seene, that Herod was a most bad man, and accordingly our Sauiour Christ well knewe that he desired not, to heare any word to proceed out of his mouth, to his instruction in the way of the kingdome of God, or to see any worke wrought by him, to the end he might be moued thereby to giue glory to God: and therefore, as our Sauiour Christ had taught his disciples before, that they should not giue holy things to dogges, nor cast pearles before swine, so he practiseth the same himself at this time, being before such a māner of man, the Iewes also continuing and persisting in their malice, being iustly to be accounted of like sort with him. Secōdly insomuch as our Sa: Ch: knew wel, that Pilate, & not Herod, must be his Iudge: & that he must be crucified at Ierusalem, & not to be sent to be executed in Galile, therefore he will not answer his cause before Herod. And to speak the truth, our Sa: Ch: was neither a Galilean, nor as the cause stood, was of Herods Iurisdiction. For first, although our Sauiour was brought vp (frō the time that he returned out of Egypt, that is about foure yeares after he was borne, vntil he came to about thirtie yeares of age) in Nazareth a citie of Galile by the special appointment of God, that it might the rather be manifest, euen from the name of the place of his educatiō, that he was that netsar, or branch, springing out of the stock of Dauid, so often spoken of by the holy Prophets: yet he was by birth & linage, a Bethlehemite, of the tribe of Iuda. In which respect also, he being apprehended at Ierusalem, or at the least within the liberties thereof, and conuented first before Pilate the gouernour of those parts: the iudgement of his cause, belonged rather to Pilate, then to Herod. And this no doubt, did Herod wel enough consider, & therefore returned him againe to Pilate: he and his souldiers, beginning the pageāt of the mockery of our Sauiour Christs kingdome, to Pilate & his souldiers, who prosecuted the same more fully afterward But Herods white, was no black spot, to diminish the most bright & cleare innocencie of our Sauiour: but rather an ensigne & confirmation therof, insomuch as Herod could certifie Pilate of nothing criminous against our Sauiour, though he had bin much conuersant in the parts of his iurisdiction, as Pilate himself afterward acknowledged: as we shall see, in the processe of the holy story, by the Euangelist Luke. Wherefore, hastening to the rest of the story, we will stay no longer vpon this, but briefly conclude, that whatsoeuer was the cause of the enmitie of Pilate and Herod: whether for that outrage which Pilate committed against the Galileans of Herods iurisdiction, mentioned by Saint Luke, who recordeth this their enmitie; chap: 13. 1. or whether it were any other cause: this we may say, concerning their friendship and loue-day: that, according to the holy Prouerbe, chap: 14. 9. sinne (or guiltines of sinne specially in the same sinne) is a meanes to set fooles (that is the wicked and vngodly men) at one: but that which is acceptable (to wit before God, and good men) maketh agreement betwixt righteous men. As Tremellius wel translateth and interpreteth that sētence. Wherefore far better had it bin, either for Pilate, or Herod, to haue remained in former enmitie, which soeuer of them had sought true peace and reconciliation with God, and our Sauiour Christ: then to be thus reconciled betwixt themselues, by ioyning, as it were in Giantlike battell, against the God of heauen.

AND thus, leauing this examination of our Sauiour before Herod, and the sufferings thereof laide vp in our minde: let vs proceede to that which followeth, concerning his renewed examinations and troubles throughout all the proceedings of Pilate.

Question. How doth it follow in the holy Storie?

Answere. Vpon the returne of our Sauiour Christ to Pilate, thus the storie is continued by the Euangelist Luke.

13. Then Pilate called together the high Priests and the Rulers of the people.

14. And saide vnto them, yee haue brought this man vnto me, as one that peruerted the people: and beholde I haue examined him before you, and haue found no fault in this man, of those things whereof ye accuse him.

15. Noe, nor yet Herod; for I sent you to him: and loe, nothing worthy of death is done by him.

16. I will therefore chastise him, and let him loose.

Explicatiō Here the Euangelist Luke declareth, that when Pilate sawe his former deuise to be at an ende; and yet continuing to make some conscience of giuing vniust sentence of death against our Sauiour, whom he iudged to be innocent, as most iustly he might well so deeme: he falleth to the practise of two other deuises, which he had in his head. But euery one worse then other, all onely increasing the trouble and sufferings of our most blessed Sauiour, and no way working any reliefe either to him or to his cause. And no maruell: for beside that the iustice of God must take place: (insomuch as our Sauiour, by his diuine appointment, and of his owne willing submission, must beare the fearefull punishment of mans sinne, euen to death: for the full satisfaction and redemption thereof: and therefore all the practises to the contrarie, must of necessitie, be so farre off from hindering, that they must, through the almightie prouidence of God, rather further the same:) beside this, I say, no maruell though Pilates policies tooke no good effect, to the relieuing of our Sauiour, who neither needed, nor sought any of his reliefe: insomuch as Pilate did not any thing, of all that he might seeme to doe, of loue and reuerence to our Sauiour: but onely, for the loue he did beare to himselfe (if happily he could haue loued himselfe aright) that he might relieue his owne snarled conscience and dangerous estate. For on the one side, he feared the present tumultuous rage of the Iewes, (as not knowing what it might growe vnto: neither if he should not satisfie them, what after complaints their malice might frame against him at Rome before Tiberius the Emperour) and on the other side, hee feared, lest for the auoiding of these euills, he should be condemned of his own conscience, if he should yeeld to satisfie the Iewes malice, by pronouncing the vniust sentence of death against Christ. Thus stood Pilate perplexed, concerning this most high cause of iudgement: God himselfe, noe doubt, (as was meete) awakening his conscience, euen from that naturall light, and ground of equitie, which is reserued in euery one, that hath not violently put it out: that no innocent, and guiltles person, ought to be condemned. And therefore, seeing at this time the condemnation of him, that is not onely the most innocent, but also actually, the most righteous man, yea the onely perfect righteous of all men, yea more then a man, both God and man, commeth into question, and that before a mortall man: how could it be otherwise, then that he must be troubled, aboue that he himselfe, being a profane man, should see or know any full and sufficient cause of it? Neuertheles, to the end it might be euident vnto vs, and to the whole church, that all light of nature, reacheth no further, then to leaue vs all without excuse: and that our onely true direction, and stay, must be in that grace, which is powred into vs, from the sanctifying and regenerating spirit of God, according to the light of his holy word: Pilate is set forth, as vpon a Theater, to the viewe of the whole world, for a paterne of that notable lightnes, and vanitie, and iniustice, which is in mans corrupt nature. The which, notwithstanding it hath all the most graue inducements, and incouragements, and admonitions that may be, to deale iustly, and vprightly: yet it is soone turned out of the way, and vtterly wresteth it selfe against God, whom it ought most dutifully and constantly in all vprightnes to serue. For Pilate, beginning tolerably well (as we would thinke, and indeed did begin commendably in comparison of the Iewes, as hath beene before obserued) yet by little and little, putting out as it were the eye of his owne conscience, grew to the same euill issue with the most wicked Iewes, who had before pulled out, not onely the eye of their naturall light, but also that eye of vnderstanding, which they ought to haue reserued in them, cleare and bright, from the word of God. Wherby, they might haue learned, to knowe Christ, to be their onely Lord and Sauiour: whom they should most willingly haue acknowledged, and most humbly reuerenced, and obeyed: and not thus, most spitefully and blasphemously, to haue pursued and persecuted. And thus in Pilate, together with his cōpanie: as also in Herod, and his band: and in the high Priest Caiphas, and his conspiracie: all both Iewes and Gentiles, are most famously, conuicted by their practises, that all are traitors and rebels against the Maiestie of God: and iustly inwrapped in the same condemnation, euer since the first traiterous conspiracie, of our first parents, with the Diuel against him. Neither may we except our selues, or any other in any age: but all of vs, through the corruption of nature, are so attainte, that rather then we would want of our owne wicked lustes, we could be well content, that God were pulled out of his throne. Vnto all this, doth the example of Pilate, in his inconstant, and deceiuable, and vnequall proceedings, vnder a coloure of iustice, worthily lead vs: euen to the humbling of vs all before the onely incorrupt and pure iudgement seate of God.

But that we may proceede in the holy story: it is necessarie, that we come to the consideration of the proceedings of Pilate, in the particulars thereof.

First therefore, as the Euangelist Luke telleth vs, in the wordes last answered: Pilate calleth together the high Priests, and Rulers of the people, and maketh an Oration vnto them, solemnly iustifying, and acquiting our Sauiour Christ in expresse words, as touching the accusatiōs of the Iewes. And that not onely by his owne authoritie & knowledge, but also vnder the name of Herod: insomuch as he receiued no information against our Sauiour, from him. And thereupon concludeth that he would dismisse our Sauiour. The which also, he ought no doubt, in iustice to haue accordingly performed without delay, & to haue beene hartily sory, that he had delaied the time so long as hee had done. But as there was no soundnes in his heart; so there was no constancie in his practise: And therefore he himself, is iustly a snare to himself. For seeing Christ is guiltles of any crime obiected: what reason is there, why Pilate should once make mētion of chastising of him before he would loosen and discharge him? Pilate therfore, hauing crazed his conscience already, yea euen by sending our Sauiour to Herod, in stead that he should rather, euen then haue finally acquited him: he corrupteth himself more and more. But God the Iudge of heauen, is righteous: for our Sauiour might not be discharged, till he had indured yet a, farre more heauie sentence, and much more heauie sufferings for a while that his elect might be discharged of their sinnes before his Iudgement seate for euer. Wherefore in this respect, most highly reuerencing the iustice of God, let vs goe forward, to consider the iniustice of Pilate.

Behese in God the Son who suffered vnder Pō-tius Pilate.

The grōd and history of his third examination & arraignment before Pilate.

This is euident, as was noted before, from the practise of two other deuises: before we come to the last examination of our Sauiour Christ, & consequently of Pilates sentence of condemnation, against him.

The first of these his vaine deuises, the which onely (as was said, and as wee shall see) bred further trouble to our Sauiour: was, that whereas they had a custome (a wicked one no doubt) that at the passeouer, they should haue a prisoner let loose vnto them, some malefactor, whom they should thinke good to desire; Pilate nominateth our Sauiour Christ to be the man, whom he would let loose vnto them. A very absurd offer, as we shall further see by and by.

His second deuise, was, that he would gratifie the Iewes malitious importunitie so farre, that he would not dismisse Christ, without all correction, & note of reproach, least forsooth the Iewes might otherwise haue taken his deliuerance to be their reproach: Pilate thinking by this wicked meanes, to obtaine his desire: which was no more, but to auoide the pronouncing of sentence of death, against his owne conscience. Although all in vaine, because he had not a cleare conscience herein. Of these things therfore, let vs henceforth consider. And first, concerning the former of these two latter deuises.

Question. What is that which the holy storie reporteth hereof?

Answer. To the ful vnderstanding of this point, I haue heard you say, that the Euangelists are diligently to be compared and laied together.

So indeed it was said: and not without cause. For the whole contriuing, or conueiance of this deuise, is not fully laied forth by any one alone. But by conference of one with the other, it may be obserued in this order. First, the custome is set downe. Secondly, Pilate seemeth to propose Christ, as the partie to be released, vpon his owne choise, and by the countenance of his authoritie, who had the power of release and pardon in his own hand, by the appointmēt of the Emperour. When this would not be accepted of the Iewes, then he putteth Barabbas, a notorious malefactor vpon their voices together with our Sauiour; imagining that they would rather choose Christ to be deliuered, then Barabbas. Thirdly, when the Iewes choose Barabbas to be deliuered, and still prosecute their sute against Christ: he contendeth with them, and expostulateth what euil they can lay against him, and so iustifieth our Sauiour Christ the third time. Of these things therefore, let vs see some ground, from the conference of the holy Euangelists.

Question. And first concerning the custome, what is set downe?

Answer. Of necessitie (saith the Euangelist Luke) hee must let one loose vnto them at the feast.

So indeede it followeth in the 17. verse of the 23, chapter. The other Euangelists doe testifie that the Iewes had a custome that the Gouernour should let a prisoner loose vnto them, at the passeouer, whomsoeuer they would: as wee read, Mat: 27. 15. Marke 15. 6. Iohn 18. 39. you haue a custome (saith Pilate) that I should deliuer you one loose at the passeouer. But the Euangelist Luke, in the words alledged in your answere, doth most expresly declare, that the Iewes hauing such a custome, did stand most precisely, and vrgently, vpon it: yea though, as was touched in a word, it was in truth a very bad and wicked custome, not to the honour of God, or any godly solemnitie of the holy feast, which they celebrated: but contrarie to the will of God, who professeth that it is an abomination before him, that the wicked should be iustified: and namely, that any wilfull murtherer, or that is guiltie of any other capitall crime, should bee acquited, Prouerbs 17. 15. Numb: 35. verses 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. But an euill custome, wee see, is easily taken vppe: and beeing vppe

it

Beleefe in God the Son who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and history of his third examination & arraignment before Herod.

it is eagerly maintained, as this was by the Iewes, though as yet of no great prescription, as may easily be discerned, from the deepe silence of all former Scriptures. But leauing the custome: let vs come to see, how Pilate goeth about to frame it, to serue his owne turne: in that he would nominate, and determine Christ, to be the partie, who should, by the priuiledge of this custome, be deliuered.

Question. What proofe is there of this?

Answere. The words of Pilate, which the Euangelist Luke rehearseth, doe shewe it to be so. For he writeth, that Pilate, in regard of the libertie of this custome, attempted to set our Sauiour loose: as was answered before.

Hereunto also, tend the words of the Euangelist Iohn, chap: 18.39. ye haue a custome, that I should deliuer you one loose, at the Passeouer: will ye then that I loose vnto you the king of the Iewes?

The wordes of exception likewise, which the Iewes take against Pilates course, (expressed by the Euangelist Marke, chap: 15.8. seeme to confirme the same. For the people cried alonde, and began to desire, that he would doe as he had euer done vnto them.

It seemeth so indeed. And hence it may appeare, that it was as was touched before, but an absurd deuise of Pilate, and as we may see now, by the experience, but a meere trifling in so graue a cause. For he could not driue the Iewes from their custome, which was granted before vnto them. Neither could our Sauiour be accounted, one liable to be let loose, according to that custome: seeing he was no offender, nor yet at all conuicted before the Magistrate to be so: but rather, held and pronounced innocent by him.

Leauing this therefore, as an idle and vaine attempt, as it was, let vs goe forward in the third place, to see some ground of this, that Pilate goeth about to draw the Iewes to admit of Christ to be the partie to be looled: or else that he would discharge Barabbas, whom he thought they would be more loath to be let escape, then that Christ should: albeit he knew they greatly enuied and maliced him.

Question. What ground is there of this?

Answere. It is plainely to be seene, that Pilate grewe thus farre to limit their custome, to one of these two: from that which we read, Mat: 27 verses 16.17 in these wordes.

16. And they had then a notable prisoner called Barabbas.

17. When they were then gathered together (as the Euangelist writeth) Pilate said vnto them, whether will yee that I let loose vnto you Barabbas, or Iesus who is called Christ.

21. And againe, verse 21. Whether of the twaine will ye that I let loose vnto you?

Explicatiõ Here indeed we see plainely, that Pilate grew very peremptorie, as one loth to be too much ouerruled of the Iewes. But the iniurie against our Sauiour, was hereby made the greater, while hee putteth him vpon the voices of his most hatefull aduersaries, with so notorious a malefactor as Barabbas was, to wit a seditious person and a murtherer, as Mark, 15.7. and Luk, 23.19. and Iohn 18.40. Insomuch as he might well know, by their open and extreame malice, already manifested that they would preferre any other, the most vile and wicked wretch, before our Sauiour, And so it came to passe: for they did most doggedly enuie him, euen because of the excellencie of those graces, which they had experience to be in him, infinitly aboue themselues, as Pilate well considered: as we read, Mat: 27.11. *For he knewe well (*saith the Euangelist) that for enuie they had deliuered him. And Marke 15.10. He knewe that the high Priests had deliuered him for enuie. The which foule sinne of theirs, as it is a notable blot to them: so it is a cleare testimonie, of the most excellent vertues of our Sauiour, the which they wickedly made the matter of their enuie. Wherefore as fruite of this most wicked enuie, before which who can stand? as it is in the holy prouerbe chap, 27.4. they cry out vpon our Sauiour Christ hauing nothing in their malitious mouthes, but Crucifie, Crucifie him, and they make choise of Barabbas to be deliuered. Thus did the chiefe Priests, and the Elders themselues: and thus did they perswade the people to doe-Mat:27.20. and Marke 15.11. Yea and herein they persist, notwithstanding Pilate (to satisfie his owne humour) contendeth with the Iewes, by a threefold resistance of their choise of Barabbas: to the ende hee might haue driuen them to haue chosen Christ, as the Euangelist Luke recordeth. Chap: 23.22. What euill hath hee done? And if I let Barabbas loose, what shall I doe with your king? Yea so doth hee resist them, in their choise, that notwithstanding they will not alter their election, yet he seemeth for his part, to resolue that he will chastise our Sauiour and let him loose: as we read in the latter part of the same verse.

Thus then, Pilate being frustrate in his former deuise, he proceedeth to his second. But all in vaine, and that not onely to the increase of his own sinne, but also to the increase of the trouble of our blessed Sauiour.

The performance of this second bad deuise of Pilate, is set downe most fully, by the Euangelist Iohn. For Mathew and Marke say onely, he was scourged: and Luke goeth not so farre, but onely sheweth what Pilate purposed to doe. Let vs therefore heare this part of the history, from the record of Iohn.

Question. How doth he report the same?

Answer. Then (saith the Euangelist) Pilate tooke Iesus and scourged him.

Explication So indeed the Euangelist Iohn writeth in the first verse of the 19. chap: wherein he reporteth a strange thing, and that also a very iniurious practise of Pilate: insomuch as he commandeth such a one, as in his owne iudgement was innocent and guiltles, to be scourged. But see how farre the profane man is carried, in the liking of his deuise, and for the accomplishing of his owne priuate purpose: that hee careth not how it may be wrought, so as he may haue his will. For thus he thinketh, that if he shall proceede to lay some punishment vpon our Sauiour, and doe him some notable disgrace: that then the Iewes wil be satisfied, and so desist and leaue of all further pursuite: and that hee should thereby auoide the giuing of sentence of death, the which hee sawe hee coulde not doe with a good conscience. He therefore followeth his owne humour, without any regard of our Sauiour. For otherwise, the same conscience, that told him, that he ought not to haue giuen sentence of death against our Sauiour, would haue told him likewise, that he ought not to haue whipped him, or done him any disgrace at all. But as the holy Prouerbe saith: The mercies of the wicked are cruell. And so doth Pilates fauour proue still more and more.

The strangenes of this Act of Pilate, is to be considered, from the Person whom he commandeth to be whipped: he being the most holy and glorious Sonne of God. A most vnworthy thing. If a Magistrate should command the poorest man in a countrie, to be whipped without cause: all men would speake shame of such a Magistrate. Much more then, if a man of good credit and estimation should be so abused, at the will and pleasure of any: but most of all, if a vassall should whippe his Soueraigne. What an absurde villanie were this? But what is any comparison, that may be made, equall to this, that the Sonne of God should be whipped, by such as were not worthy to lick the dust of his feete: nor once to come in presence, where he should be! And the rather also, may it be the more strange vnto vs, because we may well conceiue, that it was no gentle or soft whipping, but a cruell cutting or rasing of the holy flesh of the Sonne of God. For they were very spitefull persons, to whom this execution was committed: as is euident, by that most contumelious dealing against our Sauiour, the which they practise, moreouer and beside the scourging.

Question. How was that?

Answere. The Euangelist Iohn addeth further, in the 2. & 3. verse of the same 19. ch: That the souldiers platted a crown of thornes, and put it on his head, and also that they put on him a purple garment. And said, Haile king of the Iewes. And they smot him with their rods.

This

Reiese in God the Son, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and history of his third examination before Pilat.

This sheweth plainely, that they were most despitefull people, by whom our Sauiour Christ was scourged. And therefore, how can we thinke, but that he was pittifully abused in that part of their despite: as we see him to be, in euery part of this which is now before vs. As first, in this, that whereas they fully set themselues to deride and scorne his kingdome, they make choise of such a matter to make a crowne, (to wit, brambles wreathed) that in putting the same vpon his head, they might vexe and ranch his holy skinne that way: and easily cause the blood to runne down his blessed cheekes. And the rather, when they smite him on the head with their rods, as the Euangelist Iohn reporteth that they did, in the last branch of their present despite: and as we shall haue an occasion afterward to consider of it further, from the Euangelists Matthew and Marke. And now likewise, in that they, hauing put vpon our Sauiour, this base and pricking crowne of thornes, do disparage it thus, with a robe of purple: this was to make our Sauior seem the more ridiculous, in such a contrary habite. For the crowne of thornes would not so much haue disgraced a beggars cloke, if they had cast it vpon him; as did this princely robe, that paltry crowne. Thus it pleaseth them to sport themselues. And that nothing might be wanting, to make out a full pageant of mockery, they salute him thus disguised, with Haile King of the Iewes: as though they should say, you are a goodly King, are you not? Long may you rule, much peace may your subiects haue, vnder your princely gouernment, &c. Thus doe the most vile and base vassalls of the earth, abuse the King of heauen, to their owne perpetuall destruction by his rod of yron, whosoeuer of them did not repent of their most hainous sinne, and beleeue in him, to be their onely Soueraigne Lord and Sauiour, whom they had thus wickedly scourged and scorned.

Thus then we see to what manner of instruments Pilate committed our Sauiour to be scourged: whereby the manner of his scourging may easily be discerned. But was it Pilates minde, that our Sauiour Christ should be thus notoriously abused? It may be peraduenture, that some will imagine that this was the licentious disorder of the souldiers, aboue the commission of Pilate, &c.

Question. What is to be thought of this?

Answer. Whatsoeuer the commission of Pilate was, this is certeine from the faithfull report of the holy Euangelist, that he liked very well of their doings. For so we reade, as it followeth verses 4. and 5. of the same 19. chapter of Iohn, in these words.

4 Then Pilate went forth againe, and said vnto them, Behold, I bring him forth to you, that ye may know, that I find no fault in him at all.

5 Then came Iesus forth, wearing a crowne of thornes, and a purple garment. And Pilate said to them, Behold the man.

Explicatiõ & proofe. Thus then, we see the hand and approbation of Pilate, in all this most vnworthy and contumelious abuse, against our most worthy and reuerend Sauiour. Whereby, he now supposeth, that he hath done fully enough to satisfie the Iewes. And to this end, he wisheth the Iewes to consider, that although he found no fault in him, as he had often protested before, though not so fliely as he doth it now: yet to gratifie them, (most wicked Iudge that he was) he bringeth our Sauiour forth, with all the disgrace, that he and his company could cast vpon him. O extreame wickednes of the heathenish and damnable crue! O admirable and most gratious patience, of our blessed Lord and Sauiour!

But what? doth Pilate winne his humorous purpose, by this his practising of deuises? Nothing lesse. And so it is iust with God, to curse those that walke by crooked waies. Whereby, all Iudges may learne: yea all of vs, may iustly receiue our instruction: that if we would be blessed of God in our enterprises, we must walke vprightly before him, doing that directly which hee would haue vs to doe, and not leane to our owne corrupt inuentions. We must not onely propound to our selues good things, but also we must vse good meanes, to the bringing of them to passe; and alwaies looke that we carry honest hearts with vs,&c. The which,though Pilate did not,but altogether erred,as one led by a corrupt and troubled conſcience; hee is in the end, as farre from his purpoſe, as he was at the beginning: as is is euident by the words that follow in the Euangeliſt Iohn: ver. 6.

The ground and hiſtory of his laſt examination and arraignment before Pilate.

Which are they?

6 When the high Prieſts and officers ſaw him, (ſaith the Euangeliſt) they cried, ſaying, Crucifie, crucifie him.

The words of the Iewes tend to this end, that it is nothing to them, to ſee our Sauiour in a diſguiſed habite: no though he had been ſharply whipped, as no doubt they did well vnderſtand. It was his life that they ſought,and without the which, they could no more be ſatisfied, then the hungry woolfe, or beare, or Lion, without the blood of the Sheepe, which they had gotten as a prey betweene their teeth. They are like to the couetous wilfull man, they will haue all or none.

Pilate indeede is angry with the Iewes, becauſe they would not be ſubiect to his deuiſe: and therefore ſaith vnto them in haughty diſpleaſure, Take ye him, and crucifie him: meaning if they would needes haue it ſo, or if they durſt: for as touching himſelfe, he profeſſeth to them yet againe, that he found no fault in him. But all Pilates anger will not ſerue: for he hath by all meanes diſaduantaged himſelfe, and giuen the Iewes all the aduantage that might be, by his cowardly and groundles declinings.

Hereupon therefore, by occaſion of Pilates words, Take ye him and crucifie him: they anſwer, that if their gouernment were not reſtrained, they had a plaine law, by the warrant whereof, they could and would put him to death: namely ſay they, becauſe he made himſelfe the Sonne of God. The Law which they meane, is the law againſt the blaſphemer, whom God cõmandeth to be put to death: Leuit. 24. 15. 16. And blaſphemie is indeede a ſinne moſt worthie to be puniſhed by death. From the which law, thus they reaſon, that if he that blaſphemeth God is to die: then much more, he that challengeth the Godhead to himſelfe, and ſo arrogateth moſt blaſphemouſly to himſelfe, that he is God. The reaſon alſo is good, and would ſurely be a full inditement againſt any man to death: ſaue onely in the preſent inſtance of our Sauiour, whom that law or reaſon drawne from thence, could no way touch: ſeeing he onely, of all men, was, and is for euer, the onely naturall Sonne of God, and therefore very God: which theſe wicked Iewes, in their malitious wilfulnes, blinded through enuie, and altogether hardened in heart againſt our Sauiour, would by no meanes ſee and acknowledge. For then they muſt needes haue acknowledged him, not onely worthy to liue, but to be the very Lord of glory, and life it ſelfe: and therefore in ſtead of ſeeking his death, to haue craued pardon of their own wicked and rebellious life, and finally to haue yeelded all honour and glory vnto him.

BVt behold a ſtrange thing, which the Euangeliſt Iohn telleth vs of, in the 8. verſe: namely, that Pilate was made yet more afraid to proceed againſt our Sauiour then before, vpon the hearing of that word, that he ſhould be the Sonne of God. And thereupon, taketh our Sauiour, and returneth againe into the common Hall, and entereth into a new examination of him: as one checked in his owne conſcience, for his notorious abaſing of him. The which alſo was the laſt examination of our Sauiour, and went immediately before the ſentence of his condemnation.

Let vs therefore diligently conſider the whole courſe and order thereof.

Which are the words of the Euangeliſt? Let vs heare them.

8 When Pilate, heard that word (ſaith he) he was the more afraid.

9 And he went againe into the common Hall, and ſaid vnto Ieſus, Whence art thou? But Ieſus gaue him no anſwer.

The ground and history of his last examination before Pilat.

11 Iesus answered, Thou couldest haue no power at all against me, except it were giuen thee from aboue: therefore he that deliuered me vnto thee, hath the greater sinne.
12 From thenceforth (saith the Euangelist) Pilate sought to loose him, but the Iewes cried saying, if thou deliuer him, thou art not Cæsars friend: for whosoeuer maketh himselfe a King, speaketh against Cæsar.

Explicatio. Here we haue to consider: first, the feare of Pilate, yea his augmented and increased feare: secondly, his first question to our Sauiour, vpon the same his increased feare: thirdly, the silence of our Sauiour, answering nothing to the question: fourthly, the second question of Pilate, arising from that displeasure, which he tooke at the silence of our Sauiour: fiftly, we haue in this part of the history, to consider the answer of our Sauiour to Pilates second question: sixtly, the last indeuour of Pilate, to set our Sauiour loose: and finally, the frustrating of the same his indeauour. Of these things therefore euen as briefly as we can.

And first of all, concerning the increased feare of Pilate: the cause of it, is first to be obserued of vs: which was, that mention, which the Iewes had made before, of the name of the Sonne of God. The which no doubt, if Pilate had well vnderstood, it would not onely haue caused him to tremble; but also to haue fallen downe before our Sauiour, and most humbly and supplicatorily to haue begged pardon, of the great iniurie and contempt, that he had committed against him. He would haue beene so farre from vsing his power, and authority, against him: that he would rather haue yeelded it vp into his hands, though no doubt, our Sauiour would neuer haue accepted it from him, seeing he was appointed of God, to another most high and excellent end. But because Pilates feare was but as a flash of lightning, arising from a sodaine stroke of thunder, as he doth by and by cast off all feare. Neuertheles, he doth first aske our Sauiour, whence he is: as though he should say, what manner of one art thou? Art thou a man as other earthly and mortall men are, or art thou one come from heauen? what saiest thou of thy selfe? Thus Pilate presumed, that he might command our Sauiour, to answer him at his pleasure. And this is the second thing which was said to be obserued.

But as it followeth in the third place: our Sauiour Christ knowing that Pilate made no good vse of his feare, and that he was not humbled, to desire to be instructed in the truth: but that, as he had despised his former answer, in that he told him he came into the world to beare witnes of the truth: so hee would as lightly reiect, whatsoeuer he should now affirme, concerning the Deitie of his Person, or vnion of his diuine nature to the humane, &c. Therefore, touching this point, which he was not fit to heare, he answereth him by most wise & discreete silence: the minde of our Sauiour, being wholly setled to the fulfilling of the rest of his sufferings: and not to seek any deliuerance at the hands of Pilat, the falsnes of whose heart he did better know, then Pilat did.

By the occasion of which silence of our Sauiour, though most iust and discreete, Pilate (as was obserued) doth in the fourth place, proceede to a second question: wherein, he doth first no lesse hautily or imperiously, then angerly, reproue our Sauiour for his silence: Speakest thou not to me, saith Pilate? And then he rendereth a reason of his reproofe, saying further, Knowest thou not that I haue power to crucifie thee, and power to loose thee? As though he should say: Herein thou doest against thy selfe, thou knowest not what. But the matter duly considered, we doe easily finde, that as Pilates reproofe was vniust and indirect, so his reason is altogether void of reason, & is no better, thē a vaine & presumptuous boast of a power, which he had not indeed. For no Magistrate, no not Cæsar himself, whose substitute only Pilat was, nor any Magistrate in all the world, euer had, or haue power to doe what they list: to saue or destroy, at their pleasure, vnles they wil play the wicked Tyrants: but they are limitted of God, what they stād boūd to do: that is, they must so iustifie the innocēt & righteous that they may not think it lawful for thē to condemn him, & they must so condemne the wicked, and him that hath capitally deserued death, that they may not at their pleasure without sinne against God, iustifie and acquite him. Pilates reason therefore, is no reason; but a prowd and vnreasonable boast, of that power which did not belong vnto him. And no meruaile, though Pilate light vpon an vniust reason: seeing he hath taken vpon him, to reproue the iust silence of our Sauiour. Wherein also, as we shall further perceiue: he is vtterly deceiued, in that he thinketh by this his lofty and threatning speech, to make our Sauiour pliable to serue his humour: as if he had to deale with some timorous and fearefull spirited man. For as it followeth in the fift place, our Sauiour Christ sheweth himselfe, to be of a most staied and resolued minde: knowing perfectly, both what he was to say, and also what he was to doe, without either the inticing, or terrifying, either of Pilat, or of any other. And therefore, though he doe now answer Pilate, hauing a fit occasion so to doe: yet he doth it, with all holy liberty of mind and spirit, answering as the matter it selfe required, and nothing regarding to please the humour of Pilate. The which also, our Sauiour doth not so much, for Pilates sake, or in regard of the Iewes, whom he taxeth in this his answer, as that he might leaue a common instruction to the Church of God, concerning the ground and foundation as it were, of all power and authority: and also concerning the right vse of the same, as well touching the Magistrate himselfe, in the sentence and execution of iustice, as those that doe require iustice at his hands.

To this end, we are to consider either part of the answer of our Sauiour: the first whereof, concerneth Pilate himselfe more directly: the other respecting the Iewes, yet so, as the sinne of Pilate, is secretly insinuated and reprooued therein.

In the first part of the answer, our Sauior telleth Pilat, who had vainely boasted of an absolute power, (as we haue seene before) That he could haue had no power at all against him, vnles it had bin giuen him frō aboue. As though our Sauiour should haue said in more words: howsoeuer thou doest licentiously boast of a power at large, not knowing, or aduisedly considering what thou speakest: I know assuredly, that it is so farre off, that thou couldest doe what thou list with me, touching life or death, crucifying or loosing of me: that vnles it were giuen thee from aboue, (I doe not meane from the higher power of the Emperour, vnder whom thou art Gouernour here) but vnles it were giuen thee from heauen, euen by the diuine counsell, and appointment of God, the most high Ruler and Gouernour aboue all: thou couldest doe, neither the one, nor the other, nor any thing at all against me. And thus doth our Sauiour Christ, plainly open a speciall point, concerning the mystery of his holy sufferings, vnder this whole course which Pilate taketh with him: both in that which is already past, and in all which he knew was behinde: to wit, that he had not so much to doe with Pilate, and his iudgement, as with the diuine iustice of God, before whose tribunall seate he did stand; and that in all his sufferings he did susteine the wrath of his iudgement, districtly bent against the sinne of mankinde: the which, he in that he was man, did on our behalfe, answer the diuine Maiesty for. But the generall instruction, which he intimateth and setteth downe in these words, is this: that according as all power and authority, of ciuill magistracy, is the ordinance of God, according to that of the Apostle of our Lord Iesus Christ, Rom. 13. 1. There is no power but of God, &c. And as our Sauiour himselfe is by King Salomon, vnder the name of the wisedome of God, described to say, By me Kings reigne, &c. Prou. 8. 15. 16. so ought not Pilate onely, but likewise all other Princes, Iudges, and Rulers, to looke well to the discharge of their office: as they will answer vnto God, and to the son of God our Lord Iesus Christ, when he shall come at the last day, to cal all Magistrates, to giue an account, how faithfully they haue discharged their offices, committed to them by the supreame and almighty God.

Now in the second part of the answer, our Sauiour Christ inferreth vpon vpon the former, that in so much as Pilate was the Magistrate of God: and by vertue of his office ought to doe iustice, therfore they that had deliuered him vnto Pilate, had the greater sinne.

And this, as was said, doth directly concerne the Iewes, whose sinne our Sauiour Christ aggrauateth in this respect, that in seeking to put him to death, and hauing no iust cause on their part, they did therfore goe about to peruert the ordinance of God: & to make the magistrate, a minister of their malice. Wherin also (as was further said) he doth closelie admonish Pilate, of the greatnes of his sin, in that, through his own corrupt dealing, he stood inwrapped in the guiltines of the sin of the Iewes though not yet so deeplie plũged as they were. And therwithall, he doth likewise giue to vnderstãd, that he was in dãger to haue his part in that vengeãce, which could not, but hãg ouer their heads: for that high iniustice, which they cõmitted against him, & that also with a most high hand.

The ground & history of his last examinatiõ or arraignment before Pilate.

Wherfore, as touching the generall doctrine, of this latter part of our Sauiour his answer to Pilat it is this: that all inferiours, & euery one in place of subiection, stand th bound, euen for that reuerence which they beare vnto God himselfe, to take heede, that they neuer goe about to peruert the iudgment seat of iustice, by any wrõg information, or accusation or by any other corruption, or accusation whatsoeuer: vnder the paine of his high and heauie displeasure. And proportionablie, that all other in their inferiour places & callings, be carefull in the Lord, both how to rule, and also to obey: as well in the familie priuatelie, as in the town or Citie publikely, and in the church also, as well as in the common wealth, as we are further, by the grace of God, hereafter to obserue. For God will call all to an account. And as hee hath giuen anie power, as a grace, to those that haue it: according as Kings and Princes doe in their stiles worthilie and honourablie acknowledge, that they are such as they be, by the grace of God: so God looketh (and so he may iustly) that all doe behaue themselues gratiouslie in their places, as instruments both of his holy iustice, and also of his clemencie and mercie, and not of their rigorous wilfulnes and tyrannie, whereby they should alter their owne gratious stiles, as beeing such as they are, by the anger and wrath of God, rather then by his fauour, and grace.

Thus much, concerning the most wise, and seasonable Answere of our Sauiour Christ, by occasion of Pilates vaine boast of his power and autoritie, to the preiudice of the most Souereigne power and autoritie of God.

Now in the sixt place, concerning that which followed, vpon this last examination of our Sauiour, on Pilates parte: it was, as the Euangelist testifieth, this: that thenceforth, he sought still to loose our Sauiour: but on the Iewes parte, that they, by their outragious importunitie, doe frustrate the indeuour of Pilate, notwithstanding his manifold attempts to the contrarie.

In Puate therefore, we may well obserue, at the least a great shewe of some regard of iust ce: or rather of auoyding the extremitie of iniustice, whervnto he was most vehementlie solicited and importuned. And the rather, because hee continueth in his manner, to pleade the innocencie of our Sauiour: although our Sauiour no waye sought to make him inclinable to shewe him anie fauour, aboue that hee in his owne conscience, did see the equitie of his cause: but carieth himselfe in such vprightnes, that with all holie wisedome, and modestie, hee hath euen now last of all, verie grauely reproued Pilate of his vaine & prowd boasting of a power, aboue that which was communicated vnto him. A thing verilie, which men of lower place thẽ Pilate, yea which men of lowest place, will hardlie indure: that is, to heare the particular reproofe of their sin: & therefore may well be set to schoole, to learne this lesson of a heathen man.

But yet so, as we be all carefull, to shewe forth a more constant fruite of reproofe then Pilate did: & so settle our consciences vpon a better ground, then he settled his. For in so much as he had not a cleare conscience, neither looked vp directly to God, but sought rather to please men thẽ God, & to do that which might be most to the credit and praise of his owne ambitious pollicie (wading cunninglie in so weightie a cause) rather then that which might be most to the glorie of God, in the vpright discharge of his dutie: therefore all Pilates vertue, how great in shewe soeuer, vanished away verie sudenlie, as the morning dewe, and came to nothing. Nay it ended in his most foule sinne, as it followeth in the last place of our present text, to be in part considered. For the Iewes are more strong to frustrate and ouerturne Pilate, then hee was to holde out in his good indeuour. For so soone as they returne, to grate vpon their former string, (how false and vntunable soeuer Pilate had tried it to be; namely, that our Sauiour Christ had committed treason against Cæsar: and further, yell out in threatning wise against Pilate, as if they would draw him, as an accessarie, in the same pretended treason: For if thou deliuer him, (say they) thou art not Cæsars friende) howsoeuer Pilate carieth the same face a while longer, yet because his heart was not vpright, all at once hee yeeldeth most cowardlie, and so bewraieth what the vanitie of all heatheniſh vertue is: not onely in Pilate, but in all other, whosoeuer make the greatest shewe, if they be not renewed and sanctified by the holie Spirit of God: of whose glorie, all both Iewe and Gentile, are depriued, through our owne corruption, as it is notablie discouered vnto vs, in this the finall conspiracie and consent, both of Iewes and Gentiles, against the Sonne of God.

But that we may see the full issue, let vs heare what foloweth in the holy Storie.

THe which that wee may see, in a more full and readie viewe: wee are to take in heere, that which the other Euangelistes doe furthermore write, concerning the whole processe of the same matter.

Question. And first, what are wee to take in here, from the Euangelist Matthew?

Answere. Here, (as I haue learned) wee may not vnfitlie consider, of that which he writeth, concerning the message which Pilates wife sent vnto him, as wee read, chapt: 27. verse 19. in these wordes.

19. Also, when he was set downe vpon the iudgement seate (saith S. Matthewe) his wife sent to him, saying, Haue thou nothing to doe with that iust man: for I haue suffered manie things this day in a dreame, by reason of him.

Explicatiõ This indeed, may not vnfitlie be thought, to haue the iust place here. For the holy Euangelist Iohn, very particularlie recording the troublesome and vnsetled course of Pilate: now going out to the Iewes, and eftsoones returning into the Common hall againe, and that fowre or fiue times: hee doth not at all mention his sitting downe on the iudgement seate, till this last time. And as touching the Euangelist Matthew, he doth not so exactly obserue the orderlie courses: but speaketh ioyntlie, both of the Iewes, their reiecting of our Sauiour Christ: as abhorring him more then Barabbas, and also of Pilates condemning of him. Neither will this graue sitting downe, agree to the former light and passionate course, which Pilate tooke. And therefore may we, as was said, not vnaptlie consider of this pointe heere in this place. And moreouer, wee may with like reason, adde next vnto this, that, which the same Euangelist writeth further, concerning Pilates washing of his handes, before he gaue sentence of condemnation against our Sauiour: as also the extreame and most desperate malice of ths Iewes, as it followeth in the same 27. ch: verf. 44. 45.

What

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate

The ground and history of his condemnation by Pilate.

Question. What are the wordes of the holy Euangelist to this purpose?

Answer. 24 He writeth thus, when Pilate sawe he auailed nothing, but that more tumulte was made, he tooke water and washed his handes before the multitude, saying: I am innocent of the blood of this iust man: looke you to it.

25 Then answered all the people, and said, His blood be on vs, and on our children.

These things the Euangelist S. Matthewe alone doth testifie. And his witnes is true, and sufficient, as of one sanctified and appointed by God himselfe thervnto. Now of the rest, the Euangelist S. Luke doth make most expresse mention of that iudiciall sentence of iudgement, which Pilate gaue against our Sauiour: and therfore, we are to receiue his more full testimonie, in this behalfe.

Question. What doth he set downe, concerning this pointe?

Answere. His wordes are these. chapt: 23. verses 23. 24. 25.

23 They (that is the Iewes, saith S. Luke) were instant, with loud voices, and required that he might be crucified, and the voices of them, and the high Priestes, preuailed: or were mightie and great, to wit, by an exceeding out-crie.

24 So Pilate gaue sentence that it should be done as they required.

25 And he let loose vnto them, him that for insurrection & murther, was cast into prison, whom they had desired: and hee deliuered Iesus, to do with him what they would.

Yea, & as the Euangelist S. Mark telleth vs, ch: 15. ver. 15. Pilate did this, being willing to content, or satisfie the people: so farre did his own false heart deceiue him. And then it foloweth in the same Euang: vers: 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. How our Sauiour Christ was again most vile abused by the souldiers of Pilate immediately vpon iudgement pronounced: as they had dealt before, so soone as they had cruelly and despitefullie scourged him.

Question. What are the words of S. Mark, whereby he reporteth this their wicked dealing? Rehearse them.

Answer. 16. Then (saith the Euangelist Marke, the souldiers led him away into the Hall, which is the common hall, and called together the whole bande.

17 And they clad him with purple, and put about him, to wit on his head (as S. Matthewe expresseth a crowne of thornes, which they platted and wreathed.

18 And began to salute him, saying, Haile king of the Iewes.

19 And they smote him on the head with a reede (to wit, with a reede of a greater sort, such as is the Cane) and spat vpon him, and bowing the knees, did him reuerence.

20. And when they had mocked him, they tooke the purple off him, and put his owne clothes on him, and led him out to crucifie him.

Explicatio The same also doth the Euangelist S. Matthewe record, and that with some inlargement in some pointes: and therfore we will here set downe his wordes also, which are these. Then the Souldiers of the Gouernour, tooke Iesus into the common hall, or Pretorium (that is, as wee may perceiue by the wordes of S. Marke, the Hall which belonged to the Prator, or Romane Gouernour) and they gathered about him the whole bande.

And they stripped him, and put vpon him a scarlet robe. Like enough, it was a darke or sad scarlet, inclining to purple, or a verie bright purple, inclining to scarlet, and therfore is called purple by S. Mark, & scarlet by S. Matthewe: it mattering not greatly, what the verie proper colour of the garment was.

And they platted a crowne of thornes, and put it vpon his head, and (as S. Matthewe addeth moreouer, and aboue that wee read in S. Marke) a reede in his right hand, and bowing their knees before him, they mocked him, saying God saue thee (or haile thou) ô king of the Iewes. And spitting vpon him they took the reed, & smote him on the head.

Thus when they had mocked him, they tooke the robe from him, & put his owne rayment on him, and led him away to crucifie him. These most vile & vnworthy abuses Pilates souldiers thus recorded by both the Euang: S. Matthew, & Mark: may worthily be accounted, as an appendix or shutting vppe of the Acte of our Sauiour, his vniust condemnation, by the mouth of Pilat: who had so often alreadie, and euen immediately before he gaue sentence, iustified him.

And further, howsoeuer these Euangelistes doe so write, as if our Sauiour were nowe first of all, thus ill intreated: as it might seeme, by that they write, that the souldiers at this time stripped our most blessed Sauiour, &c. Yet by the Euangelist Iohn, we haue seene expreslie alreadie, that as our Sauiour was scourged before he was condemned, so also hee was in like manner thus abused. Since which time also, it seemeth to be plaine, by the same Euangelist, Iohn chapt: 19. 5. that the crowne of thornes, and purple garment, once put on, were not taken of, till he had bene the second time, most contemptuously reproched. The two former Euangelistes therfore, doe note the second contempt in the due place: but not the first disguising of our Sauiour, in the time thereof: like as the Euangelist Iohn, recording the former also, writeth nothing of the latter. So that wee are by due, and reuerend conference, to vnderstand the one by the other: and from them all, to learne one and the same truth, of the whole matter, so farre forth as it hath pleased God to reueale it vnto vs, by them all.

And thus wee haue the whole historie of the condemnation of our Sauiour before vs, with all thinges appertaining therevnto: both immediatelie going before, and also immediately following after, as the proper appurtenances of the same. The order of which things is this.

First, the place from whence Pilate gaue sentence.

Secondly, the time when it was giuen. Iohn chap: 19. vers. 13. 14.

Thirdlie, the message which Pilates wife sent her husband, when hee was set downe vpon the iudgement seat. Matth: chapt: 27. 19.

Fourthlie, the contention of Pilate against the Iewes, to the end hee might haue quieted & staied them from their enterprise, yet at the last. Ioh: 19. 14. 15.

Fiftlie, the most furious and desperate obstinacie of the Iewes in their persisting: in the same 15. verse and Luke 23. 27.

Sixtlie, Pilates washing of his hands. Matth: 27. verse 24. And vpon this, the extreame madnes and impietie of the Iewes renewed, verse 25.

Seuenthly, the sentence it selfe. Luke 23. verses 24, 25. And finallie, the most licentious, profane, aud impious petulancie of the souldiers, in their abusing of our Sauiour. Of these things therfore, let vs I pray you, stand a while to consider, in the same course and order, that we haue now rehearsed them.

And first, concerning the place, from whence our Sauiour was condemned by Pilate, the chiefe Magistrate aud gouernour ouer the Iewes, vnder the Romane Emperour: it is described vnto vs by the Euangelist Iohn by two names, the one in the greeke language, the other in the hebrewe. The greeke is Lithostroton signifying that it was a place curiouslie paued and layed with stonework. The hebrewe name is Gabbatha comming of Gabbab, which signifieth to lifte vp, giuing to vnderstand, that it was a place built in stately manner, to the vse of giuing iudgement out of the same. The which beeing so diligentlie noted by the holie Euangelist, it must in no wise be neglected, not onlie for the truth of the historie, but also for the vse of the matter in hand? in so much as God would to singular purpose, haue our Sauiour condemned to death, as also after to be put to death, not secretlie & obscurelie, or tumultuouslie, as Stephen was stoned: but in a solemne manner, from a Theater, as it were, to the view of all the world, both of Iewes and Gentiles: that all may see in our Sauiour Christ his condemnation, first, the deserued condemnation of vs all, and then that we haue no other meanes wherby we may be cleared, and acquitted before the iudgement seat of Almightie God, but through him alone.

The like is to be obserued, concerning the time, which was, as the holie Euangelist doth of purpose expreslie mention, at the Preparation of the Passeouer. That is, on the day wherein the Iewes prepared themselues, and made preparation euerie familie for to eate their lamb, at the euening in thankfull remembrance of their most fauourable deliuerance out of Ægypt: at such time, as God smote all the first borne of the Ægyptians, with death, all in one night, both of men & beasts. So that the condemnation of our Sauiour Christ, was at such a time as the Iewes made their speciall resorte to Ierusalem, out of all their tribes, yea and like enough manie Proselytes, out of other nations.

Wherin

Beleeue in God the Sonne, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground & history of his condemnation by Pilate.

wherin also it might the more liuely appeare, that our Sauiour Christ being now in preparing for the offering vp of his most holie Sacrifice vpon the Crosse: was the true Lambe ordeined of God, & the true Passeouer, vnto all that should beleeue in his name, to turne away the euerlasting wrath of God from them, & to procure and purchase them his eternall saluation. Thus, the time of the condemnation of our Sauiour, as well as the maner of it, was most open & famous, to singular ends & purposes, by the most holy counsell & appointmēt of God. Yea & herein, the Lord did not refuse, to deferre the execution of his counsell in this behalf, a day longer then his appointment was, that the Passeouer should haue bene celebrated: by reason that the Iewes, by their abusiue custome, had altered the day, as was heretofore obserued, when we spake of the time wherin our Sauiour did celebrate the Passeouer with his Disciples, which was the euening before. Moreouer, as touching the time of the condemnation of our Sauiour, the Euangelist Iohn doth yet more particularly expresse, that it was about the sixt hower of the same day, as our translations, yea & the greek copies thēselues, doe vsually, & for the most part record the words of the Euangel: Iohn. But becausе the Euang: Marke writeth, ch: 15.25. that it was the third hower, whē the Iewes crucified our Sauiour: therfore a question may be moued (though not to cōtrarie either of the Euangelists, but for the remouing of the scruple of our owne mindes) how it can be that the condemnation of our Sauiour should not be till about the 6. hower, when as the Iewes had crucified him, that is, had nailed him to the Crosse, about the 3. hower: & yet this must needs be after the time of the condēnation? To the answer of which questiō, & for the remouing of euery scruple, which might arise from it, it may not seem altogither strange vnto vs, that the Euāgelists do mention diuers howers in so small a distance: becausе it may easily be admitted, that ther was a diuerse reckoning of the howers, partly after the Iewes maner, who reckoned their day from Sun rising, to Sun going down, to cōteine alwaies, (whether the day were longer or shorter) 12. equall howres, specially at the Æquinoctiū, as it was at the Passeouer. The which reckoning, the Euangelist Mark followeth here, as the Apost: Peter doth, Act: 2.15. These are not drunken, as ye suppose, since it is but the third hower of the day. But the Romanes, as it is testified of some, followed an other order of reckoning: in somuch as they began to reckon their day, for ciuill vse & gouernment, about midnight. Whervpon saith Piscator vpon the 33. verse of Mark, Admit that the sunne rose then at Ierusalem, about the fourth hower after midnight: then this, that is, the 6. hower of Iohn, to wit, after the Roman reckoning, shalbe the second hower of the naturall day, or from the rising of the sunne. And so there may passe the space of about an hower, betweene the deliuerie of Pilate, whereby he deliuered Iesus to be crucified, and the crucifying it selfe. And thus the third hower which Mark speaketh of, for the time of the crucifying, according to the Iewes account, might well follow that which Iohn calleth the 6. hower, when our Sauiour was condēned, according to the account of the Romans. So both the Euāgelists may vnder diuerse nūbers, aptlie pointe, & direct vs to one, & the same howre. And the rather may it be probablie supposed, that the Euangelist Iohn, writing of the Acte of a Romane, did in that respect, follow the Romane account: & so much the rather also, may it be thought so, for that some then liuing, loking to the Romane accoūt, & not marking the Iewes course, might peraduenture cauill at the Euang: Marke, for reckoning the third hower, for the hower of the Crucifying, which was of the Gentiles more vsually spokē of as being after the 6. houre: in so much as he was condēned about the 6. But Beza vpon Mark 15.25. answereth this doubt two other waies. First, becausе the Iewes thēselues haue double reckoning of the day as well as of the night: either by twelue seuerall portions, as it were, 12. ynches of the foote rule, according to that of our Sauiour, Ioh: 11.19. Are ther not twelue howers in the day? or by quadrāts, & 4. equall parts, as they deuided the night into 4 watches, so that the 1. fourth part, was called the 1. houre of the morning: the 2. fourth part, the third howre, the 3. fourth part of the day, the sixt howre:

Beliefe in God the Sonne, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground & history of his condemnation by Pilate.

the last fourth part the 9. houre, or the euening, according to that of Matt: 20. 1. &c. The housholder went out to hire labourers into his vineyard, at 4. seuerall times of the day: that is, in the morning, at the 3. houre, at the 6. houre, & at the ninth. According to the which account, Marks third houre, being the 2. quadrant, or fourth part of the day, bearing the name of the third houre, containing the fourth, fift, and sixt hower: reacheth to Johns sixt houre or noonetide, agreeable to the former reckoning of twelue houres to the day: But then we must allow but three houres to the crucifying of our Saviour, which canot well be thought to suffice, for the leading of him to the place of crucifying, and for all things that fell out, while he continued vpon the crosse: to wit, the crucifying of the two thieues, whose suspension & nailing must needs spend time: all the secure & oftē mockings of our Saviour, by all sorts of wicked beholders, & namely of the passengers, beside the rest, &c: before the 3. howres of darknes, which fell vpon the earth, & cōtinued neare to the time that our Saviour died. And besides, to put vs out of doubt, concerning the continuance of the crucifying of our Saviour: the Euang: Mark doth not onely mention the third houre, but also the sixt and ninth. ch: 15. 33. 34. Wherfore, vnlesse we could see sufficiēt reason, why that should preuaile with vs, which Piscator obserueth: we are to resolue our selues, to think with Beza, according to some very anciēt Greek copies, that the text in John is to be redde (about the third houre) in stead of this, about the sixt howre. But yet soe to resolue, that with him: for the auoiding of contention, we leaue the liberty of resolution, free to euerie man, vpon any more soūd reason, which hee hath to stay his iudgement vpon. For the which, read Beza in his 27. Hom: vpon the hist: of the Passion, about three leaues from the beginning of the Homilie: and in his larger annotations both vpon Marke and John. The wordes of Beza, in his annotations vpon Mark: ch: 15. 25. are these, touching this point. Subet existimare depravatā esse numeri notam: quod ad me quidē attinet, malim existimare apud Iohannē potius reponendum esse (Hosei trite) quàm apud Marcum (Hosei hectē.) Praterquā enim quod Nonnus, Euangelij Iohannis interpres non recens sic legit, & vetus D. Camerarij codex, & meum vetustissimū exēplar hoc confirmat: ipsa historiæ series hoc postulat. Nam si hora erat pene sexta, quum damnatus est Christus, qui potuit tam breui spacio abduci, crucifigi cum latronibus, sic otiosè derideri a præterēuntibus. Necesse fuerit enim, vt his omnibus vix dimidiū horæ tribuatur, quum a sexta ad nonā, tenebræ terram inuoluerint. Oportet ergo, cum primo diluculo ad Pilatum ductus fuerit Christus, tres pene horas fuisse in ipsius causæ cognitione cōsumptas, vt qui hora pene tertia damnatus fuerit: deinde hora tertia crucifixum, ad horā vsq; sextā fuisse omnium iudicijs expositum, sicut copiosè explicāt Euangelistæ: & hora demum nona post trium horarum tenebras mortuū: quod antē diei superfuit, fuisse sepulturæ datum. Sed liberum, hic cuiuis iudicium esto. If it be to our liking, to think that the note of the nūber to be misse-copied: I for my parte (saith Beza) had rather suppose, that these words (Hosei trite) about the third houre, should be restored againe to his place in John, then these wordes (Hosei hectē) about the sixt houre, should be set downe in Marke. For beside that &c. And vpon John, cha: 19. 14. his words are these, In vno codice scriptum inuenimus (trite) tertiâ quæ vera est lectio, vt ostendimus. Mark. 15. 25. In one booke we haue found it writtē (trite) the third, which is the true reading. Thus much, concerning the second thing, which we are (as was said) to cōsider in our present text of S. John: that is, the time of the condēnation of our Saviour.

Now thirdlie, touching the message which Pilates wife sent to her husband, according to the record of S. Matth: when he was set downe on the iudgemēt seate: we may iustlie account, both the occasion of it, (which was her troublesome dreame, wherby her thoughts were greatly cumbred and feared) & also the message it selfe, to be so farre forth caused and directed, by the prouidence of God, that there might as well be an extraordinarie testimonie, concerning the innocencie of our Sauiour touching himselfe, as that Pilate, dallying so notablie with his owne conscience, and with the seate of iustice it selfe, might be left the more without excuse.

What

Beliefe in God the Sone, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground & historie of his condemnation by Pilate.

What we should thinke furthermore, concerning Pilates wife her selfe, wee haue no further groūd, then charitablie to hope, that this trouble of her minde now, might be a meanes of bringing her to the true faith of Christ afterwards. The duty, no doubt, which she performed, was in it selfe cōmendable, & worthy the imitation of euery faithfull seruant of God: according to that which we read. Prou: 24. 11. 12. Deliuer them that are drawne to death, &c.

Fourthly, touching Pilates last contention with the Iewes, euen frō the iudgement seat, that hee might set our Sauiour at libertie, from the sentence of death, whervnto it is verie likelie, he was the rather incited, by the former message of his wife: we can iudge no otherwise of it, then of the vnfaithfulnes of Balaam, in another cause, who looked in his deceitfull heart, rather to the wages of vnrighteousnes, then to the holie will and pleasure of God. And so did Pilate: he looked more to keepe himselfe from the displeasure of the Emperour, & to content & satisfie the Iewes, thē to please God by executing true iustice and iudgement, in this most weighty cause: as the issue will euidently discouer & declare.

Fiftlie, he confirmed, or rather obfirmed an obstinate malice of the Iewes, in most sauage wise, vttering it selfe, by howling and yelling out, Crucifie, Crucifie him. And againe, wee haue no King, but Cæsar: and charging Pilate, that he was no friend to Cæsar, if he should let Christ loose. And last of all, His blood be vpon vs, and vpon our children. They shew themselues herein, to be rather senselesse, and woode beasts, then reasonable and meeke spirited men: as Dauid prophesied long before of them. Ps. 22. 12. Many yong bullies haue compassed me: mighty bulles of Bashan haue compassed me about. They gape vpon me with their mouthes, as a ramping and roaring Lion: And verse 16. Dogges haue compassed me, & the assemblie of the wicked haue inclosed me, &c. Whervpon also, it is euident, how iustlie the Lord hath reiected and cast them off, from being a people to him, seeing they reiected him from being their King: and also hath brought all euill vpon them, euen the reuēge of most innocent blood, shed by them, both vpon themselues, and their children, according to their owne wicked and furious imprecation, as we shall haue further occasion to note afterward. Yea and for a worthie punishment of their dissembling, in renouncing anie King but Cæsar: as though they had bene singularlie deuoted to him, when in truth, they abhorred his gouernment: the Lord hath not onely stirred vp Cæsar, to take seuere vengeance, not many yeares after, but also he hath scattered them from beeing a Nation, and made them vassalls to euery King almost in all the world. And thus, according to the holy Prou: cha: 26. Hee that diggeth a pit, shall fall therein, & he that rouleth a stone, it shall returne vpon him.

In the sixt place, the washing of Pilates handes, howsoeuer it pleased himselfe, who rather in a profane imitation of the superstitious washinges of the Iewes, or otherwise: it is worthilie to be accounted of vs, as a vaine and absurd practise. For to what purpose is it, that he washeth his handes, for a signe of his innocencie, when hee mindeth forthwith to pollute and defile the same againe, by imbruing them as it were, in the blood of our Sauiour? Verilie, the washing of the hands is nothing before God, so long as the conscience is defiled in his sight, and the tongue also defiled, by giuing forth a most vniust sentence, as Pilate did. For immediately vppon the outcrie of the Iewes before mentioned, Pilate notwithstanding all former goodlie protestations, wholie condescendeth vnto them: as one most baselie & seruilelie fainting, yea cleane giuing ouer the defence of the most holie and righteous cause, and Person, that euer was called in question, before the iudgement seate of any mortall man. But it may be, some will say, Pilate is to be excused, because he was after a sorte enforced, by the importunity of the Iewes, to do that which otherwise he would not haue done. We answere no, Pilate is at no hand to be excused. For although the coaction were the sinne of the Iewes, yet Pilates yeelding to vnlawfull purposes, iustice, was his sin alone, and not theirs. So likewise if I did eat. Or as the woman for our selues to say as Adam did, The woman, &

Beliefe in God the Sone, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground & historie of his condemnation by Pilate.

man did, The Serpent deceiued me. For God doth iustly proceed to giue sentence for all that they alledged: seeing they consented to sinne. Neither enticing, nor terrifying, can excuse: if a man by any meanes giue consent. And therfore it is expreslie said, that the fearfull and vnbeleeuing shall haue their part in the burning lake, if they repent not of their sinne &c. Reuel: 21. 8. Coaction, or inforcing to an action in it selfe euill, is onely then excusable, when the partie cõpelled, hath no way yeelded to it: but cleane against his will, hath ben constrained to do that which he constantlie resisted to the end: as if one stronger then himselfe should forcible bowe his arme, and hand, to wound or stabbe his deare friend. But as touching Pilate, his arme was strong enough to haue resisted all the force of the Iewes, if he had not bowed it of himselfe. Or if he had found it to weake to haue represſed them, it had bene a thousand fold better for him, to haue died himselfe for Christ, then to haue ben their vassall, to the vniust murthering of him. It is true indeede, that the most strong and righteous arme of the Lord had a most soueraigne, and ouerruling stroke, in all these things: but wee speake nowe, what was the sinne, and on the contrarie, what the dutie of man ought to haue beene. For in all thinges God is most perfectlie holie and righteous, but vaine man seeketh to himselfe many wicked inuentions.

Seuenthlie therefore, as touching the sentence of Pilate against our Sauiour: it was from his mouth, yea and also from his deceitfull, light, and inconstant heart, a most vniust, wicked, and cruell sentence. There is little recorded, by the Euangelists, concerning the manner of the pronouncing of it. Neuertheless wee cannot but thinke, it was done in iudiciall manner: not onely because it was done from the iudgement seate, but also because there was a gaole-deliuerie, as we may say, at the same time: as it is euident by the condemnation of two thieues or cruell and murthering robbers, besides the acquiting of Barabbas that most wicked and seditious murtherer, in this Assises, as it were. Onely this must not be neglected, to the perpetuall reproche of Pilate, that in giuing sentence, he sheweth himselfe a most seruile vassall to the malice of the Iewes, in that hee is content to be prescribed by them, what sentence hee shall giue. For as S. Luke saith, Hee gaue sentence, that it should be as they required. And so in effect, he made them the iudges, who were the malitious, and false accusers. Yea, and S. Marke saith, he was willing to content the people.

Now in the last place, touching the most vile, & vnworthy abuse of the souldiers renewed against our Sauiour Christ, after his condemnation, like as they had dealt with him, after his scourging: we may well reckon it, as an appurtenance to the condemning of himselfe. For albeit (as was obserued before) the Euangelists Matthewe and Marke, doe nowe first mention the putting on of the Crowne of thornes, and the Purple: Yet Iohn maketh it plaine, that this was done before: to wit, immediately after hee was scourged. Neither was the purple garment taken off, till nowe that hee was condemned.

And as touching the crown of thorns, ther is no mention of the taking away of that at all. So that like enough, they led him forth to be crucified, wearing that ensigne of their reproch, euen to the crosse, & on the crosse also, as it may seem. So thẽ, besides the former derisorie putting on of the Crown, & the purple garment, here are nowe the second time, fiue most vile and reprochfull indignities offered to our most blessed Sauiour, frõ these base, lewde & licentious souldiers.

The 1. was this, that they put a reed into his right hand, in a scorne against the scepter of his Kingdom, euen as by their crowne of thornes, they reproched his Kingdom or Roiaty it self: notwithstãding in truth, no gold most pure, nor barre of the strongest iron, could haue sufficiẽtly shadowed forth the glorie & power of the euerlasting & most victorious Kingdom & Scepter of our Lord Iesus Christ.

The 2. indignity of those lewd souldiers, was, that they mock him with their him: w[illegible] by bowing of their knees, and making of a scornefull obeisance vnto humblie indeede, [illegible] it had bene happie for them, (if they had had grace) most forgiuenes at his handes. [illegible] fallen downe before him, to haue craued mercie and

The

Beleefe in God the Son, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and history of his leading to execution.

The third indignity was, that they mocke him with their tongues, saying in derision, Haile King of the Iewes.

The fourth most vile indignity was, that they did spit in his most holy and reuerend face. A most strange and horrible thing, once to thinke, that any one should be found so diuelishly minded: saue that wee may see in these, wherevnto partly ignorance, and partly malice, would driue any of vs, without the grace of God. Nothing is more vile then wee are prone vnto of our selues, not onely against men, but euen against God himselfe.

Last of all, they take a reede, or rather the reede; to wit, that which before they had put into his hand: (like enough it was some Cane reede) wherewith they smote him on the head, thereby shewing their contempt against both Scepter and Crowne: and also (as we may well conceiue) to the molesting of the holy flesh of our Sauiour, by setteling the thornes, or prickes of the bushes thereon, to the causing of blood to runne downe his cheekes. What christian soule, duly considering these things, must not needes be astonished with them, and enforced to acknowledge these wicked wretches, to be most worthy to be cried out vpon, and to be condemned for euer. And so no doubt they are, vnles God vouchsafed to giue them repentance, and a heart most dutifully affected toward him, whom before they had most grosly abused. But leauing them, let vs turne to our selues: and in regard of our selues, let vs learne from hence, that notwithstanding we haue not done these things actually against the person of our Sauiour: yet besides that, our pride and contempt hath beene great against him, in the contempt of his word and Sacraments, and of the persons of our brethren, (the which he taketh to be done against himselfe) all that fell vpon him, was for our sinnes. And therefore, that wee ought to bee now most dutifully affected towarde our Sauiour, and to yeelde him all the honour wee may possibly performe and procure vnto him, as wee shall haue further occasion to consider, when wee come to the duties belonging to the comfort of faith, concerning these and all other the sufferings of our Sauiour.

THus then, from the condemnation of our Sauiour, and the sufferings perteining to the same: wee are now come to the execution of the sentence which Pilate gaue against him: and therein, to the last part of his sufferings, I meane, of his sufferings with the sense of dolour: though the humiliation of his sufferings, continued to the third day after his death, as we shall see when we come vnto them.

In the meane while, as touching this last part of the sufferings, which are as the sealing vp, and ratifying of themselues and all the former, to our euerlasting benefite, and endles comfort: yea so as without these, all the former could not haue profited vs: (for our sinne being capitall and deadly, it could not be fully satisfied for, but by the death of our Sauiour) let vs therefore vse as great diligence as possibly wee may attaine vnto, in the reuerend consideration of them.

The whole historie of this last part of the Passion of our blessed Sauiour, may be, for orders sake, distinguished into these seuerall branches, as it were.

First, the leading or carrying of him away from the place of condemnation, to the place of execution: with the things done there, before he was crucified.

Secondly, the fastening of him to the Crosse.

Thirdly, his continuance in hanging vpon the same.

Now vnto euery one of these, diuers worthie thinges doe belong. Of the which, let vs henceforth informe our selues, from the text of the holy history it selfe. And first, concerning the leading away of our Sauiour, to the place of execution.

Queſt. What doe the Euangeliſts write of this point?

Ans. The Euangeliſt Matthew, continueth the holie hiſtorie in theſe words, chap. 27. 31.

31 Thus when they had mocked him, they tooke the robe from him, and put his own raiment on him, and led him away to crucifie him.

Like to theſe are the words of Saint Marke.

It is verie true, euen ſuch as are all one in ſenſe, as wee may reade chap. 15. 20. Next vnto theſe, we may ſee the proceſſe of the hiſtorie, from the Euangeliſt Iohn.

How doth he carry it forward?

Queſtion. Anſwere. In the latter part of the 16. verſe, and in the whole 17. of his 19. chapter, thus we reade.

16 And they tooke Ieſus and led him away.

17 And he bare his croſſe, and he came to the place of the ſkull, ſo called, the which is called in Hebrew Golgotha.

32 Moreouer, Luke 23. 32. There were two others (ſaith the Euangeliſt) which were euill doers, led with him to be ſlaine.

Explicatio. Thus then, we ſee in what manner they led our Sauiour to the place of his execution, deſcribed by that name, whereby it was familiarly and vulgarly knowne, as differing from other places: the which alſo, the Euangeliſt Iohn, verſe 20. giueth to vnderſtand, that it was without the walles of the Citie: in that he ſaith, it was neare the Citie. But before our Sauiour came to this place, diuers memorable things fell out in the way as they led him: the which the Euangeliſt Luke doeth moſt fully record. Let vs therefore heare them from him.

Queſtion. What are the words of the Euangeliſt?

Anſwer. They are theſe, chap. 23. from the 26. verſe, to the 32.

26 And as they led him away, (ſaith the Euangeliſt Luke) they caught one Simon of Cyrene, comming out of the field, and on him they laid the croſſe to beare it after Ieſus.

27 And there followed him a great multitude of people, and women, the which bewailed and lamented him.

28 But Ieſus turned backe vnto them, and ſaid, Daughters of Ieruſalem, weepe not for me: but weepe for your ſelues, and for your children.

29 For behold the daies will come, when men ſhall ſay, Bleſſed are the barren, and the wombes that neuer bare, and the pappes which neuer gaue ſucke.

30 Then ſhall they beginne to ſay to the mountaines, Fall on vs, and to the hills, Couer vs.

30 For if they doe theſe thinges to a greene tree, what ſhall they doe to the drie?

Explicatiõ Theſe indeede are the memorable things, which fell out in the way, as they led our Sauiour to the place of execution. Thoſe things onely remaine, (concerning this firſt branch of the hiſtory of his execution) the which were done at his comming to the place. The firſt whereof, ſeemeth to be that which is mentioned by the Euangeliſts Matthew and Marke: to wit, the offer that was made of drinke to our Sauiour: and his refuſall to drinke, after that he had taſted what it was.

Queſtion. What writeth the Euangeliſt Matthew concerning this point?

Anſwer. Mat. 17. verſe 33. And when (ſaith he) they came vnto the place called Golgotha, (that is to ſay, a place of the ſkull ſo called)

34 They gaue him vinegre to drinke, mingled with gall, and when he had taſted thereof, he would not drinke.

Explication. Soe indeede we reade, Matthew, chap. 27. 33. 34. The ſame thing is teſtified by the Euangeliſt Marke, though in ſome little difference of words, chap. 15. verſe 23. And they gaue him to drinke wine mingled with mirrhe, but he receiued ued it not. This, as it seemeth, was the first thing that was done after that our Sauiour was come to the place of execution: euen while they fastened his crosse into the ground.

A second thing was, that together with the setting vp of the Crosse: there was an inscription, and title, lifted vp vpon it, to the view of the people, according to the appointment of Pilate: which conteined the cause why he was crucified, or rather in truth, a most deepe conuiction of the extreame wickednes of those, that did crucifie him: insomuch as, most rebellious subiects, doe crucifie their most lawfull and rightfull King. To the which end, reade the parable of the Lord of the Vineyard, Matth. 21. 33, 34. 35, 36, &c. 44. The which title, because the Euangelist Saint Iohn doeth more fully recorde, then anie other of the Euangelistes, let vs therefore borrowe it from him.

Question. What are the words of the storie?

Answer. It followeth thus, chap 19. verses 19, 20, 21, 22.

Iohn 19. verse 19. And Pilate wrote also a title, and put it on the crosse, and it was written, IESVS OF NAZARETH KING OF THE IEWES.

20 This title then read many of the Iewes: for the place (saith the Euangelist) where Iesus was crucified, was neare to the Citie: and it was written in Hebrew, Greeke, and Latine.

21 Then said the high Priests of the Iewes to Pilate, write not the King of the Iewes, but that he said, I am the King of the Iewes.

22 Pilate answered, what I haue written, I haue written.

Thus then, we haue the first part of the historie, of the execution of the sentence of condemnation, giuen against our Sauiour Christ laide before vs. Wherein, the things to be obserued are these.

First, the manner of the Iewes and Souldiers, their leading of him to the place of execution.

Secondly, the description, or notation of the place.

Thirdly, the great lamentation and weeping of the women, that were among that great multitude of people, which followed our Sauiour.

Fourthly, the excellent speech of our Sauiour vnto them, while he was in the way.

Fiftly, his refusing of the Mirrhie-wine which was offered vnto him at the place.

Finally, the inscription, or title, which was set vp vpon the Crosse.

These things therefore, are in the same order, not vnfitly to be considered of vs, before we proceede any further.

First therefore, as touching the manner of the leading of our Sauiour, it standeth in three things.

First, it is said, that the souldiers tooke off the purple garment, and led him forth in his owne clothes: but we doe not reade that they tooke off the crowne of thornes from his head.

Secondly, they caused him to carrie the tree, or timber of his owne Crosse: first all alone, vntill, as it seemeth, he fainted vnder it, as one through humane infirmitie, not able to beare it any longer. For so it pleased our Sauiour, to make himselfe euery way knowne, to be verie true man, in bearing euery weakenes and infirmitie, of mans weake and fraile nature, which is come vpon him by reason of his sinne: though hee himselfe was free from all sinne. By reason of which fainting of our Sauiour, the Iewes also & souldiers, hastening forward the execution: they alow him a helpe. Herevpon therefore, it followeth in the holy historie, as it is written by the Euangelist Luke: that as they led our Sauiour away, they caught one Simon a Cyrenian a poore ſtranger, comming out of the field, and compelled him to carry the Croſſe of our Sauiour after him: at the leaſt, the hinder part of it, though as ſome interpret theſe words (and ſo it is very likely) they made our Sauiour carrie the fore part ſtill. For out of all queſtion, they would permit him as little eaſe as they could. And why doe they thus roughly deale with the poore Cyrenian, comming peaceably out of the field: when they had ſtore about them nearer hand? It is the property of the wicked, when they are about their wicked practiſes, to deſire that all ſhould like of them, and to hate thoſe that ſhall not be of like minde with them. Now therefore, inſomuch as this ſtranger came, as one not liking, nor hauing any fellowſhip with them in this buſines: therefore they doe the rather of purpoſe fetch him in, to haue a hand in it, with them: or elſe to take the occaſion, further to abuſe him, according to that petulancie, which rude and vnruly ſouldiers are very apt vnto.

But God, as we may well perceiue, in his diuine prouidence, aimed at an other thing: euen hereby to ſhew, that it was his good pleaſure, that the Gentiles ſhould be taken into the fellowſhip of the Croſſe, and ſufferings of our Sauiour: not to be any partners in the merit of the Croſſe, but in the fruit of that redemption, which our Sauiour alone, hath moſt fully and perfectly made for vs. And touching this Cyrenian himſelfe, we may eaſily conceiue, that this impulſiue bearing of the materiall Croſſe of our Sauiour, was an inducement vnto him, willingly to beare his owne Croſſe afterward, as a faithfull Diſciple of Ieſus Chriſt. And therefore is not onely he himſelfe mentioned, as being of good note in the Church: but alſo two ſonnes of his likewiſe, according to the teſtimony of the Euangeliſt Marke, cha. 15. verſe 21. Where he deſcribeth this Simon of Cyrene, to be he that was father of Alexander and Rufus: to wit, both father and ſonnes, being afterward (as was ſaid) of good note in the Church of God.

Now thirdly, in that they leade other two malefactors with him: this they did, the rather to preiudice the innocency of our Sauiour, as if his cauſe had beene like to theirs, becauſe they had obteined of Pilate, the like iudgement againſt him.

Secondly, the place of execution is noted vnto vs: and that alſo is deſcribed two waies.

Firſt, by the common and vſuall name.

Secondly, by the ſituation of it.

*The naturall Hebrew word is Gulgoleth, noting the head or skull of a man, from the roundnes of it: as Iudg. 9. 53. 2. King. 9. 35. & 1. Chr. 10. 10. But it is oftentimes vſed for the whole perſon of a man, reckoning men by the poules as we vſe to ſay Reade Ex. 16. ver. 16. and chap. 28 ver. 26. Numb. 1. ver. 18. 20. 22. and chap. 3. 47. and 1. Chro. 23. 3. and ver. 24.

The name of it (as the Euangeliſt Iohn telleth vs) was in the Hebrew language: that is to ſay, in that dialect which was now in common vſe among the Iewes (though not the pure and naturall Hebrew) called *Golgotha, which ſignifieth the ſkull of a mans head: like as in the ſame ſignification, we may call it, as the Euangeliſt further addeth Kranion topon, a place bearing the name of a skull. And as Luke ſaith, that anſwerable to the Hebrew, it may be called in greeke Kranion, without any further addition. And ſo may we call it in Latine, from the Greeke word Cranium, or otherwiſe Caluaria: and in Engliſh, the Skull. But why doe the Euangeliſts, with a full conſent, thus mention the name of the place? Not that we ſhould ſeeke out any blinde and curious ſpeculation about the name, as ſome haue done: as though Adams skull had beene buried there, and had thereupon borne that name, &c. but to note the place by that name, whereby it was familiarly knowne: moſt likely ſo called, becauſe it was a piece of ground fit for execution, in that it conteined a little round hillocke, from whence the concourſe of people, might more euidently beholde thoſe that were executed. For they which haue beene there report, that it is ſuch a piece of ground, called to this day, Caluarie. So then, the mention of the place by the Euangeliſts, is to very good purpoſe, to argue the certaintie of the ſtorie, from this circumſtance.

But

Beleefe in God the Son who suffered vnder Põtius Pilate.

The grõd and history of his teasing to be crucified.

But there are beside this, two worthy reasons of worthy obseruation, in this respect: both of them set downe by the holy Apostle, in the Epistle to the Hebrews, chap: 13. from the 10. verse to the 15. The one is, that the place where our Sauiour was crucified (being known to be without the citie) doth notably declare the accomplishment of that by our Sauiour in truth, which was prefigured by those sacrifices for sinne, which were by the commandement of God, burnt without the Campe: as we reade, Leuit: chap: 4. 11. 12. and chap: 6. 30. and chap: 16. 27. 28. In which respect, saith the Apostle in the place before alledged: We haue an altar, whereof (that is, of the sacrifice whereof) they haue noe authoritie to eate, which serue in the Tabernacle: For the bodies of those beastes, whose blood is brought into the holy place by the highe Priestes for sinne, are burnt without the Campe. Therefore euen Iesus that he might sanctifie the people with his owne blood, suffered without the gate, Yea and he did so, induring ther the fire of Gods wrath, burning hotely vpon him, till by his water and blood, issuing out of his most holy body, he had for euer quenched the same, for the benefit of all, that are allowed to eate of him: that is, truly to beleeue in his name. This therefore is the first reason, why the place where our Sauiour Christ was crucified, is so diligently recorded by the holy Euangelists: and it is singularly to our comfort. The second reason noted by the same Apostle, both confirmeth the same comfort, and also from the comfort thereof, teacheth vs, what our dutie is, in this respect: namely, cuẽ willingly, & couragiously, to beare our reproach for Christs sake: though we should be cast out from men, as iudged vnworthy to enioy the common priuiledge of other men, but to be as the off-scouring of the earth, &c.

For so it followeth in the words of the Apostle, Let vs goe forth therefore, out of the Campe, bearing his reproach.

For here we haue no continuing citie, but we seeke one to come.

The third thing to be obserued in this part of the storie, is the weeping and lamentation of the women which followed our Sauiour Christ, in beholding how vnmercifully he was dealt withall. Among the which women, there were some, no doubt, of his most louing and dutifull disciples, euen such as are mentioned by the Euangelists afterward. But as touching the rest, they could not but be moued greatly, to see him of a sudden, thus strangely and furiously carried away to be crucified; whom they had seene and heard, to worke most gracious workes, and to preach most holy doctrine, as a singular Prophet of God, by the space of more then three yeares past, euen to the day immediately going before. Neuertheles, neither the one, nor the other, could direct and order their affections, to weepe as they ought: either in respect of the speciall cause, or end wherevnto they should haue imploied their teares. Onely they were moued with a certaine naturall pitie and compassion, to the outward calamitie of our Sauiour, as of a most forlorne man. Yet many degrees are they to be preferred, before all the multitude of men, who followed our Sauiour Christ all of them well neare, reioycing at the externall miserie of our Sauiour. Wherin, their sinne must needes be most grieuous, in the sight of God. For when as this euill reioycing, is deepely condemned in any toward his enemie, according to that, Prou: 24. 17. 18. Be not thou glad when thine enemie falleth, and let not thy heart reioyce when he stumbleth. Lest the Lord see it, and it displease him, and he turne wrath from him, to wit, vpon thee. Tnẽ surely, infinitly much more dãnable, was the sinne of this people, in their reioycing, not onely at the forlorne estate of our Sauiour; but also in being themselues the instruments of the diuel, for the procuring and furthering thereof.

But let vs come to the fourth thing: that is, to the excellent speech, which our Sauiour vseth to the pitifull women: he hauing greater and more excellent compassion ouer them, then they, either had, or could possibly haue, ouer him. To the which ende, as the Euangelist Luke telleth vs: our SAVIOVR hearing their weeping, and lamenting, he turneth backe, Beliefe in God the ſon, who ſuffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and hiſtory of his leading to be crucified.

and partly to preuent the breaking of his owne tender heart, according to that ſaying of the Apoſtle Paul, Act: 21.13. What doe yee weeping and breaking mine heart? for I am ready not onely to be bound, but alſo to dye at Ieruſalem, for the name of the Lord Ieſus. But chiefly for the inſtruction of theſe women, and therewithal, to the iuſt rebuke of the wicked multitude: he ſheweth them that they had a more neceſſarie cauſe of weeping, then they were aware of: & that they ought to imploy their teares, to an other end, then they propounded to themſelues. And in this ſenſe, he ſaith, Daughters of Ieruſalem weepe not for me, but weepe for your ſelues, and for your children. Not that he doth ſimply reproue their preſent weeping, as if they had done ill in their ſo doing: but he ſpeaketh in way of compariſon, as though hee ſhould ſay, there is greater cauſe why yee ſhould weepe for your ſelues, and your children and poſteritie, then for me. Like to that comparatiue ſpeech of the Prophet Ioel: Rent your hearts, and not your garments. And as the Lord ſaith, I will haue mercie and not ſacrifice. But why doth our Sauiour Chriſt vtter this, in way of an vnequall compariſon? No doubt both becauſe his preſent condition was not ſo vncomfortable, as they in their naturall affection conceiued: and alſo, becauſe their owne eſtate was much more feareful (yea euen by reaſon of this extreame malice purſued againſt him) then they could thinke of: as hee doth forthwith expreſſe vnto them, in the wordes following. For behold (ſaith our Sauiour) the dayes will come, when men ſhall ſay, bleſſed are the barren, and the wombes that neuer bare, and the pappes that neuer gaue ſucke, &c. In the which words our Sauiour deſcribeth vnto them, the daies of the moſt heauie and wofull iudgement of God, haſting to come vpon them. And he doth it moſt ſignificantly. For where as naturally men and women, in times of peace and proſperitie, doe deſire nothing more, then to marrie and haue children. (For they cannot, but delight in the increaſe of their owne kind, more then in the increaſe of any other thing, vnleſſe they would put off the affection of nature) and likewiſe whereas it is the ſingular delight of men, to ſolace themſelues, not onely in the ſweete vallies of the earth, but alſo to behold the pleaſant proſpects, which are to be ſeene from the heighte of the mountaines: it muſt needes bee that thoſe times muſt be moſt vncomfortable times, wherin men and women ſhall count the barren bleſſed, when they ſhall ſee their children deſtroied before their faces: wherein alſo, they ſhall wiſh that the mountaines would ouerwhelme them, and couer them as deepe as they are high too. And ſo it came to paſſe, within leſſe then fortie yeares after that Ieruſalem, and the people thereof, were moſt miſerably beſieged, and in the ſiege moſt miſerably deſtroied, to the number of eleuen hundreth thouſand, as Ioſephus himſelfe being a Iewe, writeth. And the ending of the which ſiege alſo, ninetie thouſand were taken priſoners, and the whole nation of the Iewes diſpeopled, and ſcattered abroad, from being a people to this day. To this purpoſe, like as the wicked multitude, which purſued our Sauiour, wiſhed the curſe of his blood both vpon themſelues, and their children: ſo our Sauiour telleth them, that they had ſpecial cauſe to weepe, becauſe of the feareful iudgments, which they had prouoked againſt themſelues, and their poſteritie. So that happie ſhould they be, whoſoeuer ſhould by earneſt repentance and ſupplication, preuent that fiercenes of Gods diuine wrath. Whence alſo let vs learne to take heed, againſt all ſuch wicked and deſperate courſes, either in preſumptuous curſing of our ſelues, or any other. Thus then, our Sauiour Chriſt by this reaſon, taken from an vnequall compariſon, doth teach theſe pitifull women, in what reſpect eſpecially, they were to weepe, to the end they might, by the mercies of God, be preſerued from that moſt wofull calamitie: and therwithal admoniſheth the cruel multitude, of that merciles iudgement, the which ſhould certainly fall vpon many of them.

The ſame reaſon, doth our Sauiour make plaine, by a familiar ſimilitude: in that he ſaith. If they doe theſe things to a greene tree, what ſhall be done to the drie? As though he ſhould ſay, if the fire of Gods wrath, be ſo hote, that it kindleth the the greene wood. which yet is more vnapt to burne, then that which is fire: how much more shall it vtterly consume the drie wood to ashes, and that very speedily? Our Sauiour Christ indeed was as woode, a fit matter in it selfe for the Lords anger to burne vpon (insomuch as he tooke vpon him the guiltines of our sinnes) but yet, because he was righteous in himselfe, and the very true Sonne of the Father, that fresh & moist greennes, would not suffer him to consume, though he were laide to the stock as it were. And God himselfe, as it were the maister of the familie, seeing greene wood lying to the fire, commandeth it to be taken away, and calleth for drie wood: that is, for the wicked, which take fire by and by. But in this, they are in worse case then drie wood: because that burneth without all sence of smart, and when it is turned to ashes, it burneth no more: but the wicked they are tormented in burning, and they are burning euermore. The fire of Gods wrath is to them vnquenchable, and they are as an euerlasting matter to cherish, and as it were to feede the same fire.

Wherefore, let vs beloued in the Lord, take our warning from this gracious admonition of our Sauiour, to weepe for our sinnes, and to seeke for mercie with God our heauenly Father, through our Lord Iesus Christ: before the fearefull day of the Lord, come vpon our selues. Insomuch, as it is certaine, that the like daies are comming, and the last day especially, wherein all the wicked, whosoeuer haue spoken or done any thing against the Lord Iesus, shall bee iudged with fearefull iudgement: yea with so terrible a iudgemēt, that they shal wish the same thing, that our Sauiour hath spoken, concerning the Iewes: to wit, that the mountaines and rocks would fall on them, to hide them from the presence of him that sitteth vpon the throne, and from the wrath of the Lambe, as we read. Iude 14. 15. and Reuel: 6. 16. 17.

Now the fift thing, to be considered in this part of the storie, is our Sauiour Christ his refusall of the potion which was offered vnto him, at the place of execution, before hee was fastened to the crosse. The Euangelist Matthewe speaketh of it, vnder the name of vinegre, mingled with gall, to signifie that it was a potion mixed with some sharpe and bitter ingredience; but the Euangelist Marke speaketh more properly, calleth it wine mingled with mirrhe. It was a drinke, most likely offered by some that bare good will to our Sauiour, or at least according to a common commiseration of such as vsed to prepare a potion for the condemned persons, fit to shorten the paines of their death, by causing the blood, to passe more speedily out of the veines, and so to accelerate and hasten death it selfe. But whatsoeuer the potion was, wine, or vinegre, bittered with gall, or sweetned with mirrhe, our Sauiour perceiuing it to be a medicine, he would not drinke of it: to declare his willingnes, yea and to performe indeed, the enduring of that whole passion and paine, which God the Father, had in his iudgement, appointed vnto him for vs. So perfectly louing and pitifull towards vs, in thirsting after our saluation. O therefore, may it please thee O Lord our God and heauenly Father, euen for thy holy Sonne our Sauiours sake, to giue vs grace accordingly, in some measure to loue thee and our Sauiour, to be truly thankful, and dutifully obediēt vnto thee, through faith in his name: that is, in such a measure, as we may neuer securely satisfie our selues, in any measure which in this life, we shall at any time attaine vnto. Amen.

The last thing to be considered, in this first part of the storie, concerning the execution of the sentence of Pilate against our Sauiour: is the inscription, or title, the which was set ouer his head, vpon the crosse. The which, it is very likely, was done, together with the setting vp of the crosse it selfe, before our Sauiour was fastened vnto it. Wherein, wee are to obserue these three things.

First, the matter of the inscription, or title, as Pilate himselfe gaue direction that it should be; and that, in the three principall languages of all the world, Hebrewe, Greeke, and Latine.

Secondly,

Beliefe in God the Son who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and history of his leading to be crucified.

Secondly, the sute of the high priests, to haue the title altered.

Thirdly, the constancie of Pilate in this point. The which constancie of his, is the rather to be noted, because in all that went before, he shewed himselfe but a light and inconstant man; euen contrary to his owne conscience, seeking by sondry deuises, so long to satisfie the Iewes, that at the last, he doth wholy yeeld vnto them. What moued Pilate, in his owne intent, to vse so constant a resolution in this matter: whether because he thought indeed, that according to the answer of our Sauiour vnto him, concerning his kingdome, it might be, that he was appointed of God, to be king ouer them, in another manner then the kings of the earth are: or for that he would therein doe the Iewes that reproach, which he had pointed vnto before, in that he asketh them, shall I crucifie your king? As though he should haue saide. This must needes be to the reproach of your whole nation, that your king should be put to so vile and base a death, &c. Thus what the minde of Pilate was in the inscription or title, wee cannot precisely say.

Neither may we stand much in the commendation of this his constancie, as any great vertue in him: vnlesse we had seene better fruites of the vprightnes of his heart. For Mark: chap: 15. verse 12. he himselfe speaketh of this title of our Sauiour with like acception as the Iewes would haue him write here. The most that we can say of him, in this action, is this; that he for his part, honoured our Sauiour, no more by this title, then Caiphas did by his prophesie. Iohn 11.49 50.51.52. But the most wise, and gracious counsell, and prouidēt hand of God, is most euidently to be seene, and acknowledged: not onely in the action it selfe, but also in all the circumstances thereof. First, in that Pilate setteth downe the title so, that it did not directly sound to any reproach against our Sauiour, but rather, as was said before: so as it might be a iust conuiction of the extreame wickednes of the Iewes, as the Iewes themselues sawe, euen according to that which our Sauiour himselfe had set forth vnto them but a litle before, by that parable of the housholder, who let out his vineyard to vnfaithfull, and rebellious husbandmen. Mat: 21.33. &c.

Secondly, in that he commandeth that the title should be written, and set vp in text letters, in the three principal languages of the whole world. Hebrew, Greeke, and Latine: (the which was moreouer and besides any ordinarie inscription of the crime of the condemned) as appeareth in that, as the Euangelist testifieth, many came euen for this cause the rather, out of the citie, to see and to reade it.

Now therefore, insomuch as this action of Pilate, was so euidently ordered, as it were by the hand of God, and that he guided his penne, or the penne of the Scriueners, or Painters, from his mouth: so as the Iewes could not in any the least iote, cause him to alter it: let vs the more reuerendly consider of it, and of the excellent purpose of God, manifested therein, for our singular instruction and comfort.

The words of the title, are in themselues very honourable to those that vnderstand them aright, as all of vs ought to doe. For first, they are all of them, of excellent signification: and they are also categoricall and affirmatiue, in such forme, as they are recorded by all the Euangelists, though some set them down more breifly then other: as Marke. THE KING OF THE IEWES: as Luke. THIS IS THE KING OF THE IEWES: as Matthew. THIS IS IESVS THE KING OF THE IEWES: and as Iohn most fully. IESVS OF NAZARETH KING OF THE IEWES. Now the word Iesus, as we knowe, signifieth a Saviour: yea and the same concerning the most excellent saluation both of bodies and soules for euer. Likewise the word King, noteth such a regencie, as is aboue all humane power and authoritie: as it is further expressed, in that elsewhere, our Sauiour is intituled, The King of Kings: for he is such a King, as giueth peace and protection, against those most troublsome and terrible aduersaries, which no wisdome or power of man, man, is able to restraine. Moreouer, seeing the promise of such a King, was made to the Iewes, who were by the election of God his grace, adopted to be an onely peculiar people vnto him, vntill the time of the calling home and ingrafting of the Gentiles, into the prerogatiues of the same kingdome: therfore he is called the King of the Iewes, howsoeuer they shew themselues, at the time of his comming to them, most ranck traitors and rebels against him. And though the word of Nazareth, soundeth somewhat base in comparison of the rest, if we looke to the place it selfe, which was accounted an obscure place, where our Sauiour was meanely brought vp: yet, if we consider the counsell of God, which was, that euen from the name of the place of his education, hee might be knowne to be his Nazarite, set a part in speciall manner to a most excellent seruice, as some vnderstand the reason of that denomination: or rather that he might be vnderstood to be that branch, which is so honourably prophesied of, vnder the name of Netsar, which the name of the city Nazareth most naturally importeth as hath beene declared before. Thus then, we see, that insomuch as all the words agree, to make vp a most honourable title, or inscription: and all of them, are affirmatiuely ascribed to our Sauiour, without any indirect insinuation of reproach, as the Iewes in their malice would gladly haue had it: that therefore it was caried and disposed by the gracious hand, and gouernment of God, aboue that which Pilate intended or vnderstood.

Beliefe in God the Son who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and history of his leading to be crucified.

What therefore was the holy counsell of God herein?

Verily, to declare, that howsoeuer the wicked Iewes, yea and the wicked Gentiles also, Herod and Pontius Pilate himselfe with their souldiers, made but a mocke of the kingdome of our Sauiour: Yet, he, in good earnest, hath appointed and ordained him to be a king, yea and also an high Priest for euer, to rule not onely in Sion, that is in the Church here belowe: but also in the kingdome of heauen, and from heauen, world without end. Yea so, as they onely, who acknowledge him their King, and Prince, and Sauiour: and accordingly doe beleeue in him, loue, reuerence, honour and serue him: shall finde true peace, and saluation, to their soules. But the rest shall be confounded for euer, yea both Kings and Kingdomes of people, whosoeuer will not submit themselues vnto him. For as it is in the 2. Psal: he shall breake them in peeces, not with a reed as they mocked him, but with an yron barre or scepter, which God himselfe hath put into his hand: euen in that hee is the sonne of man, though most vilely esteemed and abused of men.

This, doth the Lord giue plainly to vnderstand, by a solemne proclamation, as it were to the whole world, Iewes, Grecians, and Romans: by this title lifted vp ouer the head of our Sauiour, in these most catholike and vniuersall languages. Accordingly also, as the world hath had further experience of this purpose of Gods counsell, euen by the execution of it, in causing his Gospell to be euery where published, both by preaching, and writing, not onely in these principall languages, but also in many others.

Pilates inscription or title, is therefore to be vnderstood of vs, as a glorious ensigne from the Lord, of that imperiall triumph, whereof the Apostle Paul writeth. 2. 14. 15. And putting out the hand writing of ordinances that was against vs, which was contrarie to vs, he euen took it out of the way, and fastened it vpon the crosse. He hath spoiled principalities and powers, and hath made a shewe of them openly, and hath triumphed ouer them in the same crosse.

Of the which triumph, there are diuers other declarations and effects, both in the hearts of men, & also in many other insensible creatures: such as are the conuersion of the theefe, the darkening of the Sunne, the renting of the vaile, the quaking of the earth, the opening of the graues, and the astonishmēt of the people: of the which we shall haue occasion to consider more fully hereafter.

To this king therefore, let vs runne; euen to the name of our Sauiour, thus published as it were from heauen: that wee may finde it, as a strong tower, whereby wee may be exalted, according to that we reade, Prou: 18. 10. when the wicked shall fall in their resistance and rebellion against him, according to that which our Sauiour himselfe hath threatned, Mat: 21.44. And thus it is to our singular instruction and comfort, as was touched before, that God hath armed vs by this excellent title set vp ouer our Sauiour, against all that followeth, concerning that stumbling, and offence, or imputation of follie to the Gospell which otherwise would arise from the blinde pride, and waywardnesse of mans nature: as we haue both the stubborne Iewes, and also the high conceited Gentiles, for notable and fearefull examples. Yea on the contrarie, it is a most effectuall inducement vnto vs, to conceiue reuerendly and honourably of that, which seemeth most base, in any part of the sufferings of our Sauiour: while we carrie this alwaies in our minds, that he which suffereth, is our glorious king and Sauiour, and that euen by the meanes of his most base sufferings, he doth deliuer and saue vs, most graciously for euer: and therefore also, to loue and reuerence him the more dearely and dutifully.

Hetherto, of the first part of the holy storie, concerning the execution of that sentence of condemnation, which Pilate gaue against our Sauiour: so farre as appertaineth to his leading away, from the place of iudgement, to the place of crucifying: together with the things, which most likely, were done before he was fastened to the crosse.

NOw let vs come to the second part of the execution of the same sentence of iudgement: that is, to the fastening of him to the crosse, and to those things which doe, as most immediate & neare circumstances, both former and latter, appertaine vnto the same. But first, let vs heare the wordes of the holy storie it selfe, & namely from the Euangelist Luke, ch. 23. verse 33, and the former part of the 34.

Question. What are the wordes of the Euangelist?

Answer. 33. And when they were come to the place, which is called Caluarie, there (saith the holy Euangelist) they crucified him, and the euill doers: on at the right hand, and the other at the left.

Explication 34. Then said Iesus, Father, forgiue them: for they know not what they doe.

In these words (as was said) we haue both the matter it selfe propounded, and also the circumstances: which also are no light ones, but (as we may say) very materiall, according to the matter it selfe, to be considered vpon.

Of these circumstances (as was further touched) some went immediately before the crucifying of our Sauiour, and some followed immediately. Let vs weigh all things in their naturall course and order.

One circumstance, going immediately before the crucifying of our Sauiour, was this: that the executioners stripped him out of his clothes, and made him so naked and bare, as common honestie, and shamefastnes, would permit them. This circumstance going before, is manifest by that which followed after: concerning the parting of the garmēts, among the souldiers, and their casting of lots vpon his inmost garmēt: euen that knit wastcoate of his, which was entire in it self, without any sowne seame. For if they had not taken his clothes off before, they could not haue taken them off at all: vntill they should haue taken him from the crosse againe, vnles they should haue cut them off.

An other circumstance, more immediately going before the crucifying, was that the executioners lifted him vp, or caused him to goe vp by some ladder or tressel, as high as the tree, or stud of the crosse was: to the end they might at their best aduantage, and ease, fasten him to the same.

The fastening, or crucifying it selfe, was the cruell nayling: first, of the blessed handes of our Sauiour, by driuing great nayles through them, they being drawne, no doubt, as wide vpon the ouerthwart beame of the crosse, as they could well straine them.

And after this, they letting his body settle and sagge downe: wee may with good reason conceiue that beside the poise of the body, the executioners pulled pulled and stretched downe his feete to the nether most stay made for the nayling of either of thē. The which they nailed also, not on vpō another, according to the blind popish picture crucifixes: but ech by it self apart, the nailes drouen through the flat and thicke part of ech foote, holding them downe so strained, that doubtles no part, either of armes, legges, or body, had any libertie to stirre themselues. To which ende no doubt, there was some basis or footestoole, as we may call it, tenanted into the stud or tree of the crosse. All which both cruell and painefull nayling of the handes and feete, and racking or taintering of the blessed body of our Sauiour, is plainely testified by the propheticall witnesse of the prophet Dauid, in the 22. Psalme: though wee had no historicall testimonie, concerning the manner of the performance thereof. For so we read in that Psalm: verses 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. that Dauid speaketh in the person of our Sauiour: I am like water powred out, and all my bones are out of ioint: my heart is like waxe: it is molten in the middest of my bowels. My strength is dried vp like a potsheard, and my tongue cleaueth to my iawes, and thou hast brought me into the dust of death. For dogges haue compassed me, and the assembly of the wicked haue inclosed me: they haue pierced my handes and my feete. I may tell my bones, yet they behold and looke vpon me. And then it followeth, They part my garmentes among them, and cast lotts vpon my vesture. But this casting of lots, followed after they had fastened our Sauiour to the crosse: and so did also, the dolorous moulting, drought, & fainting of our Sauiour, hanging thus, many houres vpō the crosse: as we are to obserue in the places and seasons thereof. Thus then, the propheticall testimonie of Dauid, might suffice for the manner of the crucifying of our Sauiour: seeing we may be sure, that all which hee foretold by the spirit of God, tooke certaine effect. But we haue, besides this propheticall testimonie, and the historie of the Gospell speaking briefly of a matter vulgarly known, we haue other ancient historicall testimonies, to the same ende. Reason also speaketh for the distinct and seperate nayling of either foote of our Sauiour, as wel as of either hand, though not with like expansion, or spreading abroad, which could not be with so perpendicular and down right stretching of the body. For if this had not beene the manner of crucifying, but that one legge had beene lapped ouer another, and so nailed together: how could they as the manner was, haue commodiously broken the bones of either legge, as well as of either arme? We knowe well indeede, that no bone of our Sauiour was broken, as it followeth to be considered: but this was, by speciall dispensation of the diuine prouidence of God afterward: it was not by any breach of the ordinarie course of the fastening to the crosse before.

Irenæus lib. 2. cap. 42.

Ipse habitus crucis, fines & summita-tes habet quinque, duos in longitudine, & duos in latitudine, & vnum in medio, vbi requiescit, qui clauis affigitur.

Now, the circumstances more immediately following the crucifying: were first, that the executioners crucified the thieues, one on the right hand, and the other on the left: and so placed our Sauiour in the middest, as a chiefe and principal malefactor: according as they had before refused him, as one in their malitious estimate more worthy the crosse, then Barabbas, that most wicked and seditious murtherer.

The second circumstance, following the crucifying: was that our Sauiour Christ praied for his persecutors, both those that were the executioners, and such as were his accusers, and liked of their wicked dealings against him.

Next vnto this, followed the souldiers parting and casting of lotts vpon the garments of our Sauiour: so soone as they had their part, in their cruell crucifying of him.

But of this, and other things succeeding, we will inquire of them in the next part of the history, concerning the time of our Sauiours continuāce in his most grieuous suffering vpon the crosse. In the meane while, for our further instruction, touching the crucifying it selfe, and the most neare circumstances pertaining vnto it.

First, in that our Sauiour Christ yeelded himselfe to be stripped & left naked for vs: we are very sensible, and feelingly as it were, to consider. First, what our sinnes haue deserued; to wit, that God should bereaue vs of all his blessings, both clothing, and whatsoeuer besides: and that the ignominie, and shame of the sinnes, that is, of the nakednes of our soules, should be manifested in the nakednes and shame of our bodies.

Beleefe in God the Son, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate

Secondly, we haue to consider the wonderfull loue of our Sauiour, in that he vouchsafeth to be outwardly stripped, and left naked for vs; that we might be spiritually clothed, and adorned by the fulnes of that grace, and righteousnes, which is to be found in him: while we by faith, put him vpon vs, as the Apostle teacheth Christians to doe. Gal: 3.26.27. for in him are hid all the treasures of wisdome and knowledge. And in him dwelleth al the fulnes of the Godhead bodily. And in him are all the faithfull compleat, Colos: 2. v. 3.9.10. &c. yea euen in him, that was naked for vs. For he being rich, willingly became poore: Yea most poore, and altogether rifled for our sakes, that he might make vs rich, 2. Cor: 8.9. And that of his fulnes, we being of our selues and in our selues, as emptie vessels, yea more then emptie, euen very fustie casks, might receiue grace for grace: & thereby, be both seasoned, & repleni shed, according to that measure of grace, which God of his infinit mercy vouchsafeth euery one. Ioh: 1.16. Thus then, sin maketh vs naked, & ignominious in the sight of God: as we read of the Church of Laodicia. Reuel: 3.17.18. And of the Church of Israel, Exod: 32.25. And of Adam, from the beginning of his defection and falling from God, Gen: 3.7.8.9.10.11. Our Sauiour Christ becomming naked for vs, hath clothed vs againe: in that through his grace, and by faith in him, we put on the new man here in this life. Ephes. 4.24, and shall be clothed with immortalitie, in the life to come, 2. Cor: 5.2.3.4.

Secondly, the lifting vp of our Sauiour on high, vpon the crosse, was a fulfilling of that which was typically giuen forth & pointed vnto (as some good interpreters doe not vnprobably coniecture) by the eleuation (not of the popish host, which is a most idolatrous deuise of their owne) but of the right shoulder of the peace offering, for an heaue offering, by the commandement of God: like as the breast of the same peace offering, appointed to be shaken to & fro from the one hand to another, before the Lord: is thought to prefigure the spreding of the hands of our Sauiour, vpon the crosse. Leuit, ch: 7.29.30. 31.32.33.34. Read also, Exod, 29. v. 26.27.28. And againe, Leuit. 9.21.22. The lifting vp of our Sauiour vpon the crosse, was likewise the fulfilling of that, which was prefigured by the lifting vp of the brasen serpent, to the viewe of all the people in the wildernes: as our Sauiour himself interpreteth this point, Ioh. 3.14. And againe, ch. 12. v. 32. he foretelleth his death, vnder this circumstãce of his lifting vp. If I were lifted vp from the earth, I will draw all men vnto me. For the Euangelist expresly testifieth, that our Sauiour spake these words, concerning his lifting vp at his death, least any man should thinke that he spake at that time, of his ascension vp to heauen. Here therefore, obserue we a very prodigious thing: that is, such a thing as may iustly astonish vs, that the Sonne of God should for our sins be hanged vp as an ignominious spectacle betwixt heauen and earth: and namely, because of our pride and presumption, which is euen like to that of our first parents, most proudly aspiring from the beginning.

Thirdly, in the fastening of our Sauiour to the crosse, in such maner as hath bin described: let vs obserue, that the dolour and paine which he was put vnto, and which he most willingly indured for vs, vpon the crosse, euen frõ his first fastening vnto it: was answerable, to the greatnes of the ignominie, and reproach. And the rather shall we see it to be so, if we duly consider, that our Sauiour, being fastened to the crosse to dye the cursed death thereof, did vpon the same, beare the curse of our sin: as 2. Cor. 5.21. Christ was made sin for vs. And Gal: 3.13. Christ was made a curse for vs (for saith the Apostle from Moses) cursed is euery one that hangeth on a tree) So then, whereas the nailing in the vainie and sinewish parts of the hands & feet, & the racking of the ioints, vaines, sinewes, and ligaments of the whole body, was exceeding painefull in it selfe: it must needs be so much the more grieuous, the curse comming with all, which is as a most venimous corosiue, to cause the sinews, and vaines, & flesh, and all, to belt more tediously, and the blood to drop out of those foure principal parts of the bodie, more vncomfortable: yea so as the paine troubled the very soule of our Sauior, euē frō the beginning to the end: as is euident by the breaking forth of his cōplaint at the last, whē hauing concealed it a long time, he could keep it no longer. My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? Of the which more hereafter.

Fourthly, in that our Sauiour was crucified, as a notorious malefactor, betweene two theeues: the propheſie of Isaiah, chap. 53. 12. was fulfilled, in that he saith, He was counted with transgressors, &c. For so the Euangelist Marke testifieth chap. 15. 27. 28. where, so soone as he hath made mention of the crucifying of the two theeues, the one on the right hand, the other on the left: Thus (saith he) the Scripture was fulfilled, which saith, And he was counted among the wicked. To which purpose, our Sauiour himselfe alledgeth the same words, though more generally, Luke 22. 37. to aduertise his Disciples of the troubles that should fall vpon him, before yet he was fallen into the hands of the wicked. In which place of Isaiah it followeth also, and he bare the sinne of many, and prayed for the trespassers.

In the fift place therefore, we haue at the crucifying of our Sauiour: yea euen from the first fastening of him to the Crosse, the last branch of that propheſie of Isaiah, chap. 53. fulfilled, in that he prayeth, Father forgiue them, they know not what they doe. For so saith the Prophet in the last words of that chapter, He prayed for the trespassers. From the which prayer, O how admirably doth the most pure and bright beames, of most perfit patience & meekenes in himselfe, and of most perfit loue toward his whole Church, shine forth! Of this prayer therefore, let vs stand here, with great admiration to consider a while.

We haue to consider in this prayer, first the petition: and then the reason. Concerning the petition, we are first to weigh well, the matter of it: and then to whom it is directed and made.

The matter of the petition is forgiuenes, a most singular benefite: Yea that wherein principally consisteth our whole comfort and blessing, according to Psal: 32. 1, 2. and Rom: 4. 6. 7. 8.

Our Sauiour maketh his prayer to God his heauenly father, who onely hath power to forgiue sinnes; & who for his names sake, is ready to forgiue sinners. But this is specially to be obserued, that our Sauiour calleth God father, in such sense as no creature else can call him Father: that is to say, as being the essentiall, and only begotten sonne of God, very true God together with the Father. But how then, may some say, doth he pray vnto his Father, if he be one God with him? Wee know, that the sonne of God, our Lord Iesus Christ is both God and man, and so a Mediatour: and in regard thereof, inferiour to the Father, as touching his humane nature. He praieth therefore to God, as hee is man, and as a mediatour in mans nature: but not simply as he is the second Person. Neuertheles, in that God is his Father, euen in respect of his manhood, vnited in one Person to the diuine nature, so as he is Father to no creature beside: this confirmeth plainely, that his prayer must needes be most effectuall with God, aboue all that euer haue prayed, or can pray. Yea so, as no prayer, hath euer beene accepted from any: but as they haue had, doe, and shall haue respect, to the vertue and grace of his mediation and prayer. And herein, our Sauiour Christ performeth one speciall dutie of his most holy office of high Priesthood, in that he praieth for sinners: as wel as in that he yeelding to be fastened to the Crosse, offereth vp himselfe an euerlasting, and most propitiatory sacrifice vnto God, that by his blood issuing out, by the wounds of his holy hands and feete, he might wash away the sinnes of all his elect.

Let vs come to the reason, which is this: For they know not what they doe. Not that ignorance excuseth the offender, or that he sinneth not, because he knoweth not that it is a sinne which he committeth. This is not the meaning of our Sauiour Christ: for then what neede was there, that he should pray so earnestly for forgiuenes: or vse any prayer at all, to that end? In that therefore, he prai-

Beliefe in God the Son, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The groũd and history of his leading to be crucified.

eth, yea seeing he prayeth so earnestly, that they may be forgiuen, though they did not know what they did: it is euident, that their sinne was grieuous in the sight of God, though they sinned of ignorance. And so we read, that God in his law, appointed sacrifices to be offered for sinnes done of ignorance; he giuing therein plainely to vnderstand, that ignorance excuseth not, seeing euery one might haue knowledge, if the fault were not in our owne negligence: but contrariwise, that sinnes done of ignorance, are damnable, if they be not pardoned for Christs sake, vnto whom all the sacrifices pointed. Read Leuit. chap. 4. the whole chapter.

What was the meaning of our Sauiour then in this reason which hee vseth? No doubt, his meaning is, to giue to vnderstand, that there is a great difference betwixt sinnes committed of ignorance, and those that are committed of presumption & malice, against knowledge and conscience: yea betwixt one and the same sinne, committed in so diuerse a manner, & from so differing a ground and originall. For that done of ignorance must needes be sinfull in a lesse degree, then the other: and accordingly pardoned more easily, or with lesse difficulty as one may say.

Our Sauiour therfore, in vsing this reason, would leaue some special ground of comfort, for those of his persecutors, whosoeuer should afterward come to the conscience of their sinne, when their consciences should beare witnes with them, that they did, they knew not what, & so were within the cõpasse of the prayer of our Sauiour: when as on the contrary, he would exclude all such frõ the comfort of it, whosoeuer sinned of malice, & against their knowledge, with a high and presumptuous hand, as some of his persecutors did: as may appeare by his doctrine, concerning the sinne against the holy Ghost, deliuered against them. Matth. 12. 31. 32.

And as Stephen, the holy Protomartyr next after our Sa: Christ, doth plainly declare, Act. 7. 51. in that he chargeth them to haue resisted the holy Ghost. Concerning all which, the Apostle Peter saith, that our Sauiour committed his cause, to him that iudgeth righteously. 1. Epist. 2. 23.

But how may it be said, that any of those that persecuted our Sauiour Christ, and did execution vpõ him, were ignorant of that sinne which they cõmitted: seeing they knew no cause against him, why they should so deale as they did? For no man can be ignorant of this, that it is a sinne, to do violence against any man, without cause. It is very true. Neuertheless, in this case, our Sauiour may iustly say, that a number of them knew not what they did. For their sinne was greater, then they were ware of; yea though they had beene conuicted in their consciences, to haue dealt vniustly & cruelly, against a righteous man. For they knew not that this righteous man, was the Lord our righteousnes: they knew not that he was the Sonne of God, the Lord of life & glory, &c. For then surely, as it is testified of those whom our Sauiour praieth for, they would not haue crucified him. According as we read Act. 3. 13, 14. 15. 17. 18, 19. And chap. 13. 27, 28. And 1. Cor. 2, 7. 8. We speake the wisedom of God in a mysterie, &c. which none of the Princes of this world haue knowne: for had they knowne it, they would not haue crucified the Lord of glory.

Note. It is not onely ignorance, for a man not to know a thoght or action to be a sinne, but also not to know how great and grieuous a sin that is, which his conscience telleth him, though lisping ly, that it is a sinne.

But to conclude the interpretation of this reason of our Sauiours praier: did he onely pray for the forgiuenes of those, that sinned of meere simple ignorance? No doubt, our Sauiour, being most abundant in pitty & compassion, did vnderstand ignorance in as large a significatiõ, as it might possibly be extended vnto. Yea so farre, as if malice were of ignorance, or that ignorance was more then malice: we are not to account any such, whosoeuer were of the elect of God, to be excluded, or excepted by our Sauiour. The which affection, he carrieth still toward all other, that belong vnto God, euen to this day; whosoeuer sinne in the like manner against him, in persecuting of his seruants for his Gospels sake, or in resisting his holy word and ordinances, though none can now so directly iniurie his most holy & glorified humanity as these did.

The vse of all, is briefly this, that insomuch as by ignorance, men are carried headlong

Beleeue in God the Son, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and history of his crucifying.

headlong to rush into so great sin as they are not ware of: therfore, it is the duty of all, to seeke after true knowledge & iudgement, from the word of God: that by the light & direction therof, they may not only auoid sinnes of ignorance, to do they cannot tell how great euill: but that they may be wise to obey God, and in obedience vnto him, to doe more and greater good, then they can see or vnderstand of: as doubtlesse, euery one doth, that walketh faithfully in his calling, as in the sight & presence of God. But of the vses both for duty, and also for comforts, we shal by the grace of God, inquire & consider more fully afterward. Now the course of the holy story requireth, that wee come to the third part, of the execution of the sentence of Pilate, against our Sauiour: with the sufferings, and other worthy matters, appertaining vnto it.

This third part of the holy History of the execution, as was obserued, containeth the time, of the continuance of our Sauiour, vpō the Crosse. The which time, we may not vnfitly distribute or distinguish, into these three parts, or spaces & dimensions as it were. First, frō the third houre of the day vnto the sixt.

Secondly, from the sixt houre, to the ninth: thirdly, from thence, vntill the time, that our Sauiour was taken downe from the Crosse.

This distribution of the time, is most fully mentioned by the Euangelist Mark. For though Matthew & Luke mention the sixt & the ninth houre: yet they speake not of the third. And Iohn mentioneth onely the sixt, as we haue it cōmonly translated, and that also to note the time of the condemnation of our Sauior. But how that is to be vnderstood, & may best agree with the rest of the Euangelists, we haue as diligently as we could, cōsidered & set down before.

Let vs therfore, for the more full distribution of the time, looke to the testimony of the Euangelist Mark: yet so, as we do make a supply, from the other three, of whatsoeuer wee finde recorded by them, which is omitted, or more briefly set downe, by him.

And first, concerning the third houre, which was the time of the crucifying; that is, of the first fastening of our Sauiour to the Crosse, thus we read. Marke, chap. 15. ver. 25. And it was the third houre, when they crucified him. And of the sixt and ninth houres, we read verses 33. 34 in these words: Now when the sixt houre was come, darknes arose ouer all the land, vntill the ninth houre. And at the ninth houre, Iesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eloi, Eloi, &c. And concerning the time of the taking downe of the body of our Sauiour from the Crosse, we read further, ver. 42. that it was when night was come: or as Matthew saith, cha. 27. ver. 57. When the euen was come, that is, when it drew toward night.

Now therfore, let vs henceforth, consider of the third part of the holy Story, cōcerning the execution of the sentence of Pilat against our Sauiour: & therin, of the sufferings, & other most memorable things, that fel out by the holy prouidence of God: according to the former distribution of the time, into three distinct spaces for order sake, & for some helpe to our vnderstanding & memory.

And first, from the third houre, which was about our ninth: I meane frō the time, after they had fastened our Sauiour to the Crosse, & after they had likewise fastened the two thieues, one on the right hand, & the other on the left: we haue from thence, vntill the sixt houre (besides the continuall dolour that the nailes driuen through his hands & feet, and also the straining of his ioints, did put him vnto for our sinnes the full burthen wherof he did beare) these things, diligently, and reuerendly, to weigh and consider.

1 The parting of his garmēts, by those 4 soldiers which nailed him to the cros.

Secondly, his louing remembrance, and care which he had of Mary his naturall mother, notwithstanding all the dolours of his passion, which he was in.

Thirdly, the railings, which all sorts of the beholders cast out against him.

The miraculous conuersion of one thiefe, crucified with our Sauiour.

Of these things: the formost, the parting of the garments of our Sa: is fully recorded by S. Iohn, ch. 19. 23. 24. ver. Which are the words of the Euangelist?

Question.

Answer. 23 Then the souldiers, when they had crucified him, tooke his garments, and made foure parts, to euery souldier a part, and his coate: and the coate was without seame, wouen from the top throughout.

The grou͂d and hiſtory of his crucifying.

24 Therefore they ſaid one to another, Let vs not deuide it, but caſt lots for it, whoſe it ſhall be. ——— This (ſaith the Euangeliſt) was that the Scripture might be fulfilled, which ſaith, They parted my garments among them, and on my coate they did caſt lots. So the ſouldiers did theſe things indeede.

Explicatiõ.

We haue ſeene before, how our Sauiour was ſtripped by the ſouldiers, and nailed naked vpon the Croſſe, ſo farre as common honeſty would permit. Now the Euangeliſt Iohn ſheweth vs, what became of his clothes. And he telleth vs, that they were made the fees of thoſe foure ſouldiers, who were the ſpeciall executioners of him. The maner of the parting and diſtributing whereof, he doth alſo deſcribe vnto vs: and that was thus. They diuided the vpmoſt garments into foure parts, to euery man his equall part: but beſide theſe equall parts, there was remaining one coate without ſeame, the which was likely a knit waſtcoate, which he did weare next his ſhirt. The which becauſe it was a remainder of the former diuiſion, and could not it ſelfe be diuided, without the marring of the whole: therefore they caſt lots, who ſhould haue the whole: wherein we are to conſider two things. Firſt, the minde of the ſouldiers in this their doing: ſecondly, the diuine counſell, and prouidence of God.

The mindes of the ſouldiers, were altogether profane, and bent vpon the ſpoile: euery one couetouſly deſiring, to make his part more gainefull to him ſelfe, then any of his fellowes. To this purpoſe, they vſe the lot, not with anie religious regard of the prouidence of God, to whoſe diſpoſition the lot apperteineth: as it is in the holy Prouerbe: and therefore ought not to be vſed, without a reuerend reſpect and attendance therevnto: but euerie one, deſiring that the chance of the die, (much in vſe among the idle ſouldiers) or whatſoeuer other lot they vſed, might by good lucke or fortune, chance vnto him, rather then to any other. So that well may we conceiue by the way, that the apparell of our Sauiour was of ſome value, though he went not clothed, after the manner of thoſe, that be in Princes Courts: as he ſpake in the commendation of Iohn the Baptiſt for his ſobriety this way. And in this, we haue a liuely repreſentation of the common practiſe which is in this world, whereſoeuer the contempt of God and godlines, of Chriſt and his Goſpel reigneth. For euery one flieth vpon the good benefites of God, and getteth a ſhare by one meanes or other to himſelfe: the which they conſume vpon their luſts, and altogether to the diſhonour of God: reioycing as it were in the ſpoile of him, as theſe ſouldiers no doubt for their parts did at this time. And as our popiſh riflers, and other heretikes, catch what they can from Chriſt, and care not what they derogate from his moſt holy office, ſo as they may inlarge their owne gaine, by their falſe doctrine, and by the marchandiſe of Popes pardons and indulgences, and of buying ſoules out of Purgatory, &c. Thus much concerning the minde of the ſouldiers, who when they had done their ſport, they ſit downe ſecurely, and without all conſcience, or remorſe of that greeuous ſinne, wherein they, together with all that had any hand in this vniuſt and cruell action, were deepely ingaged and defiled with all: for they ſate downe and watched him there: as the Euangeliſt Matthew obſerueth, chap. 27. 36. Such alſo is, and hath bin alwaies, the common ſecurity of the wicked, in their moſt wicked proceedings againſt Chriſt and his ſeruants, the true profeſſors of his Goſpel: vntill God, in his due time, do awaken their conſciences, and call them to an account.

But the counſell & prouidence of God, is in the ordering of this matter, and all other, moſt holy and reuerend. And namely, in this diuiding of the former ſort of the garments by theſe ſouldiers, and in their caſting of lots vpon the ſeameleſſe coate, he vſed their couetous & wanton affection & practiſe, to the fulfilling of that holy propheſie, which was giuen forth by Dauid, concerning this matter: well neare 1000. years before it came to paſſe. The which propheſie, beſide other things foretold, cõcerning the ſufferings of our Sauiour, as we haue ſeene, is plainly extant in the 22. Pſ. verſe 18. They part my garments among them, and caſt lots vpõ my veſture. And all to this moſt graue & comfortable end:

that euerie one that waited for the Messiah promised, and all Christians also, to this day, might be confirmed, from the euident fulfilling of this, and all other prophesies giuen forth by the Spirit of God: that this is the verie true Messiah, without all lingering after any other.

THese things obserued, concerning the first point: which was the deuiding of the garments of our Saviour before his face: we come to the second, that is to say, the most louing and carefull remembrance, which our Saviour had of his Mother, in this time of his bitter suffering vpon the Crosse: as it followeth in the Euangelist Iohn, vers: 25. 26. 27.

Question. What is that which he writeth, concerning so notable & memorable a poinle?

Answere. 25 (His words are these) Then stood by the Crosse of Iesus, his Mother, & his Mothers sister, Marie of Cleophas, and Marie Magdalene.

26 And when Iesus saw his Mother, and the Disciple standing by, whom hee loued, hee said vnto his Mother, Woman, beholde thy Sonne.

27 Then he said to the Disciple, Beholde thy Mother: and from that houre, the Disciple tooke her home vnto him.

Explicatiō Here we haue a most excellent testimony of the perfect righteousnes of our Saviour Christ, aboue all exception: in that, together, with the most patiēt induring of the bitter griefe & dolour of the Crosse, vnder the burthen of our sinnes, layd vpon his holy soule, by the hand of his heauenly Father: hee vpon the sight of his naturall Mother, sheweth himselfe most kindlie & naturally affected toward her, to the breaking off, of the extremitie of her sorrow, wherewith her soule (no doubt) was pierced, as with a sword, in the beholding of this calamitie fallen vpon her most deare & onely Sonne: according to that which Simeon had told her, by the Spirit of Prophesie, 33. yeares before. And in this declaration, of his most kinde & naturall affection, he sheweth himselfe, to haue a most tender care, that shee should be comfortablie maintained, in this latter parte of her life, wherin she was now growing to be of good yeares: & therefore sheweth her, whom he had appointed, to be a speciall stay & comfort vnto her, as a most dutifull Sonne: in stead of him: directing her to Iohn, (for he is the Disciple described to be he whom Christ loued: for so Iohn describeth himselfe, of singular thankfulnes to Christ, for the same his speciall affection toward him.) And thē, he cōmandeth Iohn, to haue a dutifull care of her, for his sake, euē as if she were his natural Mother. Thus our Saviour is vpō the Crosse, an eminent & famous mirrour of all holy obediēce, to the first table, & also to the 2. of the righteous law of God, by these two notable instances, of Patience vnder the hand of his heauenly Father, & of loue, to his natural Mother here on earth. And thus also, he sheweth himselfe, to be a meete Person to offer vphimselfe to God a meete Sacrifice of Propitiation, for our sinnes, both against God and Man.

And herewithall likewise, the singular wisedome of our Saviour is to be diligently obserued of vs, in the maner of his speaking to her: & in the whole order which he taketh in cōmitting her to the care of his beloued Disciple. For in that he calleth her Woman, & not Mother, & substituting Iohn as a Sonne, in his stead vnto her, and accordingly willeth her to transfer her Motherly affection toward him: he giueth her to vnderstand, that she is to bend her minde, to conceiue of him far otherwise, in these his sufferings, then of her naturall Sonne: that is, that hereby, he doth the office of an high Priest vnto God, & of a Saviour of her & all other of his elect: & that he was by these his ignominious sufferings, to enter into his diuine glory, & to prepare a heauenly māsion place for her, together with him. These things, no doubt, would our Saviour giue Marie to vnderstand now, according to that she had learned & professed of him long before, euen while he was yet in her womb, Lu: 1, 31. & 38. & ver: 46. &c. that thus he might moderate & rectifie all disorder, or confusion of natural affection, that might assaile her, by occasion of his so rufull a spectacle, as his hanging, & continuance vpon the Crosse, must needs be in her naturall view. This manner of the speach, and order which our Saviour tooke, and vttered to his Mother, on her behalfe, at this time: as also all other the like moderate mention made of her, in the holie Scriptures: as Iohn. 2. 4. Matth: 12. 48. 49. 50. Luke. 11. 27. 28. Acts 1. 14. is the rather to be well pondered and weighed of vs, to the ende we may see the difference, yea the contrarietie of the minde and will of our Sauiour Christ, concerning his Mother: and the doting of our superstitious and Idolatrous Papists, in that against all order, they ordaine the Mother of our Sauiour to be the cõmander of her Sonne, & so pray to her, &c: knowing no measure of estimation or honour, no nor abstaining from any blasphemous derogation against our Sauiour, to the ende they may fulfill their owne deluded fancie, to the aduancing of her.

Tekese in Goa the Sone, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The grou & historie of his crucifying.

Neuertheless, the most excellent vertues of the Virgine Marie the Mother of our Lord, are not to be neglected of vs, touching that measure of grace wherwith she was by the gift of God indued: though not in all full perfection, or without all sinne, as they dreame.

And namely, herein appeareth an excellent Spirit to be in her, in that no discomfort of the outward calamitie of her Sonne, could daunt her, so that shee should not let him haue the comfort of her presence, nor that shee should not declare her loue toward him, yea and in that there was in her a seede of Hope, concerning a blessed issue, against all outward discomfort.

The like is to be obserued, concerning the other two Maries: the one, the Sister or Kinswoman of the Virgin Marie, the other beeing Marie Magdalene, who could not forget the great mercie of our Sauiour, in that he cast seuen Diuells out of her. So here are three Maries, notable patternes for the imitation of all Christian women, of what name soeuer they be, to learne from them, not to be ashamed of Christ, no not of Christ crucified: and so much the rather, because Christ that was at this time hanging on the Crosse, is long since glorified, and triumphant in heauen: from whence he shall come in glorie, to iudge all the worlde.

Moreouer, the obedience of Iohn, is to be marked of vs: not onely for his commendation, but much rather for our imitation, touching the willing care ouer anie worthie person, or thing, which for the Lordes sake, shall be in his name committed vnto vs. Likewise, the loue of Iohn, and his constancie, in abiding by our Sauiour: is to be preferred before the rest of the Disciples, who hid themselues from him. Yet so as both Iohn, and euery Marie, is altogether silent, and feele their great weakenesse no doubt, in the beholding of this great worke, which was to be wrought, and was indeede performed, by our Sauiour alone: hee bearing the whole burthen of it entirely in himselfe: and therfore is to haue from vs, and all his redeemed, the whole glorie and praise thereof. These are briefly, the excellent things to be obserued in this text, concerning the care which our Sauiour had of his Mother, while he did hang still vpon the Crosse.

THe third thing is now to be considered of vs: to wit, the rayling & scornfull reproches, of all sortes of the beholders, against our Sauiour.

Of the which, there were fiue sortes.

1. First, the rulers, that is to say, the high Priestes, with the Scribes, and Elders, and Pharisies.
2. The people of the Iewes.
3. Thirdlie, the Souldiers that attended the execution, not onely those fowre that fastned him to the Crosse, but the rest also that were there, with the Centurion: that is, with the Captaine of an hundreth souldiers, mentioned in this Storie, after the death of our Sauiour.
4. Fourthlie, the Passengers, who passing by, came and stayed at their pleasure, to see what the matter was.
5. Fiftlie, the Thieues that were crucified with our Sauiour: speciallie one of them, and as it seemeth, both of them at the beginning, though one of them was afterward conuerted, as we are to obserue hereafter.

Of these seuerall sortes of railers, and scoffers against our Lord and Sauiour: let

Beleefe in God the Sonne who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and history of his leading to be crucified.

let vs heare, what the holy Euangelists doe report vnto vs:

And first, of the three former: that is, of the rulers, cõmon people, and Souldiers. And insomuch as S. Luke doth most orderly rehearse them, let vs heare what he writeth of them. What are his words?

Question. In the 23. chap. verses 35. 36, 37. thus he writeth.

Answere. 35. And the people stood, and beheld: and the Rulers mocked him with them, saying, He saued others: let him saue himselfe, if he be the Christ, the chosen of God.

36. The Souldiers also mocked him, and came and offered him vineger.

37. And said, if thou be the King of the Iewes, saue thy selfe.

Who the Rulers were, who mocked our Sauiour, S. Matthew doth most fully expresse, chap. 27. 41. to wit: The high Priests, with the Scribes, and Elders, and Pharises, as was rehearsed before.

Explicatiõ And he doth rehearse their scoffing words, more fully then S. Luke: as it followeth verses 42. 43. He saued others, but he cannot saue himselfe: if hee be the King of Israel, let him come downe from the crosse, and we will beleeue him.

He trusted in God, let him deliuer him now, if he will haue him: for he saide, I am the Sonne of God.

Likewise also, doth S. Marke report their words, chap. 15. 31, 32. He saued other men, himselfe he cannot saue. Let Christ the King of Israel now come downe from the Crosse, that we may see and beleeue.

Moreouer, as touching the fourth sort of scorners; onely the same Euangelists, Matthew and Marke, doe tell vs of them: though as it may seeme, in respect of time, something out of order, in that they begin with them: but not without good reason, in some other respect: insomuch as, very likely, they comming as strangers, and being possessed freshly with the matter, and willing to gratifie those, that were readie to make the most odious report that they could vnto them: were the most clamorous mockers among the rest, as their words personally cast out against our Sauiour doe declare. Whereas the Rulers did not so directly vtter their taunts to our Sauiour, but spake them among themselues, as the Euangelist Marke testifieth: though like enough, so as he might heare them, to the increase of his griefe. The words, and also the gesture of these fresh mockers, are set downe, both by S. Matthew, & also by S. Marke.

Question. How doth S. Matthew first report them?

Answere. In the 27. chap. verses 39. 40. thus we read:

39. And they that passed by, reuiled him, wagging their heads.

40. And saying, Thou that destroyest the Temple, and buildest it in three dayes, saue thy selfe: if thou be the sonne of God, come downe from the Crosse.

29. And the words of the Euangelist Mark, are like to these. Cha. 15. verses 29, 30. And they that went by (saith he) railed on him, wagging their heads, and saying, Hey, thou that destroyest the Temple, and buildest it in three dayes,

30. Saue thy selfe, and come downe from the Crosse.

Explicatiõ These are then the fourth sort of mockers, and such as haue beene now rehearsed, were their mocking words.

And touching the theeues crucified with our Sauiour, who were numbred for the fift sort, the same Euangelists testifie likewise, that they also reuiled him. As we read Marke 15. 32. And Matthew 27. 44. The same also (saith hee) to wit the same mocking words, which the Rulers vsed) the theeues which were crucified with him, cast in his teeth. But as it appeareth by S. Luke, one of them was soone weary of his part: and therefore doth not stand to note him for a railer, seeing his notable repentance did, as it were blot out the beginnings of his vnaduised misdemeanour. And therfore he writeth thus of one only, chap. 23. 39. And one of the euill doers, which were hanged, railed on him, saying, If thou be the Christ, saue thy selfe and vs.

Of these seuerall sorts of mockers and scorners, let vs stand a while to consider, for our instruction, and warning, and comfort. And first, to speake generally, let vs well obserue, that all of them did sinne verie hainously, in that they doe thus sport themselues, and take their pleasure in the beholding of a man in outwarde distresse, according as the Spirite of Beleefe in God the Sonne, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground & history of his crucifying.

of Prophesie giueth vs to vnderstand, Psal: 22. 17. They pierced my handes and my feete, I may tell all my bones, yet they behold and looke vpon mee.

If our Saviour Christ had bene anie other then hee was, yea a malefactor, (which God forbid wee should once thinke) it had bene an inhumane practise at the least. But seeing he was vniustlie, on their parts crucified: their sinne was the greater, according to that of the Prophet Obadiah, verses, 11. 12. (For many of them in whose afflictions the Edomites reioyced, were more righteous then they.) But in so much as our Saviour Christ, was the most righteous of all men, yea euen the Sonne of God: their sinne was so much the more hainous and diuellish. For is it not a strange thing, and euidentlie the speciall worke and instigation of the deuill, working in them, that of common humanitie, they spare the thieues, as touching any reproching of them: but neither religion, nor ordinarie course of iustice, could restraine them, from extremitie of outrage against our Saviour. For it may iustly be noted against them, that they deale vniustlie, in that they exceede the iudgement or sentence of Pilate: who though hee condemned him to be Crucified, and so to continue till he should be dead: yet he did not giue any commandement, that he should be thus mocked, while he should abide on the Crosse. Moreouer, let it be obserued in generall, concerning these mockings, that all were not cast forth at once, or at one instant: but they continued thus mocking, one or other of them, the greatest parte of the first three howers. Finallie, this ready consent of all sorts, in mocking and reproching our most blessed and Reuerend Saviour, euidently sheweth, how apt our wicked nature is to scorne religion and godlines, (yea euen God and Christ himselfe the author of religion and fountaine of all godlines) if wee should be left to our selues, and to the power of the Diuell but a while, as these people were. And therefore it is, that for a most necessarie admonition against this grieuous sinne, it is set downe in the very forefront and enterance into the holie booke of Psalmes, that hee is a blessed man, whom God of his mercie, deliuereth, and by his grace, preserueth from the seate of the scornefull. Read also, Acts 2. 13. and chapt: 13. verses 40. 41. and Isai. 28. 22. 2. Chron: 30. 10. and chapt: 36. 16. Thus much more generallie, concerning the reproches done against our Saviour, hanging on the Crosse.

But let vs come to the consideration of the particular sortes of the scorners: and of their seuerall scornings.

And first, to beginne with those, who, as they were chiefe in outward power, and autoritie, were likewise chiefe in the sinne, euen ring-leaders as wee may say, or rather Lordes of the mis-rule, vnto all the rest: they were as the Euangelist Matthew rehearseth them, of foure sorts. First, the chiefe Priestes, euen those, that by their office, beeing exercised in the offering vp of all sortes of figuratiue oblations and Sacrifices to God, which according to the instructions of his Ceremoniall law, pointed them to Christ, the true Sacrifice: ought euen now, beholding him to be in sacrificing of himselfe to God, to haue better bethought themselues, howsoeuer they had bene blinded before.

Secondlie, the Scribes, that is to say, such as tooke vpon them to be interpreters of the lawe, in a most Clarklie manner, as a man may say.

Thirdlie, the Elders, who were men of speciall estimate among the rest of the people, for wisedome and grauitie, fit to be assistant with the rest, in matters of gouernment and counsell.

Fourthlie, the Pharisies, who were a sect, pretending a more exact course of a iust and holy life, in obseruing of manie traditions, which tract of time had by custome authorised among all the Iewes: beside that they also boasted of a Doctorlie or Rabbinicall knowledge of the lawe. All these, ioyne all their authorities and credits together, still to deface our Saviour, as if they would blot out all honourable remembrance of him, among the people of God, euen for euer and euer.

Wherin, let vs behold a strange thing: yea a thing altogether monstrous,

that

Beliefe in God the Sone, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground & historie of his crucifying.

that all these sorts of wise and learned men, should consent in most extreame folly and outrage, giantlike to make warre as it were against God: in turning light into darknes, truth into error, good into euill, &c. Yet so it is, as wee see through the iust iudgment of God, because they did not in truth seek to know the truth, and to apprehend and cherish the loue of it in their hearts: but onely to serue their owne turne, so farre forth as might stand with their owne vaine glory and gaine: according to that we reade Isaiah, chap. 28. 14, 15, &c. and ch. 29. 9, 10, &c. compared with Matt. 15. 7, 8, 9, 12, 13, 14. And ch. 13. verse 13, 14, 15. And againe, Iohn chap. 12. 37, 38, 39. 42, 41. And chap. 5. 44.

The like heauie iudgement of God, we see euidently vpon the Antichristian Rulers in the Romish Church: who hauing put out their owne eyes, as it were, touching all sound & entire truth of doctrine, know nothing beside their owne deuises and blinde deuotions, seruing to their prowd pompe and filthy lucre and gaine.

Let vs therefore take diligent heede, that we take a better course, that wee may be in the number of those, whom God teacheth: that is, of such as doe vnfainedly humble our selues to learne and obey the truth from him: insomuch as himselfe professeth, that hee will giue wisedome to the simple, and babes, and hide it from such as are wise in their owne eyes: according as our Lord Iesus Christ hath testified, and thankfully confessed to God, Matth. 11. 25. and as we reade in diuers other places of holy Scripture.

But let vs come to the reproches and mockes of the Iewish Rulers. They are three in number. The first against his name or title of Iesus. The second against the title King, ascribed vnto him. The third against the title Sonne of God. All which notwithstanding they doe most truly and properly, and in the highest degree belong vnto him: yet doe they goe about most wickedly, ignorantly, and blasphemously, to disgrace him in them all: yea and after a sort, as much as lay in them, to degrade him from them all. But all in vaine: for as hee receiued not these honours and dignities from them, or any other creature: so could neither they, nor any other take them away from him. Contrary to all indeuours of all the wicked, he remaineth the Sonne of God, a King, yea our King and Sauiour, to be blessed and praised for euer. Let vs a little consider of their blasphemous ignorance. First, say they, He saued others: Not minding to acknowledge the truth of his mighty and sauing miracles, in that he deliuered all sorts of diseased and distressed poore soules: but rather to traduce, and weaken the credit of them, as the words next following doe declare: he cannot saue himselfe. As though they should say, Hence it appeareth how vaine all his former workes were, in that, if he had diuine power indeede, hee would now especially declare it in his owne deliuerance from this his misery: that is, from this his Crosse, as afterward they doe further expresse their mindes. So then, it is plaine, that they speake here, with like minde, as they are recorded to haue spoken, Matth. chap. 12. verses 24, &c. But as touching their reason, take it in the best sense that may be, and it carrieth no force in it, as euery meane scholler in the schoole of Christ can easily conceiue. Christ doth it not, therefore he cannot doe it. What a reason is this? Nay rather, though he could haue done it, as all his workes before haue plentifully declared, and euen in the entrance into the passion, when in the garden (as wee haue already seene) hee caused all that came to apprehend him, to fall backward at the maiesty of one word speaking, when he said nothing but, whom seeke yee? and, I am he Ioh. 18 4, 5, 6. And againe, in that he presently healeth the eare of Malchus, which Peter strooke off with his sword, immediately after the same: though therefore (as wee were about to say) he could as easily haue caused the nailes to haue sprong out of his hands and feete, and immediately haue healed them againe: yet he would not, because by continuing vpon the Crosse, he had a more miraculous worke to doe, that is to deliuer the bodies and soules of all the thousands of Gods elect, from eternall destruction and the euerlasting wrath of God, and to purchase for them, eternall life: the which, these deepe learned men, were willingly ignorant of.

Their second reproch is like to the former, but increased by some further amplication: If he be the King of Israel, (taking this their taunt, from the superscription ouer his head, as also from the same words attributed to him in the holy Scriptures) let him now come downe from the Crosse, and we will beleeue him. In the which their reproch, all the amplification that is in it, is nothing else but a further discouery of their profane ignorance and malice, to their owne further shame. For their reason, implieth a most manifest contradiction. For it is so farre of, that our Sauiour should come downe from the Crosse, to declare himselfe to be the King of Israel, that he could not better confirme himselfe to be so, then by continuing still vpon it, to make his full conquest therevpon, ouer all the enemies of himselfe, and euery one of his faithfull subiects. For by the shedding of his bloood, which by his continuance vpon the crosse, still more and more issued out of his bodie, by those foure passages which the nailes had opened in his holie handes and feete, our saluation was to bee purchased, and the couenant thereof to bee euerlastingly sealed: according to that Zech. 9. verses 9, 10, 11. Heb. 13. 20. and in many other places.

Neither when these scorners say, And we will beleeue him: doe they meane good soothe: for though he had come downe, they would haue beene ready to say, that he did it by the power of the diuell, or at the least, would haue doubted of the truth of the miracle. Onely their purpose was, to iustifie their owne infidelity, wherein they were already obstinately confirmed, by an imagination of the impossibility which they mention: as appeareth plainly in this: that notwithstanding our Sauiour Christ doth within a while after, worke a greater miracle then this which they speake of, when he rose from the dead: yet they would not beleeue in him.

The third reproch is this, He trusteth in God, let him deliuer him now if he will haue him: for he said, I am the Sonne of God. This reproch therefore, standeth in a maligning of this title the Sonne of God, as vnmeete for our Sauiour to take vnto him. But be it that Christ were not the Sonne of God, (which God forbid we should once thinke (insomuch as God himselfe hauing testified that he is so: and the witnes of our Sauiour is true concerning the same) yet admit I say, that it were not so, as they make themselues beleeue: what should moue them to traduce the name of God, as to say, Let him deliuer him now if he will haue him? For this is most presumptuously, and blasphemously, to challenge the Lord himselfe: and to runne wilfully into that sin, whereof they were expressly forewarned, as we read in the 22. Psalme. And what reason haue they, to tie God vnto their Now, as if he must worke his works at their pleasure: or else they wil deny the gratious hand and power of God to be in them? God hath all times and seasons in his hand, to deliuer those that be his, both when, & how he will. And as it is the duty of all the children of God, to put their trust in him cõstantly, & to wait vpon him, vntil it please him in his due season to deliuer them: so that their reproching of our Sauiour, for that he trusted in God, is very wicked and vngodly.

The second sort were the people of whom we need say nothing in particular, because their mocking was the same with the mocking of their Rulers: whose example they followed, & in whose footsteps they trode, & being blind, were most dangerously led by the blind, into one and the same most deepe and perillous ditch.

Let vs come to the third sort, that is, to the mocking Souldiers. Their mockery was partly in action or deede, and partly by word of mouth. Their mocking wordes were like to those of the Rulers: as if, like apt and teachable schollers, they had learned their lesson of them. If thou be the King of the Iewes, saue thy self. Their meaning is not, that the matter should be put vpõ this trial, for they scorned it altogether: but it is as much as they should say, thou art no more likely to be the king of the Iewes, thẽ that thou being surely nailed to the Crosse, Reliefe in God the Son, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and history of his crucifying.

Crosse, shouldest deliuer thy selfe from this thy punishment.

Their mockerie by action and deed, was with like bitter contempt and disdaine. For as the Euangelist Luke saith, They did in this their mocking moode, offer him vineger: as though they should haue said, will you drinke Sir? it is like you are by this time very drie, and in a hote fit, &c. O most wretched and diuelish despisers!

The Passengers were reckoned in the fourth place, for the fourth sort of mockers and scorners of our blessed Sauiour: that is to say, such, as trauailing to some other place, espied a farre of, the busines of this execution, and so came to see what the matter was: or such as were comming to Ierusalem, against this time of the solemnity of the feast of the Passeouer, made this in their way to goe to the City. And we know also, that vsually the places of execution of malefactors, is neare to some great road or other. Let vs therefore come now to consider, what their mockes and scornings were.

These likewise, had not onely their mocking and reprochfull speeches: but also their disdainfull gestures, answerable therevnto. And in either of these, they were singular, and as was said clamorous, aboue the rest; cōming fresh vpon the matter, and inflamed as it were, with a new heat of the spirit of Satan: soe that not without cause, (in this respect) as was also obserued, doe the Euangelists Matthew and Marke, rehearse them in the first place, though in order we cannot thinke they were so,

The contemptuous and reprochfull, or disdainfull gesture of these Passengers, as that they in their reuiling of him, wagged their heads malapertly: according to that whereof the Prophet complaineth prophetically, Psal. 22. 6. 7. I am a worme, and not a man: a shame of men, and the contempt of the people. All they that see me haue me in derision: they make a mow, and nod the head, &c. Concerning the which bitter kinde of gesture, in expressing derision, reade also Psal 44. 14. where the Church complaineth of it. And 2. King. 19. 21. the like gesture ioyned with derision, though ascribed to the Church against the presumptuous pride of the King of Assur, by some good interpreters.

The contemptuous speeches, being in themselues very bitter and taunting, were vttered with great vehemency, as also it appeareth by the interiection of contemptuous insulting, or reioycing against our Sauiour, which the Euangelist Marke expresseth, Hey, say they, &c. The speeches which they vsed to the reproching of our Sauiour, were of two sorts. The one was an vpbraiding of him, by a false imputation of misconstrued words, which he should haue spoken, as we haue already seene, three yeares before. These words they vse as a skornefull description, or nicknaming of our Sauiour Christ: Thou (say they) that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three daies: and then they reproch him, as not being able to saue himselfe, and therefore altogether vnlike to be a Sauiour of others. This is their first reproch, as touching the title Sauiour belonging to Christ, like as the Rulers had reproched him before: so that it appeareth, they were all schollers taught in one schoole, and hauing like Master, were like schollers, &c. The same also, is to be considered concerning their second branch of reproch, which was against the title of Son of God: in that they say, If thou be the Son of God, come downe frō the crosse: as though they should say, hereby it appeareth wel, that thou dost falsly boast thy selfe to be the Son of God, and to haue a diuine power, because a few nailes are able to hold thee to the crosse, that thou art not able to stir either hād or foot, for the reliefe of thy selfe.

Thus did the Passengers of the Iewes, comming vpon the occasion of the execution, most profanely and contumeliously mocke and deride our Sauiour: so that, what they were behinde in time, that they supplied by their intemperate zeale, and so made themselues companions with the rest, in the outrage of their sinne.

Now the last sort of the reprochers and reuilers of our Sauiour, were the theeues, which were crucified with him.

Beliefe in God the Son who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and history of his crucifying.

The which yet, we are from that which the Euangelist Luke writeth, compared with Matthew and Marke, to vnderstand as we must put a great difference betwixt the one of the thieues and the other: For although it behoueth vs to conceiue from that which Saint Matthew and Saint Marke do write, that at the first, both the thieues were a like wickedly minded: yet within a while, the one of them, was altogether made another man by the wonderfull mercy and miraculous working of the Spirit of God and our Sauiour Christ in the heart of the poore miserable and sinfull man: of a miserable sinfull and damnable wretch, that is, of one worthy to haue beene condemned for euer to hell, made a most blessed and happy child of God, adopted to be an inheritor of eternall saluation. And therefore it is, that the Euangelist Luke doth absolutely report, and as it were brand the one of them onely for a railer. If wee would know what the railings of both the thieues were in the beginning, the Euangelists Matthew and Luke tell vs, that they were the same whereby the Rulers of the Iewes mocked him. And indeede, as was obserued in the beginning, they were as the ringleaders, or lords of the misrule to all the rest, and so the authors of this hainous sinne of mocking, euen as they were of the crucifying it selfe. All these reuilings were no doubt grieuous vnto our Souiour, and increased the dolours of his soule. For seeing Lot vexed his righteous soule to see and heare the vnlawfull deedes of the Sodomites. 2. Pet. 28. much more was the righteous soule of our Sauiour Christ, to see and heare these blasphemies of the wicked Iewes: according to that we reade Psal. 22. and Psal. 69. Seeing also it was as the breaking of Dauids bones, whē they said to him, where is thy God? and Ps. 42.? The same no doubt was much more greeuous to our Sauiour Christ, &c.

But now touching this part of the holy story, let vs consider of it furthermore, from the report of the Euangelist Luke: I meane first, touching the obstinate continuance of the impenitent and obdurate thiefe, in his railing: and then also concerning the miraculous, and most gratious conuersion of the other: which as we may remember, was reckoned to be the fourth thing worthy to be diligently marked of vs, within the space of the first three houres, wherin our Sauiour Christ continued vpon the Crosse. To this end therefore, let vs heare the words of the holy Euangelist.

Question. What doth he write of this excellent matter?

Answer. His words are these, chap. 23. verses 39 40, 41.

39 And one of the euill doers, which were hanged, railed on him, saying, If thou be the Christ, saue thy selfe and vs.

40 But the other answered, and rebuked him: saying, Fearest not thou God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation?

41 We are indeede righteously here: for we receiue things worthy of that we haue done: but this man hath done nothing amisse.

42 And hee saide vnto Iesus, Lorde remember mee when thou commest into thy kingdome.

43 Then Iesus said vnto him, verily I say vnto thee, to day shalt thou be with me in Paradise.

Explication In these words of the holy Euangelist, we haue laid before our eyes: first, the obstinacy of the one thiefe, continuing in his railing: and then the repentance of the other; with the fruit and benefit thereof, euen eternall happines and saluation, assured vnto him by our Sauiour Christ.

First therefore, from the euill practise of the impenitent thiefe, let vs conclude the third point of the second part of the story, concerning the execution of our Sauiour: to wit, the railings and mockings of all sorts against him: and so come to the fourth point, to be considered therein.

In this wicked and impenitent thiefe, we are to obserue the greatnes of his sin, in railing against our Sauiour: not onely from his speech, but also frō some other circumstances, not to be neglected of vs, for our owne admonition. And first, becausse hee giueth himselfe to railing, at such time as there being

The ground and history of his crucifying.

but a ſtep (as we may ſay) betwixt him and death he ought now at the laſt, to haue lamented and bewailed his owne damnable life: And though he could not haue apprehended Chriſt now crucified with him, to be that very Chriſt, the only Sauiour of ſinners: yet hee ought moſt humbly to haue craued mercy and forgiuenes of his ſinnes, at the hands of God, for his Chriſtes ſake, according to his promiſe, whoſoeuer he ſhould be. This at the leaſt, he ought now at the laſt to haue done, death ſo neare approaching. The which becauſe he mindeth not, but contrariwiſe addeth ſinne to ſinne, as it were drunkennes to thirſt, as the Scripture ſpeaketh: yea ſeeing he doth that, which being duly weighed, ſhall be found more grieuous then any other of his former ſinnes: this of it ſelfe is ſufficient, to argue the exceeding greatnes of his wickednes.

But beſides this, his ſinne may be diſcerned to be yet ſo much the greater, becauſe he raileth at him, who neuer gaue him any occaſion, wherby he ſhould be prouoked to take ſtomacke againſt him: as the Rulers of the Iewes might haue pretended, though altogether vniuſtly: inſomuch as he did moſt earneſtly reproue them for their great and grieuous ſinnes, of hypocriſie, ambition, couetouſnes, falſe interpreting of the holy Scriptures, &c. And alſo, becauſe this thiefe doth it then, when it cannot be thought, that he ſhould haue any way to benefit himſelfe, by flattering of the Ruler: inſomuch as he had his iudgement and execution already. So that it muſt needs be iudged to be of extreame, and ſheere diuelliſh malice, rather then if he had done it onely before hee was condemned, or while he had not yet been nailed to the Croſſe: as we ſhall haue occaſion to note further, from the rebuke which the penitent thiefe giueth him, ſpeaking by the Spirit of God, afterward. Thus the circumſtances doe amplifie the ſinne of this moſt miſerable man.

The manner of his rayling ſpeech doth in it ſelfe, and as it were from the owne boſome, likewiſe ſufficiently bewray it ſelfe. For in that he ſaith, If thou be the Chriſt, ſaue thy ſelfe and vs: he doth not with an humble heart, and of ſimplicity deſire our Sauiour to ſhewe by ſuch a token, that hee is the true Chriſt, that he might be moued thereby to beleeue in him. No, nothing leſſe: but his meaning is flatly to renounce him, as not being the Chriſt: becauſe he accounteth him vnable either to ſaue them or himſelfe. Or at the leaſt, his meaning is flatly, and contemptuouſly to renounce him, as not being the Chriſt: vnleſſe he may ſee and find him to worke that work, which he preſumptuouſly and temptingly preſcribeth vnto him. Now therefore, what man among our ſelues, muſt not needes take in very euill part, the requeſt of ſuch a proud begger, as ſhould profeſſe vnto vs, that if wee will not giue him that which he demaundeth, he will not account vs to be any good or honeſt men? but that we are vnmercifull and cruell perſons, &c. So then, both the ſpeech of this railer in it ſelfe, as alſo all circumſtances going therewithall, doe euidently ſhew, that the ſinne of this man in this his rayling, was exceeding hainous. A fearefull example, to admoniſh vs all, to take heede of entering into any euill courſe of life, preſuming of repentance at the laſt: for we may ſee, how eaſie it is for a man to be deceiued in ſuch a conceite: yea how eaſie a thing it is, for a man to be hardened more and more to his dying day, yea to the laſt houre and moment hee hath to draw his breath: though hee haue neuer ſo mighty occaſions to moue him to repent, as we ſee this thiefe had. For he falleth to railing, notwithſtanding hee hath a moſt excellent patterne of patience in our Sauiour: neither doth he come to any remorſe, notwithſtanding he is rebuked moſt wiſely, and perſwaded withall by him, that was his fellow thiefe: whoſe example of repentance is alſo moſt notably layd before him.

But to conclude this third point, of our ſecond part of the moſt holy Storie of the ſufferings of our Sauiour Chriſt, in the time that he was executed; that wee may rightly vnderſtand it to our full inſtruction and comfort: wee muſt not onely, no nor principally, conſider the malice of all ſorts of theſe mockers and ſcorners of our Sauiour (who for their parts did nothing therein, but increaſe their own damnation, vnleſſe happily it pleaſed God, to magnifie his mercy, in ſhewing them their ſinne, and giuing them true repentance: (as we doubt not he did of his infinit goodnes to ſome of them, as appeareth in the continuing of the Storie in the Acts of the Apoſtles:) but wee are chiefly to looke vnto the moſt holy and pure iuſtice of God, in all the reproach caſt vpon our Sauiour for our ſake, to the end he might in the willing and patient enduring of it, ſatisfie Gods iuſtice, in bearing the ſhame and reproach which was due to vs for euer, for our damnable pride, & all other our grieuous ſinnes, and ſinfulnes, againſt the maieſtie of God; and that he might bring vs into his fauour againe. For to this end no doubt and not otherwiſe, did our Sauiour Chriſt beare the ſorrow of all theſe things, which were certainly very grieuous and bitter vnto his moſt holy and righteous ſoule, in ſeeing and hearing the wicked miſdemeanour of all ſorts of his beholders, ſo deepely inraged by the diuell: beſide that we cannot but vnderſtand, that his hanging vpō the Croſſe, by the ſtay of his ſore wounded hands and feete, muſt needes be dolorous to his holy body. So that both inwardly & outwardly, he is a man of ſorrowes for vs: as the Prophet Iſaiah ſaid of him, long before: ch: 53. of his holy propheſie.

Theſe things thus conſidered: now we come to the fourth point of the ſecond part of his execution: that is, concerning the miraculous conuerſion of the other thiefe, within the ſpace of the firſt three houres, wherein our Sauiour continued vpon the Croſſe.

And herein, wee are to obſerue the exceeding great goodnes and mercy of God, and our Sauiour Chriſt, euen as before we obſerued the exceeding great ſinne and obſtinacie of the vnrepentant thiefe. For vndoubtedly it was the diuine purpoſe of God, to giue ſpeciall glory to his ſonne our Sauiour, euen in that, whereby his perſecutors ſought his diſgrace, to the vttermoſt that they could. They crucified him in the middeſt of two thieues; accounting him, and deſiring that he ſhould for euer be accounted, more vilie off, then any common malefactor. But God ſo diſpoſeth of the matter, that according, as by the title ſet vp ouer the head of our Sauiour, he proclaimeth him to be the King of his Church, and a Prince of the ſaluation of his people; ſo by this moſt gratious effect, he doth really cōfirme the ſame, both in that he doth moſt miraculouſly & gratiouſly turne the hart of this thiefe by the ſpirit of his Sonne (the whole Trinity conſenting and coniointly working this worke) for a mirrour of his grace, and to manifeſt the admirable efficacie of the ſufferings of our Sauiour before God, euen while he was at this time, in the induring of them: and alſo, in that according to the requeſt of the repēting thiefe, who deſired our Sauiour to remember him in his kingdome, hee doth by his owne abſolute power and princely authority, graunt and aſſure him to be a partaker of the happines, and ioyes thereof: as wee ſhal ſee more fully, when wee come to the words of the promiſe, the which our Sauiour made vnto him, euen while yet he was hanging vpon the Croſſe.

For in this part of our text, we haue to conſider theſe two things. Firſt, the conuerſion of the thiefe: and then the fruit or benefit thereof: either of them proceeding of the moſt free and bounteous grace of God, through our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

In the firſt place therefore, to the end wee may ſee more fully into the moſt gratious and admirable work of God, in the conuerſion of the thiefe: wee are to conſider certaine circumſtances firſt, and then the manifold and excellent graces, whereby his conuerſion was manifeſted.

The circumſtances, which doe argue the wonderfull mercy of God, were theſe. Firſt, becauſe the party conuerted, was one that had beene accuſtomed to ſin, yea & grown to a great height in it: and therfore was it more hard for him, to turne his heart vnfainedly to God: as we may perceiue by that of the Prophet Ieremiah: chap: 13.23. Can the blacke Moore (ſaith the Prophet) change his ſkin? or the ſhee-Leopard her ſpots? then may ye alſo do good, that are accuſtomed to doe euill. We are by nature prone to ſin; but cuſtome is another nature, which maketh keth vs, as wee may say, two-fold more the children, or rather the seruants and slaues of sinne, then we were before.

Beliefe in God the Son, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and history of his crucifying.

Secondly, the thiefe was conuerted euen at an instant, aboue all that could be expected: so that herein was fulfilled in one excellent example, and that after a rare maner, that saying of our Sauiour Christ. Iohn. 3.8 The wind bloweth where it listeth, & thou heares the sound therof, but canst not tel whence it cōmeth, nor whether it goeth: so is euery man that is borne of the spirit. It is a work aboue all that reason can see into. We can perceiue, when our hearts are once conuerted, that God hath wrought a new worke in vs, because we are otherwise minded now, then before: wee delight in the word, in prayer, in the company of the children of God, &c. Which we had no delight in before: but they were of no reckoning with vs, nay they were tedious & irksom vnto vs. But the conuersion it selfe, is a work aboue the comprehension of reason. And specially, such a suddaine and effectuall conuersion, or regeneration, as this of the thiefe was.

And the rather also, because as we are to obserue in the third place, hee was cōuerted without ordinary meanes. For our Sauiour spake nothing vnto him, to informe him in the waies of God, by outward sound of voice, & to the hearing of the eare, which is the ordinary meanes of conuersion. For faith cōmeth by hearing. Neither did any of the Rulers, either Priest, or Scribe, or Pharisie there present, the office of a Preacher, to instruct & exhort him to repentance. No, no: they were so addicted to mock & reproach our Sauiour, that they cared not what became of the soules of either of the poore sinners: no more then they had before, of Iudas, when they saw his soule in distresse, for his most wicked treason cōmitted against his Lord & Master. Math. 27.4. What is that to vs say they? see thou to it. So heere, none of them all, make it any part of their care. Such careless & vnconscionable Pastors and Guides were they. Nay rather, as the other thiefe was made worse by their example, in mocking our Sauiour: so had this poore soule also, if the Lord had not mightily succoured him, against all contrarie meanes, and occasions of perdition.

Thus then, the circumstances of this work, do serue notably, to magnifie the greatnes of it. But the manifold & excellent graces themselues, wherby it was manifested, are a more full illustration of it. Of these, let vs now consider.

The excellent graces, wherwith the thiefe cōuerted, was immediatly indued, and furnished, were many: but they may be considered, all of thē, from these 4. branches of the text. First, from that which sheweth what his reproofe was, to his fellow, in rebuking his railing. Secondly, frō that which containeth his cō-
• fession, both of his own sins, & the sins of his fellow: together with his acknowledgement of their iust desert, touching the punishment which was inflicted vpon them, by the sentence of the Magistrate. Thirdly, frō that which sheweth how he iustified our Sauiour Christ. Fourthly, from that which setteth forth his prayer which he made to our Sauiour.

The words of the reproofe, whereby he rebuked the railing of his fellow, were these, Feares thou not God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation? that is, in the condemnation which Pilate pronounced against either of vs, as well as against him: or, seeing thou art en tō au tō crimati: that is, in the condemnation it selfe, or present condemnation, as M. Caluine interpreteth it. In the which reproofe, first of all, it appeareth euidently, that this repenting thiefe, was effectually touched with the true feare of God: and that also from the conscience of his sin, by occasion of that heauie punishment which he now saw, & felt, by the iust hand of God, to be cast vpon him, for the same. For if he had not been truly taught by the Spirit of God, to make the right vse of his own affliction, he could not in such manner, as he doth, reproue his fellow, in whō he saw these graces wanting. And further, frō this his gratious & earnest reproof, it is likewise euident, that hee was inflamed with a holy zeale to the glory of God, grieuing to heare our Sauiour Christ so blasphemed, & railed vpon: and also with loue and compassion toward his companion, whom he saw to offend so grieuously this way, aboue all his other sins: and therfore if it might haue been, desired to haue moued him to repentance, euen as he himselfe, through the rich and tender mercie of God in Iesus Christ, was. Wherefore from this part of the speech of this notable conuert: beside the singular graces which God had wrought in his heart, let vs diligently obserue these two excellent instructions. First, what is the cause, that men doe run into all licentiousnes and disorder of life, in whoring, robbing, &c. to wit, euen because the feare of God is not before their eyes. For where that is, it is a holy bridle to restraine and hold them in: according to the holy Prouerb, That by the feare of God, we depart from euill. But where it is wanting, there is no care of shunning any sinne: as we may perceiue by that which we reade Gen. ch. 20. 11. and Rom. ch. 3. 9, 10, &c. 18. Secondly, we are to obserue, what ought to be, and is vnto the children of God, the right vse of all afflictions: whether they be such, as God by his owne hand, doth more immediately cast vpon vs, or by the ministery of those his honourable officers & Magistrates, into whose hands, hee hath put the sword of iustice, to take vengance of euill doers. Not onely to the end that euill might be taken out of the way, and other learn to feare: but also, that the parties themselues, might be brought to repentance by punishment at the last, who would not by any other meanes be reclaimed, so long as they escaped. For to this end, the speech of the conuerted thiefe is notable: as though he should haue said thus to his fellow, Howsoeuer, when we had liberty to doe what we list, and tyrannized at our pleasure ouer poore trauellers, which fell into our hands, in the woods or desert places, as if we had been Lords and Kings ouer them: yet now hath God brought our wickednes to light, and armed the sword of his Magistrate against vs; and we are presently vnder the sentence of our temporall condemnation: wee ought now, all desperate obstinacy laid asid, to call our sins to minde, to lament and bewaile them, and to seeke to God for mercy, that we may happily preuent his eternall damnation. And thus it is euident, from the effects, euen in the first part of the speech of this man: that God had wrought a most gratious cõuersion, & change in his heart: seeing he doth no other thing, but that which God, doth in his holy scriptures, cõmand all his seruants to do, & wherevnto he perswadeth vs by many holy reasons, both in regard of that zeale we ought to haue of his glory, & also for that loue & cõpassiõ which we oweto miserable sinners, if happily we may couer a multitude of sinnes, & to be the blessed instrumẽts of God, to the sauing of their souls. Leu. 19. 17. Ia. 5. 19. 20. & Iude. ver. 20, 21, &c.

But let vs now come to the words of the confession, both of his owne sins, and also of the sins of his fellow thiefe. Wherin he prosecuteth the former motiue, touching the desired repentance of his fellow, and for the profession and declaration of his owne, as it followeth: We are indeed righteously here: for we receiue things worthy of that we haue done. Wherein, we haue to consider two other excellent graces, as testimonies of the notable repentance of this man. First, in that he doth not goe about to excuse or lessen his sinne, as hypocrites doe: but he acknowledgeth it to the full, by a simple and plaine confession, and that no doubt with godly sorrow for the same: like as Achan doth, vpon the holy and fatherly exhortation of Ioshua the Magistratẽ of God. Iosh. 7. 19, 20, 21. And Dauid Psal. 51. and Paul 1. Tim. 1. 13, 14, 15, 16.

Secondly, (as a consequent of the former) we haue this further testimonie, of the vnfeined repentance of the conuerted thiefe, that he doth acknowledge the punishment to be iust that was inflicted vpon him, and his fellow: yea though it was a very grieuous and sharpe one. Whereby also, the truth of the former point is argued, touching his acknowledgement of the greatnes of their sinne: which was, no petty pilfering, but cruell robbing, &c.

Thus much briefly, of the second branch of his speech.

The third branch, cõteineth the testimony, which he gaue of the inocency & righteousnes of our Sauiour, in these words: But this man hath done nothing amisse. From which words, we may iustly cõceiue, that he was inlightned by the holy Ghost, rightly to know & beleeue in the Lord Iesus Christ, not only as being righteous in himselfe, but to be righteous for him, & for so many as should beleeue in him, according to that of the Prophet Ieremiah, ch. 23. 6. They shall call him him the Lord our righteousnes. A further confirmation of this his faith, is his prayer, which followeth in the last branch of his speech: as we shall see by and by, when we come to it. In the meane season, this is singularly to be noted, that our Lord Iesus Christ, being silent himselfe at all the reproches of the wicked: doth neuertheles by this man (thus wonderfully conuerted, and graced) as it were by a mightie and zealous preacher, or martyr, reproue, & reuerse the vniust sentence, both of the Iewes and Pontius Pilate, as wel as the vniust railing of the wicked and obstinate thiefe. This verily was a wonderfull worke of God, that he should giue so great a grace to this poore crucified man, that when his choise Disciples fled from him: and Peter for all his courage, was vtterly daunted for the time: and though Iohn were present & neare to the crosse of Christ, yet was as mute as a fish (as we say in the common Prouerb) that he should from the crosse, as it were from a high pulpet, giue an open and loude testimonie of our Sauiour Christ his innocencie.

The groũd and history of his crucifying.

It was, no doubt, a testimonie of a cleare reuelation giuen vnto him by the Spirit of God, and of our Saviour Christ: as also proceeding of a liuely faith, by the gift of the same Spirit. This, as was saide euen now, is very manifest, from the last part of the speech of this conuerted man: that is to say, by his prayer, which is a liuely fruite of his liuely faith, as it followeth reported by the Euangelist Luke, in this manner. And he saide vnto Iesus, Lord remember me when thou commest into thy Kingdome. For if he had not bin inlightened with a true and liuely faith, he could neuer had a heart to haue praied thus. It is aboue all reason, that he should, without a rare faith, looke vnto Christ, hanging vpon the crosse, with a torne and bloodie bodie, now neare to death, and on all hands, as we may see, reuiled and mocked: and yet for all that, to acknowledge him the Lord of life and glory, and the King and Prince of the saluation of all the elect of God: and that he had power and authoritie, according to the pleasure of his will, to dispose of his kingdome, & to grant remission of sins, & euerlasting life & saluation, to whõ he would. But thus we see he doth, if we doe duly consider the words of the praier, which he vseth. For he calleth him Lord, not as he should speak to one, by vsing a title of cõmon curtesie, or ciuility, &c. as though he should haue said, Sir: but he doth it of religious subiection & reuerence, and by humble supplication, in regard of a diuine and souereigne power, which he now by the eyes of faith, sawe him to haue. Neither would he haue ascribed a kingdome vnto him, vnlesse he had bin perswaded that he was a king indeed, (according to his title vpon the crosse: yea, according to the most holy annointing of God) and that he should ascend vp to the heauenly throne of the Maiestie thereof. Neither could he otherwise, with any comfortable hope of remission of sins, and of the inheritance of his heauenly kingdome, among the rest of his Saints, desire our Sauiour to remember him: that is, to shew him so great and grieuous a sinner, when he should take the possession or sit downe in the throne of his kingdome. And thus we may plentifully perceiue, by these so manifold & excellent graces, wrought so speedily, and without all meanes, yea against all outward lets & hinderances, obiect to his senses by the reproches of the wicked against our Sauiour, & notwithstanding the troublesome paines of his own crosse: that his conuersion was most extraordinarie and admirable: and therefore, a most euident and eminent declaration of the mighty grace and vertue, and merit of the sufferings of our Lord Iesus Christ, in the sight of his father, to reconcile poore sinners, yea euen most great and grieuous sinners vnto him: whosoeuer shall find grace, truly to beleeue in his name, and vnfeinedly to repent of his sinnes, as this great sinner did.

Hinc perspicimus (inquit Caluinus) quam perspicaces ei fuerint mentis oculi, quibus vitã in morte, celsitudinem in ruina, gloriam in probro, victoriam in exitio, regnum in seruitute intuitus est. In Harm. Euang.

Where he writeth excellently of this wonderfull conuersion, as of the most rare and memorable example, extant from the beginning of the world.

And hereunto we are to adde, for the conclusion of this point, and for a perfect confirmation of all that hath beene obserued, concerning this rare conuersion: the most gracious answere of our Sauiour Christ to the suppliant and repenting thiefe: the which wee reade in these most sweete, and comfortable words, as the Euangelist Luke doth likewise rehearse them: Then said Iesus vnto him, Verily I say vnto thee, to day shalt thou be with me in Paradise.

Beleeue in God the Sonne, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground & history of his crucifying.

O admirable effect of mercie, answerable to the former admirable cause of mercie. I meane that gift of mercie, in the conuersion of this so miserable a sinner, of the most free grace and mercie of God our heauenly father, whose onely fauour, is both the cause, and also the effect of all mercy: he crowning, and rewarding nothing in any of his elect children, but those gifts and graces, which he hath first giuen them.

The greatnes of this grace of our Sauiour, is to be considered from his own words, the faithfull interpreter of his gracious mind: and therefore let vs stand a litle, to ponder and weigh them.

Verily (saith our Sauiour) euen he that is the truth affirmeth it in truth, and with his holy and graue affirmation, vsuall to him in the affirmation of great and weightie points, worthy all credit: to the end he might raise vp the mindes of those to whom he spake, to the more firme and vndoubted faith of them: thus he speaketh to the conuerted thiefe, of a profane thief, being now changed to be a beleeuing and holy Christian. And it is to great purpose, that it be obserued, that he who is thus the truth and the true Sauiour, speaketh it: because whosoeuer else had spoken it, it should haue beene a vaine speech. Yea it is singularly to be obserued, that Christ crucified speaketh it, because it is by the vertue of his sufferings vpon the crosse, that he saueth both him and all of vs. And therefore to magnifie the benefit of his crosse, he is thus gracious and earnest, in giuing assurance of remission of sinnes, and eternall life, to a very great and grieuous sinner.

Neither doth our Sauiour hold him in any long suspence, by making him a promise, for a long time to come: but he assureth him of the experience of his mercy and saluation, euen the same day: the day also, being now halfe spent: to the end, that the poore soule, might be comforted more and more, with the assured hope of a blessed life, against the discomfort of the naturall death, euery minute of the houre, more and more hasting and approaching.

Yea, and he doth not assure him of a small blessing, and fauour: but that hee shall be with him: that is, that his soule shall be with the soule of our Sauiour. Where? Euen in Paradise; that is, in heauen. According to that similitude, whereby the holy Scriptures, doe sundrie times vse to signifie the same: as 2. Cor, 12.4. and Reuel: 2.7. And euen to this end, that the holy delight, and spirituall pleasure, and ioy of heauen, might be familiarly shadowed out from the Hebrewe word Pardes: which signifieth a pleasant and delightfull garden or orchyard; principally alluding to that garden of Eden, wherein Adam was placed at the first, in a very blessed and comfortable estate and condition. To the which ende also, our Sauiour ioyneth these two together, (with me, in paradise) meaning, in the like happie estate & condition for euer (though not in the same degree, of honour, & glory, which is not meet for any creature) according to the most holy prayer of our Sauiour. Iohn, 17.20.21.22.23.24. Such is the most gracious promise, and answere, which he maketh the repenting sinner: he himselfe, as well as the thiefe, hanging yet fastened to the crosse. Wherein notwithstanding, we see how he beginneth his most glorious triumph. The which wordes of our Sauiour, were noe doubt, not onely comfortable to the thiefe that was (though now noe thiefe, but a Saint clothed with the righteousnes of Christ by a true and liuely faith) but also to Marie the mother of our Sauiour, and to the other Maries, mentioned before: and to Iohn his beloued Disciple, who no doubt marked these things, and laied them vp in their hearts. And they may also be exceedingly comfortable to vs, and to all true beleeuing Christians: as we are diligently to obserue in our course and order, among the rest of the comforts.

Hetherto of the first part, or space of time, and the memorable things falling out therein, which we propounded to our selues to consider of: concerning the third, that is to say, the last part of the execution of our Sauiour. The first part, or space of time, as wee haue seene, reached from the fastening of our

Beliefe in God the Son, who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The groũd & historie of his crucifying.

Sauiour to the crosse, which was a little after the third houre, to the sixt houre of the day, which was with them about high noone.

THe second space of time, which we, according to the course of the holy storie, haue propounded to consider of, as it were in another diuision, or seuerall treatise: is from the sixt houre to the ninth, touching those other like worthy and memorable things, which fell out in that time. Of this part of the storie, let vs therefore henceforth set our mindes, with like reuerence and diligence, earnestly to inquire. But this we are to doe, from the ground & testimonie of the holy storie. Which therefore are the words thereof?

44. It followeth thus in the Euangelist Luke, *ch:*23.*v.*44.45. And it was about the sixt houre: and there was darkenes ouer all the land, vntill the ninth houre.

45. And the Sun was darkened, & the vaile of the Temple rent through the middest.

The holy Euangelist, hauing described vnto vs, the notable conuersion of one of the thieues, & the gratious acceptation which our Sauiour vouchsafed him: he telleth vs now, about what time, this gracious worke was accomplished: to wit, about the sixt houre. The which being litle regarded of the scornefull beholders (though indeed it was a very wonderfull and miraculous worke) the Euangelist declareth further, that it pleased God to take an other kind of course to reproue this wicked people then by his insensible creatures. Of the which sort, the Euangelist rehearseth two in our present text. The first, that from the sixt houre to the ninth, God had as it were put out the light among the people: the reason whereof was, that he had taken away the light from the Sun, which had bin from the fourth day of the creation, vntill that time, and so euer since, the ordinarie instrument & lampe thereof. The second reproofe by insensible creatures, was the miraculous rending of the vaile of the Temple through the middest. But as touching the rending of the vaile, in so much as it seemeth that Matthew & Marke doe rehearse it in the more orderly course, together with a more full narration of other things of like nature: we will deferre to speak of it, till we come to them. In the meane season, let vs diligently consider of this one wonderfull and fearefull worke of God, in casting darkenes vpon the face of the earth. Whereby, no doubt, the Lord God from heauen, would make manifest to the reproofe both of Iewe & Gentile (but specially of the most vnthankfull, wicked and blasphemous Iewe) these foure things. First, the greatnes and grieuousnes of their sin in the own nature, insomuch as most grosse ignorance was ioined with most extreame impietie: the which the Sunne was (as we may say) ashamed to behold any longer, or to cast forth her beames, that any should continue their contumelious gazing vpon this spectacle, most vnworthy their beholding.

Secondly, God doth hereby declare, how grieuous & displeasing vnto him, their sinfull dealing was for their parts, against our Sauiour to be blessed and adored for euer.

Thirdly, as a further consequent thereof, that his most heauie & terrible punishment, should in due time (as it came also to passe within a few yeares after) fall vpon thē, together with grosse blindnes of their vnderstanding, as appeareth to this day. For darknes was a most fit signe, to threaten & portend such a grieuous calamitie in either respect: insomuch as ignorance, & all kind of aduersitie, and the trouble or vexation thereof, is in the holy Scriptures vsually termed by the name of darknes: as on the contrarie, true knowledge, prosperitie, & comfort, is by light, according to that Isay, ch:5.30. & ch:8.22. & 9.1.2. & ch:60.1.2.3. Lament:3.1.2. Ezek:37.7.8. Amos 5.18.19.20. Micah:3.6. and in many other places. Read also, 2. Cor:3.14.15.

Fourthly, God did by this darknes, plainly giue to vnderstand, that the crucifying of the Son of God, so vilely accounted of among these crucifiers: is a matter of most worthy & memorable note, and of the greatest both precedence and consequence (as one may say) that euer hath bin, or shal be, from the beginning of the world, to the end of the same. For to this end, he hath by this strāge darknes, made this time of special note, not onely by holy Scriptures, but also by many testimonies of heathen records.

The

Beliefe in God the Son, who ſuffered vnder Pontius Pilate

The groũd & hiſtorie of his teaching to be crucified.

The ſtrangenes of this miraculous darknes, is to be obſerued in three things. Firſt in the cauſe of it, which was noe naturall eclipſe, or defect of light, by the interpoſition of the Moone, as it commeth to paſſe in our ordinarie eclipſes, much leſſe by the ſhadowe of any darke cloudie weather: but as the Euangeliſt Luke reporteth by the defect of light in the Sunne it ſelfe, and that alſo in the time, when it ſhould haue bin) as we make reckoning) in the full ſtrength and brightnes of it. For as he writeth (guided by the Spirit of truth) about the ſixt houre, that is about high noone, The Sunne was darkened. And that it was no ordinarie eclipſe, by the interpoſition of the Moone: the time of the moneth, when this darkenes was vpon the earth, doth of it ſelfe declare: inſomuch as it was at the full, and not in the newe of the Moone, that the Paſſouer was celebrated by the ordinance of God, as well as by the conſtant practiſe and cuſtome of the Iewes themſelues. This therfore, doth firſt of all ſhew, that this darkenes was moſt extraordinarie and miraculous, like vnto that darkeneſſe which God caſt vpon the Egyptians, as a puniſhment for their crueltie againſt the Iſraelites, though it continued not ſo long: and of the like nature, with that blindnes which the Angell caſt vpon the Sodomites, who made their more then beaſtly aſſault againſt the houſe of Lot.

Secondly, the continuance of it, in one equall degree of darkenes, yea of groſſe and vncomfortable darkenes no doubt, by the ſpace of three whole houres, ſheweth that it was no ordinarie eclipſe.

Thirdly, in that although the naturall cauſe of the darknes, was a moſt extraordinarie defect of light in the Sunne it ſelfe, to all the land of Iſrael: and by all likelihood, an obſcuring of the aire ouer that part of the world, inſomuch as the cauſe of darkenes was in the fayling of the Sunne it ſelfe: yet God ſo ordered the matter, that from no record it is alledged hetherto, that it was ſo palpable in any place as it was in Iſrael. As if the Lord minded to promiſe light, and peace, to the Gentiles, though he threatened warre and miſerie, againſt the obſtinate Iewes. So that in this reſpect, he tooke a contrarie courſe, to that of the darkenes of Egypt, which threatened deſolation to the Egyptians: when as light at the ſame ſeaſon, ſhined onely to the Iſraelites in Goſhen, where they dwelt in portion of the land of Egypt, as a promiſe of cõfortable deliuerance vnto them. Exod: 10. 21, 22, 23.

And thus, this three houres darkenes, which was (as three Euangeliſts, Matthewe, Marke, and Luke doe teſtifie) continued from the ſixt houre to the ninth: it was a doleful Sermon of three houres long, to a moſt lightſome & vehement reproofe, and condemnation, of the moſt blind ignorance, and moſt deadly malice of the perſecutors of the glorious Sonne of God our bleſſed Sauiour. Thus much briefly, concerning the ſecond ſpace of time, belonging to the laſt part of the execution of our Sauiour.

THe third ſpace, which is the laſt of the third part of the ſtorie of the execution, is now to be henceforth weighed, & pondered of vs: to wit, from the ninth houre, to the taking downe of the body of our Sauiour from the croſſe. Wherein, many things of moſt graue moment, will offer themſelues to vs, as being moſt worthy our beſt conſiderations: as the text it ſelfe, wil moſt faithfully lay before vs. Let vs therefore firſt of all looke vnto that.

Queſtion. Which of the holy Euangeliſts doe moſt fully report, thoſe ſo worthy things, as fell out in the ſame?

Anſwere. The Euangeliſts, Matthew, and Marke are moſt large in the moſt points: and the Euangeliſt Iohn in ſome other. Neuertheles, though the Euangeliſt Luke is moſt briefe, yet he reporteth ſome thing which all the reſt omit.

It is very true. And therefore it is our parts to inquire what euery witnes ſaith of his certaine knowledge, in euery point. Let vs begin with the Euangeliſts Matthewe, and Marke.

Queſtion. What write they?

46. And

Beliefe in God the Son who ſuffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and hiſtory of his agonie vpon the Croſſe.

46. And about the ninth houre ſaith the Euangeliſt Matthewe (chap: 27. 46. &c. that is (according to the Euangeliſt Marke, chap: 15. 34 &c.) At the ninth houre, Ieſus cried with a lowde voice, ſaying, Eloi, Eloi, lammaſabachthani? which is by interpretation. My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Or as in Matthewe, Eli, Eli, &c.

47. And ſome of them that ſtood ther, when they heard it, ſaid, this man calleth Elias.

48. And ſtraite way one of them ranne, and tooke a ſponge and filled it with vineger, and put it on a reede, and gaue him to drinke.

49. Other ſaid, let be: let vs ſee if Elias will come and ſaue him.

35. In Marke, thus. And ſome of them that ſtood by, when they heard it ſaid, Behold he calleth Elias.

36. And one ran and filled a ſponge full of vineger, and gaue him to drinke, ſaying, Let him alone: let vs ſee if Elias will come and take him downe.

Thus indeed, doe Matthew and Marke ſet down theſe two points, firſt, the lamentable cõplaint of our Sauiour, hauing continued now about ſix houres, in great dolour, and moſt bitter griefe, both of body and ſoule vpon the croſſe, together with the mockings of ſome that ſtood by: and then, the reaching of vineger to our Sauiour. But this laſt point, is more fully layed forth by the Euangeliſt Iohn: and therefore let vs heare it from him.

Queſtion. What are his wordes?

Anſwer. In the 19. chap: verſes 28. 29. 30. thus he writeth thereof.

28. After, when Ieſus knew that all things were performed, that the Scriptures might be fulfilled, he ſaid, I thirſt.

29. And there was ſet a veſſell full of vineger, and they filled a ſponge with vineger, and put it about an hyſſope ſtalke, and put it to his mouth.

30. Now when Ieſus had receiued of the vineger, he ſaide, It is finiſhed, and bowed downe his head, and gaue vp the Ghoſt.

Explicatiõ. This is the more full report of the Euangeliſt Iohn, touching that point. But yet againe, before this our Sauiours giuing vp of the Ghoſt: Matthewe and Marke teſtifie further, that our Sauiour in giuing vp the Ghoſt, cried againe with a lowd voyce, chap. 27. 50. and chap. 15. 37. Yea and the Euangeliſt Luke, chap. 23. verſe 46. teſtifieth in this point, more then all the reſt: ſetting downe the words, which he vſed in this latter crie. For as he writeth, our Sauiour cried with a lowd voice, and ſaid, Father into thine hands I commend my Spirit. And when he had thus ſaid, he gaue vp the Ghoſt.

These then are part of the moſt memorable things, to be diligently weighed of vs, in the laſt ſpace of the time, of the execution of our Sauiour: from the ninth houre, to the time that he was taken downe from the Croſſe. The reſt doe follow: for the report whereof, wee will firſt returne to the Euangeliſt Queſtion. Matthew, as it followeth from the 51. verſe of 27. chapter. What are his words?

Anſwer. 51 And behold (ſaith the Euangeliſt) the vaile of the Temple was rent in twaine, from the top to the bottome, and the earth did quake, and the ſtones were cleuen.

52 And the graues did open themſelues, and many of the bodies of the Saints which ſlept, aroſe,

53 And came out of the graues after his reſurrection, and went into the holy Citie, and appeared to many.

54 When the Centurion, and they that were with him watching Ieſus, ſaw the earthquake and the things that were done: they feared greatly, ſaying, Truly this was the Sonne of God.

55 And many women were there, beholding him a farre off, which had followed Ieſus from Galile, miniſtring vnto him.

56 Among whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of Iames and Ioſes, and the mother of Zebedeus ſonnes.

Hetherto, out of the Euangeliſt Matthew, from the 51. verſe of this 27. chap. mentioned aboue, euen to the 57. verſe of the ſame. The teſtimony of the Euangeliſt Marke, chap. 15. verſes 38, 39, 40 41. is the ſame: though not ſo full in the former two verſes, as the Euangeliſt Matthew writeth.

Beleefe in God the Sonne who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground & historie of his leading to be crucified.

But in the latter two, Marke is something more then he, as we read thus: There were also women, who beheld a farre off, among whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary (the mother of Iames the lesse, and of Ioses) and Salome. Who also when he was in Galile followed him, and ministred vnto him, and many other women which came vp with him vnto Ierusalem. Thus is Marke a little more large here, then Matthew. And Saint Luke (though in the rest more silent) yet both in this testimonie concerning those that were the best sort of the beholders of our Sauiour, and also concerning the Centurion: he remembreth something more, then either of them doe, ch: 23. verses 47. 48. 49.

Question. What are his wordes?

Answer. 47. Now (saith S. Luke) when the Centurion sawe what was done, he glorified God, saying, Of a surtie this man was iust.

48. And all the people which came together to that sight, beholding the things which were done, smote their breasts and returned.

49. And all his acquaintance stood a farre off, and the women that followed him from Galile, beholding these things.

Explication. Here we see then, that (as was said) S. Luke addeth some thing in these points, aboue Saint Matthewe and Marke: though in other things againe, they are more full then he. And so we perceiue that it is to very good vse, that we diligently compare all the Euangelists together, that wee may lay vp, not onely their seuerall instructions a part, but also one entire instruction from them all, in the treasurie and record of our hearts.

And now againe, before we come to the time of the taking down of the body of our Sauiour, from the crosse: the holy Euangelist Iohn, reporteth at large, other things of very worthy note, which none of the other Euangelistes write any word of.

Let vs therefore, here ioine his further supplie vnto the former. And so shall we haue all things gathered together and laide before vs, the which are worthily to be obserued for euer, concerning the last space of the time, that our Sauiour continued vpon the Crosse: that is to say, from the ninth houre vntill the time that his body was taken downe. Which was not (as we shall see afterward) long before the euening.

Question. What is this speciall report of the Euangelist Iohn?

Answere. In the 19. chapter thus we reade, from the 31. verse, to the 38.

31 The Iewes then (because it was the preparation, that the bodies should not remaine vpon the Crosse on the Sabbath day, for that Sabbath was an high day) besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken downe.

32 Then came the souldiers and brake the legs of the first, and of the other which was crucified with him.

33 But when they came to Iesus, and saw that he was dead alreadie, they brake not his legges.

34 But one of the souldiers with a speare pierced his side, and forthwith there came blood and water.

35 And he that saw it doth beare record, and his record is true: and he knoweth that he saith true, that ye might beleeue it.

Exod. 12. 46. Numb. 9. 12. 36 For these things were done, that the Scriptures should be fulfilled, Not a bone of him shall be broken.

Zech. 12. 10. 37 And againe, another Scripture saith, They shall see him whom they haue thrust through.

Explicatiō Hetherto, the report of the Euangelist Iohn, is in this narration singular aboue the rest. And thus we haue now before vs, in this collection, the whole history of the last space of time, wherein our Sauiour continued vpon the Crosse, and in the which, the execution of Pilates sentence of condemnation giuen against him, was perfited: or rather, the sentence of Gods diuine iudgement, and condemnation vpon him, for a time, for vs, and all his elect: that we might for euer be acquited, and saued from our sinnes, and the eternall wrath of God by him.

In

Beliefe in God the Son who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate.

The ground and history of his agonie vpon the crosse.

In which part of the holy storie, concerning this last space of time: we haue many, most memorable, and worthy things to consider of. Let vs briefly laye them together, so as we may inquire of them, in some commodious course and order, for our better vnderstanding and remembrance of them.

Question. How may that be?

Answere I haue heard you say, that we may well consider of them all: First, vnder this diuision or distribution of the things: either as they fell out before the death of our Sauiour, neere very neerely approching: or together with his death, and immediately after: and so forth, till he was to be taken from the Crosse.

It is not amisse, if wee doe so. Let this therefore be agreed vpon. But yet so, as wee doe in no case lightly passe ouer the death it selfe: which is as weightie a point, as any thing else: So that we may (for the auoiding of this so vnworthy an escape) ad it as a third member, though reckoning it in the second place after this manner: considering first of the things as they fel out before his death, now very neerly approching: secondly, of the death it selfe: thirdly, of those thinges which fell out, immediately with, or after his death: and so forth till the time of his taking downe from the crosse.

Question. First therefore, which are those things, which went before his death, now very very neerely approching: to wit, shortly after the ninth houre?

Answere. Beside the renewing of the light of the Sunne, at the ninth houre. We haue on the one side foure most graue speeches of our Sauiour, to be weighed of vs: the instruction and comfort whereof is greater then is the light of the Sunne when it shineth most comfortably vpon vs. And on the other side, we haue recorded vnto vs, the renewed mocking of some most prophane and contemptuous wretches against our Sauiour, in deriding the first of his speeches.

These things indeede, are euidently recorded, as we may easily see by laying the sundrie testimonies of the holy Euangelists together.

AND first, as touching the foure speeches of our Sauiour, a little before his death (which wee may account the last wordes of his last will and Testament, and as the ratifying of all that euer he spake, or did, or suffered for vs) they are (after the silence of two or three houres of darkenesse vpon the land, and of the continuance of extreame doloures vnto the soule of our Sauiour) as the breaking forth of light out of darkenes, much more comfortable to our soules, then the naturall light of the Sunne is to our bodies: as it will, by the grace of GOD appeare, in the opening of them.

Question. Which are those foure speeches of our Sauiour that you speake of?

Answere. The first was in these wordes. Eli, Eli, lamasabachthani? which (as the Euangelists Matthewe and Marke say) is by interpretation, My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me? Mat: 27,46. and Mar: 15,34.

The second speech was this. I thirst. Iohn 19,28.

The third, It is finished. Iohn, 19.30.

The Fourth, Father into thine handes I commend my Spirit. Luke chapter 23.46.

Explicatiõ The first of these most holy and memorable speeches of our Sauiour, was (as of it selfe, it is cleare and euident) a most dolefull complaint, and effect, of his long continuance vnder the heauie sense of the wrath of God: and namely, in the last three houres of darkenes, which were no doubt vnto him a representation of Hell, the place of vtter darkenes, answerable to the nature of his anguish and torment which was very hellish, so farre forth as for the time might be indured of him: as vncomfortable (out of all question) to him in his naturall sence, as they are spiritually comfortable to vs, in regard of the most sweete fruites and effects thereof, to the soules and consciences of all true beleeuers: whosoeuer haue learned most earnestly, to discerne the extremitie of their eternall miserie, without Iesus Christ, by reason of their sinne.

Beliefe in God the Son, who ſuffered vnder Pontius Pilate

The ground and hiſtory of his agony vpon the Croſſe.

But to the ende wee may rightly vnderſtand the minde of our Sauiour: wee muſt take heed, firſt that we doe in no wiſe take them, as if our Sauiour did vtter them either of impatience, and in way of expoſtulating, as if he were ouer hardly dealt withall at the hands of God: or as one in diſpaire, or pretending a thing that was not in truth felt of him: or as if his humanitie were ſimply forſaken of the deitie, and ſo the vnion of both natures, humane and diuine, were diſſolued from being one Perſon of the mediator: or that the father were vtterly eſtranged from him, and had reprobated & reiected him, &c. We muſt, I ſay take great heede, that we doe in no wiſe, conceiue any of theſe things. For it is vnpoſsible, that any of them, ſhould befall our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, the Lord our righteouſnes, who neuer knew any ſin, neither was guile at any time found in his mouth: and who (being the naturall Son of the Father, and perpetually loued of him, yea euen in that he is man) remaineth an high Prieſt for euer after the order of Melchiſedech, one true, eternall, & euerlaſting God, with the Father and the holy Ghoſt, in the vnitie of one & the ſame diuine nature: as we haue ſeene at large heretofore. For how poſsibly, ſhould the vnitie of the Godhead, be at any inſtant, for one moment, diuided? How could the inſeperable vnion of the Perſon of Chriſt be diſſolued? How could he that was moſt ſincere and void of all guile in his whole life, diſſemble, or pretend that which was not in truth, at the point of his death: when truth eſpecially is required, and wherein God is is eſpecially moſt neere to iudge and trye the heart? How could he that was perfectly righteous, ſin through any impatiẽce, or by charging God with any vnrighteouſnes: as if the moſt dutiful Son, ſhould diſgrace his moſt honourable Father? Finally, how ſhould he that calleth God his God, yea moſt earneſtly, and with a loud voice calleth him ſo, and that in the hearing of all: yea who inſiſteth in it, with an inſtant repetition, O my God, my God: Yea and acknowledgeth him the almighty God, able as wel as willing to ſuccour & deliuer out of the deepeſt & moſt dãgerous gulfe of diſtreſſe that may be (for ſo the word Eli ſignifieth: as if he ſhould haue ſaid in our language, O my mighty God, my mighty God) how therfore, I ſay, ſhuld we think, that he ſhould deſpaire: yea that he ſhould haue any the leaſt diſtruſt, either in the good wil of god toward him, (whom he calleth in moſt ſpeciall maner his God) or in his power, whom he acknowledgeth to be almighty? God forbid, that we ſhould, either to the diſhonour of our Sauiour himſelfe, imagine any ſuch thing againſt him: or to the weakening and deſtroying of our owne faith. For if he were not perfitly righteous, euen to the death: how would we be iuſtified by him in the ſight of God? And if hee had not beene God in our nature without ſeperation, how ſhould he haue preuailed againſt the moſt heauy wrath of God, which for the time, had ouerwhelmed him for our infinite and moſt hainous ſinnes, and for the ſinnes of all the elect: How then (may it be ſaid) are we to vnderſtand the words of our Sauiour: who though he calleth God his God, ſaith neuertheleſſe, Why haſt thou forſaken me?

Queſtion. What are we to anſwer to this?

Anſwere. We are to vnderſtand them, as a moſt humble and dutifull ſupplication, to God his heauenly Father, bewailing and lamenting the extremitie of that dolour and torment, both of ſoule and bodie, which he had now continued in a long time for the ſinnes of his redemed people: marualing withall, through humane infirmitie, though without all ſinfull paſſion of minde, (the Deitie of his Perſon alſo hiding as it were, and withdrawing it ſelfe from the humanitie as touching the comfort thereof, though neuer ſeperated in reſpect of the ſecret and effectuall power and preſence of it) that he hauing in nothing offended God, nay in all things hauing beene moſt perfectly obedient to him, yea both in nature and will, moſt nearely knit vnto him: ſhould, all this notwithſtanding, remaine ſtill thus long void of all comfort, yea full of all humane confuſion and torment, as if he had beene one vtterly reiected and caſt off by God, into the ſtate and condition of the damned in hell: though therewithall he knew, that it was vnpoſſible, that he ſhould finally, and for euer, remaine and abide ſo.

This

Beleefe in God the Son who suffered vnder Pontius Pilate,

The ground and history of his agonie vpon the crosse. Expucatio.

This was indeede (so farre as wee in our shallowe conceites can comprehend) the minde of our Sauiour: though no doubt, he apprehended more in the vttering of these words (both touching the infinite wrath of God, cast vpon him for our sinnes, and also touching the infinite mercie of God, in minding, for his sake, to forgiue them vnto vs, together with the punishment of them) then we can reach vnto. Hee meruailed, not that the wicked should so molest him: but that God himselfe should so long delay his helpe, and remaine as it were an aduersarie against him. Yet doth our Sauiour marueil and complaine, as he hath in nothing more notably declared the perfection of his most holy obedience, and the perfect vnion of the diuine nature with the humane, then in this, that notwithstanding he was, and had continued, in this most dolefull and lamentable estate so long a time, as was aboue all humane strength to haue indured: yet hee beareth it most patiently in respect of our sinnes, for whom hee suffered: onelie bewayling, and as we may say, bemoaning his pittifull estate, as it were into the bosome of God: nothing doubting, but his owne innocencie and righteousnes together, with his most holy prayer and sufferings, should now at the last in due time, be in due sort; that is, most graciously regarded of him: not onely on his owne behalfe, but also for the eternall benefit of all the elect.

This most excellent minde of our blessed Sauiour: insomuch as it is notably expressed, by the faithfull seruant of God, M Beza, whom he hath made wise, among many other, to be an excellent interpreter & teacher of his wil: I will for a further declaration of the minde of our Sauiour in these words, alledge that which he hath publikely preached, and written to the same end. The words of this faithfull seruant of our Sauiour Christ, are these: In primis (inquit) hoc positum esto, vocibus istis, non exprobrationem, non indignantis animi auersationem, contineri: quasi Iesus Christus cum Patre contenderet, & rationem huius tractationis exposceret (nec enim ad eum vt Deum suum, & quidem iterata voce Dei sui, se conuerteret): sed lamentabilem esse vocem animi, in summis angustijs positi, & quidem filij ad Patris omnia iussa obsequentissimi, sed qui seipsum in hoc agone dum intuetur, putat, nisi aliunde sibi auxilium feratur, fore prorsus imparem tanto ferendo oneri, & quæ sibi essent impositæ perficiendi & ad optatum finem deducendi, quasi Patrem his vocibus compellaret, Euge Pater, adsum & quidem volens in eo statu in quo esse me voluisti, sed furoris tui sensus hos gemitus extorquet, dum miror qui fieri possit, vt nullam sentiam tui fauoris & virtutis præsentiam, sine qua tamen quod tu in me vis efficere, & ego volens & sponte in omnibus tibi parere cupio, nunquam finem sortiri possit effectum.

Ab hoc igitur puro & integro fonte querela ista manauit, iam olim a Dauide totidem verbis dictata, de seipso etiam in maximis suis angustijs verba faciente Psal. 22. sed tanquam Iesu Christi figura, quod ex Psalmi reliqua parte fit conspicuum. Obiter autem, magna inæqualitas hac in parte, inter figuram et veritatem, est obseruanda. Nam Dauidis hunc Psalmum scribentis, afflictissimus & calamitosissimus status, infinitis partibus erat inferior passionibus quas in cruce Christus patiebatur: siue causam, siue mensuram, siue etiam effecta consideremus. Præterea, licet Dauid non sine fide & spe preces illas fuderit, tamen quod in perfectissimorum etiam Dei filiorum optimis operibus contin it, humanum aliquid passus est, ac proinde reliquiæ superfuerunt vitiositatis, quum fides nostra semper incredulitate mixta sit, & spes aliquo diffidentiæ gradu. At in Christo, qui sine vitio passiones omnes nostras animales induerat, sine vitio & imperfectione, ista, sicut & reliqua ipsius tum dicta tum facta, fuerunt.

Homil. 32. in Historiam Passionis.

That is, first of all (saith hee) let this be agreed vpon, that these wordes containe not in them any waywardnesse of an vpbrayding, or angry minde:
